Aberman Phillips, on behalf of several leading merchants and residents of the South and Dock Streets, presents to the common council a plan for extending the pier head on the south side of the great dock 100 feet farther into the East River, and 40 feet wider, at their own expense, with the understanding that the city will repay the amounts thus advanced at the end of three years from the time of completing the work. The common council agrees to the proposal, providing the amount advanced be not more than $500, and a committee is appointed to complete the arrangement.—M. C. C., IV: 57–58.

Letters of advertisement on the estate of the late Gov. Montgomerie, who died intestate, are granted to Charles Home.—Liber July Willis, XII: 146. For inventory and sale of the personal estate, see July 26, and Pl. 51, Vol. IV.

Steps are taken for the further development of the west side water front. The common council directs the mayor to execute a grant to John Chambers of "his House and Lot of Ground now in the Occupation of Nicholas Van Tartlings Situate on the West Side of the Broadway from the said Broadway to Highwater Mark on Hudsons River." It is also resolved to make a grant to him of "all the Ground under, and to the rock which is Low Water Mark to Low Water Mark;" 240 feet "into Hudsons River;" Chambers, his heirs and assigns to pay an annual rent of 25 shillings, or six pence per foot in breadth. He is required to leave "A Street of five and forty foot in breadth at the foot of the Bank the Center of which Street to be at high Water Mark, and also Another Street next and fronting Hudsons River of thirty foot in breadth," and he is required to "Dock or Wharf out" 240 feet "from High Water Mark into Hudsons River within five years from the date of the Grant, and in Default thereof to pay the Annual Rent of Nine pence per foot to this Corporation until he shall Wharf and make the said Streets."—M. C. C., IV: 64. The street 45 feet in breadth, here provided for, was the present Greenwich St., and the one 30 feet wide was Washington St. The lots in the possession of which Chambers was confirmed by this grant were those lying between the present Morris St., and Battery Place.—See grant to Chambers, recorded in Liber City Grants, Vol. I: 18, for terms and conditions.

The common council resolves that "a Piece of Ground belonging to this Corporation lying on the West Side of the Great Dock Containing in front to the Custom House Street [the present Pearl St.] seventy two feet, in the Bear to Whitehall Street Ninety foot and in length on both sides one hundred and Eight foot bounded on the East by Weighhouse Street [the present Moore St.], on the South by Whitehall Street and on the West by the Broadway, be forthwith Exposed to Sale Either in Parcell or in Lots."—M. C. C., IV: 64. On Aug. 26, a committee was appointed to "lay out the said belonging to this Corporation lying on the West Side of the Dock," and to require the city surveyor to make a plan of it, leaving the Broadway and the Custom House Street each Sixty foot in breadth, and Weigh House Street and Whitehall Street each forty foot in breadth."—Ibid., IV: 66. On March 24, 1732, it was resolved that this "Parcell of unimproved Ground" be laid out "in seven Lots and Exposed to Sale" on Tuesday, April 25, by Pub-lick Outery Auction or Vendue to the highest bidder at the House of Ohabiah Hunt next the Custom House," and "that Advertisements of the Said Sale be forthwith Printed and Published."—Ibid., IV: 150, 174–35. On April 25, 1732, the sale occurred as arranged. The bidders and parcels are here laid out. The northwest corner was at the north and one to the east side of the Flatten Barrack Street, the next to the southeast corner was at the point where the Flatten Barrack Market was located, and so on. It was sold on April 25, 1732, by Gerard Bancroft, "on the south side of the street named "White Hall Street" appear's as "Water St."—In Bancroft Collection, N. Y. Pub. Library, in box R-W, folder V-W. On May 19, 1732, Robert Lurtinage, as vendue master, was paid £50 for "selling at Publick Vendue seven Lots of Ground on the West Side of the Dock and Weigh House for this Corporation."—M. C. C., IV: 141. An advertisement requests all persons who have any demands on the estate of the late Gov. Montgomerie to bring in their accounts. It is announced that, on August 5, there will be exposed to sale, "by way of Publick Vendue, Four Negro Men and Four Negro Women; The Times of two Men and one Woman Servant. Also several sorts of FURNITURE and HOUSEHOLD PLATE; most of which are of very good Household Furniture. And after the Sale of the above Goods, will be sold several fine Saddle Horses, Breeding Mares and Colts, Coach-Horses, and Harness, and several other things belonging to..."

THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

Aug. 23

Small-pox begins to spread in New York City. For some weeks there were but few deaths. As soon as burials increased, after Aug. 23, Bradford began (with issue No. 307) to publish each week in his Gazette a statement of the number of whites and blacks buried. From Aug. 23 to Nov. 15, a period of two months and three weeks, there were 478 whites and 71 blacks, or 549 in all—"N. Y. Gaz., Nov. 8, 1731. See Aug. 59.

25 Although the borrowing of money for both public and private objects has been a recorded incident in the life of the city, the business of negotiating loans, as a distinct private profession, is now, apparently for the first time, introduced in New York. A newspaper advertisement reads: "Whereas many Persons in this Province have a great Deal of Money to Borrow, and others have Sums of Money lying by them which they want to put out, Some want to purchase Houses, Lands, and other Things, and others frequently want to sell; but for want of knowing where to apply on these Occasions are often disappointed in their Designs, to their great regret. Wherefore, in Order that all Persons may know where to Apply, Publick Notice is hereby given, That Richard Nicholls, Attorney at Law, near the Fort, in New-York, (at the Request of several Persons of Note) Negotiates all such Affairs for such Persons as desire the same, for a reasonable Reward, and with the greatest Secrecy and Integrity. N. B. He Advertises, if desired (not otherwise) without Charge, unless Successful."

A Person has four hundred Pounds to put at Interest. Another has Fifty Pounds to put out on good Money."

Describing it, "Earhest Gaz., Aug. 16-23, 1731." In the city's annals, up to this time, there had been no evidence of the existence of private bankers. The business of this loan agent is the nearest approach to it. Richard Nicholls was also post master.—Ibid., Nov. 15-22, 1731.

Nearly ten months have elapsed since the last meeting of the assembly, Oct. 29, 1730. At that time, it was adjourned to meet in March, but was postponed by several proclamations of Gov. Montgomerie. The governor died July 1, 1731, and no business meeting of the assembly was held until Aug. 25. The members meet on this day at the house of Harmann Rutgers "in the Bowry lane" (see Col. Cun. Min., 313), near "the Fresh Water."—Assem. Jour., I: 625; Jour. Leg. Coun., I: 605. In the preceding May, "Capt. Fred" was reported to have brought from Jamaica negroes who had the small-pox (Col. Cun. Min., 313). The disease spread (see Aug. 1731), which doubtless accounts for the unusual place of this meeting.

The assembly meets in Rutgers' house, and, at the same time, the council, with its president, Rip van Dam, meets at "the House where Capt. Kippen [or Kippen] now lives," and to this house the assembly is summoned to hear the message of the president. The assembly then returns to the Rutgers house. This was due to the fact that a number of the councilmen felt that a person is seized of the Small-Pox, in the very House they now sit, and because "the Members who have not had that Distemper (being above one third of the whole Number) are determined not to appear any more in the House during this Session."—Ibid., I: 624-25. On Sept. 5, Rip van Dam again adjourned the assembly because of the small-pox, which was spreading amongst us, and such adjournments were repeated later, both by him and the newly-arrived governor, William Cosby, until Aug. 9, 1732.—Ibid., I: 637.

The common council appoints a committee to "Cause A Strong Goal to be made at the West End of the Said City Hall on the upper floor thereof and the Other Goals of this City to be Enlarged Strengthened and Amended as to them shall Appear needful."—M. C. G., IV: 66. See April 25, 1737.

The assembly decides to defer consideration of matters before it because meetings of the house have grown "very thin, and more likely to grow thinner than fuller, by Reason that the Small-Pox are very brief in the City of New-York, A Distemper which at least 9 of the Members never had."—Assem. Jour., I: 624.

A letter from New York states that the only news is "the melancholy Scene of Little Business," and under these circumstances, the letter continues: "the Markets begin to grow very thin, and the Small Pox raging very violently in Town, which, in a great measure, hinders the Country People from supplying this Place with Provisions. I have not yet heard that any Persons have gone out of Town for Fear of it. The last week they began to inoculate; which Practice I have some reason to believe will very much be followed: The Distemper has been a long time very formidable, but now begins to be of the Confluent Kind and very mortal."—Upcott Collection, in N. Y. Hist. Soc., I: 115. See Aug. 1731.

See also Samuel Abbott Green's Ten Far-simile Reproductions Relating to Old Boston and Neighborhood (1901), 25-26, for a broadside written by Rev. Thomas Thatcher, and dated "21-11, 1675" (Jan. 21, 1676), entitled "A Brief Rule To guide the Common People of New England How to order themselves and theirs in the Small Pocks, or Measles." Green calls this the "Earliest Medical Triage Printed in this Country," and says that a second edition was printed in 1702. Dr. Matlery was the author of a broadside, printed at Boston in November, 1721, which gives "Several Reasons proving that Inoculating or Transplanting the Small-Pox is a Lawful Practice, ane which it has been blessed by God for the Saving of many a Life. . . ."

Rev. Cornelius van Schie, of Poughkeepsie, writing on May 7, Sept. 1731, to Messrs. Van de Wall, Bedts, etc., of Amsterdam, said in regard to his visit to New York in September, 1731, that "there

The common council approves a new set of the "Laws Orders, and Ordinances" of the city, as produced by a committee appointed March 31, 1731 (p. v.) and as amended in several meetings of the board. It is ordered that this act be printed and published, and that they be printed. They are immediately "published" at the city hall, after the Ringing of three Bells and Proclamation made for silence. They are entered in full in the Minutes,—M. C. G. IV, 77-111. A copy of these laws, of 37 pages folio, printed by Bradford, is, in the N. Y. G. Gaz. It bears the date publication 1731, and the title Laws, orders, & ordinances established by the mayor, recorder, aldermen, and assistants of the City of New-York convened in Common Council, for the good rule and government of the inhabitants of the said city. Bradford was paid for this printing on July 7, 1732 (p. v.).

One of the new ordinances is for "Appointing A Place for the more Convenient Hiring of Slaves." It provides "That all Negro Mulatto and Indian slaves that are let out to Hire within this city do take up their Standing, in Order to be Hired, at the Market-House at the Wall Street Slip until such time as they are hired, whereby all Persons may know where to hire slaves as their Occasions shall require, and also Owners of Slaves discover when their Slaves are so hired."—M. C. G., IV, 85.

Among the many provisions of the revised "Laws for Regulating thea acts and Carmens," and in this time, the following shall be noted:

- The number of carmen, all to be licensed, is limited by this act; they are to mend the streets and highways "in and about the City when Required by the Mayor, Grants, on Penalty of being turned out of their places," each cart "shall be two foot Eight Inches wide, and three foot high;" no carman is to "Ride in his Cart in any of the Streets within this city, nor drive his Cart a Trot in the Street, but Patiently." Every Carman that driveth A Cart for Hire or Wages within this City Shall have the Number of his Licence fairly painted upon each side of his Cart with Red Paint, easily to be seen on the after part of the shaft upon the Square thereof; perishable merchandise must be carried before the cart, and the former or carrier be required to carry his cart at one time more than "one Hogshead of Rum or one Hogshead of Malasses, One Hogshead of Sugar, one Pipe of Wine," etc., or more than 140 gallons in smaller casks. The law includes a detailed schedule of rates for cartage.—M. C. G., IV, 97-95.

A "Law Relating to Making Firemen" re-enacts the regulation of July 11, 1702 (p. v.), excepting that the "Price for Freedoms" is raised to $3 in the case of a merchant, trader, or shopkeeper, and to 20 shillings in the case of a "Handy Craft Tradesman."—M. C. G., IV, 97-98.

The common council adopts a new ordinance "for Regulating the Lying of Vessels in the Dock and Slips of this City." The new features in this ordinance which were not brought out in the earlier one of March 22, 1692 (p. v.), are as follows: The day appointed for paying of yearly Seignage or Vessels belonging to this port is March 25 (called "Lady day"). Instead of a fine of six shillings, imposed on a vessel that runs aground at the mouth of the dock and fails to move as soon as afloat, this fine is increased to six shillings for each tide it so remains. A vessel in the dock or slips that keeps a fire on board at night shall pay "what Damage may Enue" as well as a fine of 20 shillings. Likewise, damages, as well as the fine previously imposed, shall be paid for casting. "Anchor, Grappling or Killick within or near the Mould, Dock or Slips." Stoves, earth, or ballast are not to be taken away or thrown off the Wharf," under penalty of ten shillings besides payment of damages done to the wharves. The former provision against a vessel's lying at the great dock longer than necessary to load and unload is now applied to "any of the Slips of this City." Dockage fees at "any of the Slips of this City" (belonging to the city) continue to be the same as those charged at the great dock (see Aug. 28, 1694).—Ibid., IV, 97-100. The regulation of the docks was further considered on March 26, 1759 (p. v.).

The fees to be charged by invitees to funerals (see April 18, 1691) are regulated by an ordinance according to the age of the deceased. Thus, "for Inviting to and attending at the Funeral of Every Person of seventy years of Age and upwards Eighteen Shillings; for a person between 12 and 20 years, 12 shillings; and under 12 years, 8 shillings.—M. C. G., IV, 101.

1731. The city marshal, being the first man named to hold this office. The reason assigned for the passing of this ordinance, for the peace and safety of the city, is that of late years there have been great numbers of persons "Privately Carried into the city, some of whom are suspected to be Convict Felons Transported from Great Britain."—M. C. C., IV: 122-23. For a later ordinance of the same character, see Dec. 21, 1731, earlier reference to night watchmen or "bellmen," see April 20, 1734.

The new fire-engines had not yet been cleaned and made "fit for immediate use."—M. C. C., IV: 123. See Dec. 1 and 21.

The consistory of the Dutch Church decides that "After the roof of the Old Church [in Garden St.] is glazed the Church Masters shall see that the Old Church is furnished with a new roof."—Eccles. Reg., IV: 2165, following the English translation made from the Dutch Church minutes by Rev. Talbot W. Chambers, D. D., and preserved in the archives of the church.

The subject of fire-prevention is considered at length in the Gazette. A fire on the night of Dec. 6 (p. 128) showed "the good Effects of a timely Provision of the Magistrates against Fire," by "the Water-Engines extinguishing it with so little Damage, when there was so great a Probability of its spreading." Nevertheless, many recommendations are advanced. Not half the houses in town are provided with fire-buckets. Chimneys ought to be inspected often. Regulations are wanting for the quick supply of water to the engines is provided by "that as the greatest Part of this City lies upon a Descent, the Water of all the Wells and Cisterns in the Places higher than where the Fire happens, and which have a Descent to that Place, may be made to run to the Engine of itself, where it may be dam'd up by digging of the Streets, or with Cleaths, Bedling, Ashes, Stones, Bricks, Rubbish, or any Thing that comes to hand, and the Sucker being put into that Dam, the Engines I believe may that way only be plentifully supplied with Water in above one half of the City."

It is also proposed that the use of shingles and boards for covering houses be discontinued, and the making and using of pantiles, slate, and bricks for building and covering houses be encouraged. In the highest places in the city, "some wide and some deep Wells ought to be made on Purpose, for yielding a great Quantity of Water in case of Fire, which, by the Help of one of the Engines in the digging them, to take off the Water as it springs, can now easily be dug to any Depth less than the Length of the Suckers of the Engines."

There are other considerations in a similar vein.—E. T. Gaz., Dec. 13-21, 1731. See Dec. 14.

"Martha Gaskey, late from Great Britain, now in the city of New-York, makes and teacheth the following curious Works, viz., Artificial Flowers, and other Work, Needle-Work, Philligree and Pencil Work upon Muslin, all sorts of Needle-Work, and Raising of Paste, as also to Paint upon Glass, and Transparent for Sconces, with other Works . . . at the Widdow Butlers, near the Queens-head Tavern in William street, not far from Capt. Anthony Rutgers'—E. T. Gaz., Dec. 12, 1731. A large house of Anthony Rutgers, probably the place referred to, was at the present Noy. 47, 49, and 51 Maiden Lane, near William St. This early Queens Head Tavern was therefore in the immediate vicinity of William St. and Maiden Lane. This is the only record of this tavern; it evidently had a short existence.

In a letter to the lords of trade, Pres. Van Dam states that the province is "still mightily afflicted with the Small pox tho' not so mortal as when I had the honour by my former to acquaint Your Lord . . . herewith."—E. T. Col. Doc., V: 930. See Nov. 2.

In this year, Henry Popple's Map of the British Empire in America, with the French and Spanish Settlements adjacent thereto, was published in London, from a survey made in 1729.—See description of Pl. 24, 1: 2637.

To the period 1732-5 belongs the very interesting manuscript plan of the city reproduced and described in Vol. I, Pl. 50. This plan contains the first reference to a "Play House." It includes also several buildings and topographical features not shown on any other plan of the city in existence.

Y. Hist. Soc.

To discharge its debts, the city sells seven lots, and they are bought by prominent merchants for £1,144—M. C. C., IV: 134, 137-38. These lots cover two blocks, bounded by the present Moore, Whitehall, Pearl, Water, and Front Streets, where a portion of the old dock had stood. For summary of events connected with this transaction, see July 22, 1711.

The Church Farm is leased to Trinity Cornelius Cofine, for a term of 10 years, at £35 yearly, excepting Capt. Degrohe's rope-walk.—Sandford, Charney Rep., IV: 603.

The following description gives a glimpse of the rural topography of the upper part of the island at this time: "In the Out-Ward of the City of New York, near to the Seat of Mr. DeLancy, called Bloomingdale, there is to be Sold a Plantation with a very good stone House, Barn, and Orchard, containing about four or five Hundred Apple Trees, and a Pair Orchard, with a great many fine Grafted Pairs. The Land is very Timber'd and Watered; it has a very fine Brook very convenient for a Fish Pond, containing about Two Hundred and sixty Acres of Land and six Acres of Meadow, situate lying and being near a river of the same name, as also a stream of water, which runs by the said Estate, and whereof the said lot contains about five hundred Acres, and about a half a Mile of water, and the said Estate bears the Town of York, and is to be sold by auction, and the time of the sale is fixed for the 9th day of April next. The price of the Estate is to be 10 Pounds Sterling per acre, and the Inquisition of the same is to be undertaken by an Auditor, appointed by the Councils, and the Surveyor, of said City, and the said Estate is to be sold by Publick Auction, and the sale is to commence at nine O'clock in the morning, of the said day. And all Persons desirous of purchasing the same, may apply to Thomas Deely, now living on the Premisses, and agree on reasonable Terms."—N. Y. Gaz., May 6-9, 1731; April 3-6, 1732. The Oliver de Lancy property is referred to in the M. C. C., V: 240, 247, and 537, as at "Bloomingdale" or "Bloomingdale's Lane." The word "Bloomingdale," as used in the above advertisement, appears to be applied to the De Lancy property, it is rather intended to mean the location generally. Regarding the origin and meaning of the name, see Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 916; and Wilson, Mem. Hist. N. Y., III: 171. Bloomingdale—"valle of flowers"—was the name applied to this part of the upper west side of Manhattan by the early Dutch settlers; whereas the estate of De Lancy was not acquired by Etienne de Lancy until 1735. It had been the immense Somerndyck Farm, which stretched from the present 57th St. to 70th St., and from the line of the Common Lands to the Hudson River. The west line of the Common Lands is delineated on Pl. 177, Vol. III, and ran along the eastern boundary of the Somerndyck Farm, at or near the line of Seventh Ave., the modern streets and avenues being obliterated by Central Park.

The council receives a letter from William Cosby (appointed governor of New York), relating to the pay of the independent companies.—Cal. Coun. Min., 316. This appears to be his first official communication; he did not arrive in New York until Aug. 1 (p. v.).

James Livingston, surveyor, is paid £811 for Surveying on Granting the New Nether Quarter, in the city, having out several Lots on the West Side, of the Dock & Weigh House & making Draughts thereof etc.—M. C. C., IV: 141.

Gov. Montgomery's library is sold at auction, a catalogue of the June books having been printed, and placed for inspection at the Coffee House.—N. Y. Gaz., May 8-15, 1732. It was one of the largest private libraries in the colonies prior to the Revolution.—Man. Coun. (1858), 503-4. The manuscript inventory of Montgomery's estate, including the library, is preserved in the N. Y. Pub. Library. See July 16, 1731. In this inventory are 1,541 volumes. The titles include works of literature, biography, history, geography, travel, philosophy, theology, education, law, mathematics, medicine, art, and music. Among the authors are Cicero, Horace, Ovid, Seneca, Terence, Tacitus, Addison, Bacon, Dryden, Defoe, Milton, Pope, Shakespeare, and Spenser. In the list we find favourites like Collier's Travels, Plutarch's Lives, Paradise Lost, and Don Quixote; as well as miscellaneous works like Art of Governing by Parias, Letters from the Dead, English Peetage, Transactions of the World in the Moon, New Manner of Fortifying, and Province Laws of New York. See reproduction of part of the inventory, Pl. 34, Vol. IV.

A committee of the common council is appointed "to Inspect into A small Slip of Ground now in the Possession of the Honourable Rip Van Dem Esq; President of this Colony Contiguous to a Corner of Maiden Lane, which Slip of Ground the President prays..."
May be granted unto him by this Corporation he having the same within his fence, for the more regular making of the Street (the Neighbourhood having thrown into the Said Street on the Other Side thereof some Ground Equivalent thereunto for Making the same Street as Uniform and upon the same are required to make a Draught of the ground and report what is proper to be done.—M. C. C., IV: 142. On Sept. 11, 1732, the committee reported that the land was "Situate in the North Ward at the Corner of Maiden Lane which turns up to Kip Street towards the New Dutch Dock. When it is in front of five foot or thereabouts and Runs along the East side of Kip Street to a Point which Comes to Nothing one [sic] hundred and three foot or thereabouts and is within the fence of the said Rip Van Dam, and is bounded on the North by Maiden Lane aforesaid on the West by Kip Street aforesaid and on the East and south by Other Land belonging to the said Rip Van Dam, and Report their Opinion that the same is of little or no Value to any Except the same Rip Van Dam." It is ordered that the grant be made to him accordingly.—Ibid., IV: 152-55; City Grants, Liber B: 200. There is preserved in the city clerk's record-room a rough sketch, prepared by Van Dam himself, on which he depicts the triangular plot of ground in one corner he writes:

"Mr Sharpus

"if you please To make out the Contoury which the City has granted me I shall thankfully pay you for it

"from your Humble Servt.

A lightning-stroke shatters the steeple of the new Dutch Church (on Nassau St.) down to the belfry; it tears up a ridge on the roof from the eaves to the top, and on the other side takes out a stone of the wall near the ground, cracks the wall close by it, and tears solitiers from one of the doors.—N. Y. news in N. E. Weekly Jour. (Boston), July 17, 1733. This appears to have been the first of five occasions when this steeple was struck by lightning.—See Oct., 1770.

William Bradford is paid £121:11 for "Printing the City Laws & some Advertisements."—M. C. C., IV: 144. See Nov. 18, 1731.

In pursuance of a resolution of the common council made Sept. 17, 1730 (M. C. C., IV: 25), the city grants to Cornelius Vanhorn a water lot 25 feet, seven inches wide, "Fronting his House or Teme- nent on the Dock Street Wharf on the south Front thereof," and "Running from the New Wharf Called the Dock Street Wharfe," 400 feet into East River.—Ibid., IV: 144. He is required to make a street "Fronting the East River," with the same restrictions and regulations required of his neighbours.—Ibid., IV: 25.

On July 26, 1734, Cornelius Van Horn received a water grant for two parcels, lying between Coenties and Old Slips.—Liber City Grants, B: 125-32 (comptroller's office). The new Dock St. wharf ran between these two slips, from Dock St. to the river (the present Pearl St. was then Dock St.). See Pl. 27, Vol. I, where the wharf is shown, built up. Van Horn's house was on the wharf, and his garden extended toward the river. It was the intention of the corporation to make this water a public street. It was named Hunter's Key and Burnet St., which lay on the westerly side of Burnet's Key. It was first known as Water Street in 1736, and at that time lay only between Maiden Lane and Rodman's Slip (John St.).—M. C. C., IV: 331. See Addenda, 1750.

An animal, supposed to be a panther, has been recently discovered breaking out of the window of a store-house in New York, and killed in the street.—N. Y. Gaz., July 24, 1732.

Edward Willett offers for sale a large brick house near the New York Land, recently occupied by James Hardinge, also a large barn covered with cedar, a "Handsome Garden," and about ten acres of land.—N. Y. Gaz., July 24-31, 1731. The ferry-house and out-buildings at Brooklyn, are shown on Pl. 25, Vol. I. For the subsequent career of Edward Willett, who for more than 27 months has been acting as ferryman, see May 15, 1749 (Horse and Manger); March 23, 1752 (Horse and Cart); April 15, 1753 (Province Arms); Dec. 12, 1754 (Bridge St.).

Aug.

Col. William Cosby, the new governor, arrives at New York.—Assem. Jour. I: 613. Several gentlemen meet him at the water-side and "lead him" to the fort, where he takes the oaths after reading his commission; the seals and keys are delivered to him; the members of the council present are sworn in, and they issue an order that a proclamation be published continuing all officers in their places.—Col. Ann. Min., 317. "The next Day between the Hours of 11 & 12 his Excellency walked to the city hall, (a Company of Halberters & a Troop of Horse marching before, and the gentleman of his Majesty's Council, the Corporation, and a great Number of Citizens & Merchants of this City following the Street being bid'd on each side with the Militia) where his Commission was published, and then his Excellency returned (attended as before) back to the Fort: The Militia then drew up on the Parade, and saluted him with three Volleys."—N. Y. news in Boston News-Letter, Aug. 10-17, 1732.

Soon after Cosby's arrival, Cadwallader Colden, the surveyor-general, delivered to him an extended narrative relating to land grants and quit-rents in the provinces of New York. The methods of English governors after 1664 were described; and particular attention was given to an account of the great grants of from 50,000 to 1,000,000 acres of unpatented lands. He suggested remedies for the abuses which he described, by applying quit-rent charges against all the lands in the province, including the town lots of New York City and Albany. This would yield as much as £4,000 a year toward the support of the government.—From Man. Com. Coun. (1851), 424 et seq. citing the original, which is still preserved with the Colden Papers in the N. Y. Hist. Soc. On May 6, 1732, Colden appended a memorandum to his draft of the memorial, saying "I question whether ever he read it. I have reason to think he gave it to the person in whom he then confided who had no inclination to forward the purpose of it. It had no other effect than to be prejudicial to myself."—Ibid., 461.

The common council, on Aug. 3, ordered that an address of welcome to Gov. Cosby be prepared, and that he be presented with the freedom of the city, having its seal in a gold box. At a dinner in his honour, on August 9th, the presentation was made and the address was delivered. This address, which is entered in full in the Minutes, includes the statement: "As Trade is the Support of this Colony and this City the Center of that Trade we hope your Excellency will Countenance and Protect us in the Enjoyment of all our Rights and Privileges."—M. C. C., IV: 147-8.

An open letter, to the Brown, Black, or broadside, is addressed "To Mr. A.C." (Alexander Campbell) in answer to three papers by him protesting against support of his majesty's government in the province, and urging an immediate dissolution of the assembly, after the Oswego bill and the excise bill have been passed. It is printed and sold by Bradford. One of these is in the collection of the N. Y. Pub. Library. The following broadsides, printed this year by Zenger, and now in the collection of the N. Y. Pub. Library, are of interest in the same connection:

Mr. Nixon's Observations upon Parson Campbell's Indication. To the Reverend Mr. Fayre and his two Blackheads, viz. Tom Pen the Bestian, and Clumsy Ralph the Gimnemenn, a letter supporting Alexander Campbell in his differences with Rev. William Vesey.

A Letter From a Gentleman in in [sic] the Country to his Friend in Town (undated, but probably 1733), in which the writer, who signs with the pseudonym "Robt. Dissolution," protests against the assembly of that session as "unconstitutional."

An open letter, beginning with Addison's verses, "O Liberty, thou Goddess heavenly bright!", etc., maintaining the necessity of frequent elections, and of excluding pensioners from the assembly; signed "Porius."

An open letter (beginning with quotations in Latin from Tertul- lian and Cicero), maintaining the necessity of amendment and revision of every government and constitution, and consequently in that of New York; signed "John Sydney" (pseud.).

An open letter (beginning with a quotation from Virgil), urging the necessity of election of the present assembly, and the advantages of annual elections to the assembly; signed "Andrew Fletcher" (pseud.).

The last of Gov. Montgomerie's possessions offered for sale (see July 26 and Oct. 11, 1731, and June, 1732) by Charles Hume (or Humelet), admin. Merchants of this City following the Street being bid'd on each side with the Militia and Damaque Curtains; Two Sets of Oars, Sails and every Thing that is necessary for her." The boat lies in the dock, and is to be sold at the Exchange Coffee House on Oct. 2.—N. Y. Gaz., Aug. 28-Sept. 4, 1732.

An advertisement of William Thursten, a schoolmaster, refers to his "dwelling at the Corner-House by Koestner Market, over against the Scotch Arms."—N. Y. Gaz., Aug. 28-Sept. 4, 1732.

The legislature passes "An Act for Confirming unto the City of New York its Rights and Privileges." The new city charter is thereby declared valid and effectual in law, even "against the King’s Majesty and his Successors."—Col. Laws N.Y. 7, 252-53. See Feb. 11, 1731; Apr. 29, 1733; also Hoffman, Treaty between the Estate and Rights of the Corporation, 28. The account of Gabriel Ludlow, clerk of the assembly, dated Oct., 1734, for fees for reading and entering this act was allowed Dec. 6, by the auditing committee of the common council.—From original itemized bill in city clerk's room.

A new and permanent ferry act is passed, continuing, with slight modification, the old ferryage rates for persons and things as established by the act of Nov. 25, 1727 (p. 9), but adding various articles to the catalogue of goods on which ferryage is charged. The rates vary with the amount, from one farthing for a "Dundhill Ford, Brant Dutch, Heath Hen, or Rabbit" to six shillings for a coach. For articles not specified, proportionate rates are to be paid according to weight or quantity. The law exacts a forfeiture of the ferry-man if he overcharges. It gives to the city the right to "Demand, Receive and take" the rates prescribed; and, as before, the right to establish one or more ferries between this city and Nassau Island, provided there shall be "one Constant Ferry from the Present Ferry on Nassau Island to the City of New York at Some Convenient landing place in the Said City to the Eastward of the Slip commonly Called Wall Street Landing or the Said Slip." Only the city of New York is permitted to erect and keep a ferry between this city and Nassau Island.—Col. Laws N.Y. III, 807-13. This act continued to be the law of the province and state until after the Revolution, an act of the legislature on the subject of ferries being passed on Feb. 25, 1789 (p. 96).—Hoffman, Estate and Rights of Corporation, 127-28. Regarding attempts by the trustees of Brooklyn to break New York City's monopoly of the ferry privileges, although that monopoly was confirmed by the Montgomery charter, and by this act of 1732, see Dec. 2, 1737; June 7, 1743; Jan. 7, 1744.

The legislature passes an act "to encourage a Public School in the City of New York for teaching Latin Greek and Mathematics." Alexander Malcolm (see May 1, 1710), master of a private school, is appointed master of the public school. He is to provide at his expense "a proper and convenient House or Room" where he is to teach. He is to be seen from different corners of the town. For these services, he is allowed $40 from the fund arising from peddlers' licenses, and also $40 from the annual tax raised in the city for the support of the minister and the poor. The second sum is to be paid to Malcolm by the common council in quarterly installments. The rector of Trinity Church, justices of the supreme court, and the mayor, recorder, and aldermen are constituted "visitors" of the school, with power to remove the master for cause.—Col. Laws N.Y. III, 817-18. See May 1, 1730; Dec. 6 and 16, 1737.

The Horse and Cart Tavern is designated for the place of meeting, on Nov. 1, of the proprietors of a large tract of land.—N.Y. Dun., Oct. 9, 1737. It is noted as being to the east side of William St., half way between John and Fair (Fulton) Sts. It is shown and named on Pl. 30, Vol. I.—See I: 346. It was still there in 1774.—N. Y. Merc., March 31, 1774. See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III, 979-90.

On being informed that Lord Augustus Fitz Roy, son of the Duke of Grafton, the lord chamberlain of England, has arrived at the fort on a visit to the governor and his family, the common council resolves to wait on his lordship, and present him with the freedom of the city, with the city seal "Insculps in A Gold Box with the Arms of this City Engraved thereon."—M. C. G., IV, 161. Three days later the members of the common council and the principal officers of the city regiment were introduced to his lordship "at his Majestys Garrison." After the recorder, Francis Harris, introduced the corporation, he delivered "A Very Elegant Speech on the Occasion," the mayor presented his lordship with the copy of his freedom.—Boston News-Letter, Nov. 16, 1732. The text of the freedom is printed in full in the Minutes, and certifies that Augustus Fitz Roy is hereby Admitted Received and allowed a Freeman and Citizen of the said City of New York. To Have, Hold, Enjoy and Partake of all and singular the Advantages, Benefits Liberties Priviledges Franchises Freedoms and Immunities whatsoever Granted or belonging to the same City to him and His Heirs for ever.—M. C. G., IV, 162. Lord Fitz Roy afterward married the governor's daughter.—Man. Com. Coun. (1856), 536.

Rip Van Dam, president of the council, is ordered to refund half the salary he has received. He refused to do so, and, on Nov. 29, the attorney-general was ordered to commence suit.—Col. Coun. Min., 316. Gov. Cosby claimed this sum for himself, and appointed three justices as an equity court for the trial of Van Dam's case. For contrary to precedent, and Chief-Justice Lewis Morris gave the opinion that the governor did not possess the power to create an equity court. Though Morris was overruled by his two colleagues, no final decision was ever rendered in Van Dam's case. As a result of this trial, Gov. Cosby removed Morris from the office of chief-justice, and the latter became an active leader of the "Anti-Court Party," which already contained such opponents of the governor as Rip van Dam, James Alexander, and William Smith.—Wilson Mem. Hist. N.Y. II, 214-20. See June 19, 1734. For a concise account of the Cosby-Van Dam controversy, see Man. Com. Coun. (1865), 722-25.
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1732 Number of Years to Come, And as it is so near the Town, We could Dec. in a few Years make the same, very beneficial, by laying part of it 5 out into Lotts, which would bring in a Yearly Ground rent, and in time make the town very valuable. And about the ablest lawyers here that our Said Grant is good and valid, Yet hath it been Rendered disputable first by a Bill in Chancery’s having been preferred against us in Governour Hunters time, and Secondly by the continual menacing of our Tenants by his present Majestys Receiver General, as will fully appear to Your Lordship, by Articles in his Two and Short State of the Case herebefore Transmitted and humbly offered to Your Lordship’s consideration. We also send Coppys of the Acts of Assembly and other things referred to, in the State of our Said Case, Certified under our Corporation Seal: And beseech Your Lordship that you will favourably be pleased on this important occasion, to vouchsafe your paternal Care & powerfull full Influence in behalf of our Church, by causing said Council to be advised with, and applying to our most gracious Sovereign for his Royal Grant & Confirmation unto us of our said farm and Garden under the Broad Scale of England, or by such other ways as your Lordship in your great wisdom shall think most proper: for my Lord as one Mr Anthony Rutgers of this place has lately obtained an order from his Majesty to the Governour here for granting him a Swamp which lyes contiguous to our Said farm, and is mentioned in the Vacating Act of Assembly taken notice of in our Said Case, and under the greatest apprehension from the Threats in the affidavit mentioned &c. that some persons may aim at the same thing in regard to our farm, or perhaps they may endeavour to obtain a Grant at home, which will install Law Suits upon us and our Successors, and it may Involve us into much greater difficulties than we shall be able to encounter, to prevent which and in as much as the Said farm and garden are the Greatest part of our Churches revenue and Estate, We humbly presume you will not think us forward or troublesome, if we interest the favour of your Lordship.——Trin. Min. (MS.), under date of April 25, 1733.

Papers attached to this appeal show the various grants, acts of assembly, and other transactions affecting the "farm and garden" prior to Dec. 5, 1732. The same appeal is among the Fulham MSS. belonging to the See of London, and was transcribed by Rev. Francis L. Hawks, D.D., in 1816, his copy being filed with the Hawks MSS. in the Church Mission House, N. Y. City. For the series of lawsuits foretold by this letter, and other affairs connected with the parish rights and property of Trinity Church, which are now part of the city’s history, see Trinity Church Pamphlets, Collected for the Corporation, 1857.

The letter of Dec. 5 closes thus: "But nevertheless it has been often instumented that inasmuch as her Said Majesty was pleased to disallow the repealing Act [see June 26, 1706], and to approve of the Vacating Act aforesaid [see May 16, 1699], that the Grant made to the Said Rector and Inhabitants in the intermediate time, is thereby rendered Void and of none Effect, it being provided by the Said Vacating Act that the Governour should have it in his power to Grant or Lease the said farm or Garden for any longer time than for his own Government, But "It’s to be noted that by the King’s Commission and Instructions to the Governours of this Colony all Laws made here are to be Transmitted for the Royal assent, and to be and Continue in force here, from the time of their publication until disallowed by the King at home."

"The Said Rector and Inhabitants were incorporated by Letters patents under the Great Seal of the province, and by an Act of Assembly before, and which are rectified in their Said Grant, "Now Quere."

"is whether the Grant made to the Rector and Inhabitants, while the repealing Act aforesaid was in full force here, and before the same was disallowed, or the Vacating Act aforesaid approved of by her Majesty to wit the 26th of November 1705 [q.v.] be good and valid, if not but disapproved that same? Which are the most proper And effectual Measures for the said Rector and Inhabitants to take, in order to Obtain his most Sacred Majestys Grant & Confirmation to them of their said farm and Garden, so as to render their right thereto Indisputable."—Trin. Min. 1733.

6 On the 6th Instant the New Theatre in the Buildings of the Honorable Rip Van Dam Esq. was opened, with the Comedy called The Recruiting Officer, the part of Worthy acted by the ingenious Mr. Thomas Headly, Barber and Peruuges-maker to his Honour.”—N. Y. news in the Boston Gaz., Jan. 1-8, 1733. The location of this theatre is one of the problems of the historian. See description of Dec. Pl. 23, I. 1265; and of Pl. 50, I. 1264. See also Sonneck, Early Opera in Am., 11; and Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 953.

With the help of these documents, Mr. Grant, first used on Dec. 6, 1733 (see Dec. 24, 1731), a fire is extinguished which destroys a dwelling-house and damages the one next to it.—N. Y. news in Boston News-Letters, Jan. 6, 1732.

Cosby reports to the lords of trade that "the Inhabitants here are more lazy and unactive than the Englishmen, and that the manufactures extends no further than what is consumed in their own Family’s, a few course Lindsey woollsey for cloathing, and linen for their own wear."—N. Y. Col. Gaz., Dec. 941.

Cosby advises the removal of Alexander James from the council of New York province, who, "during the President Van Dam’s Administration swayed him in every thing that was irregular and since has clag’d and perplexed everything with difficulty’s that related to the Crown," etc.—N. Y. Col. Gaz., Dec. 939. See The Vindication of James Alexander, printed by Zenger, 1733 (error for 1734), in N. Y. Pub. Library; also Aug. 4, 1735.

Colonists under Ogletorpe arrive at Savannah, Ga., and start a settlement there.

A resolution is passed by the common council "that this Corporation will Lease a Piece of Land lying at the lower End of the Broadway fronting to the Fort, to some of the Inhabitants of the Said Broadway in Order to be Inclosed to make A Bowling Green there with Walks therein, for the Beauty & Ornament of the Said Street as well as for the Recreation & delight of the Inhabitants of this City, leaving the Street on each side thereof fifty foot in breadth under such Covenants Conditions & Restrictions as this Court shall deem Expedient," in M. C. IV, 174, 175. Cf. June 6, 1745; April 6, 1753; May 27, 1757.

The common council pays Alexander Malcolm, master of the apr. public high school in New York City (Col. Laws N. Y., II: 813), his first quarter’s salary (q.v); also Anthony Lamb, the first overseer of the fire-engines, $3, as his first quarterly salary.—M. C. IV, 174, 175. See May 6, 1751; May 5, 1757. Malcolm’s school formed the “germ” of Columbia University.—See Dec. 6, 1746; Pratt, Annals of Public Education (1872), 124-25.

In a petition to the common council, Anthony Rutgers states that the he has reasonably obtained for Majestys Grant and Letters Patent for the Swamp near fresh Water,” that he has “Caused the Brush on a great part thereof to be Cut down” and that he intends “to Clear the whole and drain the same, which when perfected, it believed will greatly Contribute to the health of this City and all the Inhabitants thereof dwelling contiguous thereto.” As he "cannot Effectually drain the Swamp by which the Hudsons River as far as Low Water Mark," he asks the corporation to permit him "to place such Drain from the Petitioner’s Land into Hudsons River aforesaid as far as Low Water Mark, with Liberty to Fence and Guard the Said Drain aforesaid for the Violence of the Ice & Storms So as to render the same usefull for the Purpose aforesaid."

The petition is granted, “Provided the same be no Stop or Detri- ments, or do not Incommode the Highway or Passage there, and that the Petitioner do not exceed Twenty foot in breadth in performing the same.”—M. C. IV, 175-77: N. Y. Col. Gaz., 960-62. See Dec. 270, Sept. 18, 1734. For Petitioner’s patent for the Swamp and Fresh Water Pond, see Dec. 31, 1735.

At some time between April 6 and Dec. 31, 1733, Anthony Rutgers built at Greenwich St., north of Canal St., a bridge across the drain which he constructed this year to carry off the water from the Fresh Water Pond of the city’s two engine’s. As shown in his petition to the common council on April 6, he anticipated the king’s grant of Dec. 31. The bridge later became known as Lipsenard’s Bridge. On Sept. 13, 1736 (q.v.), the common council ordered that it be rebuilt. See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 956; N. Y. Com. Coun. (1946), 444.

It is resolved by the common council “that None of the Lands of this Corporation between High Water Mark and Low Water Mark in Kips Bay and Turtle Bay be Granted by this Corporation to any Person or Persons whomsoever: but that the same be Re- served for the Publick use and Benefit of this Corporation, and all
THE INHABITANTS therefor, for the Harbouring of Vessels in the Winter time trading to this City."—M. C. C., IV: 178.

A committee of the common council is appointed "to lay out the Ground at the lower End of the Broadway near the Fort for a Bowling Green, so as to present the Dimensions thereof to the breadth of the Streets on all sides. That the same be Leased to Mr John Chambers Mr Peter Bayard and Mr Peter Jay for the Term of Eleven years for the use aforesaid and not Otherwise, under the Annual Rent of A pepper Corn."—M. C. C., IV: 179. See March 12, 1733 Oct. 1, 1734.

The following account, derived wholly from the Minutes of the Common Council, is a condensed history of an effort for nearly 40 years to secure action by the city authorities toward building a much-needed market-house. Certain freeholders and residents of the North Ward present a petition to the common council, stating that "Great Numbers of Farmers and Other Persons from the Jersey side and up the North River do frequently Land (with their Grain and Other Provisions for the Market) at Thurmans Slip which is a Very Convenient Landing, but for want of a Publick Market House there they are Very often put to Considerable Expenses and great Inconveniencies for Storing and Carrying there their Goods for Sale," etc. They ask that the board's permission "to Erect and Build by Voluntary Contributions A Publick Market House in some Convenient place in the said Slip." The permission is granted, and a committee appointed "to direct the same to be made and Erected."

On April 24, 1736, a petition is presented to the common council, requesting permission "to Erect a Market House in the Broadway fronting the Town Streets" to be referred to the same committee.—Ibid., IV: 423-25. At the next meeting of the board, April 13, 1738 (p. 201), the latter petition was granted.—Ibid., IV: 425-26. But no action was taken in regard to a market-house at Thurmans Slip, and on July 16, 1732, a petition of John Thurmans and others for permission to build one there was rejected by the board of the common council of the city, and others to build one at Cortlandt's Slip.—Ibid., IV: 56. Nothing appears to have been attempted again to secure the erection of this market-house until Jan. 24, 1771, when Peter Mesier, John Thurmans, Jr., and others again petitioned that another committee of the board be appointed "to direct a place for Erecting a publick Market in the West Ward of this City agreeable to a former order of the Corporation." Consideration on this was deferred (Ibid., VII: 261) until Sept. 12, 1771, when the prayer of the petitioners was denied.—Ibid., VII: 312. On Oct. 24, 1771, the petition is renewed, and the number of signatures to the same effect was laid over (Ibid., VII: 324) until Oct. 28, 1771; at which time two other petitions were submitted, "each subscribed by a very Considerable Number of Inhabitants of this City, the one praying leave to Erect a Market in the fields, and the other saying that the Master and other publick Men, adjoining the N.Y. Yrd of a Market on Lane Street, on part of the Ground formerly occupied by Mr Comora, at their own Expense." Consideration of all three of these petitions was "deferred to some future Common Council."—Ibid., VII: 316. On Nov. 27, 1771, a debate arose regarding "the Petition of John Thurmans Jr and others, relating to Building a Market at Messrs Docks," but the question whether their prayer should be granted was once more decided in the negative.—Ibid., VII: 331-32.

This "Gordian knot" of repeated objections was soon severed, for, on Jan. 7, 1772, it is recorded in the Minutes that "Mr Abraham Mesier according to his Petition, that he have land suitable and possessed of a Considerable Space of Ground at the North River whereon a Building Intended as a Market house hath lately been Erected, were desirous of Conveying the same to the Corporation for a public use." Consideration by the common council was granted (Ibid., VII: 343) on March 31, 1772 (p. 102), the subject was finally settled, after 29 years, by the board's deciding that "other Ministers of the common council appointed to look over North River except Messrs Mesier and others, for the Use of the public, and Established as the same Publick Market House," and also to give permission "to the said Petitioners Residing in the Out Ward, for leave & Lyence to Erect & Set up a Market House on the aforesaid Lot of Ground, formerly Occupied by the said Mr Mesier, as a Market in the North Ward of this City."—Ibid., VII: 392-93.

The petition of John Todd, who in 1774, "on the West Corner of Gold Street," is offered for sale by James D'Hartrée.—N. Y. Gaz., Apr. 9, 1773. "Outman's Garden" was one of the landmarks occasionally referred to in newspaper advertisements.

Cosby gives to the lords of trade reasons for his intention to remove Lewis Morris from office. He represents him under a general dislike, not only for his want of probity but for his delay of Justice his excessive pride and his oppression of the people. He relates instances to support this accusation. Among these is his manner of conducting a case in equity, in which Cosby had sued Van Dam for "half the Salary and perquisites from Col. Montgomery's death." Cosby also criticizes Lewis Morris, Jr., now a member of the assembly, whom Montgomery had suspended from the council.—N. Y. Col. Gaz., VI: 942-50. For Morris's answer, see Aug. 23.

Parliament passes an Importation Act, laying exorbitant duties on all sugar, molasses, and rum imported into the colonies.

Bradford prints the following notice: "Run away, the 17th of this Instant May, from the Printer hereof, an Apprentice, named James Parker, by Trade a Printer, aged about 19 years; he is short and yellow. Has hairning on a yellowish Bengal coat, Jacket and Breeches, lined with blue, and has also with him a brown coloured coat, with flat Metal Buttons, Two Frocks, Two Shirts, A Pair of striped Ticken Jacket and Breeches. Whoever takes up and secures the said App., or the Owners, shall be rewarded by the Lords, so that his Master may have him again, shall have Twenty Shillings as a Reward, and all reasonable Charges Paid by William Bradford."—N. Y. Gaz., May 21, 1773. The reward offered was doubled in an advertisement published in Philadelphia a month later.—Am. Merc. (Philadelphia), June 21, 1773. Ten years later, in Jan. 1785 (p. 201), a short time before Bradford's Gazette suspended publication, Parker began to publish an independent paper, The New York Weekly Post-Boy.

Cortlandt Street is given to the city by private landowners. Philip and Frederick van Cortlandt, executors of the will of Mrs. Catharine Phillips, deceased; Abraham van Wyck and Jacobus Gollet, executors of the will of Andrew Teller, deceased; Abraham Mesier, and others, who own certain parcels of land between Broadway and the Hudson River, declare in a petition to the common council that they have staked out a new street, 60 feet wide, which they have named Cortlandt Street, as more fully described in the petition, and that it shall be a public street. They ask that this declaration may be recorded in the Minutes of the common council. The petition is granted, and the gift to the city is thus placed on record.—M. C. C., IV: 180-82. Cortlandt Street was regulated in 1755 (Ibid., VII: 219) and again in 1783 (M. C. C., VIII: 84).

The garden of Johnathan Outman, in John St., "on the West Corner of Gold Street," is offered for sale by Benjamin D'Hartrée.—N. Y. Gaz., Apr. 9, 1773. Outman's Garden was one of the landmarks occasionally referred to in newspaper advertisements.

A reward is offered for the return of a pair of gold sash-buckles to "Mr. Todd next Door to the Coffee-house."—N. Y. Gaz., May 21-28, 1733. Robert Todd's tavern stood at the present No. 101 Broad St., and was favoured by the governor and his friends as a place of entertainment. Numerous political conferences, concerts, and public banquets were held there during this next decade. In Dec., 1739, Todd's tavern was taken over by Andrew Ramsay, who had acquired the old Coffee House next door.—See Dec. 18, 1749.

Rev. Mr. Charlton is given permission "to make A Key to the Library of this City for his own use, and none Others, he promising to make A Catalogue of the Said Library, and properly to place Books therein, thereby to Render the same more Easy to be found and more useful, he also promising not to suffer any Books whatsoever to be taken from thence without the direction and Licence of this Corporation."—M. C. C., IV: 184. See June 27, 1729.

An act amending the laws concerning James Livingston, by giving him the surnames Maerschak or surveyors of the city, under an ordinance passed Nov. 18, 1731.—M. C. C., IV: 81-82. The oath taken by them on March 29, 1738, was the same as that prescribed in 1694 (p. 6).—Ibid., IV: 418-19.

THE ICGNIOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1733. Aug. 20. Mr. Morgan in the Commons at New-York on this date,—N. T. Gaz. July 23-29, 1733. Morgan was not one of the patentees, and in all probability had a public-house, but its location is not known.

Cosby delivers to James de Lancey a commission appointing him chief-justice in place of Lewis Morris.—Cal. Coun. Min., 319. On Aug. 27, Morris wrote to the lords of trade objecting to his removal on the ground that Cosby had not asked the advice of the council, and on other constitutional and legislative grounds. In this document he described the manner in which New York governours, in former times, derived private profit while in office. He accused Cosby of declining to make any grants of land "unless he comes in for one third of them." He recommends the establishment of a "Court of Exchequer with proper Officers for the management and disposition of the King's lands and rents." Other charges against Cosby's integrity and ability were contained in Morris's plea. In a postscript, of Sept. 1, he added that when the superseded was sent to him on Aug. 29, he was at his house, "about ten miles from New York." He stated that he was informed that his removal from office "created so great a dissatisfaction, that a more universal one was never known in this part of the world." He submitted to the lords of trade the query whether his "Patent under the Great Scale" was not "tantamount" to the government's right to discharge him.—N. Y. Col. Docs., V: 951-55. See also the printed document entitled The Case of Lewis Morris, Esq; Late Chief Justice of the Province of New York, Who was Removed from the said Office by his Excellency William Cosby, Esq; Governor of the said Province. To be heard before the Right Honourable the Lords of the Committee of his Majesty's most Honourable Privy Council, for Plantation Affairs (London, 1733), in N. Y. Pub. Library.

24. To demonstrate the "Great Deference" which the corporation of the city enters for Gov. Cosby, the common council orders that his brother, the Hon. Maj. Alexander Cosby, lieutenant-governor of the province of Annapolis and Annapolis in-law, Thomas Freeman, be presented with the freedom of the city, with the seal of each freedom "Inclosed in A silver Box, Guilt, with the Arms of this City Engraved thereon."—M. C. C., IV: 196.

"The common council appoints a committee to "give Publick Notice that this Corporation will dispose of the Vacant Lots in the Swamp Commonly Called Beckmans Swamp, and to receive Proposals of any Person or Persons who are willing to purchase the same, and to Report upon what Terms this Corporation may Conveniently dispose thereof for the Publick benefit."—M. C. C., IV: 190. On March 22, 1734, another committee was required "to Enquire into the Pretensions of the Heirs of Mr. Jacob Leisler to the Swamp or any part thereof Commonly called Beckmans Swamp: and what will be the most proper Measures for this Corporation to take for the disposal of those Lots in the Said Swamp."—Ibid., IV: 267. On June 29, 1734, it resolved that "the Swamp in Montgomery Ward within this City Commonly Called Beckmans Swamp or the Cripple Bush be Granted and Released to Mr. Jacobus Roosevelt for the Consideration of two hundred pounds (including One hundred pounds he hath already paid to this Corporation for ten Lots. A part thereof, some years ago, for which he had no deed or Conveyance) and that the same be Granted unto him and his Heirs and Assigns for Ever (that is to Say) all the Right Title and Interest which this Corporation hath to the Said Swamp and not Otherwise, without any Other Warranty, and that the Mayor and Aldermen is a Grant and Release for the same under the seal of this Corporation."—Ibid., IV: 211. The grant was made on July 20.—Liber Deeds, B: 151. See also the Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 967.

29. Cosby reports to the lords of trade regarding the acts of assembly passed at the last session. Among these the Act respecting the City of New York by Gov. Montgomery." He explains that "By this Charter they are granted all the Islands near and round his Majesties Garrison here, the soil of the East River, as far as low water mark and extending in length to the utmost limits of the Island whereby his Majesties prerogative might be in breadth the more staghtened here under a necessity of becoming petitioners to the Corporation for a convenient place to careen or refit, for this Charter having granted the Corporation all the Islands as well near and round as before the Fort which lay commodious for the security and defence of it, in case of any eruptions, was as I conceive a lodging too great a power in them, in case of any necessity, and by so much a lessening of the King's prerogative. Cosby states that he was "surprised into an assent to this Act" of assembly confirming the charter, as the document was shown to him so soon after his arrival. He is having the charter, which consists of "a vast number of Skims of Parchment," copied, and will send the copy to the lords. Meanwhile, he asks that the lords will take no action regarding the act of confirmation and leave the matter to be heard by the House of T. Y. Col. Docs., VI: 24.

25. Certain property was advertised to be sold on this day "at the Exchange in Broadway," at public vendue, by "the Vendue Master of New-York."—N. Y. Gaz., Sept. 3-14, 1733. One of the principal uses of this building is here indicated.

An advertisement for the sale of "Household Goods" is published by "Mr. George Talbot, next Door to the Play-house."—N. T. Gaz., Oct. 8-13, 1733. Other references to Talbot in the newspapers fail to reveal the location of this "Play-house."—Eg, description of PL 39, c. 264.

Cosby, in an address to the legislative council, says: "The season of the year being So far advanced I shall only at this time recollect to your consideration a thorough repair of the Barracks in this City. The work has already begun, and the moderate expense may finish it & make them useful for many years."—Jour. Leg. Coun., I: 626. Assemb. Jour., I: 649, 653. But see Sept. 2, 1737.

The late Chief Justice Lewis Morris, who was succeeded by James de Lancey on Aug. 23—Col. Coun. Min., 319, but new Representative for the County of Westchester, landed in this City, . . . at the Ferry-stairs: On His landing He was saluted by a general Fire of the Guns from the Merchants Vessels lying in the Road; and was receiv'd by great Numbers of the most considerable Merchants and Inhabitants of this City, and by them with loud Acclamations of welcome, and great parades, conducted to the Black Horse Tavern [see Oct. 29, 1727, where a bandsome Entertainment was prepar'd for Him, at the Charge of the Gentlemen who received Him; and in the Middle of One side of the Room, was fix'd a Tabulet with golden Capitals, KING GEORGE, LIBERTY and LAW"—N. Y. Jour., Nov. 5, 1733.

This popular demonstration in Morris's favour appears to be strong evidence of that general dissatisfaction at his removal from office which he referred to in his letter to the lords of trade on Aug. 23 (q.v.).

A table, costing $279, is made for the assembly-room.—Assemb. Jour., I: 653. The first sword presented a large mirror to any table.

The legislature was requested to lay the cost of 1739 (comprising extravagant grants) as concerns the Swamp which is on the west of the Fresh Water Pond, thus enabling the Swamp to be acquired by some individual by government grant, and drained. It has become a nuisance for want of draining.—Col. Laws N. Y., II: 823. This validates the patent to this property, already granted to Anthony Rutgers.—See April 6, 1733, and for history of the title see Dec., 1735.—See A.

John Peter Zenger begins the publication of The New-York Weekly Journal, the second newspaper printed in the city, Bradford's Gazette (see Nov. 1, 1725) being the first. A copy of the first issue of the Journal, bearing this date, is in the N. Y. Pub. Library. During the administration of Gov. Cosby, both papers were used as political organs, the Journal by the popular party, the Gazette by the court faction. Almost every issue of the Journal contained inflammatory writings, sometimes in the shape of letters addressed to the editor, and in the form of dissertations, which some correspondents claimed to have overheard, all being but thinly disguised attacks upon the governor and his friends (see July 21).

These articles brought forth severe denunciations from those who were loyal to the governor, and their sentiments found expression in the columns of the Gazette (see March 4, 1734). In the autumn of 1734, Zenger's attacks increased in violence, and finally led to the arrest of the printer on the charge of libel (see Nov. 17, 1734). After his acquittal, he continued his paper until his death in 1748, after which his widow, and later his son, conducted it for four years longer.—Antiquarian Soc. Collections, VI: 99-105. See also Bibliography, Vol. V, and Cunningham, "The Life and Tryal of John Peter Zenger, Printer of the New-York weekly Journal" (first ed., 1776; and Rutherford, John Peter Zenger."
An advertisement reads: "To be Run for, on the Course at New York, the 8th of this Month, a Purse upwards of 41. value, by any Horse, Mare or Gelding carrying 12 Stone, and paying 5s. entrance, which entrance Money is to be given to the second Horse, unless distanced."

The "City of New York" was probably the Bowery Road, there being no other special race-track of record at that time. See Nov. 21, 1716; but cf. Oct. 13, 1716, where it is evident the spectators were accommodated in a field.

9 It is resolved by the common council "that all the Great Guns which lye upon the Lots of Ground lately sold by this Corporation on the West Side of the Great Dock be forthwith Removed from thence into the Pasture belonging to the Fort," and a committee is appointed "to see the same performed with the leave of the Capt. General."—N. Y. Gen., IV: 201.

15 Lewis Morris writes to the lords of trade regarding Cosby that "no man was ever so universally hated as he is." He asks that Cosby be recalled "for the safety of the inhabitants of this Province," and for the prisoners.

26 Thomas Welch, from London, advertises "very good Entertain- ment for Man and Horse" at his tavern, the "Coach and Horses, in the Broadway."—N. Y. Jour., Nov. 26, 1733. This is the only reference found to this tavern.

12 "Fire Indians" aid the inhabitants in extinguishing a fire in the dwelling of one Gerardus Cooper, a cooper.—N. Y. Gaz., Dec. 10- 17, 1733.

31 Observations are published concerning the defence of the city against invasion. "As a war is likely to break out, and the Rumours thereof daily increase," the writer believes the city should not trust "too much on our Number of Men, and carelessly saying, No Fear, no Fear;" but that batteries should be erected at Sandy Hook, Coney Island, both sides of the Narrows, and other strategical points in and around the city. To man these works, all the train-bands of the adjacent towns should be required "to repair thither immediately," the forces from so as to leave their boats at Kip's Bay, and those from Bergen County at "Grinnage" (Greenwich). Everyone is urged "to lay aside all private Views, Partyship and Divisions . . . and declare for a stout and resolute Resistance." Instead of paying a heavy ransom for the city, it is preferable to strengthen the defences, in order to resist "a free and happy People."—N. Y. Gaz., Dec. 21, 1733. See also June 10, 1734.

Anthony Rutgers receives a patent from the King George II for "a certain swamp and fresh pond, called the Fresh Water, and adjacent to the King's Farm, formerly called the Duke's Farm, on the Island Manhattan, beginning at a staked set in the ground on the south side of the said pond, and at the north-east corner of the land belonging to William Merritt; thence it rangeth along the south side of the said swamp and pond, by the upland to the beach on the east side of Hudson's River; so along the beach to the up- land; thence crosth, and out of said swamp to the land on the east side thereof; thence by the said land it runs, to the east side of the tan-yard; and thence to the place where it begun."—Lib. Patents, XI: 127 (Albany). The swamp and fresh water included about 70 acres. Judge Hoffman (Estate and Rights of the Corporation of the City of N. Y., 169) says there is "no doubt the grant took its strip west of the Calk Hook and down to near Duane, east of that part of the Dominick's Bowery." In the Banncker collection (box G), in N. Y. Pub. Library, is "a Plan of a proposed alteration of Boundary between the Church Land and the Land belonging to Mt Anthony Rutgers." The legality of the grant to Anthony Rutgers is singular. An order of the privy council, issued Aug. 12, 1733, empowered Gov. Cosby to grant a patent to the swamp and fresh pond. Hoffman op. cit. observes this and states that he finds no grant made by the governor at this time. Nevertheless, a petition of Anthony Rutgers, April 6, 1733 (p. 9) alleged that he had "lately Obtained his Majesty's Grant and Letters Patent for the Swamp near fresh Water." Yet the grant from the governor and council is dated Dec. 16, 1733, in Col. Coun. Min., 330, and the patent is actually 15 days later. From 1731, Rutgers evidently assumed that the swamp and pond had been granted to him. For much interesting data upon this confused subject, see Hoffman, op. cit., I: 21-26; II: 189-91. For the copy of an act permitting the grant of the pond and swamp to Rutgers, see Ref. N. Y. Gaz., Dec. 73, and for the warrant for a patent, see ibid., XI: 77. For the release of the right to the land under water, executed in 1791 by the heirs of Anthony Rutgers, see May 13 and Sept. 29, 1791. See also descriptions of Frontispiece, II, and Pl. 83-b, III: 530, 566-61; and Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 947, 965.

The year 1733 passed with little peace for New York. — The fear of the French and Indians still hung over the colony, trade was declining, several families emigrated to New Jersey, and the assembly was adjourned, not to meet again until April, 1734. — From "William Cosby and the Freedom of the Press," in Wilson's Mem-Hist. of N. Y., II: 216.

Probably in this year, William Bradford published "A New Map of the Harbour of New York, and the South River." See also Tilton, Reforred Low Dutch Church of Harlem, 43-45; and Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 935.

The birthday of Frederick, Prince of Wales, is celebrated with the usual demonstrations, and described in the daily newspaper report.—N. Y. Gaz., Jan. 21-23, 1734.

"There is now preparing for the Press, a list of the Names of those Gentlemen, who by their Words and Actions do profess the Belief of that modern Doctrine, of keeping in with Governors upon any terms in order to prevent the People, on a new Choice of Representatives in General as well as from trusting their liberties in such hands."—N. Y. Jour., Jan. 21, 1734.

An appeal is addressed to Cosby, beginning: "We the Grand Inquest for our Sovereign Lord the King, and the Body of the City and County of New-York, . . ." It appears to be a combined protest from a commission of inquiry, and the city magistrates, who state: "That from the various Accounts we have lately had by the public Papers of the Armaments and Military Preparations which for some Time past have been making by several of the States and Powers in Europe, We are apprehensive the Consequences thereof may terminate it War . . . They wish to discourage and oppose "any Naval Attempt that might be made against us." They therefore ask "that such proper and reasonable Care may speedily be taken to fortify this City (the Metropolis of this Province) as may most conduce to His Majesty's Honour, and the Safety of his People . . ." Cosby replied next day that he had received no express from England, such as is usually sent "Upon the least Surmise of a War." He cannot learn that any of the governors have received any. Nevertheless, he says, "I will employ my immediate Thoughts to consider such effectual Measures, that no Time may be lost when it is proper, to put them in Practice for the Security, Ease and Protection of you the People."—N. Y. Gaz., Feb. 12, 1734.

A negro is burnt alive at New York, in accordance with Dec. 31 sentence of a justice's court, for two attempted assaults upon women.—N. Y. Gaz., Jan. 21-23, 1734.

At about midnight of this Friday, a letter is found under the door of James Alexander's house threatening him and his family with destruction, if a most villainous demand, thereby made, is not complied with. On Feb. 15, the governor's council ordered that a proclamation be issued to discover the perpetrator. Such proclamation, signed by Cosby, dated Feb. 19, and offering a Feb. reward of £50 to anyone who should discover the author of the letter, or his accomplice, was published.—Cal. Coun. Min., 322; N. Y. Gen., Feb. 15–17, 1734. On March 4, "Err Harrison," published an indignant denial of the authorship of the letter, which had been charged to him; and, on March 11, an advertisement announced the publication of the report of a committee of the council regarding the episode.—N. Y. Gen., Feb. 25–Mar. 4, and May 30, 1734.

The "Hum-drum-Club" is spoken of in an attack on Zenger by a correspondent in Bradford's Gazette. "The Governor," he says, "was not at the Hum-drum-Club of this City on Friday Night last; but was pleased to Honour the worthy Gentlemen of that Club with his Company on Saturday was [sic] Seventeighth, and last Saturday Night."—N. Y. Gen., Jan. 28-Feb. 4, 1734. Again, on March 25, a correspondent who signed himself "Peter Scheme" said that he often frequented the "Coffee-house, to take an Hitt at Back Gamy," where he heard the sentiments of the "Courtiers," as Zenger termed them; and also that he conversed with the governor and the "Courtiers," sometimes at the "Humdrum," and sometimes at "the Fort."—Ibid., March 18–25, 1734.

A letter is published regarding the increase in the number of beggars in New York. The example of neighbouring provinces is cited, where beggars are forced to work to maintain themselves, "which seems the Reason of so many Strangers among us, finding they may here be maintained without being punished for Sloathfulness." The writer recommends the building of workhouses. "And if stately Buildings could not be accomplished, less might answer the End for a Time; and being thus provided for the want, the remainder necessary, Overseers of the Poor would be able (at a cheap Rate) to provide and take Care of the Helpless, to teach the Sloathful Industry, the Disobedient and straggling Vagabonds to punish. And by these Means, in a few Years, save more Money to the City than those Buildings would cost."—N. Y. Gen., Mar. 4, 1734.

Zenger "intends to remove to Broad-Street near the upper End of the Long Bridge."—N. J. Jour., March 11, 1734.

Newark sachems come before the governour and council at New York. They express regret that Gov. Cosby did not bring his family to America.—Cal. Coun. Min., 321. See, however, Aug. 27.

A contributor to Bradford's paper thinks the only excuse for allowing Zenger to continue is the "Consideration of giving him Rope enough." False, malicious, libellous, licentious, scurrilous, virulent, sedition—some of the adjectives used to describe his Journal.—N. Y. Gen., March 4, 1734.

Zenger "intends to remove to Broad-Street near the upper End of the Long Bridge."—N. J. Jour., March 11, 1734.

Braddock, the printer of the Gazette, has just moved "to the House where the Brasier lately dwelt, in Hanover Square, over against Capt. Walton."—N. Y. Gen., April 8–15, 1734. He moved again, April 5, 1735 (q.v.).

The development of the city in the vicinity of Beeckman's Swamp, which was granted to Jacobus Roosevelt on Sept. 5, 1728 (q.v.), begins by the more active sale of building lots; 18 lots fronting "the street that leads from Smith's Fly to the Fresh Water," bounded in part by "the Swamp or Ten Yards" and "Skinner Street," are offered for sale.—N. Y. Jour., April 22, 1734. On June 10, 22 lots in the same locality were advertised.—Ibid., June 10, 1734. On July 20 (q.v.), the city made additional grants in the Swamp itself to Jacobus Roosevelt.—Liber Deeds, B: 151. See also Aug. 24, 1735.

Several acres of the "Swamp" had been acquired by Jacobus Roosevelt. "Having been divided by the purchaser into lots, they were principally taken by the tanners, who occupied much of the entire space included between Cliff and Gold and Ferry and Franklin streets, and the north side of Frankford between Cliff and Duke. In this noted region the activity of the trade, before the Revolution, accumulated vast mounds of tar, where the boys of the neighborhood wagged mince battles behind redoubts of that material, spilled with horses from the tannary. Other tanners pursued their occupation outside the city palisades, on the southern borders of the 'Collect' or Fresh-water Pond, near the junction of the present Centre and Pearl streets."—Bishop, Hist. of Am. Manufactures from 1685 to 1860, I: 441–42.

25 Members leave the assembly chamber and go to the council chamber, at Gov. Cosby's request, as is customary, to hear his speech at the opening of the session. The encouragement of trade is his first topic. He points out causes of the decay of trade. The principal one is that neighbours, the Bermudians especially, have become the common carriers for this province. Thereby, "not only building, which is a vast Advantage to a Country, is discouraged, and almost wholly disused; Artificers without Employ, . . . and no Prospect before them, but extrem Poverty, or a forsaking their Country; but likewise vast Sums of Money are yearly carried out of the Province by Strangers, who, . . . spend hardly any Thing even for their daily Subsistence while here, nor Import any Thing useful or profitable into it."

Another cause of the decay of trade is the want of strict inspection of flour, "the staple Commodity of the Country." The object of such inspection is to prevent the exportation of any except such as are "equal to the best that is exported from neighbouring provinces, whose flour has gained a reputation superior to that of New York because of "the wholesome Laws they have made to prevent Frauds and Abuses." Cosby therefore recommends the passage of laws for the encouragement of navigation necessary, "by laying a Duty of Tonnage" upon those who supplant this province in navigation; and, for laws, that provide for inspection, to prevent frauds in bolting. These laws, he declares, will "give Life to the expiring Hopes of your Ship Carpenters and other Tradesmen; recall their unwilling Resolutions to return the Province, and encourage others to come into it; fill your Harbours with Vessels of your own, inspire the Youth with warm Inclinations to become Seamen; and, by giving new Vigour to a declining Trade, fill your Country with Riches, and spread its Reputation far and wide."

He also recommends the protection of the harbour and town of New York, and the frontiers; "nor is any Time so fit to guard against our future Enemies, as a Time of Peace." He advises the assembly "to give a sufficient Sum for the Erecting of a Battery at the Point of Rocks by Whitehall," and newly forts at Albany and Schenectady. For these purposes he has drawn plans, and made an estimate of the expense, which he will order laid before the assembly. He advises also that the management of the money be put into "honest and frugal Hands," and a strict account required. He desires also that the burden of duties now laid upon trade may be eased "by an Imposition on some other Parts better able to bear it, or on something that may not at all affect Trade." He suggests a duty "upon Paper to be used in the Law, and in all Conveyances and Deeds of every Denomination." He points out the disadvantages "that attend the too great Importation of Negroes and Convicts;" also that provision should be made to supply the Six Nations of Indians with smiths and proper tools to mend their arms. The French "not only do that, but constantly send some Men of Art and Interest to reside among them, furnished with Brandy, Lead and Powder, which they give from Time to Time to the Indians, whereby they insinuate themselves with them, and alienate their Affections from us." It is "our Interest," he says, "to defeat the Attempts of the French by the like Arts, and to preserve the Friendship of the six Nations though at a greater Expense."

Cosby promises his concurrence in the enactment of any other laws for the defence of the province, the advancement of trade, the encouragement of husbandry, or for promoting manufactures, arts, and sciences.—Assemb. Jour., I: 654; Jour. Leg. Coun., I: 650–52.

On April 29, Mr. Morris, the deputy secretary, presented to the house the governor's plans, and his estimate of the expense for fortifications. The proposed battery at Whitehall is estimated at about £15,000.—Ibid., I: 655. A later estimate (May 4), placed it at £16,000.—Ibid., I: 657. See also Oct. 28, 1734, where the name "Copple" is applied to the same locality.
A "Committee of Grievances" is appointed by the assembly to meet every Thursday, "at the House of Mr. John De Honeur, in the City of New-York."—Assem. Jour., I, 655.

May 13. repeated announcement, beginning March 11, of his intention "to remove to Broad-Street near the upper End of the Lords' House, in his Absence," at 50 shillings a year of this date that he "is removed."—N. Y. Jour., May 13, 1734.

The city's method of extending its boundaries by filling in the water front around the lower end of the island is well illustrated in the laying out and development of Water Street in the vicinity of the Public-Assembly, and Common Council. The chasers of the Water Lots fronting the Dock Street Wharf be Obliged to lay Erect and build a Wharf of twenty five foot part of the Street or Wharf of forty foot next to the East River in Six years and to finish the Said Street of forty foot in twelve years."—M. C. C., IV, 208. On Sept. 30, 1734, it was ordered "that twenty foot of Ground on the West Side of the Lot of Ground of Anthony Rutgers Esq'r which he lately purchased of this Corporation between the Great Dock and Whitehall, be left to make A Street or Wharf thereon by the Said Anthony Rutgers fronting to the Slip to be left there."—Ibid., IV, 320. On Oct. 3, 1734, there was entered in the Minutes a petition from Stephen de Lancer, Anthony Rutgers, John Moore, and Robert Livingston, Jr., stating that they had lately purchased six lots, four of which were situated on the west side of the great dock between Whitehall Street and the East River, and the other two laid out of forty foot wide to Run along the East River or Harbour, and in the Rear Northerly by Whitehall Street," as shown by their respective grants on record in the town clerk's office. This petition further recited that on one of these four lots "Very Considerable Buildings and Improvements" had been made, and that "Further Improvements for the Conveniency of Trade Navigation & Commerce and Enlarging this City in Buildings and Inhabitants" were "Speedily Intended." It was therefore their desire that they might not afterward "be Debarred or Deprived of the Benefit of the East River or Harbour," and they asked that the corporation would grant to them, and to their Heirs and Assigns, all the width of the Street or Wharf "to be gained out of the Said East River," fronting their purchased, together with the right to profit from the wharfs to be made on the river front, "with all Cranes Stairs and landing places to be made thereon." They offered on their part to make a street 40 feet in width fronting their lots, "and at the Outward part of the Said 24 feet of Ground in the East River or Harbour at their own further Expenace will leave Another good and sufficient Street or Wharf of forty foot in breadth" as the city surveyors should direct, completing "the Said Streets" on or before March 25, 1746, and to their Heirs and Assigns, but that it being understood that these should " Remain Publick Streets and Highways for Ever." The petition was granted by the common council "at the yearly Rent of Eighteen pence #9 foot, in the front of each Lot, and that Mr. Moore make A Wharf or Street, the whole length of his Lot on the East side thereof twenty four foot least in breadth and that Mr. Rutgers make A Wharf or Street twenty foot breadth on the West side of his Lot at their own proper Cost and Charge." It was ordered that the mayor execute the grants "for the same four Water Lots," and that the yearly rent be payable March 25, "Commonly Called Lady Day."—Ibid., IV, 224-226, and see City Grants, Liber B, 246-60. Regarding the further development of the street along East River, see M. C. C., IV, 328. It received the name of Water Street in 1736.—Ibid., IV, 331. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 1021. Water lots, granted in 1734 between Old Slip and Cowes Slip, are shown on a map (made in 1774), now in Bureau of Topography, Dept. of Public Works.

An ordinance is proclaimed, by order of the common council, for preserving the fish in Fresh Water Pond. It provides "that if any Person or Persons whatsoever do, from henceforth presume to put any Wharf or Piers or other Neceossary to Fresh Water Pond, belonging to this Corporation, any Hoop-Net, Draw-net, Purse-net, Cast-net, Cod-net, Bley-net, or any other Net or Nets whatsoever, and shall take and Catch any of the fish within the Said Pond, therewith, or by any other Engine, Machine, Art, or Means whatsoever, than by Angling, Paring, Angle Rod, Hook and Line only," he shall be required to pay a fine of 20 shillings.—M. C. C., IV, 209-10. This appears to be the first municipal ordinance for the protection of "fish and game." For the city's first "closed season" ordinance, see Nov. 14, 1758.

Capt. Michael Thodey is given permission by the common council "to make use of the Rope Walk without Spring Garden Gate lately in the Occupation of John searle deceas'd and John PBurnet," at 25 shillings a year of this date that he is "removed."—N. Y. Jour., May 13, 1734.

William Smith, counseller-at-law, delivers an opinion to the general assembly to show "that No Court of Equity can lawfully have any Being or Authority within this Colony, without Consent in General Assembly. Therefore that the Court of Equity lately erected in the Supreme-Court, by Ordinance of Governor and Council, without Consent in General Assembly; is not a lawful Court."—N. Y. Gen., Sept. 16-23, 1734. See also Mr. Smith's Opinion Humbly Offered to the General Assembly of the Colony of New-York, One [on the] Seventh of June, 1734, At their Request. Occasion'd by sundry Petitions of the Inhabitants of the City of New-York . . . praying an Establishment of Courts of Justice within the said Colony by Act of the Legislature. (N. Y., 1734). Bound with this is Mr. Murray's Opinion Relating to the Courts of Justice in the Colony of New-York; Delivered to the General Assembly of the said Colony, at their Request, the 12th of June, 1734, both documents being printed by Bradford. Copies are owned by the N.Y. Hist. Soc.

The justices of the peace and the vestrymen of the city ask the assembly for leave to bring in a bill for the "better Relief and Maintenance of the Poor in the said City."—Assem. Jour., II, 665.

Referring to the subject of defence which is under general discussion, a letter to the press states: "Mr. Bradford's Writers . . . have told the World, how packed and unprovided we are, and what great Advantage and Profits an Enemy has a chance to get by coming here."—N. Y. Jour., June 10, 1734.

The king's access to the crown is celebrated. At noon, "the Gentlemen of the Council, Assembly, and the City" wait on the governor at the fort; and drink the health of the king and queen, the royal family, and the Prince and Princess of Orange, "under the Discharge of the Cannon;" the "regular Troops, in their new Cloaths, with the rest of the Armes, who made a Sene Appearance." Afterwards, the governor, attended by the same assemblage, "went into the Field, and review'd the Militia of the City drawn up there, and express'd great Satisfaction at their Order, Discipline, and Appearance, and was pleased to order 12 Barrels of Beer to be distributed among them to drink to the Majesties and the Royal Healths."—N. Y. Gen., June 17, 1734.

Cosby, in a report to the lords of trade, reviews the arguments in his case against Van Dam, which led to his dismissing chief-justice Morris (see Nov. 14, 1733); and he sends them a copy of Morris's argument and opinion for the Crown, it being understood that these should "Remain Publick Streets and Highways for Ever." The petition was granted by the common council "at the yearly Rent of Eighteen pence #9 foot, in the front of each Lot, and that Mr. Moore make A Wharf or Street, the whole length of his Lot on the East side thereof twenty four foot least in breadth and that Mr. Rutgers make A Wharf or Street twenty foot breadth on the West side of his Lot at their own proper Cost and Charge." It was ordered that the mayor execute the grants "for the same four Water Lots," and that the yearly rent be payable March 25, "Commonly Called Lady Day."—Ibid., IV, 224-226, and see City Grants, Liber B, 246-60. Regarding the further development of the street along East River, see M. C. C., IV, 328. It received the name of Water Street in 1736.—Ibid., IV, 331. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 1021. Water lots, granted in 1734 between Old Slip and Cowes Slip, are shown on a map (made in 1774), now in Bureau of Topography, Dept. of Public Works.

The bill of Daniel Gautier, amounting to £271:10s., for building the additional room in the city hall for the assembly (see Sept. 26, 1732) is audited.—Assem. Jour., I, 668. On July 13, a warrant was issued to pay him.—Cal. Coun. Min., 311. (Note that the date "1731" on pp. 312 and 313 of the Cal. Coun. Min. is a misprint for 1732.)

The legislature passes an act to lay a duty on the tonnage of all vessels trading in the colony of New-York, excepting vessels built here; also an act to prescribe rates to be charged for the use of the wharf called Burnet's Key. The same schedule of rates is to apply on all vessels that have or ever have been built on the Keys. The key is not to affect the wharves belonging to the city.—Col. Laws N. Y., II: 831, 837-49 and see April 25. Commenting on this act, Cosby stated on June 10, 1735, that the owners of Burnet's Key had "carry'd it a considerable way into the water whereby almost any one of our Vessels can carry more cargo and more ease than they formerly used to do by bulks when riding at anchor in the River."—N. Y. Col. Docs., V: 29. Burnet's Key is shown on Pls. 26, 27, and 27-A, Vol. I.
A provincial act is passed granting "Quakers residing within this Colony The same privileges Benefits & indulgences as by the 22 Laws & Statutes now remaining of force in . . . England The people of That Denomination are intituled unto within those Dominions."

Capt. Robert Long, commander of "his Majestys Ship Seafor[d the Station ship of War for this Colony," having represented to the common council "that the Hulk whereby his Majestys ships used to Careen by, is sunk and broke to pieces in Turtle Bay," proposes, if the city will grant to him and his heirs and assigns forever "A Small piece of Ground on the south West Side of Turtle Bay, only, from high Water Mark fifty foot into the River," he will erect thereon at his own expense a wharf "Convenient for his Majestys Ships to Careen at," and "Remove the Ruins of the Hulk aforesaid and such Other Wrecks which lye sunk within the said Turtle Bay," the object being to make the bay "more usefull and Commodious for the Sheltering of A far greater Number of Shipping therein," and more especially to secure them in winter from "the driving Ice in the River." The common council resolves to grant such land (the description of which is entered in detail in the Minutes,) with the understanding that he will erect the wharf before July 1, 1735, that he will also erect and keep in repair a "Convenient pair of landing Stairs of Six foot wide, free for all Persons to Come to and land at the same at or Near the North West Corner;" and he is given authority for himself and his heirs and assigns to receive such sums or sums of Money for such landing, unloading or Careening at, or by the said Wharf as shall be Reasonable."—M. G. C., IV: 212–14. The grant was made Oct. 12, 1735.—City Grants, Liber B: 283. See Oct. 8.

Bestavare's Cripplebusch, or Bedman's Swamp, is granted to Jacobus Roosevelt by the city.—Liber City Grants, B: 151 (comptroller's office). This tract, represented on numerous early maps as a piece of swampy land, lay between, or to the south of, that part of Deer Island which was then part of the city, and which was laid out and surveyed by John and Ferry St. It became known later as "The Swamp," and is so spoken of to-day, colloquially. The tanning and leather interests of New York have never entirely abandoned this locality. See Sept. 10, 1668; Sept. 5, 1728.

The city grants to Cornelius van Horne a lot extending from the Dock Street wharf 400 feet into the East River, with the obligation that he shall increase by 15 feet the width of Dock (later Water) Street at the upper end of his lot and make another wharf of 15 feet at the Street 40 feet in width to 200 feet farther into the East River. This is the first conveyance by a wharf out of the city in the form of a lease, and the city charged an annual rent instead of a cash payment.—Liber Deeds, B: 125. See also Black's Municipal Ownership of Land, 18. Other grants at this wharf are made the same day on similar terms.—Ibid., B: 153, 145, 154, 163, 171, 174, and 192. See also Addenda, 1730.

Six acres of land for sale "of the Swamp or Cripplebusch." Three of them "front the Road that leads from Spring Garden to fresh Water," the other three "front the Street next to the Swamp." Inquirers are referred to Anna Ten Eyck, "near Koonits Market."—N. Y. Jour., July 29, 1734.

Thomas Copley this day stood in the Publick Pillory of this City for having false Dollars with intent to utter and pass them in payment, and uttering one false Dollar knowing it to be so, of which he was Convicted." Eighteen such "false Dollars" are "in Open Court [of general session] . . . broke to pieces."—Min. Gen. Session (MS.), 27.

"Ordered That Mr Vesey the Two Church Wardens Mr Moore M'r Auboyneau and M'r Chambers or any five of them whereof the Rector and one of the Church Wardens be Two be a Committee to lease out the Lots of Ground behind the Church Yard for any Number of Years at an exceeding forty under such Yearly Ground Rents Covenants and Restrictions as they shall think most proper . . . and it is also Resolved that the said Committee be at Liberty to Obtain from the Corporation of this City a Grant and Confirmation of their Said Ground and of the Water Lots fronting the same Upon such Yearly Ground Rents and agreements as they shall think proper and reasonable to make."—Trin. Min. (MS.).

"This Day, his Excellency our Governour and Family embarqued for his other Government of New Jersey, being attended to the Water-side by the Mayor, Aldermen, and Commonality, and sundry Aug. 27 the principal Gentlemen of this City, and the Officers and Soldiers of the Garrison under Arms; upon their embarking, they were saluted by the Fort with fifteen Guns, and by the Gentlemen with their Huzzas."—N. Y. Gen., VII: 358.

Satirical letters by "Timothy Wheelwright" and "John Chisolm" (pseud.), dated Sept. 8 and 12, regarding the approaching election for aldermen, are printed as a handbill or folder by Zenger. They express the despair of the workmen, and advise them to answer the rights of their country. One of these handbills is in the N. Y. Pub. Library.

According to this document (quoted in I: 258, v. 9), a short cut on the "Boston High Road" is in course of construction. This short cut is shown on the Bradford Map, Pl. 27, Vol. I, indicating that it had been begun, or at least was in contemplation, as early as 1730. The road seems to have been still incomplete on July 29, 1730 (p. 2).

On Nov. 7, 1741, the course of the post-road was defined by law and included the "Straight Line" or short cut "through the Hill by the House of Captain Brown where the Wind Mill formerly stood."—Col. Lotts N. Y., III: 162–66.

"A Great Number of Tanners and Other Inhabitants" having represented to the common council "that they are greatly prejudiced by A Draio laid into the fresh Water Pond by the Order of Anthony Rutgers Esq[.] [see April 6, 1733] which has greatly drawn away the Water from the same Pond," it is ordered "that the Said Mr. Rutgers do have for 26 Years a Draio thirtieth foot from the Said fresh Water Pond." Rutgers had been obliged by his letters patent which granted him the swamp near the pond to drain the swamp within one year from the date of his patent.—M. C. C., IV: 216–17. See Sept. 15, 1739.

The elections for members of the common council, held this day, are described as follows: "Simon Johnson and Edie Myer carried it against the Governour's Interest notwithstanding there voted against them a considerable Merchant who was an Inhabitant of another Ward, and about 15 of the soldiers of His Majestys Gar- son, besides the Representatives of the City [Francis Harison] and his Interest. All the Members that were chosen were put up by an Interest opposite to the Governour's except John More, to whose Favour a great many of the City joyned, or he would have lost his Election."—N. Y. Jour., Oct. 7, 1734. See Oct. 14, 1734.

It is resolved by the common council "that the Bowling Green at the lower End of the Broadway in the West Ward of this City as it is now in fence be Leased unto Philipps Esq[.] Mr John Chambers and Mr John Roosevelt and their Assigns for the Term of ten Years to Commence the twenty ninth day of September last past for A Bowling Green only at the yearly Rent of one pepper Corre and that at the end of every Lott a Forty Foot Leake for the same under the Common Seal of this Corporation."—M. C. C., IV: 221. For the continuation of this lease, see Sept. 1, 1742. See also March 12, and April 6, 1733.

The draught of a grant for a piece of land to Robert Long (to be used as a caretaker's site for ships of the royal navy) at Cripple Bay is read and amended, and the common council orders that it be engrossed.—M. C. C., IV: 237. See June 29, 1734. Refer also to M. C. C., IV: 166, 172, 174, 178, and 209, and City Grants, Liber B: 263. See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 688; Pl. 176.

"By order of the common council, Mayor Lutting reimburses himself, by warrant to the treasurer for $177.60 for "Casing of Timber out of the Parade before the Fort in the year 1728. and for "A speaking Trumpet for the use of this Corporation (in 1733) in Case of fire."—M. C. C., IV: 228. The original bill of the mayor is preserved in the city clerk's office.

A committee of the common council is appointed "to Agree with A Printer" for the printing of the "Chartier of this Corporation," the copy to be printed being "first Carefully Examined with the Original."—M. C. C., IV: 231. On Oct. 25, the committee reported that they had "Agreed with John Peter Zenger Printer in manner following to wit that he will Print the same on very good Paper and in good and fair Characters for seven pounds, and the Befitt Accrueing on the sale of the Printed Copies to be for his own use; and that he will Print Six Copies and bind them up very Neatly for the Corporation to dispose of or Present, to whom they shall think proper, and that he is to assist the Act of Assembly which Confirms the Said Charter in the same Book." On approving the report, it was ordered "that a fair Copy of the Said Charter be made for the Printer Accordingly by the Town Clerk, and that the same Committee do take Care the same be forthwith Perfect'd."

Robert Loring is sworn into office for his ninth term as mayor of the city, and Cosby delivers the following address: "Mr. Mayor and Gentlemen who are chosen into the Magistracy of this City for the present year, I cannot Unit this Opportunity of speaking to you, of a Paper printed in this City, touching your Elections, in which it is wickedly insinuated, That they were carried against the Governor's Interest [see Sept. 30]: You yourselves must be sensible, that I have no ways intermeddled with them, but have left them entirely in the hands of the People. I have not been devoured, by the most false and scandalous Misrepresentations of my Conduct, to lessen the Regard that is due to my Character and Station among you; and, if those men should be so Wicked and abandon'd, as to continue their Seditious Practices, notwithstanding all the Forbearance and Leinety they have hitherto met with, you will exert yourselves, as Preservers of the Peace, which is entrusted into your hands, and use the proper Means to bring the Offenders to Confound Punishment."—N. Y. Gaz., Oct. 4—21, 1734.

After having several of Zenger's "Journals" and other Scurrilous papers tending to alienate the affections of the people of this province from his Majesties Government" laid before it, the council asks for a conference with a committee of the assembly.—Jour. Leg. Coun., I: 657. The request is granted by the assembly.— Assemb. Jour., I: 671. The next day the committee reported to the assembly and asked concurrence in the orders of the House of Burgesses of the 1st of Nov. On Oct. 31, the assembly debated the proposals of the committee and voted to lay the matter on the table.—Ibid., I: 672. See, however, Oct. 19.

The following order is issued by the supreme court, at which Chief Justice James de Lancey, and Second Justice Frederick Philipse are present: "The Grand Jury having yesterday presented two scandalous and seditious songs or ballads lately dispersed about this city—one entitled A Song made upon the Election of the new Magistrates for this City, the other entitled A Song made on the foregoing occasion; both highly defaming the present administration of his Majesties Government; and further, that as the same does impeach the minds of his Majestys good subjects, and to disturb and destroy that peace and tranquillity which ought to subsist and be maintained in this Colony, and all other well-governed communities, of which virulent, scandalous and seditious or ballads they have not been able, on a strict enquiry, to discover either the author, printer, or publisher: It is therefore ordered by the Court, that the said . . . songs or ballads be burnt before the City Hall, sitting the Court, by the hands of the common hangman or whipped, on Monday, the 21st of this instant, at 12 o'clock, and that the High Sheriff of this city and county do take orders according to the tenor of these orders;"—Jour. Leg. Coun., I: 657. See April 25, 1734. Instead, the newspaper suggests the erection of batteries at convenient places "at half the Expense proposed."—N. Y. Jour., Oct. 28, 1734.

The anniversary of the king's birthday is observed. The news report thus describes the celebration: "Between the hours of eleven and twelve in the forenoon, his Excellency our Governor was attended at his House in Fort George by the Council, Assembly, Merchants, and other Principal Gentlemen and Inhabitants of this and adjacent Places. The Independent Companies posted here being under the Command of Major Hawk, round the Ramparts firing while his Majestys, the Queen's, the Prince's and the Royal Families, and their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Orange's Healths were drank; and then followed the Healths of his Grace the Duke of New Castle, of the Duke of Grafton, of the Right Honourable Sir Robert Walpole, and many other Royal Healths. In the evening the Governor issued a Proclamation, for a splendid Ball and Supper at the Fort, where was the most Numerous and fine Appearance of Ladies and Gentlemen that had ever been known upon the like Occasion. And it was no small addition to the General Joy and Satisfaction of the Day that Capt. Bryant from London arrived in the forenoon, who brought the Welsh News of the Health of the King, the Queen, and all the Royal Family; and that the Kingdom enjoyed at present all the Blessings of Peace, Plenty and a Flourishing Trade under his Majestys most Glorious and Auspicious Administration."—N. Y. Gaz., Nov. 11, 1734.

Upon learning that the assembly tabled consideration of Zenger's Journal, the council issues following orders: to the hangman or the whipper, to burn, near the pillory, numbers 7, 47, 48, and 49 of The New York Journal, which reflect upon his nature; to the sheriff, to see that it is "effectually done;" to the governor, to put forth a proclamation offering a reward of £50 for the discovery of the authors of these papers; to the attorney-general, to prosecute them when discovered, and after examining the Journal, from first to last. Meanwhile, it is ordered, that a proclamation "reflect upon any persons in the administration of the Government;" to the sheriff, to arrest and imprison Zenger, and to the magistrates of the respective counties "to be active in their respective offices to preserve the public peace."—Jour. Leg. Coun., I: 652. See Nov. 5, 6, 17, 24, 1734; April 16, Aug. 4, Sept. 16, 1735.

The common council orders that "the Freedoms of this Corporation be Presented unto Cap't Matthew Norris and Cap't Robert Long Commanders of his Majesty's Ships Tartar & Seaford . . . The text of each freedom is entered in full in the Minutes. Norris is described as the son of the Hon. Sir John Norris. "Admiral of his Majestys Royal Navy of Great Britain," and who, "being lately A worthy Member of the Honourable House of Commons of Great Britain, did in that House strenuously Oppose and give his Vote Against the Bill passed in favour of the Sugar Colonies;" also one of the Star Alliance of the United Kingdom, and the worthy Daughter of the Honourable Lewis Morris Esq. A Native of this City." Both the "Tartar" and "Seaford" are ships of this province.—M. C. G., IV: 234-35.

The sheriff delivers to the court of quarter sessions an order that the magistrates attend the burning of several issues of Zenger's Journal by the hangman. The court fords the entry of the order in its records. On the following day, the sheriff's motion that the court comply with the order of the council was met with a vigorous protest by the magistrates, and all members of the corporation were forbidden to obey it. Recorder Harison, alone dissented. The sheriff-whipper be directed to carry out the order of the council, but the court, holding that the whipper was an officer of the corporation, refused to give him any such order. About noon the sheriff, after reading the numbers of Zenger's Journal, delivered them to his negro servant, who burnt them in the presence of Recorder Harison, and several officers of the garrison. The members of the court did not attend.—A brief Narrative of the Case and Tryal of John Peter Zenger, Printer of the New York Weekly Journal (1st ed., N. Y., 1736, in N. Y. Pub. Library) 3.4.

The governor's council approves the draft of a proclamation for encouraging immigration from Europe.—Gaz., Oct. 25, 1734.

The governor issues a proclamation, one for the discovery of the authors of "two late Scandalous Songs and Ballads . . . defaming the Administration," and the other to discover the authors of seditious reflections contained in numbers 7, 47, 48, and 49 of Zenger's Journal.—N. Y. Gaz., Nov. 25, 1734; Gaz. Hist. Mol., Erg. 532. One of each of these proclamations is preserved in the collection of the N. Y. Pub. Library; also one of the original handbills containing the two so-called scandalous songs.

A committee of the common council is appointed "to Inspect and Enquire for a proper House and Ground to be purchased by this Corporation to be Converted into a House of Correction and a Workhouse and upon what Terms Such A Convenient House can be purchased and in what place and of whom."—M. C. G., IV: 236. The first consideration of this subject by the common council was taken on March 24, 1734 (q.v.). On Dec. 20, 1734, a resolution referred to "the Necessity and Continuing Increase of the Poor within this City," which was "very great and Exceeding burdensome to the Inhabitants thereof for want of a Workhouse and House of Correction;" and stated that "there is not yet any Provision made for the Relief and settling on Work of Poor Needy Persons and Ede Wandering Vagabonds, Sturdy Beggars, and Such others who masquerade without the Said City, who living Idly and unemployed, become debauched and Instructed in the Practice of Thievery," etc. The common council therefore resolved to build at its own expense "A good, Strong and Convenient House and Tenement, upon part of the unimproved Lands of the Corporation, on the South Side of the brick lately built on by DuGan Commonly Called the Vineyard." A committee was appointed "to lay out a Convenient piece of Land three, for that Workhouse and Other Conveniencies, if Occasion Require, and for Needlefull Yardroom and Garden; and cause the Surveyors of this City to make a Draft thereof. That the said House be twenty foot wide, and the DAMENs following (Viz!?) fifty Six foot long, twenty four foot wide from Outside to Outside, two Stories high, and A Good Cellar, all of Stone and the Same to be divided into Such and so many Rooms as the Said Committee shall direct. It was also resolved to begin work on the building as soon as the season of the year would permit, and that the same should be called the "Publick Workhouse and House of Correction."—Itbid., IV: 240-41. On March 31, 1735, the building committee reported that they had agreed with John Burger "for Building the Workhouse and taking Accounts of all the Materials to be used on the Stone and Brick Work (Viz!): For performing the above Work & £50; For Seventy Gallons of Rum for the use of all the Masters and Laborers, £8-15; For Seventy pounds of Sugar, £15; For Small Beer, £1210; For Hire of Laborers, £50," making a total of £121110, of which he is paid £90 on account. The committee also reported that they had engaged John Roome to take charge of the carpenter work for £80, "with a further allowance of fifty Gallons of Rum, the Corporation to be at the Charge of the Liquor by laying the Beans and Raising the Roof."—Ibid., IV: 250-51. Payments for materials and labour were made in 1735 and 1736, including £154 for 50 loads of stone (Ibid., IV: 250), £200 "for digging a well there" (Ibid., IV: 260). The workhouse was reported as completed in Sept., 1735.—N.Y. Jour., Sept. 23, 1735. Regarding the appointment of a keeper, and the operation of the workhouse, see April 15, 1736. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 977.

Zenger is arrested for publishing seditious libel, and imprisoned by order of the council; he is not permitted to see or speak to anyone.—N.Y. Jour., Nov. 25, 1734; Col. Coun., Min., 122. Three days later, he was brought by a writ of habeas corpus before Chief-Juice James de Lancey who discontinued proceedings until the next term. The hearing was held in the court house, and thereupon Zenger's bail was fixed at £1,000, with two sureties, each for £200, but, as he was unable to furnish this sum, he was remanded to prison.—N.Y. Gaz., Nov. 25, 1734. The original manuscript present- of the attorney-general in the Zenger case was sold at The Andover Galleries, New York, April 20, 1929, with the library of Henry F. De Puy.—See catalogue of sale (with reproduction), item No. 2658, where it is thus described: "The document is signed by Richard Bradley, Attorney General, and possibly the whole document is in his handwriting. It is undoubtedly the copy used by Zenger's attorney, Andrew Hamilton, during the trial, as it is on the back the legal citations made by the Attorney General during his plea, noted by him at the time. This document is printed verbatim in the reports of the Zenger trial. The two pages are still fastened together with the hand-made pin of the time of Zenger."—N.Y. Jour., Dec. 30, 1735. The late chief justice of New York Province, member of the general assembly of New York, and president of the council of New York, embarks with his son, Robert Morris, to Shrewbury, N. J., for Great Britain, "to solicit Matters of Great Importance" relating both to this and others of the northern colonies,—"the News whereof gave great Satisfaction to the Inhabitants of this City."—On Nov. 24, prayers were offered in all the churches in their behalf.—N.Y. Jour., Nov. 25, 1734.

Zenger, in prison, is permitted to speak, "through the Hole of the Door," to his wife and servants.—N.Y. Jour., Nov. 25, 1734. He continued to edit his paper in this manner until his acquittal on A Brief Narrative of the Case and Trial of John Peter Zenger, 46.

To provide sums necessary for building fortifications, in view of the threats of war, an act of the legislature is passed for issuing bills of credit to the value of £12,000. William Bradford is to receive £1,000 at a certain rate of interest, and he may also borrow and sink these bills of credit through the proceeds derived from duties on tonnage and a tax on slaves.—Col. Laws N.Y., II: 885- 92. For a further issue of bills of credit, see Dec. 16, 1737; see also article on early New York paper money, by John Hickson, in Trans- actions of the Albany Institute, V: 25—79; and item of June 8, 1790. The legislature passes "An Act to appoint and Impower Com- missioners for Erecting Fortifications in this Colony." It states that "Such Fortifications will tend not only to the Security of the City of the Province, but the Disconvenience necessarily arising to those at the Same time Encourage his Majesties Subjects Inhabiting within the Same to Exert their Bravey in Making a Vigorous Defence in Case Such Attempts might happen to be made." It requires "that the City of New York shall be Fortified by making a Breach in the Rocks lying off of Wall Hall commonly called Copse Rocks (see April 25, 1734) and to adjoin to the Land already there, So far Westward as the Warwick commonly called Hoots Peer," in such a manner as the commisioners, with the advice of the assemblymen from New York City and the approval of the captain-general or commander-in-chief, shall deem most useful, "to make the Said City Defensible Against Attempts upon it by Water." The commissioners named are John Cruger, Cornelius de Peyster, John Rosevelt, and John de Witt Petrose. They are also required "to cause Carriages for the great guns to be made or Repaired, & to Erect Sheds to preserve the Same against the weather when it shall be judged needless to keep the Said Great Guns Mounted." They are to conduct the work in the spediest manner possible. To prevent the proposed battery being rendered useless "by buildings to blind or Incumber the Same" (Ibid., IV: 260), the act for digging a well there, (Ibid., IV: 260). The workhouse was reported as completed in Sept., 1735.—N.Y. Jour., Sept. 23, 1735. Regarding the appointment of a keeper, and the operation of the workhouse, see April 15, 1736. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 977.

News reaches New York from London that the king has ordered the Province of New Jersey to be a separate Government from New York, and that a Commission is daily expected to pass the Seals, to appoint Sir William Keith Governor of that Colony" (New Jersey).—N.Y. Jour., Dec. 2, 1734.

A committee appointed by the common council, on Nov. 29 Dec. (see M. C. G., IV: 238), to hire ten men to be the night watch of the city (together with two constables) until May 1, 1735, reports that the watchmen have given bond, for £50, that they will keep watch from Dec. 4 to May 1. An extra allowance of 20 shillings is to be given to each watchman for special diligence, one only of whom is to be on duty. Unlike the law of Dec. 14, 1731 (p. 1), this law requires the 12 members of the watch to work in two squads, of five watchmen and one coo- mandant each squad to work all night on alternate nights.—M. C. G., IV: 239-40. The number of the watch was regularly decreased during the summer season, May to December.—Ibid., IV: 252-53; 267, 460. See also April 20, 1734.

Cohy explains to the Duke of New Castle the position of the council regarding "a most scandalous pamphlet dispersed about this Province," which contains "a very rude reply" to the answers given by the council to Van Dam's articles of complaint against Cohy. The pamphlet referred to is entitled Heads of Articles of Complaint by Rip Van Dam Esp. against his Excellency William Cohy Exp., etc. (Boston, 1734).—N.Y. Col. Doc., VI: 26. See also Aug. 28, 1735. Cohy also points out that the late surveyor-general, Henry Colden has been "unworthy of the Character of a Councillor," that he has been "closely linked with ye oppressors of the Government," and is "not ashamed of being made their spy, upon all the proceedings and all the transactions of the Council." He refers to the alleged "epitaphs and "as these Infamous fellows."—N.Y. Col. Doc., VI: 26-27.

Zenger, writing from the prison (see Nov. 24) for his Journal, rebukes a correspondent of Bradford's Gazette. He denies using the "Language of the Prize-fighter," and claims that the readers of his newspapers incline for good Gentlemen, and Ladies. He admits being brought to America on the bounty of Quaker Mr. Hering who declares that he was visited eight weeks ago by Recorder Francis Harison, who threatened to beat him with a cane.—N.Y. Jour., Dec. 23, 1734.

At some time prior to this date, Nicholas Bayard erected his homestead or dwelling-house: it appears for the first time on the map in 1735 (Pl. 19, Vol. I). By modern streets, it was situated in the block bounded by Grand, Broome, Crosby and Lafayette Sts. It was approached by an avenue called Bayard's Lane, the entrance gate being at the Bowery Road; the present Broome St. has been laid out nearly on the line of this lane.—Man. Com. Corp., Vol. II: 569, 1785.

Bayard's farm lay west of Broadway, extending from Howard St. (on modern maps) to the line of the Herring Farm above the present Bleeker St., the west line beginning at Broadway, running very irregularly to the present junction of Grand and Greene Sts., to Wooster, north of Spring, to Sullivan and Spring Sts., to Houston, west of Hanover St. thence southwest-northeast to the line of the Herring Farm on the east.

Some time prior to this date, a theatre was erected, or some building was occupied as a theatre, on the site Nos. 12 and 14 Broadway.—See Pl. 50, Vol. I. The earliest reference found to this playhouse was contained in The New-York Weekly Journal of Feb. 2, 1741, when it was advertised as the "New Theatre," and there was an announcement of the production of "The Beaut Stratagem." See description of Pl. 50, Vol. I: 653-655; Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 985; Pl. 175, Vol. III.

Some time before this date, Adam van den Berg began to keep a mead-house and garden on the west side of Broadway between the present Vesey and Barclay Sts., for it is shown on the manuscript map of 1735 (Pl. 50, Vol. I). This was the Church Farm, of a part of which Van den Berg had a lease. The garden was still kept here as a pleasure resort in 1735 (N. F. Gan., Aug. 13, 1735), and Van den Berg's house was in existence as late as 1770, when a petition was made to erect a liberty pole "opposite Mr. Van Derberghs."—See Jan. 30, 1770. Valentine (Man. Com. Corp., 1865, p. 547) says that his tavern was called the Drover's Inn. This was the site in recent years of the Astor House. See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 991; Pl. 174, Vol. III.

About this time, a cultivated space adjacent to Fort George was known as the Fort Garden. As shown on the manuscript map of 1735 (Pl. 50, Vol. I), its location, according to the modern plan, was south of Bridge St., between Whitehall and State Sts. See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 946; Pl. 174, Vol. III.

The tract of land described in the grant made by Dongan to John Knight on Feb. 10, 1685 (p. 9), was for the first time shown on a map, in 1735, as "The Vineyard," though illitically designated "The WInyard."—See Pl. 50, Vol. I. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 946; Pl. 174, Vol. III.

The following comparative statement of the city's revenues, at five-year intervals from 1730 to 1770, inclusive, shows the amounts derived from various leases and licenses, as compiled from the city chamberlain's Ledgers Nos. 2 and 3, and Journals Nos. 2, 3, and 4, in the N. Y. Hist. Soc.

Alexander Malcolm, "Master of the Grammar-School in the City of New-York," gives notice that hereafter he will receive only twice a year, in February and in August, "meer Beginners in Latin" into the school.—N. F. Gan., Dec. 30, Jan. 7, 1734/5.

In July of the following year, he announced that "such scholars as are fit for any of the Classes will be received at any time."—Ibid., July 18-25, 1735. See May 1, 1730; Oct. 14, 1732.

The birth-day of the Prince of Wales is celebrated with the usual solemnity (on Monday) but wrongly reported in the Gazette, of Jan. 28, as having been celebrated on Sunday. The chief incidents are as follows: "At noon the principal Gentlemen of the City and Corporation met at the Fort to drink the Royal Healths while the Guns round the Fort were firing; and at Night the Gentlemen and Ladies were entertained with a splendid Supper, Music and Dancing, thro' his Excellency was the Saturday before in some pain lest he should not have been able to have given the Entertainment at the Fort, for that day . . . one of the Chimneys was perceived to have catch'd Fire, which breaking through the Roof of the House, the inside was in great Danger of taking Fire also, but by the timely Assistance, and great readiness that was shew'd by People of all Ranks, in a very acceptable manner, it was happily extinguished with little Damage. His Excellency returned thanks to the People that assisted, in a most obliging manner, and gave them plenty of Liquor to refresh themselves after the Fatigue, which they had accepted very kindly, by drinking his Excellency's and good Family's Health and Happiness."—N. Y. Gan., Jan. 28-Feb. 4, 1735.

"Looking-glasses now Silver'd, and the Frames plaine Japanese or Flower'd, also all Sorts of Pickeckes, made and Sold, all manner of painting Work done. Likewise Looking-glasses, and all sorts of painting Conlers and Oyl sold at reasonable Rates," by Gerardus Dyckneck, at the Sign of the two Cupids, near the old Slip Marke.—"N. Y. Jour.,* Jan. 20, 1735.

Joseph Johnson, a printer, is charged with counterfeiting ten-shilling bills of credit. He escapes, but his wife is imprisoned in the "Goal in the City-Hall" for passing the bills.—N. Y. Gan., Feb. 4-11, 1735. Johnson had previously advertised himself as a bookbinder living on Duke Street, "commonly called Bayards street."—Ibid., Sept. 25-30, 1734. See also May 6, 1735; Aug. 5, 1744.

The common council gives John Selvring leave "to pull down and demolish that part of his House and Wharf which stands upon the Ground of this Corporation at or near the ferry at Brookland," and to convert the materials to his own use.—M. C. C., IV: 245.

The common council appoints a committee to "lay out the High Roads from Spring Gate to Fresh Water, and from Spring Gate to the End of Queen Street to the fresh-water to meet the Other Road at fresh-water, as the same was laid out by Act of Assembly by William Anderson, Clement Ekwert, and Pieter Van Olsbergen the 21th day of June 1707 that they Cause a Draught to be made thereof, that the High Roads may be for the passing the—N. Y. Gan., Feb. and publicly known, which are to be of the breadth of four Roads at the least.—M. C. C., IV: 245-46. On Sept. 16, 1735, it was ordered "that both the Surveyors of this City do Survey Stake out and lay out the Publick Common and General Highway from the House of Mr. Benjamin Peck in Queen Street to the Fresh Water as the same was laid out the 21th day of June 1707 by William Anderson," etc.—Ibid., IV: 275. The Spring Garden gate was at the corner of Ann St. and Broadway, and the road to Fresh Water starting thence was the present Park Row, which was the road to Boston. The gate at the end of Queen St. was apparently at about the intersection of the present Ferry St. and above the Queen (Pearl) St. then stopped. The "Other Road" running to Fresh Water was Pearl St. as far as the present Franklin Sq.; beyond that point it took the course of the present New Bowery to its intersection with Park Row at Chatham Sq. See Pls. 26, 27, 30, and 34, Vol. I, and compare with map on Pl. 174, Vol. III.

The rent is five shillings for every gun shot, and the market of the best hit at 100 yards will receive a prize of a load of land 2½ ft. 6 in. in breadth on Sackett St., belonging to Robert Bennett.—N. Y. Jour., Mar. 3, 1735. Sackett Street was the present Cherry Street.—Post, Old Streets, 40.
The governor was about to depart for Albany, and this, with the nomination of other city officials, was placed before the common council on Sept. 29.—M. C. C., IV: 275-76. He was sworn in by the governor at the fort on Oct. 14, as were also Gerardus Stuy- vant, Esq., and section, as mayor, and the other officials.—Ibid., IV: 279-80. Richard remained in office until Oct. 15, 1735.—Ibid., IV: 276, 347, 387, 444-45. For a brief account of his life, see Man. Com. Coun. (1853), 406; Wilson, Mem. Hist. of N. Y., II: 295.

8 At the opening of the common council in the mayorality of Paul Richard, an ordinance is adopted requiring that the city charter and seal be placed in the keeping of "the Common Clerk" of the city, and directing the use to which the seal may be put. The charter and seal being in the clerk's hands, the law provides that they shall not be deposited "in the hands of Custody of any Other Person or Persons whatsoever." The seal "shall not be affixed or put to any Writing or Instrument whatsoever unless by Order of the Common Council in Common Council assembled or the Mayors Court of this City or of the Mayor part of the Members of the Common Council." This provision does not "Extend to Augment the flees of the Seal, or take any part of them from the Mayor Recorder or Clerk or Officer to Whom they were heretofore usually paid;" nor shall it be construed "to Debar the Mayor of this City for the time being (as Mayor) to Affix the Seal of this Corporation to Letters of Attorney, Certificates or other Writings in Cases in which the Law has Usually been Practised or Done."—M. C. C., IV: 262-64.

Mayor Richard, however, having taken possession of the seal in accordance with the regulation of July 24, 1686 (p. 93), but contrary to this new ordinance, a committee of the common council was appointed "to Advise with Council learned in the Law, what Methods are legally to be taken by this Corporation to Recover the Seal . . . out of the Custody of the present Mayor who de- tains the same as Mayor to A Law of this Corporation; or what Other steps may properly be taken by this Corporation for Break- ing the said seal now in the hands of the said Mayor or declaring the same void, and for making A New seal for the use of this Corporation."—Ibid., IV: 264. On July 22, the committee re- ported the opinion of Joseph Murray, attorney-at-law, that "the Corporation had an Absolute and full power to lodge the said seal into the hands of any Person whatsoever, and have full power to Apply and dispose of the Said Corporation seal in such manner as they should Order or direct."—Ibid., IV: 265-66.

The mayor having consented to deliver the seal to the clerk, the common council orders "that A seal be forthwith made and delivered to M'r Mayor, which Seal may be called the seal of the Officers common council of this City of New York, that Said Seal be Round something larger that [than] a Dollar, the City Arms to be Engraved thereon, and that the Motto be (City of New York Seal of Mayoralty) and that M'r Le Roux make the same with all Expedi- tion."—Ibid., IV: 266. Payment of £30 was made to C. H. Le Roux, on Sept. 23, 1735, for his services in making the seal of the Mayoralty of this Corporation."—Ibid., IV: 272. The original itemized bill, preserved in the city clerk's record-room, shows Le Roux's charges for: 1/ Oz 8d silver in one Scale for the office of Mayor, £4 19/3; and for "engraving the Seal, £4. It is reproduced on Pl. 31, Vol. IV. See also Pine, Seal and Flag of the City of N. Y., 54.

On Oct. 23, 1735, the supreme court of the province rendered a decision, in an action by the king against the corporation of New York City, that the "By-Law" relating to seals which was passed by the common council of the city of New York on July 8 was repealed. The law is "M. C. C., IV: 288-89, 597-94. The common council, thereupon, repealed the ordinance, on Nov. 4, 1735 (Ibid., IV: 290), and on the same day (p. 93) enacted a new one, providing for three distinct seals for use in municipal affairs.

The foundations for the new battery on Whitehall are completed, and Governors Couby, attended by his council and the " Principal Gentlemen and Merchants" of the city, lays the first stone of the platform and gives the fortification its name, "George Augustus's Royal Battery." Afterward, "an Elegant Entertainment" was prepared for the governor and his company in "Booth covered over Battery." After dinner "Royal Healths were drank." To the "workmen, Labourers and People" the governor gave an ox, roasted whole, "with several Barrels of Punch and Beer."—N. Y. Gaz., July 14-21, 1735.

The day's festivities were marred, however, by the bursting of a defective cannon, which caused the death of the high sheriff and two other persons.—N. Y. Jour., July 21, 1735. This was the rebuilt White- Ball Battery on Cypress Rocks.—See Oct. 20 see also Landmark Map Bel, Key, III: 116.

A teacher's advertisement reads: "This is to give Notice, that over against the Sign of the black Horse in Smith-street, near the old Dutch-Church, is carefully taught the French and Spanish Languages, after the best Method that is now practiced in Great-Britain which for the encouragement of those who intend to learn the same, is taught for 20s. per Quarter."

Obadiah Hunt advertises for sale or rent "The Lotts and Houses [his tavern] next to the Custom House in New-York, wherein are 9 Fire Places, with a large Yard, a Stable, a Cestern, a Well, and a Pump, in the Kitchen, a large Crane to the Chimney, with Stone, Dressers, and several other Things, that may be left for the Use of a Tenant."—N. Y. Jour., Aug. 2, 1735. See, further, Jan. 13, 1736.

Zenger is finally tried for libel, in the supreme court at the city hall, Chief-Justice James de Lancey presiding, with Frederick Philipse, second justice. The attempt to select a jury unfavour- able to the defendant is frustrated by the court's order that it be struck in the usual way, from the "Freeholder's Book." The attorney for the government offers no proof of Zenger's papers (see Nov. 5, 1735; Oct. 19, and Nov. 12 and 17, 1734) being false, malicious, and seditious, as charged, but insists that they are libels, even though true. The court concurs in this opinion; but the attorney for the defence, Andrew Hamilton, of Philadelphia, nearly 80 years of age, who was retained by Alexander and Smith (see April 16), and who is considered the most skilful advocate in the colonies, overcomes his opponents by citing English precedents. He admits that his client has published the statements, as charged, but insists that they are true, and therefore not libellous, and offers to prove them. Despite the unfavourable charge of the chief-justice, the jury returns in about ten minutes with a verdict of "Not Guilty."—Brief Narrative of the Case and Trial of John Peter Zenger (1776); N. Y. Jour., Aug. 18, 1735. For reproduction of page one of A brief Narrative, etc. see Pl. 52, Vol. IV. See also Rutherford, John Peter Zenger (1904), Chap. III, and, for a summary of the court proceedings and Hamilton's address, see Man. Com. Coun. (1866), 452-61.

The jury's verdict was greeted by "three Hurra's of many Hundreds of People in the presence of the Court."—About Forty of the Citizens entertained Mr. Hamilton at the black Horse Tavern—see Oct. 31, 1735. On the next day at dinner there was an Acknowledgment of his Generosity on this Occasion, and at his Departure next day he was saluted with the great Guns of several Ships in the Harbour, as a public Testimony of the glorious Defence he made in the Cause of Liberty in this Province.—N. Y. Jour., Aug. 18, 1735.

Thus, freedom of speech and of the press were established in America. This trial also inaugurated in this country the acceptance of the principle that, in prosecution for libel, the jury shall be the judge of both the law and the facts. "The liberty of the press was secure from assault and the people became equipped with the most powerful weapon for successfully combating arbitrary power, the right of freely criticising the conduct of public men, more than fifty years before the celebrated trial of Otis' gave the same privilege to the people of England."—Rutherford, John Peter Zenger, N. Y. Gaz. See also Writeable and its sequel, pp. 424-51 Wilson, Mem. Hist. N. Y., II: 209 et seq. For bibliography on Zenger's trial, see N. Y. State Library Bulletin, No. 56, pp. 165-68; and Rutherford, op. cit., 240.

Zenger publishes the following statement: "The printer now having got his liberty again, designes God willing, to Finish and Publish the Charter of the City of New-York next week.—N. Y. Jour., Aug. 11, 1735. See, further, Sept. 16.

A teacher of "Reading, Writing, and Arithmetic," as well as French and Spanish, advertises his school, which is "over against the sign of the black Horse, in Smith street, near the old Dutch Church," and promises to teach French to "three persons for five shillings per quarter for readers, 8d. for writers, and 12s. for cyphers.—N. Y. Gaz., Aug. 11, 1735.

"Bedlows Island" is offered for sale by Adolph Philipse and Henry Lane.—N. Y. Gaz., Aug. 4-11, 1735. See April 20, 1676.
The funeral of the Hon. Charles Fitzroy, only son of Lord Augustus Fitzroy (see Oct. 23, 1732), and son-in-law of Sir Peter Warren, is probably typical of the more important funerals of the period. “His Corps was attended by the Gentlemen of the Council and Assembly, and the Corporation, the Merchants and Gentlemen of the Plate. The Companies [of military] Marched before with Revealed Arms, and Minute Guns were fired during the performance of the Funeral Service.”—N. Y. Gaz., Aug. 18-23, 1735.

The committee on the enlargement of Trinity Church (see July 2) reports that the foundations on both sides are finished to the ground level. The vestry directs that the walls be raised six feet higher this autumn.—Fresh. Min. (N.Y.). The enlargement was completed in 1737 (p.v.).

The governor and his family return from New Jersey.—N. Y. Gaz., Aug. 25, 1735.

The lords of trade submit to Queen Caroline (described as “Guardian of the Kingdom of Great Britain & His Majesty’s Lieutenant within the same”) a statement of Cosby’s charges of Dec. 6, 1734 (see that date in Aldenda), against James Alexander (member of the councils of New York and New Jersey), Lewis Morris (late chief-justice of the province of New York and member of the council of New Jersey), and Rip Van Dam (late communder-in-chief and president of the council at New York). They recommend the appointment of John Poor and Paul Richard to the council in place of Alexander and Vao Dam.—N. Y. Col. Doc., VI: 34-35. See also Nov. 26.

Sept. 9. Gov. Cosby, about to depart for Albany, renounces Pat Henry Richard (see July 3) as mayor, and Capt. Wm. Cosby as sheriff.—Col. Coun. Min., 314. The nomination was recorded, as usual, on Sept. 29, and the mayor was sworn in, as usual, on Oct. 14.—M. G. C., IV: 276, 279.

The governor works for Albany, to meet the representatives of the Six Nations of Indians, in order to renew “the Covenant Chain (as the Indians call the Treaty of Peace).” He is attended to the water side by “the Gentlemen of His Majesty’s Council, the Corporation, and most of the principal merchants and gentlemen of the city, there being a greater concourse on the occasion than usual.”—N. Y. Gaz., Aug. 25-Sept. 1, and Sept. 8-18, 1735.

Zenger delivers to the common council six copies of the city charter, “bound in Parchment Covers.” He is paid £7 as agreed (see Oct. 14), and is permitted to dispose of the remaining copies “at such Price as he shall think Reasonable not Exceeding three shillings for each Copy.”—M. G. C., IV: 270. See Feb. 9, 1736. For reproduction of title-page, see Pl. 32, Vol. IV. “This is the first printed edition of the Montgomery Charter, and the handsomest specimen of printing from Zenger’s press.”—Church Catalogue, 420 (IV: 182).

The common council orders that Andrew Hamilton, attorney for Zenger (see Aug. 4), be presented with the freedom of the city, and a committee is appointed to draft it.—M. G. C., IV: 273. On Sept. 29, the committee submitted the draft, which read as follows: “City of New York SS. Paul Richard Esq† Mayor, the Recorder New York ] Aldermen and Assistants of the City of New York Convened in Common Council To all whom these Presents Shall Come Send Greeting, Whereas Honour is the Just Reward of Vertue and Publick Benefits demand A Publick Acknowledge-ment We therefore under A Grateful sense of the Remarkable service done to the Inhabitants of this City and County by Andrew Hamilton Esq† of Pennsylvania Barrister at Law by his learned and Generous defence of the Rights of Mankind and the Liberty of the Press in the Case of John Peter Zenger lately tried on an Information Exhibited in the Supreme Court of this Colony, do by these presents bear to the Said Andrew Hamilton Esq† the Publick thanks of the Freedom of this Corporation for that signal service which he Chearfully undertook under great Indisposition of body and Generously performed Refusing any fee or Reward. And in Testimony of our Great Esteem for his Person and sense of his Merit hereby present him with the Freedom of this Corporation. These are therefore to Certifie and declare that the Said Andrew Hamilton Esq† is hereby Admitted Receiv’d and Allowed A Freeman and Citizen of the City of New York To have Hold Enjoy and Partake of all the Benefits Liberties Privileges Freedoms and Im-munities which belongeth or inhereth to the Freeman and Citizen of the same city. In Testimony whereof the Common Council of the Said City of New York in Common Council Assemble I have Caused the Seal of the Said City to be hereunto Affixed this twenty Ninth day of September Anno Domini One thousand seven hun- dred and thirty five.”

“By Order of The Common Council

Will Sharpe Clerk

The committee further reported “that sundry of the Members of this Corporation and Gentlemen of this City have Voluntarily Contributed sufficient for A Gold Box of five Ounces and Half a Taler for inclosing the seal of the Saide Freedom, upon the Cid of which we are of Opinion Should be Engraved the Arms of the City of New York.” The report was approved, and the board ordered that the Freedom and box be made forthwith, and that City Clerk Sharpe “do affix the seal to the same Freedom and inclose in the said Box.”

As Alderman Bayard, who was about to go to Philadelphia, offered “to be the Bearer of the Saide Freedom to Mr. Hamilton,” it was ordered that Mr. Sharpe deliver it to Mr. Bayard for that purpose, “and that Alderman Bayard do deliver it to Mr Hamilton, with Assurances of the Great Esteem that this Corporation have for his Person and Merits.”—Ibid., IV: 277-78.

On Oct. 15, the board ordered that the freedom, together with the report of the committee for preparing the draft of it, and the foregoing order of Sept. 29, be printed.—Ibid., IV: 285.

The gold box, oval in shape, measuring 3 by 2 inches, and of an inch deep, has, besides the arms of the city, the following inscription upon the cover: “Demarces Leages—Tempelacta Libertas—Hoc tandem Emancipatur—St. Michael’s Highway,” on the outside, line: “Ita cuique eveniat ut de Republica meruit” and inside the lid, on a scroll: “Non Nummis—Virte Furtar.”

The original document, which is here reproduced (see Pl. 33), written in large Gothic text upon vellum (vide infra, Oct. 21), and the gold box accompanying it, were purchased in 1853 by a collateral descendant of Hamilton residing in England; namely, Septimus H. Palatier, of The Grange, near Bradford, Eng.—Penn. Hist. Soc. Collections (Phil., 1835), I: 79.

The document and gold box are now (1922) owned by Miss Lena Cadwallader Evans, a direct descendant of Andrew Hamilton, and a resident of New York. Miss Evans traces the ownership of the box as follows: After Andrew Hamilton’s death, it passed to his son, James Hamilton, the last lieutenant-governor of Pennsylvania, who, in turn, left it (by will proved Sept. 15, 1785) to his nephew, William Hamilton, the son of James’s brother, Andrew Hamilton (II). It passed from William to his son, Andrew Hamilton (III); and then to this Andrew’s son, Andrew Hamilton (IV), of Bath, England, who left it to his daughter, Mary Ann, wife of Septimus Palatier, Esq., of Bath; then to her son, Henry Hamilton Palatier, Esq., of Bath, from whom it was bought in 1915 by Miss Evans for $2,000, and brought to New York. See also in Wilson’s Mem. Hist. of N. Y., II: 209.

The common council orders that “the Public Commons and General Highway,” from Peck’s house in Queen St. to Fresh Water, be laid out.—M. G. C., IV: 273. See Feb. 26, 1735.

A committee appointed by the common council to consider a butchers’ petition reports that it would be for the benefit of the corporation “to take the several Market Houses under their own care,” to keep them in repair at the city’s own expense, and to “Cause the several Stalls in the several Marketts be Numbred and Marked and left out by Lease to the Petitioners or such other Person or Persons as shall agree to take the same at A reasonable and Annual Reserved Rent for the use of the Corporation.” A committee is appointed to prepare a new law for regulating the public markets.—M. G. C., IV: 272-75. Such a law was passed by the common council on Nov. 4, 1735, amending and adding to the law of Nov. 18, 1731. It provided that, in order to make the markets more commodious and convenient, a standing committee of the common council should be appointed, who should be “Author-ized to Enlarge, Alter, Repair and Support” the market houses, at the city’s expense, to apportion the size of stalls, rent them out, etc. See also Nov. 15, 1735.

The workhouse is completed.—N. Y. Jour., Sept. 23, 1735; see also Nov. 15, 1734, regarding the building operations. It was the first public building erected within the limits of the present City Hall Park.—Man. Com. Coun. (1863), 551; ibid. (1866), 601, where Grimm’s drawing of The Freemen’s and Citizens of the same city. In Testimony whereof the Common Council of the Said City of New York in Common Council Assemble I have Caused the Seal of the Said City to be hereunto Affixed this twenty Ninth day of September Anno Domini One thousand seven hun-provided for him at Mr. Todd’s,” to congratulate him on his safe return from Albany, where he had gone to renew the treaty of peace with the Six Nations of Indians. Toasts to the royal family were drunk (the music playing all the time) And Excellency was also pleased to Drink Prosperity to Trade, and at the same time, in a very obliging manner, assured the Gentleman there, That if they could think of any Methods to Promote and Encourage the Trade and Welfare of this Province, he would heartily contribute every Thing in his Power thereto. In the Evening the House was illuminated in a handsome manner.”—N. Y. Gen., Oct. 6–13, 1735. The tavern of Robert Todd stood on Broad St., next the Coffee House.—See May 28, 1733.

The anniversary of the coronation of the king and queen is celebrated. Zenger’s news report of the event states that “the elected Magistrates with a considerable Number of Merchants and Gentlemen, not dependent on — made a very handsom Entertainment in Honour of the Day, for Rip Van Dam, Esq President of His Majesty’s Council, Matthew Norris, Esq; Commander of his Majesty’s Ship Tartar, and Capt. Compton Commander of his Majesty’s Ship Seahorse, at the House of Mr John De Hounor in this City, at Noon the Company met and while the great Guns of his Majesty’s Ship Tartar were firing, they Drank the following Healths, the King, the Queen, the Prince, Duke, and Royal Family, the Prince and Princess of Orange, the Governor, and immortal Memory of King William the third; Success to Coll. Morris, in his Undertakings, to a speedy Election of a new Assembly, Prosperity to the Corporation, my Lord Wilough- ton Duke of Dorset, Sir John Norris and General Compton, and then the Company Dined, in the Evening the City was Illuminated, the American and Evening were spent with all the Joy and Dancing suitable to the Occasion.”—N. Y. Jour., Oct. 20, 1735. An historical note by Du Simitière states that “the house where Van Dam’s friends commonly met was Situated the South corner of Garden Street & Smith Street at the Sign of the Black horse kept by John Aymar. A room in this house has been preserved not belonging to Mr David Clarkson 1770.”—From vol. ‘Paper relating to N. England, N. York, etc.,’ formerly belonging to Du Simitière and now in Ridgway branch of the Library Company of Philadelphia.

After repeated orders, on Nov. 15 and 21, 1734, and Aug. 7, 1735 (M. C. C. IV: 276, 218, 267), the common council gives a peremptory order to Christopher Bancer that, unless he “do Remove the Trespass and take Away the Fence which he lately put upon the Lands of this Corporation near the fresh Water on the south side of the Run of Water lately leading to the East River” before November first, the marchals of the city will take it away.—Ibid., IV: 282–83. This seems to indicate that that outlet of the pond had been recently filled up.

The common council orders that the mayor issue his warrant to pay “the sum of Nine pounds two shillings and a penny Current” for “New Points” in the Morning for the High Water, M. C. C. IV: 284. From this it appears that bricks sold for about the same price then as they did just prior to the European War of 1914–8.

The commissioners appointed to erect a battery on Ceype Rocks (see Nov. 28, 1734), which was begun on July 16 (p. 99), desire all persons having demands for supplying material or labour to submit their accounts, that they may be paid.—N. Y. Gen., Oct. 13–20, 1735. The commissioners, on Oct. 25, reported that they had expended £1,700:7:1, and that at least £25 more would be required.—Assem. Jour., 11, 684.

On the 20th, the town clerk, is paid £121:29:9 for “divers services,” etc.—M. C. C. IV, 286. His itemized bill includes a charge for making “a fair Copy of the Charter for the Press,” and a charge for “the Freedom of Andrew Hamilton Esq. Curiously Engraved on Porcelain with a Silk Lace for the Seal.”—Ibid., 684. The bill was published by Zenger in February, 1736. See Feb. 2, 1736.

The petition of James Alexander and William Smith is read in the assembly, “praying this House to appoint them a short Day, that they may, in the most fair, public, and open Manner, lay their Complaint at large before this House.” The petition is referred to the “Committee of Grievance,” and it is ordered that each Judge of the Supreme Court “be served with a Copy of the said Petition.”—Assem. Jour., 11, 684. On Oct. 24, the committee reported that Smith and Alexander had appeared before it, and that “as the Matters complained of are against the Judges of the Supreme Court, for what they have acted in their judicial Capacity,” the petitioners ought to serve the chief-justice with a copy of their complaint, and the judges to answer it. Accordingly, they were ordered to file their complaint with the judges within 20 days, and the judges were directed to answer within 40 days of their receipt of the complaint.—Ibid., 14: 683. The “House of Mr. John De Hounor,” where this committee was held, was the Black Horse Tavern, in William St.—See Oct. 9, 1725. The Assem. Jour. reveals no further action in the case. For the text of the Alexander and Smith complaint, see Rudherveld, John Peter Zenger, 51–56.

A sale of land is advertised to be held on this day “at the Corner house below the Meall Mahone, which is over against the sign of St. George and the Dragon.”—N. Y. Gen., Aug. 4, 1735. The latter was a tavern which stood near the corner of Wall and Water Sts. According to Bayles (Old Taverns of N. Y., 150), the house was occupied in 1720 by Thomas Leppe, who hung out the sign of the “Duke of Cumberland.” It is to be noted, however, that, as late as 1784, Joseph Montgomery advertised the sale of “a Good House in Great Dock Street at the sign of the St. George and Dragon.”—Rivington’s Royal Gen., Apr. 24, 1782. References to the “Duke of Cumberland” generally described the house as “opposite the Merchant’s Coffee House,” while the Merchant’s Coffee House, itself, was alluded to as “the Coffee House near the Meall Mahone.” This it may be inferred that the house at which the sale was held was the later Merchants Coffee House, which a short time prior to this date was known as the Jamaica Pilot Boat. See Jan. 18, 1736.

Capt. Van Horne presents to the assembly the petition of “a great Number of the Inhabitants of the City of New-York,” setting forth “That as they conceive the long Continuance of the same Representatives in General Assembly is a great Grievance, and that the frequent Election of them is a most valuable Privilege,” they “therefore flatter themselves, that this House will endeavour and they can to obtain a Dissolution of the present Assembly.” The assembly orders “That notwithstanding the House, did of their own Motive, make Application for the Purpose above-mentioned,” on Nov. 28, 1734 (without success), “the Members for the City and County of New-York, do carry to his Excellency a Copy of the said Petition, and at the same Time, acquaint him again, That it is the unanimous Desire of this House, that he will be pleased to dissolve this present Assembly after the several Acts passed, and to be passed at this present sitting, are published.” Capt. Van Horne reported to the assembly on Nov. 6 that he had done as advised, and that Cosby answered, as he did the previous year, “that as the adjoining, adjoining and dissolving of the Assembly, is the undoubted Prerogative of the Crown, and that as his Majesty has been pleased to intrust me with that Power, so I shall make use of it, as I find it for the Service of his Majesty, and the Benefit of the Province, which I do not yet apprehend it to be.”—Assem. Jour., 11, 684.

The common council, as a result of the controversy began on July 8 (p. 99), enacts “A Law declaring to what uses the Seal of this Corporation, the Seal of the Mayor’s Court and the Seal of the Mayorality of this City shall be put unto.” The “Common Seal of this Corporation commonly called the City Seal,” which is in the keeping of “the Common Clerk of this Corporation,” shall not be affixed to any writing or instrument except such grants, leases, freedoms, warrants, licences, etc., “as shall Concern this Corporation in Point of Interest, or Otherwise” and only by order of the common council, or (in the case of freedoms) by order of the mayor’s or alderman’s. The “small Seal,” which is also in the keeping of the clerk, “commonly called the Seal of the Mayor’s Court,” is to be “put unto” all processes issuing from the mayor’s court, and the court of general sessions of the peace; also on warrants and testimonials, and on licenses granted. The “seal of the City for the use of the city, or the aldermen or the mayor’s or clerks is used in the giving of certificates, licences, or warrants and other public papers or certificates. It is to be used to no other Intents or purposes whatsoever.

The seal belonging to the corporation, which is in the keeping of the mayor, called “the Seal of Mayorality,” may be affixed by the mayor, or by the mayor and common council, for writing of instruments, depositions, affidavits, exemplifications, testimonials, protests, etc., customarily certified under the public seal of any mayorality, for better attesting the truth of the things stated therein. This seal shall remain in the keeping of the
The market ordinance of Nov. 15, 1731 (p. v.), is re-enacted with the added proviso that "the Country people and Others residing near to, or in the Markets, may stand or Sit, in such parts thereof, as are not from time to time, particularly appropriated and allotted to other Person or Persons, by Lease from the Corporation of this City. . . ." To make the markets "more commodious and convenient, for the Future, for the Reception and Accommodation, as well of the several Butchers, being Freedmen of this City, as of all other Persons," it is ordained that "a standing Committee shall be appointed by the Common Council," who shall be ("and are hereby") empowered "to Enlarge, Alter, Repair and Support from time to time, with necessary Reparations and Amendments," all the market-houses belonging to the city; and not only to order and direct such improvements, "at the Expenditure of this City, as they shall find Occasion," to order but also "Apportion the Size of, (and to mark and Number,) the several Stalls therein; and to Contract for the Leasing and Setting the Same . . . for such reasonable Rents, as They, in their Discretions, can agree for, to be reserved and made payable, by equal Proportions Every Month, in the Year, to the Chamberlins of this Corporation for the Use of the Same . . ."

Certain exceptions and restrictions are added: One butcher shall not have more than two stalls or standing in the same market. "Hunters" are excluded from leasing the stalls or standings; and it is declared lawful for other "Country people and others . . . to take up and accommodate themselves with such Stalls, Standings and places, in any of the said Markets, which shall remain unappropriated, as they shall first happen to get Possession of same, and there and thence to Deposit their several Commodities, and to Remain and continue to Expose their Meat to Sale, by the Quarter, as They shall See convenient and all Other their Commodities to Vend, Sell and Dispose of, without Paying any Fee or Reward for the Same, in Order for the Encouragement of the more plentiful Supply of the said Markets, and the Inhabitants of this City, with all Sorts of Provisions, at the most moderate and reasonable Rates and Prices, . . ." Hereafter, the "Clerk of the Markets," who formerly "received certain Fees for all neat Cattle, Hogs, Sheep, Sheeps, Calves, and Lambs, that were killed for the Market," shall not "Intermediate with the Receipt of any Duties, Fees or Profits, or take any money of any Butchers, or Other Persons, resorting to, or standing in any of the Common Markets aforesaid."—M. C. G., Iv, 593-94.

7 Elias Pipon asks permission of the assembly to sell one-third of the produce of a farm in the city of New York, to the greatest of 653 acres or about one square mile.—Issemb. Jour. I: 687. See also ibid., I: 628. Pipon also owned Little Barn Island.

8 Gov. Cosby is ill, and the council meets in his bedroom. Rip van Winkle is mentioned by a clerk from the council.—Col. Cour. Min., 325. Cosby died on March 10, 1716 (p. v.).

9 An order of the king in council declares Cosby's reasons insufficient for removing Chief-Justice Morris.—N. Y. Col. Docs., VI: 36-37. See Aug. 23, 1733 and Aug. 28, 1733 see also the printed papers, dated 1735, in N. Y. Pub. Library, entitled The Case of Lewis Morris, Esq., Late Chief Justice of the Province of New York, who was Removed from the said Office by his Excellency William Cosby, Esq., Governor of the said Province.

This year, A Chronological History of New-England in the Form of Annals was issued at Boston by Thomas Prince.—Church Catalogue, No. 925.

An undated song or ballad, beginning "Ridemin d'iere verum Quid vetat . . . in ancient Days a Bestial Tram . . ." was issued under the title (by Zeugling, p. v.), and in it, Francis Hessian and the assembly were ridiculed in an allegory representing an assemblage of beasts. There is one of these broadsides in the N. Y. Pub. Library. It is one of the "Parsons Campbells" publications. See N. Y. Pub. Library Bulletin, II: 251. Harrington refers to this year, this "broadside" (by Zeugling); in it, he arranges the city (M. C. G., Iv: 254, 255), and member of the council (N. Y. Col. Docs., VI: 34).

In this year, John Nagel built a stone dwelling on the west bank of the Harlem River at the present 241st St. Later, this became known as the "Century House."—Riker, Hist. of Harlem, p. 58. It was destroyed by fire in 1901.—See July 2, 1901.

A "consort" of vocal and instrumental music is advertised to take place on Jan. 21, for the benefit of Mr. Pateeckel, the organist. The song, violins, and German flutes by private hands." It will begin "at 6 o'clock, in the house of Robert Todd, vintner. Tickets to be had at the Coffee-house, and at Mr. Todd's, at a shilling."—N. Y. Gaz., Jan. 6-13, 1736. A secondary concert was advertised for March 9.—N. Y. Jour., March 8, 1736. The Coffee-house stood at Broad and Water Sts., and Todd's was two doors north on Broad St.

Ohabiah Hunt advertises his slaves and household goods for sale, having leased his tavern on Pearl or Custom House St. to William English.—N. Y. Gaz., Jan. 6-13, 1736. English continued to occupy the tavern until his death, which occurred some time between Nov. 4 and Oct. 23, 1742 (M. C. G., V, 18, 19, 40, 67-68), at which time a venue was held "at the house of the Widow English." On Nov. 15, 1742, another venue was ordered to be held at the house of the "Widow English," which was then described as "Near the Meal Market." (ibid., V, 73), that is, near Wall St.

Archibald Kennedy writes to Cadwallader Colden: "We acknowledge the favour of yours by Mr. Gatehouse and have very little to add, of news, to the papers, Mr. Bradford . . . has Blum-ndered out, I really believe, a private letter . . . The one would think from appearances it was otherwise they seem cheerful enough about the fort, and they all dance as usual, Mrs. Cosby excepted (Gov. Cosby being seriously ill). If Mr. Henderson writes as he told me He would you know the truth If it is true that Mr. Clark has met in His Acc's 293-94 for feet [sic] you may Guess at the rest It is certain the Ladies declare openly of the Side of the Black horse [see Jan. 9] where there is to be a Grand Supper next Monday being the Princes Birthday according to Mr. Bradford Acc's, in opposition to which there is to be an other at Tods on Tuesday [see Jan. 20] being the Princes Birthday according the English Acc's They are happy that have the lease to do on either side."—From the original letter, with Golden Papers, in N. Y. Hist. Soc.

out at the sign of the Jamaica Pilot-Boat, (the Corner-House by the Meal-Market,) but timely help coming in, it was extinguished without spreading farther."—N. Y. Gaz., Jan. 11-20, 1736. The proprietor of the Jamaica Pilot Boat was John Dunks (see June 19, 1728). Shortly after this fire, the house was advertised for sale, and, in 1756, was purchased by Daniel Bloom. Dunks evidently removed the sign of the pilot boat, which is seen at the House Lane, and Pearl St., for, on Feb. 1, 1742, the house and ground in the "Tenure of Mrs. Margaret Dunks at the Jamaica Pilot-Boat, near the Fly Market," were offered for sale.—N. Y. Jour., Feb. 1, 1742.

This day, "being His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales's Birthday," is celebrated, and a proclamation from the council.—Col. Cour. Min., 325. The Black Horse Tavern—see Oct. 9, 1727 in a most elegant and genteel Manner. There was a most magnificent Appearance of Gentlemen and Ladies. The Ball began with French Dances, and then the Company proceeded to Country Dances, upon which Mon. Norris led up two new Country Dances, made upon the Occasion; the first of which was called The Prince of Wales, and the second, The Princess of Saxo-Gotha, in Honour of the Day. There was a most sumptuous Entertainment afterward. At the Conclusion of which the Honourable Rip Van Dam Esq, President of His Majesty's Council began the Royal Healths, which were all drank in Jumppers. The whole was conducted with Decency, Mirth and Carefulness."—N. Y. Jour., Jan. 26, 1736.

The "Royal Healths" are drunk at the fort, in celebration of the birthday of the Prince of Wales, but the usual proceedings are hindered by the illness of the governor (see Jan. 17). In the evening, however, there was a ball at "Mr. Todd's."—N. Y. Gaz., Jan. 20-Feb. 3, 1736.

The tavern of Robert Todd, on Broad St. between Pearl and Water Sts., was a popular one. During this and succeeding years, it was often used as a place of assembly for the meetings of the legislature.—Issemb. Jour. I: 691, 720 et seq. Todd died some time between Jan. 30, 1746, and Aug. 24, 1747, at which time the tavern was being run by the Widow Todd.—N. Y. Post-Boy.

William the Eighty and Deputy Governor John Montgomery, Esq., the Captain General and Governor in chief of the said province of New York, to the Mayor, Burgesses, and Commons of the City of New York, and the inhabitants thereof, in the name and in the place of the same, at our Fort St. George, in the isle of New York, the thirteenth day of January, in the fourth year of our reign.
The house was taken over by Andrew Ramsey prior to Dec. 18, 1749—ibid., Dec. 18, 1749. See Oct. 3, 1748.

Secretary Popple, acting for the lords of trade, gives instructions to Cosby regarding the governor's duties respecting the council, the judges, Justices of the Peace, the governour of the province, etc.—N. Y. Col. Docs., VI: 40-41.

A newspaper advertisement states that the new theatre in Dock St. will be opened on Feb. 12. The play is to be "The Recruiting officer."—N. Y. Gen., Jan. 24, 1746. Dock St. was the present site of Whitehall and Hanover Sq.

A letter from London, dated Nov. 28, 1755, is received in New York stating that on Nov. 27 a committee of the privy council gave the opinion that the reasons presented by the governor of New York Province for removing Col. Lewis Morris were not sufficient.—N. Y. Gen., Jan. 20-Feb. 3, 1756.

The lords of trade, in a representation to the king, report at Whitehall, after obtaining the opinion of the king's attorney and solicitor-general that the governors of the plantations "ought not in any case whatsoever to sit & vote as Members of the Council in their respective Governments."

The British legal opinion on which this advice was based, signed by J. Willes and D. Ryder, and dated Jan. 15, 1756, is particularly interesting as introducing into the language of government in New York Province, and perhaps also into that of the other American provinces of Great Britain, the word "Legislature." While not a new word in the nation, to signify not merely "laws," or a "body of persons invested with the power of making the laws of a country or state" (see Murray's "New English Diet., 1698, title "Legislature"), a careful page-by-page search, covering the years prior to 1756, inclusive, in the Jour. Leg. Coun., Assembly, Jour., Col. Laws N. Y., Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., N. Y. Col. Docs., Exec. Coun. Min., and M. C., where we would expect to find it if used, all fails to disclose its use heretofore in these contemporary official records of this province. All references to the law-making body of this province are to the "assembly" or "general assembly," and to the "council."—See, further, Oct. 19.

The opinion of the king's attorney and solicitor-general is a clear, though brief, definition of the various divisions of government in the American provinces, thus: "The Government of His Majesty's Plantations in America consists of a Gov't Council and Assembly—These three have the Power of making Laws vested in them and the Governor has a Negative upon every Act passed by the Counsell and Assembly. The Counsell sits in two capacitys viz as one part of the Legislature, and as a Council to advise & assist the Governor in all political cases. And the Governors are restrained from act without the advice and consent of the Majority of them, in many cases. Of the absence of a Governor. The President of the Council, if there be no Lieutenant Governor upon the Place, always acts as Governor, till a new Governor is appointed by His Majesty."—N. Y. Col. Docs., VI: 40-41.

A correspondent writes: "Passing the other Day down the Broad Way, I saw a Coach, upon which being a particular Coat of Arms, Crest and Motto, my Curiosity led me to enquire its Owner, which I found to be Coll. Morris, now in England."—N. Y. Jour., Feb. 23, 1736. Col. Lewis Morris, here referred to, wrote to his daughter in England, Aug. 26, 1745, that he had received by a late vessel "the body of the chaise [chaise] and the things sent for, except the trusses, all safe and in good order."—Houghton, Coaches of Colonial N. Y. (1900), 12.

Ebenzer Grant advertises to sell "very good corks" (probably a typographical error for "cock's") at "the Sign of the Dog's Head in the Purdidge Pot."—N. Y. Jour., March 1, 1746. Cock-fighting was a favourite pastime in early New York. This sign "was not long attended to, save to the scorn of society, emblem as it was from early time of slaveyoushewelry and mean accommodation."—John Austin Stevens, "Old New York Taverns," in Harper's Mag., May, 1890.

Plans are perfected for the operation of the almshouse. A committee's jurisdiction is granted to Elihu Clarke, and what Terms this Corporation may hire an able and sufficient Person to be keeper of the House of Correction and Overseer of the Workhouse and Poorhouse. His duties shall be "to see the Poor to work, and to correct the consummacious," and other persons committed to the house of correction. The committee is also to consider what furniture, utensils, and stock will be needed for these institutions; and "what matters will be the property of the government, etc.—N. Y. Col. Docs., VII: 40-41.

24 That the keeper "be sworn truly diligently and honestly to Execute the Office," and "do Justice and shew Humanity to the poor who are not able to labour, & Correct the Incorrigible and such others as shall be committed to the House of Correction; Employ the Poor upon: Such as carding, Knitting, Spinning, Dressing Hemp or Flax; Flicking oalum or other Labour; that such Poor as are able to work, may not Eat the Bread of Sloth & Idleness, and be a Burthen to the Public."—M. C. G., IV: 395. This order and the report of the committee, on March 31, 1756, give a clear indication of the modus operandi of the first almshouse of New York City. On the latter date, the committee informed the common council that, "pursuant to public printed Notice and Advertisements" (see N. Y. Gen., March 6, 1756), several persons had applied for the position of keeper, and that they had selected John Sebring and his wife.

The committee made several important recommendations: 1. That certain specified furniture and utensils should be provided, including four spinning wheels, one or two large wheels for spinning wool or cotton, some shoemaker's tools, and leather for making shoes, two pairs of woven cards, knitting needles, flax, wool, cotton, etc.; 2. That the keeper "be sworn truly diligently and honestly to Execute the Office," and "do Justice and shew Humanity to the poor who are not able to labour, & Correct the Incorrigible and such others as shall be committed to the House of Correction; Employ the Poor upon: Such as carding, Knitting, Spinning, Dressing Hemp or Flax; Flicking oalum or other Labour; that such Poor as are able to work, may not Eat the Bread of Sloth & Idleness, and be a Burthen to the Public."—M. That the "Master" of the house of correction, workhouse, and poorhouse shall set at work "all such poor as shall..." the poor, and all disorderly persons, parents of Bastard Children, Beggars, Servants running away or otherwise misbehaving themselves, Trespassers, Rogues, Vagabonds, etc.; and that the keeper shall correct persons who refuse to work "by moderate Whipsing or Flogging;" 5. That he shall "yield a true Account to Every General Quarter Sessions of the peace to be held for this City and County of all persons committed to his custody, and of the offences for which they were committed;" 6. That it be recommended to the justices to commit to the house of correction "all such sturdy Beggars as go wandering and begging about the Streets and asking Alms, according to divers Statutes in such Case made and provided there to be put to hard labour;" 7. That parish children, sent to the poorhouse for maintenance by the church-wardeens and overseers of the poor, be taken by the "Master thereof" and be "religiously educated and taught to read write and cast account; and employed in spinning of wool, Thread, Knitting, Sewing or other Labour most suitable to their Genius in order to qualify them to be put out apprentices and to services for their future livelihood;" 8. That "Fetters, Gves, Shackles, and a convenient place or whipping post be provided for the said House of Correction for punishing the incorrigible and disorderly persons..." 9. That "a large Garden be fortwthic fences, plowed up and made round the said House for the raising of all kind of Roots Herbs &c for the use of the poor in the said House; and the Overplus not expended therein to be disposed of by the Keeper, and the profits accruing thereby to be by him paid to the Church Wardens of the said City... towards the better Relief and Maintenance of the Poor of this City;" 10. That "the Inhabitants of this City have free Liberty and LICency to send to the said House all unruly and ungovernmental Servants and Slaves there to be kept at hard labour, and punished according to the Directions of any one Justice with the Consent of the Master or Mistress of such Servant or Slave That the Master or Mistress... shall pay unto the Master of the said House for Entrance one shilling, for whipping or other punishment one shilling and six pence, and for discharging such servant or Slave one shilling, all of which profits shall be applied to the Use and Benefit of the keeper of the said House." The common council ordered the report and ordered that the committee provide utensils, etc.; and "cause the Garden therein mentioned to be fenced, ploughed &c made."—Ibid., IV: 397-91.
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1736. The development of the almshouse system, prior to the Mar. Revolution, is indicated in the following digest of orders selected from the Minutes of the Common Council.

The building committee was directed on April 15, 1736, to "employ Workmen and provide Materials for Building a Kitchen, Oven and Washhouse to the said Workhouse."—Ibid. IV: 319.

Seeding, the keeper, was paid on May 3, 1736, "for Digging of the Garden of the Said Poorhouse, Garden Seeds, &c."—Ibid. IV:

It was ordered on May 15, 1739, that an additional building be erected for a hospital for contagious diseases.—Ibid. IV: 459.

Directions were given on April 10, 1740, to "have the fence
Up behind the Garden of the poorground and the Ground of John Harris."—Ibid. IV: 481. This was removed in 1746.—Ibid. VI:
176, 187-88.

A committee was appointed on April 15, 1746, to have the poorhouse enlarged (Ibid. VI: 171); on March 6, 1752, to have a bell-tower erected thereon (Ibid. VI: 356); and on March 19, 1757, to fence in a piece of ground for a burial-place next the fence on the east side of the almshouse (ibid. VI: 85).

In 1766-7, an addition to the building was built (Ibid. VII:
21, 29, 45, 49, 76), and in 1769 another (Ibid. VII: 173, 185, 196, 1776). Regarding the exact location of the first almshouse, see June 22, 1774. With the building of the new one in 1766-7, the old building was demolished by order of the common council of June 19, 1767 (q.v.). See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 975.

"Concerning the considerations enquired into by the Mayor of the Meat Market, the common council orders payment by the city of £362 10s. 8d. to Joseph Reade for this object.—M. C. C., IV: 305. This was the market-house at the east end of Wall St.—See Oct. 4, 1709.

A "Consort of Musick" is advertised to be held on this day for the benefit of Mr. Pathelb. The Harpisorcd Part performed by himself." Tickets for the concert may be procured "at the Coffee-House, at the Black Horse and at Mr. Todd's."—N. T.
Jour., March 8, 1736. The Coffee House was on Broad and Water Sts. (see Jan. 27, 1702), the Black Horse was on William St, south of Exchange Pl. (see Oct. 9, 1727), and Todd's was next the Coffee House, on Water St. (see May 28, 1733).

Gov. Cosby's death occurs, after an illness of almost 16 weeks.
His body was buried on March 15 in the king's chapel in the fort.— N. T. Gaz., March 6-15, 1736. In Dec. 1735, the governor had been "dangerously ill of a violent Pleurisy, and Fever that followed," and on Jan. 15 was said to be "touched with a Cough," and was thought to be "Consumptive."—Ibid., Dec. 15-23; Jan.
6-13, 1736. See April 29.

Immediately after Cosby's death, George Clarke is elected president of the council. James Alexander not voting (see March 31). Clarke takes the chair and begins formally to commence an exclamation be issued giving notice of the governor's death, and confirming all officers in their places. The seal, Cosby's commission, etc., as well as the seal of New Jersey, are delivered to President Clarke.—Col. Gaz. Min., 325.

One of the above mentioned proclamations, printed by Bradford, is preserved in the collection of the N. Y. Pub. Library. Clarke issues it as president of the council and commander-in-chief of the province, and in it states that, by reason of the suspension of Rip Van Dam from the council by Cosby's order on Nov. 24, 1735 (q.v.), the administration of the government has devolved upon him. He therefore commands that all civil and military officers shall continue to exercise their offices until the king's pleasure is known. Rip Van Dam, who had been previously suspended from the council by Cosby (see Nov. 24, 1735), demands the commission, instructions, and seal, first of Mrs. Cosby and then of Clarke, with a request that it is "suggested to suppose the patrons of the government in case he be restored. Clarke reported to the lords of trade, on March 16, that an interruption was threatened; but that, in spite of "all their noise and threats," he was "peaceably possessed of the administration of the Government," and had "reason to hope that by a mild and prudent conduct" he would
"conVINce the people to their due obedience."—N. Y. Col. Docs., VI: 42-50. The struggle between Clarke and Van Dam continued until October, when a civil war was barely averted.—See April 26, June 18, Sept. 1, Sept. 18, Sept. 20, Sept. 29.

James Alexander, one of the council, is served with a protest by Rip Van Dam against all persons who have aided George Clarke in taking upon himself, or in keeping, the administration of the government. On March 24, Alexander issued a printed bulletin denying that he had ever advised or consented to Clarke's assuming charge of the government.—From original broadside, of March 24, in N. Y. Pub. Library.

A letter, signed "Philó Patria," is published by Zenger, making 15 the following reference to the deceased governor (Cosby): "As a true Lover of this Province, I can't help wishing, That the Measures of his Administration may rather serve as Beacons of Danger and to be avoided, than as Examples to a future Tyrant; in this very much depends the Quieting of the Minds of a People long distressed with arbitrary Power."—I. T. Jour., March 15, 1736. Referring to this, doubtless, President Clarke wrote to the Duke of Newcastle on July 26: "Zenger has lately published a vile paper highly reflecting on the Memory of Governor Cosby
. . . ." Clarke adds a possible explanation of its publication.—
Oct. 23, 1732.

"From Cosby's time to the end of the colonial period, the language of the New York Assembly, in reply to the Governor's messages and orders, becomes more and more defiant, though usually the boldest defiance is accompanied by a protestation of loyalty to the Crown." For illustration of this, see "James English Governors of New York and Their Part in the Development of the Colony," by Frank H. Severance, in the N. Y. State Hist.

The president, council, speaker, and some of the members of the assembly, in a petition, on April 17, 1748, for a separate governor, on the death of Cosby (see March 10). The grand jury of that state sent a similar petition the next day.—From original broadside in N. Y. Pub. Library.

Geo. Clarke, president of the council and commander-in-chief of the province, issues a proclamation, printed by Bradford, extending the adjournment of the general assembly to the last Tuesday in April.—From original broadside, in N. Y. Pub. Library.

Regarding the legality of such adjournments, see April 26.

James Alexander causes a notice to be posted at the market and other public places, denying that he in any way aided or encouraged George Clarke to take upon himself the administration of the government. The notice is also published in the N. T. Gaz., March 22-28, 1736. See March 10 and 31, April 26, and Sept.
29. Bradford, signing himself "A Friend and Well-Wisher To all Men," defends himself at length, in the pages of his newspaper, against the charges of falsehood contained in Zenger's Journal. He declares he is neutral in the Cosby controversy which has been going on for two years, adding: " . . . yet as I am and have been above forty years last past a Servant to the Government (and consequently to the several Governors during that Time) so I have, according to my duty, sometimes printed some observations which the late Governor's Friends, thought proper to make upon what the other Party printed against him, and for my so doing Mr. Zenge or some of the Party, have been angry with me, as I may suppose, (for I know not of any thing else that I have done by which they could be offended with me, they having formerly been my very good Friends) they have from time to time, Reflected upon me and against my Gazette, misintuing that which I published was not true." He continues thus, in a manly, honest, fashion, to state his case, and explain his position and its relation to the events of the period, stating in closing that he intends to "be obedient to the King, and to all that are in Authority under him."—N. T. Gaz., March 28, 1736.

The freedholders and freemen of the city complain in a petition 31 to the common council "of the Multiplicity of Gaming Houses within this City, and the evil consequences attending the same by Debauching the Youth and Others." Some of these consequences are thus enumerated: "our Youth are thereby greatly corrupted in their Morals render'd disobedient, unruly and Insolent, tempted to keep unreasonable Hours; to use unlawful Methods for maintaining their unreasonable & Extravagant Expenses, sometimes attended with Quarrelling and fighting, and after unfit all as well unwilling to perform those Services, that are required of them, and we find that neither Council nor Correction are likely to have its desired Effect, while the Spring and fountain of these Disorders are tolerated and Allowed." The petitioners therefore request that the common council use its "Authority, Interest and Endeavours to suppress those Gaming Houses, especially all Billyard, Trunk

Tables and Cards &c. to which are owing the Improvisement and Ruin of many in this place, who having contracted a habit of Gaming in their Youth, have not been able to Leave it till Re-dressed by the Laws.—A committee was appointed to act accordingly.—M. C. IV., 311-12.

A certificate relating the distinguished career of James Alexander, and stating that he is "a true friend to the late glorious Revolution, and the protestant Succession in the Illustrious House of Hanover, and well affected to his present Majesty, Perso and Government," is signed and sealed by the common council.—M. C. IV., 312-14. In the municipal election of September, 1734 (9.v.), the candidates of the popular party, under the leadership of James Alexander and William Smith, had been elected as city magistrates and common councillors. According to Cosby's report to the lords of trade (N. Y. Col. Doc. Dec., 21), this was the action of a "misled populace." This opinion, probably, was what led to the above-mentioned certificate. See also Political Sci. Quart., Dec., 1921, p. 592, regarding this point of view.

The common council asserts the right of Andrew Law, as lessee of the dock and slips of the city, to make a charge for vessels lying at the slip "from the Southernmost End of Wall Street to the End of Burnetts Key," inasmuch as this is comprehended in his lease, and he has the right to demand rates in accordance with an ordinance "for regulating the Lying of Vessels in the Dock and Slip District." See also, p. 298-299.

Elisabeth Jourdain, the tavern-keeper, a poor widow (see Sept. 26, 1717), is granted a free license to sell strong liquor by retail in the city.—M. C. IV., 314. She received the licence free in March, 1737.—Ibid., 365.

At a meeting of the common council on March 31, it was proposed and Insisted on, that the whole Monies arising from Lycences to Retailers of strong Liquors, for Lycence and Liberty to Retail or sell by the small Measure should be applied to such Uses and disposed of in such manner as this Common Council shall order and direct." After debate, involving a study of the charter, it was resolved "by all the Members then present, except the Mayor [Paul Richard] and Recorder [Daniel Horsmanden], that the moneys arising from Lycences aforesaid, could not be disposed of but by Order and Authority of this Court and that no Member or Members Officer or Officers of this Court, or any other person whatsoever had or have any Right or Shadow of Right or Title to any part of the said Monies without the Order and Direction of this Court." At the present meeting, on April 9, a minute is placed in the record that, "Notwithstanding which Resolutions and Declaration of this Court made and given after mature deliberation and serious Consideration as aforesaid, we the Members now present, or most of us, being [are] informed, that the present Mayor, contrary to the practice of his predecessors and the Resolution and Declaration aforesaid, and in high Contempt and Disregard of the Great Duty due to our City from the sundry and divers Sums of money by him received for Lycences aforesaid," the Mayor had been asked if the report was true, and if true whether he would pay such money into the hands of the chamberlain. He replied that it was true, and that he had resolved to retain the money. The common council now enters a protest in the record, and resolves to take measures, "when in their power," to compel the mayor to deliver to the chamberlain such sums as he now doth or hereafter shall unjustly, illegally and violently detain contrary to the order and Resolution of this Court, and all Damages, Interests Costs and Charges, which this Corporation are entitled to or may suffer or sustain for or by reason of the premises."—M. C. IV., 317-18. The same declaration of corporate right was made on Apr. 13, 1744 (ibid., VI., 116), and Feb. 12, 1721 (ibid., IV., 335), in the case of Richard's successor, Mayor John Cruger, the elder. Regarding the later cases of Mayor Holland, and Mayor John Cruger, the younger, see April 13, 1749; Oct. 26, 1759.

The committee for building the almshouse is required by the common council to "employ Workmen and provide Materials for Building a Kitchin, Oven and Washhouse to the said Workhouse."—M. C. IV., 319. See March 30.

The committee was ordered also to "cause a convenient House to be made, contiguous to the Washhouse in the Broad Street, for securing and well keeping the Fire engines of this City."—Ibid. On July 23, the carpenter's work done on "the Shed for securing the Fire Engines" was paid for.—Ibid., IV. 332. See also the Grim map, Place 34, Vol. I.

Several grants of water lots, made with certain conditions in 1736 and 1737, serve to illustrate the method employed by the city in filling up the water front districts, and the order in which the lots were granted and wharves outward, around the lower part of Manhattan Island.

One of these begins with a petition made by Philip Schuyler, Jr., to the common council, on April 15, stating that he owns "all those sundry Messages and Treatments, . . . on the East Side of . . . Countees Key and Water Slip and Rivers etc. . . . with the Lots thereunto belonging lying between the said Slip, and Fletcher Street," covering about 80 feet of the river front. He desires to purchase 200 feet of land, "to be granted out of the said East River etc." (water lots), fronting his land. This is allowed, and a committee is appointed to have the land surveyed, and the terms drawn up.—M. C. IV., 159-20. The committee's report, on June 3, states that a survey of the water lots has been made; that the breadth is 84 ft. 4 in., and will be 76 ft. 3 in. in breadth "when wharf'd out and made to the Extent of two hundred foot to be granted out of the said East River upon a Range with Burnett's Key." A plan of the locality is made part of the report. The committee recommends that the grant be made at an annual rent of $60:60:3, with the proviso that Schuyler will make a street 45 feet wide "to Range Equal with both sides of Burnett Street," and complete it by 1739. See also the report for the adjoining lot, said to be granted out of the said East River and Harbour," he will by the same time "make and Erect Another good and sufficient Street or Wharf," 30 ft. wide also that he will make "the Equal half of the Street from Wharf leading from Fletcher's Street aforesaid to the Extent of the Said two hundred foot to be granted out of the said East River," also that he will make "A good and sufficient Wharf Street or Peer" of 18 feet 3 inches in breadth along Maiden Lane Slip to the Extent of the Said two hundred foot to be granted out of the said East River, and Harbour, and that the Profits Arriving for or by the use of the said Wharf Street on Peer and the Slip be Received by this Corporation for the use of this Corporation;" also that he will build a "pair of Stairs at the Extent of the Peer or Wharf leading from Maiden Lane," to be maintained by him, his heirs and assigns, for the use of the boats, etc., of the ferry-man. The report proposes to give to Schuyler "the Water and soil under the Water aforesaid fronting the Messages and Tenements aforesaid," and all the profits "from the Outward Wharf which is to front the East River or Harbour with all Cranes Stairs and Landing places" (except the stairs above-mentioned) to be made thereof by the said Petitioner his Heirs and Assigns." It is ordered that the corporation grant the water lots aforesaid, under the several conditions to the extent of the Peer and Slip, and that the grant be executed July 22.—Ibid., IV., 331; Liber Deeds, B. 281. Water Street received its christening in this grant.—See July 22, 1736. Its history, however, began much earlier.—See June 16, 1696.

A printed letter, signed in MS. by Rip van Dam, and intended for the individual members, bears witness to the fact of Cosby's death and Van Dam's claim to the administration, and maintains that the adjournment of the assembly by Clarke was illegal; it warns the members that the authority of Clarke is not good; and maintains that, since the assembly has no existence unless Clarke's authority is good, any examination by it of the right of Clarke or Van Dam does of itself decide against the latter. From original broadside, in N. Y. Pub. Library; see also, Bulletin, N. Y. P. L., II., 254. See also Copy of a letter from Rip van Dam, Esq. to the several Members of that General Assembly of New York, that stood adjourned to the last Tuesday of March, 1736, in Bradford's Votes of the General Assembly, 1722-1738 (N. Y. Pub. Library). On April 20, 15 members of the Assembly met at the city hall and drew up a declaration stating that, "whereas it was notorious at the Time that the Honorable George Clarke, Esq. took upon him the Administration of this Government, that the said Rip van Dam had a Claim of Right to take the same upon him, and yet it appears not that the Council of this Province gave him any Opportunity to be heard, . . . and we are not so fond of our Seats in the General Assembly of this Province, as to desire to retain them at the Hazard of our lives, the Risque of our Estates, and the Ruin of our Families and posterity, will not act as Members of the Legislature."—Bradford, Votes of the General Assembly.

A corner house in Maiden Lane, "now in the Tenure of Mr. "
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1756 Willett, "is offered for sale to or let by Rip van Dam. He also offers, among other properties, "The Chelar Kardin, at present the Poor House, kept by Mrs. Burger" (see July 5, 1755). —N. Y. Jour., Apr. 26, 1756. John Burger had contracted, on March 31, 1735 (p. 2), to be responsible for the stone and brick work in constructing the poorhouse.

26 The household furniture of the late Gov. Cosby (see March 10) was advertised to be sold at public vendue on this day.—N. Y. Gaz., Apr. 15-19, 1736.

May 1 Another grant of water lots is made, with conditions similar to those in Schuyler's grant. —May 1, 1756. Edward Peyster and others petition the common council for a grant in fee simple of 200 feet of land to be gained out of East River fronting their property, "whereon to make further improvements for the better Conveniency of Trade and Navigation and Enlargement of this City in its buildings." The petition shows the location of their land to be in the East Ward, on the east side of Fletcher Street (see Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 1000), fronting the river, with lots between Fletcher Street and Rodman's Slip or Van Cylfe's Slip. The petition is granted.—M. C. G., IV: 323. The new lots to be thus formed, in number, are described in the grant, which is entered in full in the Minutes (June 11, 1736), with the report of the committee appointed to survey the ground. The petitioners covenant to make at their own expense a street 45 feet wide, "to Range Equal with both sides of Water Street," on or before March 25, 1746. At the outward part of the 200 feet of ground to be gained from the river, they are required to make a street 40 feet wide, by the same date. They are also to extend Fletcher Street to the extent of the 200 feet thus gained from the river, and to maintain all of these streets and the wharves erected or to be erected there.—Ibid., IV: 573-76.

3 Van Cylfe's Slip is laterally called Rodman's Slip (M. C. G., IV: 323). Sometimes, during both earlier and later periods, it was also referred to as Lyon's Slip (see 1730); it was the present Brawling Shp, now filled up and forming the termination of John St. See also Aug. 9, 1692; March 2, 1744.

7 The inventory of the estate of the late Richard Van Dam, whose will was proved April 14, 1756, bears this date, and shows, among other items, "1 Prospect of Ye City of New York." This evidently refers to the Burgis View. The original MS. inventory was offered for sale by a New York dealer in Nov., 1947.

13 "Taken out of the House of Mr. Edward Faestam [Eastham] who keeps the Fighting Cocks Inn, in New-York, a Silver Quart Tankard, marked on the Handle, a silver engraving, the Silversmith Mark is W^h white punch'd, and a Cyprell on the Lid of ES . . ." —N. Y. Jour., May 24, 1736. The tavern with the sign of the "Fighting Cocks" stood at the present No. 28 Water St. It had ceased to be called a tavern by 1750, and was still properly termed a "Fire-Engine" by 1742. The province government offered a reward for the return of a silver watch, "rather larger than middling, Rigmarden at Dublin the Maker."—Ibid., Aug. 15, 1737.

22 The common council orders that "the Street now fronting the East River or Harbour of this City lying between the Slip Commonly Called Maiden Lane Slip or Countess Key Slip and the Slip Commonly Called Rodman Slip be hereafter Called Water Street." —M. C. C., IV: 311; and see Pl. 50, Vol. I. The order requires that the street be so called in the grant of water lots made this day to Peter Schuyler, for an account of which see April 15. Water Street was begun in 1666.—See June 16, 1666. It was completed, and put into use, 1737. It was laid out by 1736, and extended eastward across land of Rutgers to Colter's Hook Aug. 16, 1784.—M. C. C. (MS.), VIII: 153, 185; continued to East St. prior to 1790.—Pl. 70, Vol. VII; "The ... Straight from the sloops at Rutgers St. to Rutgers St. in 1816 (M. C. C. MS., XXXX: 225, 264); and from Rutgers Slip to Clinton St. in 1816.—Ibid., XXXLI: 294.

John Kelly, keeper and owner of the public slaughter-houses within New York City, seeks a renewal of his lease. A committee of the common council is appointed to consider his petition. On Sept. 20, 1676, the committee reports favorably to the council of a renewal, and the common council gave Kelly a lease for 21 years. —Ibid., IV: 343-44.

Daniel Horsmanden is appointed by the governor to be judge of the court of vice-admiralty. He was sworn in on the 29th.—Col. Min., III: 74-75.

The De Lancey house, later famous as Francesca's Tavern, at this time occupied as a residence by Col. Joseph Robinson, is offered for sale.—N. Y. Gaz., July 18-25, 1776. Evidently no purchaser was found; for the same house was again advertised in January, 1779.—N. Y. Merc., Jan. 22, 1779. For a brief history of this site, see April 11, 1700.

The city pays £2;15 for 1000, "three foot Shingleos" for "the Poor-House" (alms-house).—M. C. C., IV: 339.

The Clarke-Van Dam controversy is reviewed at length in a letter of this date published in Zenger's Journal of Sept. 13, 1764 also in A Letter To One of the Members of the late General Assembly (pub. separately by the same printer in 1756). This episode was a renewal of the bitter conflict which marked Cosby's administration, Clarke being supported by the court faction, and Van Dam by the popular party.

With friendly irony, Bradford addresses a long editorial to "Brother Zenger" on the subject of faction, and loyalty to the crown, claiming "That the Administration of the Government is right, and Lawfully led in Mr. Clarke's hands, and must remain so till the King's Pleasure be known."—N. Y. Gaz., Sept. 13, 1776.

A printed letter, headed "The Sentiments of a Principal Freethinker, Offered to the Consideration of the Representatives of the Province of New York, and are here called to me, and at the 14th of September, 1776, is distributed by Zenger through Clarke's channels to the administration of the government.—See one of these original broadsides, in the N. Y. Pub. Library, on which has been written, by the hand of James Alexander, a reference to Zenger's Journal, of Sept. 27, 1776, for a refutation of it. An open letter "To one of the Members of the late General Assembly," unsigned, was printed by Zenger, expressing the writer's opposition to the views of the printed letter entitled "The Sentiments of a principal Freethinker" (written from Westchester), and antagonistic to Clarke's claim to the presidency of the council.—From original broadsides, in N. Y. Pub. Library. See Oct. 14.

The assembly having been adjourned by Clarke to this day, he issues a proclamation, printed by Bradford, adjourning it further to the second Tuesday in October.—From original broadside, in N. Y. Pub. Library. See Oct. 14.

In letters to the Duke of Newcastle, to the lords of trade, and to Secretary Clarke, urges that the suspension of Van Dam be confirmed by the king.—N. Y. Col. Docs., IV: 74-77.

Disaffection in the assembly over the suspension of Rip Van Dam from the council (see Nov. 24, 1735: June 18, 1736) continues. Clarke informs the lords of trade that the administration forces (the court faction) are "terribled by Zengers Journal."—N. Y. Col. Docs., VI: 75.

The Clarke-Van Dam controversy (for a connected account of which, see Man. Com. Coun., 1865, pp. 722-25) becomes more serious when each assumes the right to nominate the municipal office of comptroller. Clarke is in Clarke's name for mayor, while Van Dam names Cornelius van Horn. The council on Oct. 1 ordered a proclamation to be published warning all officers against Van Dam. Military preparations followed, including the purchase of gunpowder, camp utensils, and equipment for the garrison of Fort George, and an inventory of all military stores.—Col. Min., 527. Clarke ordered all the regular forces with their claims into the fort, where a strict watch was kept day and night.—N. Y. Gaz., Sept. 20-Oct. 4, 1776. Clarke wrote to the lords of trade that he had removed from his house in town to the fort by the advice of the council. He expressed the belief that factional troubles would "cause the armies under the honored Sir Henry, Mr. Smith, Rev. Mr. Lewis Morris, Jr., the authors of articles appearing in Zenger's Journal, and Zenger himself, were sent home (to England)._—N. Y. Col. Docs., VI: 80.

The common council, in doubt whether to accept the appointees of Clarke or Van Dam, on Oct. 12 ordered all the attorneys practicing in the mayor's court to attend on Oct. 14, "to give their Opinion and Advice in what manner this Corporation ought safely to Act for the Preservacion of this City, Relating to the Nomination of the Officers."—M. C. C., IV: 348. A clause therein the forces of Clarke and Van Dam was averted, when, on Oct. 13, a ship arrived from London bearing a royal confirmation of Clarke as president and commander-in-chief of the province.—N. Y. Gaz., Oct. 11-14, 1776. Van Dam was therefore compelled to yield, and Clarke's appointees were sworn in at the regular time on Oct. 14 (q.v.).—M. C. C., IV: 349-52.

The motive forces in the Clarke-Van Dam controversy are explained in a recent essay by Dr. G. W. Edwards, entitled "New York City Politics before the American Revolution," published in the Political Sci. Quar., for Dec., 1931, pp. 795 et seq. The city was now on the brink of civil war. Two companies of the king's forces kept in the fort above prevented the popular "faction" from taking up arms.—Ibid, citing N. Y. Gaz., Oct. 11, 1776.

Journal No. 3 of New York City's Department of Finance of to-day carries contemporary entries from Oct., 1776, to June, 1787.—See the original MS. volume, at N. Y. Hist. Soc.

President Clarke receives from the home government instructions relating to the form of prayer for the royal family.—Col. Coun. Min., 537.

And the next day (being the 14th) will be Run for, on the same Course, by all or any the Horses that started for the Twenty Pound Plate (the Winning Horse excepted) . . . All Persons on Horse-back or in Chaises, coming into the English Square and Walking Horses only excepted) are to pay Six Pence each to the Owner of the Ground."—N. Y. Gaz., Sept. 20-27, 1776. See also Nov. 5, 1776. A few years later (see Oct. 11, 1742), the race-track was on the Church Farm, west of Broadway.

Clarke's speech to the assembly refers to the need of their session "To heal the unhappy Divisions that have sprung up in this Province, to provide for the Safety, the Defence and Prosperity of it; To encourage Trade and Navigation, and To promote the raising and Manufacturing such Commodities as may be Advantageous to your selves, and the Nation." He refers to the neglect of ship-building in recent years, and urges its renewal. He recommends the completion of fortifications now under way, particularly those in the Mohawk country.—From the original broadside, printed by Bradford, in N. Y. Pub. Library; Four of the Vows and Proceedings (1736).

Up to this time, the provincial council, with governor or president presiding, held its meetings in the fort, and the general assembly met in the city hall. Now, Chief-Judge Delancey, as speaker of the council, reports to that body that the corporation of the city has offered the council "the free use of their Cómón Council Room in the City Hall during every Session of Assembly and that they would with all convenient speed, fit up the same for their reception, in Such manner as the Council shall think proper, and that the same was at their Service, until the necessary alterations could be made thereon."—Jour. Leg. Coun., 1: 661. The next day, the council passed a vote of thanks, and reconvened on the common council "give some Declaration of Trust which may effectually Secure the use of the Comón Council Room for the members of his Majesty's Council for the future, whenever they shall think convenient."—Ibid., 1: 664. On Oct. 21, the common council of the city passed the following resolution, which was endorsed in the provincial council minutes of Oct. 26: "Forasmuch as his Majesty's Council of this Province, in their Legislative Capacity, during the sitting of the General Assembly, are to sit and Act in their Legislative Capacity, as a Distinct Body by themselves (without the Presence of the Governor or Commandant-In-Chief of this Province), Whereas a convenient Room or Chamber in the City Hall of this City, is not yet commodiously fitted up and furnished for his Majesty's said Council to meet and sit in, for the better Expediting the Publick Affairs of this Colony in General Assembly; And Forasmuch as the Chamber in the City Oct. Hall of this City commonly Called the Common Council Chamber is under the same Roof, where the General Assembly do usually meet and sit, whereby both Houses of the Legislature, may have speedy Recourse to Each Other for their greater Ease and more speedy accomplishment of their Business. The council minutes therefore Resolved & Ordered that the said Chamber in the City Hall of this City, commonly Called the Common Council Chamber, be with all Convenient Expedition handsomely fitted up and furnished, and a Convenient Closet or more be made in the same, and that the same Chamber be General Assembly's Print Room and other useful Furniture; and that the same . . . be secured for the sitting of his Majesty's Council in General Assembly, in such Manner and Form as this Court shall be advised by Counsell learned in the Law. A committee of the common council was appointed to carry the resolution into effect.—M. G. C., IV: 357-58; and see Jour. Leg. Coun., 1: 665. The council took up its quarters there on Oct. 26.

It should be observed that this is a very early, if not the earliest, use of the word "Legislature" in the original official records of New York Province; such usage being prompted, possibly, by its use in the opinion of the King's attorneys on Jan. 15.—See under Feb. 6. O'Callaghan has adopted this designation freely, however, in his "Historical Introduction" of the Jour. Leg. Coun. (1861), I: xii xvi et seq. Regarding legislative nomenclature in the English colonial period in this province, the student will find useful hints in the works of those already cited with references:

The "Chart of Liberties and privileges granted by his Royall Highnesse to the Inhabitants of New Yorke and its Dependencies," Oct. 30, 1683 (p. r.), stated that "The Supreme Legislative Authority under his Majesty and Royall Highnesse James Duke of York Albanys & Lord proprietor of the said provincc shall forever be and reside in a Governor, Counsell, and the people meeting in General Assembly." The act defined the manner of choosing the persons who should sit as "representatives in the General Assembly;" when its sessions should be held, etc.—Col. Maps, 1664-66. The governor was the name of the lower house of the provincial legislature; it was not the name of the united branches, the upper and lower houses, or what we now call the legislature.

So, in Sloughter's time and later (see March 19, 1691), the lower house was concurrently called in its own minutes the "General Assembly" (Assembly Jour., 1764, I: 1 et seq.), or the "House of Representatives" (ibid., I: 2 et seq.). It was most frequently referred to as "the House" (ibid., I: 2, 3, 5 et seq.). Its members were called "Assembly Men" (ibid., I: 1, 2), or "Representatives" (ibid., I: 2), or "Members" (ibid., I: 2). All of these designations were used in the Assembly Jour. as far as we find them printed (through 1765) for the colonial period.

The upper house was always the "Counsel," but known in the title of its journal as the "Legislative Council."—See Jour. Leg. Coun. (1861), Vol. I and II. Its gathering was also called "the Council."—Ibid., I: 1 et seq. The council minutes mention the lower house as the "Assembly House" or "House of Representatives," and its members as "Members of the Representatives."—Ibid., I: 2. An address to the king was signed by "the Governor Council and the Representatives of this Province."—Ibid., I: 7. In joint session the two branches were referred to as "Council & Assembly."—Ibid., I: 80. No common name covering both bodies was employed by the provincial records; for it will be observed that the use of the word "Legislature" (noted above as in M. C. C., IV: 353-54) first occurs, not in the journals of either house, but in the minutes of the common council of the city of New York, and is quoted in the Jour. Leg. Coun., I: 665.

The same testimony is found in the colonial laws. Prior to the adoption of the state constitution (see April 20, 1777), when laws began to be enacted in the name of "the people of the state of New York," the style employed for the enacting clause of the law was: "Bee it enacted by the Governor Council and Representatives in General Assembly met," or some verbal variation of this style. From this form, the inference has been erroneously drawn that the name "general assembly" was intended to be applied to both legislative branches taken together. The laws of the colonial period are: "Bee it enacted by the Gent'Il Assembly" (ibid., 144 et seq.), a style in frequent use (1683 et seq.), due to the original inception of laws in the lower house; or "Bee it enacted . . . by the Governor Council and Representatives Oct. now assembled" (ibid., I: 171), which was the authorized way of stating the same purpose in accordance with Dongan's instructions of May 29, 1666.—N. Y. Col. Docs., III: 370. Androo's instructions, dated April 16, 1688, continued Dongan's as Dongan's: "And you are to observe in the passing of laws that the Stile of enacting the same by the Governor and Council, be henceforth used and no other."—Ibid., I: 218.

Following this, however, Sloughter's commission, Nov. 14, 1689, gave him authority, with the advice of the council, to call "other General Assembly." The persons elected should constitute the people's share in the legislative power, and this gave their representative body the name "General Assembly" (see March 19, 1691).

We find in the Col. Laws N. Y. after Sloughter's time, from May 6, 1691, onward, and in the Assemb. Jour. and Jour. Leg. Coun., the style: "Bee it . . . enacted . . . by the Governor and Council and Representatives met in General Assembly" (Col. Laws N. Y., I: 225), or some slight verbal variation of it, without change of meaning or intent, pointing out the three essential branches of the law-making power, the governor, council, and general assembly; but with no one general name like legislature, to designate the two interacting bodies, the upper and lower houses of the legislative branch of the government.

Chief-Justice De Lancey notifies the council that as the business of the supreme court requires his constant attendance, he cannot regularly and conveniently attend the council as speaker. A resolution is therefore passed "that the eldest Councillor present shall act at all times hereafter, therefore, pro tem and ex officio as Speaker."—Jour. Leg. Coun., I: 665. See also Cumming's "Historical Note" in Col. Laws N. Y., I: 221.

The common council orders that the inhabitants of the East Ward have liberty to enlarge the market-house at Cornets Key (the Fly Market) at their own expense.—M. G. C., IV: 554. SeeSept. 6, 1699; 1729; Landmark Map Ref. Key, I: 95; Pl. 174.

Inhabitants of the East Ward are given permission by the common council to enlarge Old Slip market-house at their own expense.—M. C. C., IV: 354. See references to the Old Slip market under May 20, 1691; Aug. 24, 1728; also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 95; Pl. 174; De Vos, Market Book, 93.

The council meets for the first time in the "Council Chamber" in the City Hall.—Jour. Leg. Coun., I: 666-66. See also Oct. 19, 1756; March 27, 1759.

George Clarke receives the king's commission as lieutenant-governor.—N. Y. Col. Docs., VI: 83. The next day, he took the usual oaths of office and published his commission at the city hall.—Cal. Coun. Min., 328.

A New York newspaper item states that, on this date, "Archibald Kennedy, Esq; Collector of His Majesty's Customs and Receiver General of that province, was Married to Mrs. Schuyler, Widow of Ardent Schuyler, Esq; Deceased, a Gentlewoman of a Plentifull Fortune."—Boston Gazette, Dec. 20-27, 1735.

Daniel Horsmenden sets about from New York to Canada. Edgelord Colden: "Zenger is perfectly Silent as to Politicks. his Correspondent! I believe heartily Crop Sick. And old Morris retired to Hell-Gate to eat his own Sapan & Milk, & says the Devil may take'em all: But if his natural disposition will let him be at rest, I'm mistaken then in him."—From the original letter, with the Golden Pencils in N. A census of the city and county of New York for this year shows a population of 8,126 in the city and 3,478 in the county, an increase of 2,462 since 1731. The total for the province is 60,472, an increase of 10,148 since 1731.—N. Y. Col. Docs., V: 113. The militia of this county numbers 1,079.—Ibid., VI: 134. See 1738.
The work of enlarging Trinity Church, first proposed in the vestry in 1715, is now fully completed.—Berrin, An Hist. Sketch of Trinity Church (1847), 53.

In this year, Mr. Boston bought a farm of about 90 acres, "lying a little North of Harlem plains, and known in our day as the Samson A. Benson or Race Course Tract; its title was indisputable, but its origin bitherto an enigma to the professional conveyancer."—Riker, Hist. of Harlem (1883), 547. It is still true that, to the present time (1922), New York title searches are unable to state why this Benson property was called the "Race Course Farm." The solution may be found in a notice published on Feb. 22, 1762 (p. 4), for a horse-race to be run at the "New Course, at Harlem."

The oil mill, chocolate mill, and bolting mill of John Roosevelt, all of which are of wooden construction, situated near the Fly Market, are destroyed by fire. The neighbouring houses, "which are stately and according to the new Method of Building," are little damaged.—N. Y. Jour., Jan. 10, 1737; Boston Gaz., Jan. 24-25, 1737. The date of the fire is printed "February 22," evidently by mistake.

John Rickard, writing from New York to his brother-in-law, Henry van Rensselaer, of Albany, says: "We have here a very Cold Winter the Ise Does a Great Deal of Damage to the fortificacon and the New Wharfs that was Built Last Year, we have a Bundance of Ise here, Two days before Chrismas there is a boat Drave away from Amphib with two ships in it. No tibings of them Yet So we believe that they are Drave to Sea."—From the original MS. in the Van Rensselaer-Fort Papers, in N. Y. Pub. Library.

Apparently, it becomes impossible any longer for one man to serve effectively as jailer, and at the same time as supervisor of the watch, cryer and bell-ringer of the mayor's court, and marshal; for the common council now orders "all the Goods and Rooms in the Upper Story of the City Hall (Except the Store Room) for Debtors and the Gaol below Stairs for Criminals" to be given over to the custody of high sheriffs. Robert Crannell, Jr., who resides in the city, but continues in his other offices, is permitted still to occupy and be custodian of the room in the city hall in which he "now dwellth," as well as "the Room Opposite unto it, and the Room wherein the Fire Engines were lately Kept."—M. C. C., IV, 362. See Pl. 2-2, Vol. I. A later order (ibid., IV, 422) required Crannell "to Remove out of this City Hall on or before the first day of May next" (May 1, 1738), and James Mills, a city marshal, who has been "Viciousally Poor Prisoners in the Common Gaol," and who is subsequently termed "Keeper of the Gaol" (ibid., IV, 155), to move into Crannell's apartment with his family. This is doubled upon the express conditions of the mayor's consent that the jailer must live in the building if the prisoners are to be securely guarded. Regarding Mills' service in this capacity, see Peterson & Edwards, N. Y. as an 18th Cent. Municipality, 304.

The common council decides to "present the Freedom of this City to Daniel Horsmanden Esq' Barrister at Law, one of his Majesties Council for this Province and in consequence as a Mark of the city's esteem for him and for his good services done for this Corporation."—M. C. C., IV, 362. The seal of the corporation was not affixed to the "freedom" until Oct. 14, 1740.—Ibid., V, 6.

"Inasmuch as it appears to the Vestry that if the South Gallary be removed directly back to the Wall of the New Building pursuant to the rule made the last Vestry that the pillars must be placed in the Ile [sic] and be inconvenient it is resolved that the said Gallary be enlarged in breadth so far as to place the pillars so as not to encroach the Ile or the pew."—*Pr. "All Sorts of Garden Seeds, lately Imported from England, by the Governor's Gardiner, Enquired of the said Gardiner in the Fort, where you may be Supply'd with the said Seeds at a Reasonable Rate."—N. Y. Gaz., March 1-9, 1737.

A committee of the common council is appointed "to ascertain and Cause to be Staked out, the Publick Highway from the Corner of Mr Frederic House in Queen Street to Fresh Water," which shall "be Continued the breadth of four Rodd at the least as the same is directed by Act of General Assembly."—M. C. C., IV, 364. This is a part of the present Pearl St., which runs in a generally north-west-east direction. The act referred to is that of June 19, 1703 (p. 4).

Benjamin Peck petitions for a grant of water lots "Contiguous to his Houses in Queen Street in Monticore Ward," and the common council appoints a committee to have the ground surveyed and to agree with him upon terms.—M. C. C., IV, 364-65. The committee reported on Oct. 27, 1746, that they found thereon 90 lots 50 feet wide from high to low-water mark, with permission to build "A Poor or Wharf next Adjoining to the East Side of the Premises," 18 feet wide, from high to low-water mark, on or before March 25, 1746.—Ibid., IV, 388-89. For an account of Peck's Wharf, and also Peck's Slip, see Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 490. The wharf was shown as early as 1730, on Pl. 16, and 27-2, Vol. I, just south of Ferry St. Peck's Slip was at the foot of Ferry St.; it was ordered filled up in 1772 (M. C. C., VII, 366), but remains an open slip at least as late as 1797.—Pl. 64, Vol. I. In modern times, this slip was the easterly end of Ferry St., just as Burling Slip was the easterly section of John St.—See Pl. 174, Vol. III.

A warrant is issued to pay Edward Breuen, the public whyper, £291, his quarter-year's salary, and 15 shillings "for Setting in the Pillory and whipping through the Town at A Cart's Tail one Patrick Butler for Issuing Counterfeit Dollars sic! and whipping four Other Criminals."—M. C. C., IV, 365. When the annual salary of the public whiper was first instituted, it was £5 (see Oct. 24, 1735); it is now £10.

The governor's council orders that the mayor of New York impress men in the man-of-war "Tartar" (Capt. Norris), and appoints a committee to inquire about desertsions from the ship.—Cal. Coun. Min., 328. On March 30, the mayor wrote to Capt. Norris that he could not comply with this order, and the council decided that it had no power in the matter.—Ibid., 329.

Bradford advertises the publication of An Essay easy way to get Money and be Rich, which he sells at 6s. It describes "A Scheme by striking Twenty Thousand Pounds (Paper Money) to encourage the raising of Hemp, and the Manufacturing of Iron in the Province of New-York."—N. Y. Gaz., March 28, 1737. A contributor to the same issue of the Gazette discusses the same letter to Bradford, contending that, as the present governor has an estate in this country, he will be likely to favour the scheme if it passes the legislature because it is for the good of the country; although "other Governors have been paid for Acts to strike Paper Money."—Ibid.

In accordance with a council order of March 29 (Cal. Coun. Min., 329), Clarke issues a proclamation appointing Thursday, April 21, as a day for public rejoicing and thanksgiving for the deliverance of the king from "the late perilous storm he met with on his passage from Holland to England." He directs that divine service be performed in the forenoon in all the churches and chapels in the province.—N. Y. Gaz., April 4, 1737.

Clarke, in an address to the assembly and council, says: "We have the pleasure to see peace restored to this once divided Province."—Jour. Leg. Coun., I: 676. He undoubtedly referred to the political disorders of the preceding years. To the latter end, he adds that the part of the barracks in the fort left unfinished when the rest of the barracks were repaired (see April 7, 1731) be put in order.—Assemb. Jour., I: 666. On Sept. 2 (g. v.), repairs were not yet made (ibid., I: 705), for Clarke then reported the barracks in bad condition, and urged their completion.—Jour. Leg. Coun., I: 682. See June 13, 1738.

A committee of grievances is appointed to meet every Thursday at 5 p.m., at the house of John de Honnour (the Black Horse Tavern).—Assemb. Jour., I: 696.

Agreed to Clarke's proclamation of March 31 (g. v.), this day is observed as a day of thanksgiving in the manner required. After attending the morning service in Trinity Church, the governor returned to the fort; "he was attended with the principal magistrates and gentlemen of the city, where the Royal and Provincial healths were drunk, under the discharge of the cannon from the fort (His Majesty's regular troops being there the whole time under arms), and the evening was concluded with illuminations and the other usual demonstrations of joy."—N. Y. Gaz., April 25, 1737.

William Bradford "is now Removing to the Sign of the Bible near the Fly-Market, next Door but one to the Treasurers."—N. Y. Gaz., May 18-19, 1734. For previous notice, see Apr. 15, 1734. The "Treasurers" here referred to was Abraham de Peyster, Jr., treasurer of the province. From an examination of the real estate records, the premises into which Bradford moved were at the present 190 Pearl St. He must have rented them, as his name does not appear as a grantee.

The committee appointed to consider the matters of revenue, referred to in the addressee Lieut.-Gov. Clarke on April 5, renders a statement of accounts, one item of which is for £349 14s. 2d. for salaries, and makes the following observation: “This does not appear as a grantee.

The committee appointed Jan. 24, 1735, to engage an overseer of the poor, or to engage a grantee of the Government, by an act of the year 1728, for salaries, and makes the following observation: “This does not appear as a grantee.

A Fire-Engine that will deliver two Hogsheads of Water in a Minute, in a continual stream, is to be sold by William Lindsay, the Maker thereof. Enquire at Fighting Cocks, next Door to the Exchange Coffee-house, New York.”—N. Y. Gaz., May 9, 1737.

Peter Warren, Esq. a parcel of land bounded, according to the modern map, as follows: westerly by a line east of Eighth Ave. from 14th to 21st St. (the old Firry Row); northerly by a line north of 21st St., from Eighth Ave. to a point east of Sixth Ave. (same course as the old Abingdon Road); easterly by a line south of Sixth Ave., from 17th to 21st St.; and southerly by a line running diagonally from 17th St. and Sixth Ave. to 14th St. east of Eighth Ave., these last two courses being along the old Southampton Road.—See original deed in possession of N. Y. Hist. Soc.; see also June 18, 1778, and Aug. 7, 1778. In this conveyance, for the first time, “Greenwich House” is mentioned. See Supplemental Landmark List, “Greenwich House”; and, for the above described parcel, see the Sir Peter Warren Estate under Farm Tithes, Vol. V.

Besides the water lots granted on this day to Abraham de Peyster and others (see May 5, 1736), for the purpose of developing the East River water front, other lots are granted for the same purpose to Henry van Borsom, son of the late Egbert van Borsom, who petitioned on Nov. 15, 1714 (M. C. G., IV: 216) for such lots fronting his property on “Queen Street Wharf in Montgomery Ward between the East Side of Van Clysip Slip and the Ground of Lewis Gomes.” Van Borsom is required to make at his own expense a street 45 feet wide “to Range Equal with both sides of Water Street,” out of the 200 feet to be gained by filling in along the river front, on or before March 25, 1746. At the outward part of the 200 feet to be thus gained is to make a street 40 feet wide with a sidewalk 20 feet wide on the river side of his property, and he is to have his street “to the Street or Peer,” 14 feet 4 inches wide, along Van Clysip’s slip to the full extent of the 200 feet, etc.—M. C. G., IV: 377-79. The several grants of water lots made in the summer of 1737, all containing somewhat similar obligations, are recorded in Liber Deeds, B: 256-349.

John Peter Zenger is appointed by Lewis Morris (the newly named speaker of the assembly) to be printer of the Votes of the assembly. His first work under this appointment was to print The Speech of the Honorable George Clark, Esq., etc. of this date. Zenger’s authority is stated in the colophon at the end of this printed speech. His colophon at the end of A Journal of the Votes, etc., beginning June 15, gives Morris’s order “that no other Person do presume to Print the same.” Zenger thus superseded Bradford as official printer for the province. See also Sept. 13, 1739.

The king having appointed “Lord De La Warre” to be governor of New York and New Jersey, the secretary of state (Newcastle) expresses to the lords of trade the king’s direction that draughts of a commission and instructions be prepared. On June 22, the lords of trade wrote Clarke of the appointment, requesting him to do his utmost “to preserve the tranquility of the Province” until the arrival of “Delaware.” The required commission was ready on June 30.—N. Y. Col. Gaz., VI: 96-98. Lord Delaware did not come to New York, however. In a biographical note by O’Callaghan (ibid., VI: 163), it appears that he resigned “in September following,” on being made colonel of the first troop of life-guards. A short time after, in June 23d (it is not stated where) and signed by “George Clarke Junr.” asks him to intercede with the secretary of state in behalf of the elder Clarke, who is still lieutenant-governor; that he may succeed Delaware as governor; and the younger Clarke offers to pay Delaware 1,000 guineas “to indemnify” the latter “for any loss, or expense occasioned thereby,” this amount being “all that the Government there under its present circumstances” allows him to offer.—N. Y. Col. Gaz., VI: 163-64.

There is no evidence that the king, or the contrary, George Clinton was appointed governor, in 1741, “in the room of the Lord Delaware.”—See April 30, 1741.

A teacher’s advertisement reads: “This is to give Notice that I John Hastier Gold Smith in this City, have at my House a Frenchman, who teaches to Read and Write French, as also arithmetic in a very short Method. Whoever inclines to learn may apply to the said John Hastier at his House who will agree on reasonable Terms.

“Any Persons that desire to be Taught at Home, may be attended at reasonable Hours, provided the Time does not interfere with the Hours of his School.”—N. Y. Jour., June 27, 1737. For an earlier notice concerning the teaching of French, see July 24, 1735.

Sometimes instruction in the other romance languages was combined with that in French (see Oct. 26, 1747).

These are to inform all persons that there is a ferry settled from Ambony over to Staten Island, which is duly attended for the convenience of those that have occasion to pass and repass that way. The ferriage is fourteen pence, Jersey currency, for man and horse, and five pence for a single passenger.”—N. Y. Gaz., July 4, 1737.

The provincial council of New York, a year earlier, had granted a monopoly to a printer in this city for issuing “all such letters as shall be directed to Elizabeth-town.”—Col. Coun. Min., 326; Col. Land Papers, 223.

Henry Holt, a dancing master, advertises that on July 4 there will be “a Ball” at the house of “Mr. De Lancyey, next door to Mr. Todd.”—N. Y. Weekly Jour., July 4, 1737. The De Lancyey house stood on the southwest corner of Broad and Pearl Sts., adjoining the house of Robert Todd, on Broad St. In 1765, it became Queen’s Head Tavern. See also April 21, 1779.

Those desiring freight or passage on the sloop “Mary and Margaret” bound for Curascoa, are asked to arrange for same with the master, William Burrows, at the “Cocoa Nut-Tree, Richard Baklers on the New-Dock.”—N. Y. Gaz., July 11-18, 1737. The “Cocoa Nut-Tree” stood at Wall and Water Sts., and was situated, according to a later notice of William Burrows, “over against the Merchant’s Coffee House.”—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 25, 1745. Baker secured a five-year lease on the L. I. ferry, from March 25, 1743 (M. C. G., V: 75), but on Sept. 4 of the following year, “being sick and weak,” he devised all his estate to his wife Martha and his children, Richard and Sarah.—Abstracts of Wills, IV: 30, in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections (1885). He died before Jan. 16, 1745; his widow then surrendered the lease of the ferry to Edward Willett. Baker for a time by a public warrant, and as a tavern was opened, and he was also employed in the service of the city, was called “the Gasparee Slip” for the full extent of the 200 feet, etc.—M. C. G., IV: 377-79. The several grants of water lots made in the summer of 1737, all containing somewhat similar obligations, are recorded in Liber Deeds, B: 256-349.

On Oct. 10, the scrutiny showed that, on Oct. 8, Philipse had a majority of 21 votes over Van Horne (Boston Gazette, Oct. 10-17); and on Oct. 12, Philipse was declared elected and was sworn in (Journal, Oct. 12). Regarding the disfranchisement of the Jews to vote at this election, as ordered by the general assembly, nearly all writers on the history of New York refer to this disfranchisement as lasting thereafter throughout the colonial period. One writer, however (McAuley, The Suffrage of Jews in America in the Early Days of Colonization, in Am. in. U. of Penn. Publs, 1905, p. 215) qualifies this by saying that he could not determine whether the Jews were disfranchised after 1737, and that permission for them to vote probably rested with the local officers. Smith (Wm. Smith Papers, MS., III: 178, 179) says that, when the assembly next met, they began to vote without a poll, that the Jews were to be excluded from voting, and to say nothing about the passage of an "Act of Parliament to qualify them to vote for representatives, for which they paid an immense sum of money." In a letter to the author on this subject, Mr. Samuel Oppenhen me calls attention to the fact that there was no prohibition before 1757 against Jews voting; also that it appears they voted for other officers (A. G. G., III: 165, 167, 173) that under their letters of denization, acts of naturalization, or as natives, they were entitled to the same rights in the colonies as other persons, some of them being elected constables and tax collectors; that, under the colonial laws, freeholders and freeholders, to which classes Jews could not and did belong, were not entitled to vote, and the laws not excluding Jews (Col. Laws N. Y., III: 405, 412) that the colonial laws were considered as binding upon the authorities in the province, even though inconsistent with, and not conforming to, the laws and practice in England (Blackstone), that, under an act of parliament passed in 1710 (7 Geo. II. Chap. 7), Jews were specifically permitted to be naturalized in all the colonies, and were exempted from using the words 'upon the true faith of a Christian' in taking the oath of allegiance and abjuration, which act may have been the one referred to by Smith, inoprii, though no evidence has been found of their spending immense sums to have this be insured in the general new acts, nor is it said that various curious acts, of disfranchising the Jews, were not directed to that end, referring to elections for representatives in New York, no make mention of any exception to Jews voting; that it appears from three poll-lists of the colonial period, which have been preserved, that, in 1761, 1768, and 1769, quite a number of Jews voted at each of the elections for representatives held in those years. (See the poll-lists for these years, printed by S. Whitney Phillips, N. Y. 1880); that the act of the general assembly in 1737 in rejecting votes of the Jews was not binding upon subsequent assemblies, as each was bound by the act of its own members, and was not bound by the act of its predecessors, and that there is no record of any subsequent assembly rejecting the votes of Jews at elections; but on the contrary that Peter Kalm, who was in New York in 1748, speaks of the Jews then 'enjoying all the privileges common to the other inhabitants of this town and province' (Kalm's Travels into North America, 225-46, p. 8, under Oct. 30, 1748). cil on Sept. 29, to Oct. 17 inclusive.—Ibid., IV: 385-96. For the first deputy mayor, see June 27, 1665. Wm. Beekman served as deputy mayor for over two years (1681-3) when Mayor Dyer was in England (M. G. C., I: 87-95).

22 The common council appoints a committee to prepare a bill to be presented to the assembly "to Enable this Corporation to Repair and New Cover part of the City Hall of this City, and to defray the Ex pense of A Constables Night Watch for the Ease of the Poor of this City, and Other purposes therein mentioned."—M. G. C., IV: 399. On Nov. 4, 1737, the bill was approved for presentation to the assembly and the committee was permitted to add a clause regarding the appointment of firemen.—Ibid., IV:
401. The firemen's act passed the assembly as an independent measure on Dec. 16, 1737 (g.v.), carrying the desired provisions on this subject. See also Sept. 19, 1738.

28 That the Free Masons had by this time formed a society in New York is evidenced by the following communication published by Bradford: "Mr. Bradford: There being a new and unusual sect or society of Persons of late appeared in our native Country [England], and from thence spread into some other Kingdoms and Common Wealthis, and at last heard of in this part of America, their Principle, Practices and Design not being known nor by them published to the World, has been the reason that in Holland, France, Italy, and other Places they have been suppressed. All other Societies that have appeared in the World have published their Principles and Practices, and which may set open their Meeting-house Doors for all that will come in and see and hear them, but this Society called Free Masons, meet with their Doors shut, and a Guard at the outside to prevent any to approach near to hear or see what they are doing. And as they do not publish their Principles or Practices, so they cannot keep them secret, as may appear by the severe Oath they are obliged to take at their first admittance. An attempt is made by the "Brothers of Brookland" (and continued Dec. 6, 7, and 14) to secure through the legislature the repeal of part of the Ferry Act of Oct. 14, 1732 (g.v.), so far as it relates to Brooklyn. The bill is opposed by the assembly by James Alexander, and referred to the committee of the whole house.
A hearing on it is then ordered, to permit the city of New York to be represented in opposition to the design of the bill, which is to break this city's ferry monopoly. A postponement of the hearing Another attempt of the same sort was made nearly ten years

west corner of Wall and Water Sts.—Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 979.

8 Alexander Malcolm, the schoolmaster, in a petition to the assembly, claims that the act passed Oct. 14, 1732 (g.v.), allowing 6 Assembly, f. 730. For further actions of the assembly, see Dec. 1637, note. A bill is presented to the assembly to repeal part of the act regulating and establishing the rates of the ferry between this city and Brooklyn. It is ordered read a second time.—Assembly, f. 729–30. On the following day, it was ordered that the corporation be served with copies of the bill.—Ibid., f. 731. Fortunately for the city, the session of the assembly was almost at an end and it was voted to postpone the bill until the session of the following year.—Ibid., f. 732.

7 A provincial act, known as the "Triennial Act," is passed, for the frequent Elections of Representatives to Serve in General Assembly and for the frequent Calling and meeting of the General Assembly so elected.—Col. Laws N. Y., f. 951. For the history of this law, and the arguments in favour of it which were sent to England for the concurrence of the king's ministers, see Doc.
Hist. N. Y., vol. 1, p. 156–61. On Aug. 19, 1736, the lords of trade advised the king that this act of the province of New York was an infringement of the royal prerogative; and on Nov. 30, 1738, he vetoed it.—Ibid., iv. 164–65. The law was one of the early impulses of the people for more independent local self-government, over which they had no control.

from Selling Strong Liquors to Servants and Apprentices and from giving large Credit to others."—Col. Laws N. Y., f. 952; N. Y.

The legislature passes an act continuing an "Act to Encourage a Publick School in the City of New York." Alexander Malcolm,
"the Present publick School Master," is retained.—Col. Laws N. Y.
1765: 973–77. Another act is passed the same day "to Restrain Hawkers and Peddlars within this Colony from Selling without License.
" The schoolmaster (see Dec. 6) is given authority to issue such licenses. Every hawker, peddler, or "petty chapman" (as defined in the act) is required to pay "Alexander Malcolm or the Master of the Publick School of New York for the time being" a duty of 5s per annum and a license fee of three shillings. The schoolmaster shall keep account of the money received, and out of this revenue the law shall be paid; and to all "who pay Vendors of fruits and victuals are excepted from the operation of the act; also persons who make and sell their own wares, and tinkers, tailors, or other persons who make or mend various articles mentioned in the act.—Ibid., ii. 988–92. For Clarke's comments on these acts, see June 2, 1738.

The legislature passes an act to enable Bills of Credit for the Payment of the Debts and for the better Support of the Government of this Colony, and other Purposes therein Mentioned. "
These bills, amounting to £28,530, are to be engraved by "Charles Le Roux, or Such other Person as the major part of the Said first Signers of the Said Bills of Credit will agree with." They are to be

By Nov. 28, 1734. The treasurer was ordered to pay the engraver £34 for 28 stamps for these bills of credit (Ibid., f. 1018), but no certain evidence appears that Charles Le Roux was actually the engraver of the bill of credit. He is known to have been in the employ of the assembly that had laid a foundation for a future revenue fund
"by striking paper money, (which was much wanted)" to be let on interest.—N. Y. Col. Docs., vi. 110. On June 2, 1738, he explained the purpose of this act.—Ibid., vi. 116.

For several years the city has paid various municipal charges "for the Ease of the poor Inhabitants." It has "Defrayed the Expense of the Night Watches, Built and Erected a Convenient Tenement for a Workhouse and House of Correction Repaired the Market Houses Dock wharfe & Bridges for the benefit of Trade and Commerce and Expended other large Sums of Money in Repairs, etc. of the City Hall Goods and other Necessary and Contingent Charges whereby the Treasurer [i.e. of the said Corporation is so much exhausted that they are at present unable to make those Repairs to their City Hall which are now Absolute y Necessary." An act of the legislature is therefore passed to enable the city to raise £50 by taxation, of which £20 is to be "applied for Slumgling and New Covering the said City Hall Laying or Covering the floors of the Assembly Chamber and Court Room and other Repairs neceffary and Necessary to be made to the said City Hall."—Col. Laws N. Y., f. 1061–65.

The legislature passes "An Act for the better Extinguishing fires that may happen in the City of New York." The preamble states that "the Inhabitants of the City of New York of all Degrees have very Justly acquired the Reputaion of being Singularly and Remarkable for their Diligence and Serviceableness in Cases of fires;" and that they have supplied themselves "with To fire Engines And various Sorts of Poleis Hooks From Chains Ropes Ladders and Several Tools and Instruments for the Extinguishing of fires." Fortunately standing this, destructive fires have occurred. To prevent these in great part in the future, it is entacted that the common council of the city of New York shall Eject Nominate and appoint a Sufficient Number of Strong able Discreet honest and Sober Men willing to accept (not exceeding forty two in Number) whereof an equal Number shall be Elected or appointed out of the Six Several Wards of the said City on the South Side of fresh Water of the Inhabitants being firemen or Freeholders of the said City to have the Care management working and using the said fire Engines and the other Tools and Instruments for Extinguishing of fires that may happen between the said City Limits." The persons so appointed shall be Known the firemen of the City of New York and who with the Engineers of the same City are hereby required and Enjoyed always to be Ready at a Call both by Night as well as by Day" to use the engines, etc., to extinguish fires. The council is authorized to require the council to remove any firemen who are not "Diligent Industrious and vigilant" and appoint others to fill their places. Firemen are made exempt from service as constables, surveyors of highways, or jurors. They are not compelled to serve in the militia of the city, "Except in Cases of Invasion or other imminent Danger." The common council shall establish such rules and regulations for the government and duties of firemen, and impose reasonable fines, penalities, and forfeitures for neglect of duty. The act further requires that when a fire breaks out, "all Sheriffs under or Deputy Sheriffs High Constables Petty Constables and Marshals (upon Notice thereof) shall Immediately Repair to the place where the said fire shall happen with their Rota Staves and other Badges of their Authority:" shall aid both "in the Extinguishing the said fires and Causing People to work as also in preventing Goods being Stolen," and shall "give their utmost Assistance to help the Inhabitants to Remove and secure their said Goods."—Col. Laws N. Y.
1762: 1064–67. The number of firemen was increased on Dec. 11, 1762 (Ibid., iv. 675), and on Dec. 31, 1768 (Ibid., iv. 1028). See also "Sketch of the Origin of the Fire Department, of the City of New York, as at present organized," in Man. Comp. Conv. (1856),

A manuscript census sheet of this year shows the population of New York County to be 16,650, of whom 8,940 are whites and 1,719 blacks. The ten counties of the province show a total popula-

York.—From the original MS., filed in box labelled "New York,

In this year, a membership list of the New York militia companies was prepared, showing the personnel of the Blue Artillery Company under John Waldron, and of the several militia companies under the command of Gershom Bascom, Capt. Charles Le Roux, Capt.
Mathew Clarkson, respectively; and of the company formerly commanded by John Moore.—Doc. Hist. N. Y. (4to ed.), IV: 25. "List of officers issued for New York, with the dates of their commissions" (all in Aug., 1778) shows that Charles le Roux was made a major on Aug. 15, and Abram Vanwyck appointed captain of his company; also that John Moore was made a colonel on Aug. 17, and Guilian Verplanck appointed captain of his company, and that Josephus Cadwalader was major, and Josc de Peyster appointed captain of his company. The names of those commissioned first and second lieutenants, and ensigns, are also in the list.—Ibid., IV: 147.

Y. Jour., Feb. 6, 1778. This is probably the first reference to the Union Flag, a tavern which stood on the Post Road, about four miles outside the city. In 1757, the farm belonging to the tavern was reduced in size by the sale of a "Small Lot of about 22 Acres. —See Jan. 24, 1775.

William Cornell petitioned the common council, proposing, as he has leased the Long Island ferry, to make landings at Clark's Slip, if the persons in the neighbourhood of the landing may be allowed to repair the slip and market-house there; this is granted. —M. G. C., IV: 413-14. Clark's Slip was at the foot of Wall St., and the market-house was the Meal Market, which had been erected in 1769. How long Cornell operated this ferry does not appear, but in 1778 (Jan. 29) the common council ordered a dock and stairs to be built near the Meal Market, "for the Convenience of the ferry Boat which is to Land there." —Ibid., V: 217.

13 In accordance with the act of the assembly for levying a tax on slaves, the assessors of the Bowery Division of the Out Ward draw up a list showing that in that division there are 24 persons owning about 43 slaves between the ages of 14 and 50. At the rate of one shilling for each slave, a total of $212 is collected. —From a MS. entitled "Head or Title of the Tax Roll," with the Vander Water MSS., in box labelled "New York, 1790-1796," in N. Y. Hist. Soc.

William Cornell, the new lessee of the ferry between New York and "the Island of Nassau," complains in a petition to the common council that the house at Clark's Slip is "much out of Repair and some Conveniences wanting" for the better landing and departure of the ferry-boats. He therefore seeks permission for the inhabitants who live near by "to mend and Enlarge the Said Market House and make such Conveniences in the Said Slip as Shall be Necessary and Convenient for the better Landing and Preserving the Boats in Landing and unloading there." Granted.—M. G. C., IV: 415-14. For "Clark's Slip or Meal Market Ferry," see Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 942. See also Jan. 19, 1748.

The slop, "Mary and Margaret," William Burrows, master, is about to sail for Jamaica. Arrangements for freight or passage may be made with him at any time after the 1st of April at the "Sign of the Ship-agree-able, Dock and the Meal-Market."—N. Y. Gaz., March 24, 1748. The Meal Market was at Wall and Pearl Sts., a popular tavern locality for many years.

The "House at the old Bowling Green took Fire and in a few Minutes was reduced to Ashes. The Wind at that Time was high and the Air full of dust from any Accident whatever which had lived in it with great Difficulty saved him self and his Wife, being rather to eager to save some Goods which they could not effect. To avoid the Flames they were obliged to leap out of the Windows which were Story high."—N. Y. Jour., Apr. 5, 1758. The Old Bowling Ground was a garden on the North Rive river, with the Common and Warren Sts. (see 1770), and was, with the house, the property of Trinity Church, being on a part of the Church Farm. An investigation was therefore made by a committee from the church, who decided, on May 7, that the fire was accidental. On July 11, Miller was given permission to turn back his lease, upon the payment of $10. He was to relinquish any pretensions he might have to the Bowling Green, and vacate the church's farm by March 25, 1759. —See Min. Mrs. (1854). Miller, who had been gardener of the place, removed to a house "next Door to Samuel Heath, near the Fort," where he offered for sale "fresh seeds, snuff, pigtail and cut tobacco." —N. Y. Jour., March 26, 1759. A year later he was again offering "At the Sign of the Thistle and Crown Near Spring Garden Green." —Ibid., March 10, 1760. The Old Bowling Green, with the lane leading to it (see Apr. 11, 1722), is shown on the MS. Map of 1753 (Pl. 30, Vol. I). See also Pls. 26 and 27, Vol. I. On Feb. 13, 1752 (q. v.), Adam van Denberg leased the Bowling Green for 21 years, but evidently retained it for only a few years, as it was again leased, on Feb. 1, 1759 (q. v.), to John Marshall, and called Mount Pleasant. On Nov. 10 of that year, the militia company of grenadiers met here to celebrate the king's birthday, when they roasted an ox and ate and drank royally. —N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 12, 1759. Marshall undertook to open his house for breakfast every morning during the season, and solicited the patronage of ladies and gentleman (ibid., Nov. 17, 1759); but his venture was evidently unsuccessful, for on Oct. 27, 1762 (q. v.), the house and gardens were again offered for sale. John Elkin succeeded Marshall and, in addition to breakfast, offered an afternoon tea with "Fyes and Tarts," as well as meat and Madeira wine. He called the place Spring Gardens. —See Jan. 6, 1763. In 1764, Samuel Frances, most famous of all New York innkeepers, succeeded Elkin and renamed the place Vauxhall, but the following year the premises were occupied by Major James, whose attitude towards the enforcement of the Stamp Act brought upon him the vengeance of the mob, on Nov. 7, 1765 (q. v.), when his house furnishings, books, liquors, and other belongings were burned and destroyed. On June 16, 1768 (q. v.), Frances, who had been conducting a tavern at the Sign of the Queen's Head in Philadelphia, advertised the re-opening of Vauxhall which, "since his Absence from this City," had been "occupied by Major James." In 1774, Erasmus Williams succeeded Frances and once more renamed the place Mount Pleasant. By 1802, this site, so long a bowling green, garden, tavern, and place of public resort, had been turned over to the proprietors of the Cupola Iron Furnace.—N. Y. Even Post, Aug. 17, 1802.

The common council orders that an acre of land in the Bowery Division of the Out Ward, on the west side of "Inclaybergh," be leased to Arnout Webber for a brick-yard.—M. G. C., IV: 419. This was probably in the vicinity of the present Fifth or Sixth Ave., and 37th St.—See "Inclenberg" in Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 946.

An advertisement, offering for sale a farm of 44 acres at Turtle Bay, "within four Miles of this City," describes the place as having "a very good Grist Mill and two Boiling Mills, a large Quantity of New fencing stuff . . . an old Orchard that makes Thirty Barrels of Syder, and fifty young Trees planted last Spring, all grafted of the best Kind of Fruits." It formerly belonged to Theophilus Eseworth (sic).—N. Y. Jour., April 10, 1758.

"The Petition of the Inhabitants of the West Ward praying leave to Erect a Market House in the Broadway fronting to Crown Street," which was Chanmpneys council on April 7 and referred to a committee, is now read again. It states that the inhabitants of this ward, and a great number of those in the North Ward, live a long distance from any of the public market-houses, which makes it Very inconvenient and Occupies A great loss of time for the poorer parts of the town to get their provisions from there. This is one of the causes why their Maltration of the for family Provisions, and as there are great quantities of Provisions frequently brought from Hackensack, Tappan and Other parts up the North River as well as from the Out Ward," the petitioners now seek this improvement, not only for their own convenience but for that of the country people, and are willing to build the market-house at their own expense. The petitioners ask to build "A Market House of forty and two foot in length and twenty five foot in breadth in the Publick Street of the Broadway in the Middle of the same fronting the Street in which his Honour the Chief Justice lives and Opposite to Crown Street." They also ask that the proposed market be called "the Broadway Market House," and that it be "Appointed A Publick Market place for all sorts of Corn, Grain and Meal that may be brought down Hudsons River for Sale and to be sold in Publick Market within this City, and at no Other Market place within this City Except the Publick Meal Market." The committee reports that they "have Viewed the Said Broadway fronting to Crown Street, and find it a Very convenient place for Erecting A Publick Market House." The report is approved, and the petition granted, "So far as to the Erecting of the Said Market House in the Broadway Opposite to Crown Street, and for Other purposes." (For further petition and order, see July 16, 1742.) A committee is appointed to "ascertain and stake Out the place for Erecting the Said Market House," and it is ordered that "unless the Said Market House be Erected and finished within three Months" from this date, at the petitioners' expense, this grant and order are "to be Void and of None Effect."—M. C. C., IV: 431-44.

Crown Street was the present Liberty Street (see Landmark map ref. Key, III: 997), and at one time was called Oswego Street.—See July 2, 1766, and N. T. Gen., Nov. 5, 1759. The Broadway Market was evidently built within the time specified, for the next reference to it is in the May 7, 1757, a law for regulating the public markets was passed, including this one.—Ibid., V: 42. It was enlarged in 1754 (q.v., Dec. 4). About 1754, and later, it was known as the Oswego Market (see De Voe's Map Book, 271-73). The Broadway or Oswego Market was taken down in 1771 (q.v., Aug. 15), having been declared a nuisance. In 1773, at or near this location, another market was built having the name of the Oswego Market. See under March 31, 1772.

Trinity vestry appropriates a pew in the south gallery for the captains and officers of the king's ships of war. It is ordered that the chancel be wainscotted with mahogany.—Trin. (M.S.).

Inhabitants of the Dock and South Ward petition the common council for permission to build "A Publick Market House at our own Cost & Charge in Broad Street between the Watch House and the present dwelling of John Lashly," and a committee is appointed to "ascertain and stake out the Place." The market-house is "to Remain A Publick Market House for the Public use and Benefit of this Corporation."

C. C., IV: 426-27. The watch-house was the one "In Broad Street before the City Hall," erected in 1734 (q.v., July 9). De Voe fixes the location of the Lashly house as at the corner of Flattenharrack St. (Exchange Pl., running west of Broad St.). He is of the opinion that no market-house was ever erected here, as he finds no notice of it in the laws, advertisements, etc.—Market Book, 260. There was, however, a court order, in 1746, directing the sheriff to take down a market in Broad St., near the watch-house.—Min. Court of Gen. Quarter Sessions (M.S.).

Custom-house officers are required by the governor's council to examine certain ships for goods forbidden to be exported. Depositions are taken of the masters of other ships, including the Georgia packet-ship and others of the same name, as well as the vessel bringing the goods forbidden to be shipped, and the vessel carrying Bostonians to St. Augustine.—Cal. Coun. Min., 331. The examination of shipmasters was continued on May 8. Sloop owned by Mr. Walton were allowed to be cleared under bond on May 18.—Ibid.

The common council appoints a committee to lay out a lot for the public use on the side of Broadway "between Markway Street (Commonly Called Pettycoat Lane) and Beaver Street."—M. C. C., IV: 428. From this it appears that the name Petticoat Lane (see pl. 25, Vol. I) was still in common use, although it had yielded place to Markfield Street on all the maps (Pls. 26, 27, 27-4, Vol. I). See Landmark Map ref. Key, III: 1005.

The assessment is made of the real and personal property in the Bowery Division of the Out Ward for raising a tax of $225,126, which includes the allowance of ninemonths for the collectors and sixpence for the city treasurer on every pound, in accordance with an act of the Assembly. The tax-rate is 9½pence on every £5. The list, signed by the assessors, John and Philip Minthorne, contains the names of 81 persons together with their individual assessments.

From a MS. entitled "Head of the Tax Roll," among miscellaneous MSS. in the Vander Water Papers, in the N. Y. Hist. Soc. "To be Sold. A Choice Collection of Law Books, consisting of Reports of all the Chief and Eminent Lawyers, the Statutes at large, Domar's Civil Law Institutes, etc., with a number of other Books upon various subjects, being above 300 Volumes, as may be seen by a Catalogue of the same. Whoever inclines to Purchase the same, or any part of them may apply to John Roberts near the long Bridge in New York."—May 21, 1758. For that time, a library or collection of books numbering above 300 volumes was unusual.

Clarke writes to the lords of trade concerning two acts of the assembly,—"one for the further encouragement of a publick school in the City of New York for the teachin Latin and Greek and the mathematicks," and the other for supporting the schoolmaster, through a fund derived from peddler's licence: "Being confident that publick schools for the education of youth will always find countenance from your Lordsips I will lay the two last Bills before you without any further remarks in their favour; I wish the Assembly had made the reward greater than it is like to be, from the last of these Bills, that money was apply'd before, to the like use but fell short of the sum intended, nor could the school master get any redress tho' he petition'd for it or got some of his friends to move the house in his behalf; it is not likely it will bring in more now however the master having at present no other way of living is obliged to submit."—N. Y. Col. Docs., VI: 115, 118. See Dec. 16, 1757, and under June 2.

Answering enquiries of the board of trade, Clarke states, among other things, that: "In the town of New York is an old fort of very little defence cannon we have, but the carriages are good for little, we have ball but no powder. . . . There is a battery which commands the mouth of the harbour whereon may be mounted 30 cannon this is new having been built but three years but it wants finishing."—N. Y. Col. Docs., VII: 120. See also ibid., 148, 153, and under Sept. 5.

George Clarke, Jr., son of the lieutenant-governor, is appointed secretary of the province, and Frederick Morris is appointed his deputy, the latter being sworn in on June 17. Clarke's office was a sinecure, from which an income was derived with little or no employment on Clarke's part. It was also one of a remarkably long series of positions held by his father and himself, for a period of over 70 years from the time of the elder Clarke's arrival, July 1737 (q.v.), and a similar position to the secretarieship.

The father was appointed clerk of the province from March 24, 1705 (ibid., 202); member of the council May 30, 1716 (ibid., 261); deputy auditor-general July 2, 1718 (ibid., 267); one of the commissioners for running the Connecticut boundary-line Oct. 28, 1728 (ibid., 268); elected to act as president of the council March 10, 1716 (ibid., 255); and appointed lieutenant-governor Oct. 30, 1716 (ibid., 328), holding this office until the arrival of his successor, George Clinton, Sept. 22, 1743 (q.v.).

By royal mandate the younger Clarke was made a member of the provincial council Oct. 28, 1758 (ibid., 332), and was twice reappointed to this office, on Oct. 11, 1753 (ibid., 706), and March 22, 1766 (ibid., 515). He held the office of provincial secretary, either concurrently or ad interim, in person or by deputy, nearly to the Revolution. We find, July 29, 1745, a commission was given to John Catherwood to be secretary during Clarke's absence (ibid., 249), and that, in the following year, July 3, Secretary Clarke (depute Goldthorpe Banvett) be his deputy. He was also transferred to Banyer by Catherwood (ibid., 354). On Dec. 1, 1772 (q.v.), Gov. Tryon described an astonishing number of offices, then held by the younger Clarke, in a report to the home government, but evidently without the result of disturbing Clarke in the office of secretary; for the first report we have this to show, that as late as April 16, 1774 (ibid., 501), Clarke appointed Samuel Bayard his deputy to the office he had held so long.
The council makes an examination of shipmasters concerning small-pox in the West Indies.—Cal. Coun. Min., 332. On June 24, 1738, it ordered that vessels from there and South Carolina be quarantined near "Bedlars" (Bellows's Island).—Ibid., 332. See June 28.

The city is quarantined, through fear that small-pox and other malignant fevers may be introduced from foreign vessels, and other places, where they have occasioned great mortality. Bellows's Island is made the first quarantine station. The mayor procured on June 27 the order of council which required "that one of the Pilots for this Port be Constantly in the vicinity of this Island, and make his report to the mayor regarding the health of the persons on board such vessels, that measures may be taken to prevent "any Infectious Pestilential or Malignant Disease or Distemper" being brought into the city. The city marshals and constables are also given special orders to make the council more effective.—V. M. C. IV, 429-30. See April 6, 1732.

The committee for repairing the city hall (see Oct. 28, 1737) having represented to the common council "that the Cupola of the Said City Hall is so Very Rotten that it Cannot be Repaired and that the same is dangerous to be kept Standing any longer for fear of its falling," and "this Court" having viewed it and taken the advice of workmen, it is resolved that it be taken down and that the committee "Employ Workmen and purchase Materials for the taking down the same and for Erecting a New Cupola in the Room thereof of the like dimensions with all Convenient Expediency."—M. M. C. IV, 453.

There is advertised to be sold on Sept. 2 at public venue, at "the Exchange Market House, near the Long Bridge," the plantation of the late Thomas Coddington, of 38 acres, described as: "All in the Bounds of Harlem, in the Out-Ward of the City of New York. The said Plantation is Pleasantly situated, about five Miles out of Town, on the South East Side of the Island, fronting the River, and is in breadth along the Waterside, Forty Rods. There are great plenty of Lobsters and Fish near the House."—N. Y. Gaz., July 24, 1738. This market-house was called "Dowager" Market, or "Dowager Market, near the Bridge," where "David Grim, on his map [Pl. 31-2, Vol. I], marks it down with the name I have adopted for it." The Bakewell View of 1746 (Pl. 32, Vol. I), he says, "shows this market-house, directly at the foot of Broad Street, but no reference is given to it. A mistake, however, is made, by noticing the 'Meal or Wall Street Market-House' as the Exchange, (No. 15) The 'Old Exchange' in Broad Street was not built, or commenced, until the year 1732; and the intention, no doubt, was to represent this old 'Broad Street Market' as Lyne did, when he called it the 'Exchange,' on his map. De Voe adds, 'I find no further reference to it; and as it had stood more than fifty years, I am inclined to think that about the period of 1736 it was taken down.'—Market Book, 77-85. Cf. Pl. 27, Vol. I. See also July 9, 1691; Feb. 18, 1692; and Landmark Map Rel. Key, III, 938.

The present fronting the church and the two wardens of Trinity Church, is appointed to inquire into the claims of the heirs of the Rev. Everard Bogardus to part of the Church Farm.—Trin. Min. (MS.). This action was taken more than 70 years after the sale of the farm to Loveace.—Diary, Hist. of Church, I, 236. It marks the first claim set up by the heirs of Anneke Jans to Trinity Church Farm. The author of this paper is by no means the first person acquainted with the title, and, pressed for over a century, see "Title, Parish Rights and Property of Trinity Church" in Trin. Church Pamphlets (1873); Bogardus vs. Trinity, Sandford's Chancery Rep., IV, 695; 5 ibid., 615.

The common council orders that Abel Hardenbrooke, the storekeeper, "cause Audio, Dinner, to be placed round the Hill or summit whereon the Powder House of this City is Erected."—M. M. C. IV, 455. See July 6, 1728.

Trinity vestry orders "That a Subscription paper for an Organ for the Church be prepared and laid before the Vestry at their next meeting."—Trin. Min. (MS.).—See June 1, 1739.

The committee for carrying on the building of the church is instructed to have Colossus under his arms set up in the most convenient place.—Trin. Min. (MS.).—See July 29, 1738.

The lieutenant-governour, assembly, and council join in an address of condolence to the king on the death of the queen.—Jour. Leg. Coun., I, 717. See Nov. 20, 1737.

Clarke, in a message to the assembly, recommends the finishing of the "New Fortifications, that they may in all Events be in a Condition of Defence," and the making over of "that Part of the Barracks in the Fort, which were left unrepaird, when the others were repaired."—Assemb. Jour., I, 735. He made the same recommendation to the council.—Jour. Leg. Coun., I, 717. See Sept. 2, 1737; Aug. 20, 1739.

To fulfil the requirements of the act of the legislature of Dec. 16, 1737 (p. c.), entitled "An Act for the better Extinguishing of Fire that may happen in the City of New York," the common council nominates and appoints 30 men as firemen, and orders "that their Names be Register'd and Enter'd with the Clerk of the Peace." Their names and occupations are entered in the Minutes of the Common Council under this date. They are described as "All Strong, Able Discreet honest and sober Men and are Freemen of Freeholders of New York; and have "Voluntarily Offered themselves and are willing to accept of the said Office of Firemen of the said City for the Consideration of the terms mentioned in the said Act."—M. M. C. IV, 456-38. To this entry in the Minutes is added "A Law for Regulating and Declaring the Duty of Firemen in the City of New York."—Ibid., IV, 458-59. There is a copy of this law, printed by Bradford, in the N. Y. Pub. Library.

A digest of these rules and regulations was published in the Mon. Com. Coun. (1860), 69.

As the lieutenant-governour did not appoint a mayor on Sept. 29, as usual, Mayor Richard continued in office, as permitted by the charter in such cases; he now administers the oaths to the new aldermen M. C. and other officials.—Ibid., IV, 446-65.

Samson Benson receives from the town of Harlem the privilege "to place a mill, with a dam, on the Mill Camp, wherever it may suit him best." This right is to revert to the town should the mill cease running for two years. He chose to erect his mill on the south of the Mill (Benson's) Creek, south of the present 105th St., near its intersection with Third Ave. "It was scarcely finished when he died, in 1740."—Riker, Hist. of Harlem, 591. On May 30, 1753, Benjamin Benson, son of Samson, obtained a deed for the Mill Camp, which was situated north of the Mill Creek. "During the revolution the old mill on the south side of the creek was burnt down by an act of Congress, and, after the fire, he built a new one [a frame building three storeys high] on the Mill Camp Farm, as well as a substantial stone dwelling."—Riker, op. cit., 591. The site of this mill was in the line of 108th St., and partly in the block between Second and Third Aves. It was erected about 1791 (Riker, 489), and demolished in 1874, when the Harlem Canal was begun; but the dwelling stood until 1865 (ibid., 591). See also Harlem Records, 709.

The Treaty of Vienna, between France and Austria, is signed. NV.818

A published notice states that the meetings of the "Ancient and Honourable Society of Free and Accepted Masons" will hereafter be held at the "Montgomery's Arms Tavern."—N. Y. Jour., Jan. 24, 1738(9). On Sept. 24, another meeting was announced to be held at the same tavern. Its location is not recorded.—N. Y. Gaz. Sept. 17-24, 1739.

"The Brethren of the Ancient and Honourable Society of Free & Accepted Masons, are desired to take Notice, That the Lodge, for the future, will be held at the Montgomery Arms Tavern, on the first and third Wednesdays in every Month. By Order of the Brethren."—August 22, 1739. The secretary was Charles Wood.—Ibid., Sept. 24, 1739.

At Mr. Hall's long room, there is to be performed on this day "A new Pantomime Entertainment in Grotesque Characters called the Adventures of Harlequin and Scaramouch or the Spanish Trick." To which will be added an Optick, wherein will be represented in Perspective several of the most noted Cities and remarkable Places both of Europe and America. With a new Prologue.
and Epilogue address'd to the Town, The Epilogue to be spoken Feb. 6 by Master Holt, etc. The advertisement is signed "Vivat rex."

12 N. Y. Jour., Feb. 5, 1739. This "Optick" is the earliest example found, in New York City's annals, of what may be considered a precursor of the moving-picture show of today. A similar optical contrivance, for showing foreign views and other pictures, was in use in this city ten years later.—See Dec. 5, 1748, where it is more fully described. See also the essay on "Pep-show Prints," by F. Weitenkampf, in N. Y. Pub. Library Bulletin, XXV: 359 (June, 1921).

13 To be sold by John Miller formerly Gardner of the Old Bowling Green, several sorts of garden seeds, of the best sorts, and fresh at reasonable Rates and all Sorts of Smuff, Pigtail and cut Tobaco at his House, next Door to Samuel Heaths, near the Fort in New York.—N. Y. Jour., Feb. 19, 1739.

14 A second performance of "The Adventure of Harlequin and Scaramouch, or The Spaniard Trick'd," was advertised to take place on the evening of this day at Mr. Holt's long room.—N. Y. Gaz., Feb. 15-20, 1739. Holt was a dancing teacher. On July 4, 1737 (q.v.), he advertised a hall at the house of Mr. De Lancey, on Broad and Pearl Sts, and it is possible that the "Long Room" used for this pantomime performance was there, although no other reference has been found to its conversion into an inn until 1762.

This being the day appointed for electing representatives for the city and county of New York to the general assembly, six candidates are "put up in the Field," where "usually" they choose them, and "Vole being demanded," they adjourn to the city hall, where the poll is continued until after midnight. Adolph Philipse, Col. John Moore, David Clarkson, and William Roome are chosen. James Alexander and Cornelius van Horn are defeated by a close vote, the total number cast being 2,552.—N. Y. Gaz., March 13-20, 1739.

15 Opposite "the New Bowling Green" is the address given for a venue sale at a private residence in Broadway.—N. Y. Gaz., March 13-20, 1739. For the origin of the bowling Green, see April 6, 1733.

16 At this period, the general assembly meets in "the Assembly Chamber in the City-Hall." The "Council Chamber in the City-Hall" is another apartment in the same building (Assemb. Jour., I: 749); and still another room used for legislative purposes is the "Council Room in Fort-George." (Ibid., I: 751). See also Oct. 26, 1736.

17 Clarke advises both the assembly and the council that one part of the barricades in Fort George will tumble down if not speedily repaired.—Assemb. Jour., I: 750; Jour. Leg. Coun., I: 726. See Sept. 5, 1738. For further comments by Clarke regarding repairs to the fort, see April 13-24, 1741.

18 James Robinson informs the vestry of Trinity that, pursuant to an order made at the last meeting, he has paid Richard Nicholls, deputy receiver-general, the quit-rents due to "his Majesty" for the church's farm and garden, and following the receipt for them on the back of the grant from Lord Cornbury: "New York 12th March 1738/9. Then received of Mr. Joseph Robinson one of the Church wardens of Trinity Church in the City of New York Sixty Bushels of wheat being the Rent Reserved on a Lease from his late Majesty King William to the Rector and Inhabitants of the City of New York in Communion of the Church of England as by Law Established for a farm and Garden with their appertains then called the Kings farm and Garden, which said Sixty Bushels of wheat is in full of the rent reserved from the Commencement of the said Lease which was on the first of August 1680 to the Vacating the said Lease by Act of General Assembly passed in the year 1699. Also Received from the said Mr. Joseph Robinson four pounds Nineteen Shillings and three pence proclamation money the full of the Rent due out of the aforesaid farm Garden and appertains to the said Rector and Inhabitants by Letters patent under the great Seal of the province of New York bearing date the 21st Nov 1705 which said Sum is in full of the Quit rent reserved (being three Shillings 3d Annum) to the 22nd of December Last I say received by me Richard Nicholls Dep't Rent Gzl. —Trin. Min. (MS.)."

As one-third of the members of the assembly have not had the small-pox, "scrouple to attend the Service of the House in this City," the house adjourns to meet at the home of Captain Warren at Greenwich the next day.—Assemb. Jour., I: 751. See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 1001, 1011.

19 Trinity vestry, agreeable to its resolutions of May 19, 1738, and April 3, 1739 (see Trin. Min., MS.), applies to the common council for permission to enlarge the churchyard by taking into it, on its south side, the lane or alley between the churchyard and the church's garden, which the city has permitted for some time to be used as a passageway. The vestry proposes to make instead an other alley, at least 20 feet wide, on the south part of the church's garden, adjoining the Lutheran Church, to be called Robinson Street; and "the Post and Rail fence," which is on the street fronting the churchyard, will be extended along the north side of the proposed new lane. The common council grants the petition, with the understanding that the new alley "shall Remain as a Publick Lane or Alley forever and that the same shall be Recorded as such."—M. C. C., IV: 456. The vestry had given its committee power the day before "to agree with the members of the Lutheran Church about taking in some part of their Land for the Conveniency of a Street or Lane on the South part of the Churches Garden fronting the Broadway and giving them other Lands in Lieu thereof."—Trin. Min. (MS.). Robinson St., thus laid out, was later called Auckmatty St., and then Rector St. Long after the name of Robinson St. was abandoned for this street, it was applied to the street that was later was named Park Place,—Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 1008.

In recognition of advances of "A large sum of Money," without interest, which Christopher Bancker made out of "his own Moneys" to be used in repairing the city hall and ferry-house, the common council presents him with the "Tudcor and Blackck" which was used in Repairing the City Hall."—M. C. C., IV: 454. This date probably marks the completion of these repairs. See Oct. 28, 1737.

13 The assembly having, on April 2, transferred its sessions from the city hall to Greenwich, orders the clerk to prepare an account of the expense of moving, etc.—Assemb. Jour., I: 754. The change was due to the prevalence of small-pox in the city. On April 14, the house returned to the assembly-room of the city hall, although the small-pox was "still very rife."—Ibid., I: 755.

18 On April 18, Clarke notified the Duke of Newcastle that, "the Small Pox being in Town and one third part of the Assembly (nearly 27 members) not having had it, he had given them leave" to sit at Greenwich, a small village about two or three miles out of town, but there too their fears of that distemper continuing," he was obliged, on their request, "to give them leave to adjourn to the fourth Tuesday in August,"—N. Y. Col. Docs., IV: 149. The assembly did not convene before Aug. 28.—Assemb. Jour., I: 755.

At that time the disease was still raging, see Aug. 30.

"On Board the Ship Charming Polly, Capt. Edward Bayley Master, now riding at Anchor in the Harbour of New York, there are several Palatine and Switzer servants to be Farmers and some are Traders-men. To be agreed for on board the Ship, and taken off from thence by the Buyer."—N. Y. Gaz., April 16-21, 1739. The modern construction put upon this announcement and others like it might readily be that white people were sold into slavery, but this was not the case. See June 19 and Nov. 14, 1746; June 9, 1746; Aug. 19, 1751; Jan. 3, 1774.

15 The city grants to Henry Bogert a water lot extending from the May rear of his lot on the Hudson River (between the present Morris Street and Battery Place) to a line 200 feet beyond low-water mark, with the obligation that whenever three or more owners of lots of land and water lots in the neighborhood shall agree to make wharves and begin filling up their water lots, he shall clear out and fill up as far as his neighbours do and make a street 40 feet in width near high-water mark.—M. C. C., IV: 458-50; Liber City Grants, B: 355. Several other grants of water lots in the neighborhood were made on similar terms within a few years. —Ibid., Apr. 5, 1777. The other street, 40 feet wide, is Greenwich St. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 1001, 1011.

A committee of the common council is appointed "to make an additional Building at the Poorhouse of this City for a Receptacle and Conveniency of Such unhappy Poor as are, or shall be, affected with any Malignant or Obnoxious disease."—M. C. C., IV: 459.
The common council ordered that it be surveyed north of Laypensard's in 1758.—M. C. (M.), III: 375. It was ceded by Trinity Church from Brantont (Spring) St. northward to the north boundary of the church property, 1808 (ibid., XVIII: 37-39), and in the same year ordered opened between Chathroo and Christopher St. (ibid., XIX: 215, 222); further order for opening to Christopher St. (ibid., XIX: 186, 187) continued through the land of Richard Amos, 1810 (ibid., XXI: 350); regulated between Hammersley and Christopher Sts., 1818 (ibid., XXXIV: 197). In part, Greenwich Street was the old "Road to Greenwich." The early maps to be consulted are Marsechel's, 1755 (PI. 34, Vol. I); and Ratson's Survey of 1760.

Clarke, in an address to the legislature, refers to the decay of ship-building, "which for many years has been much regretted but little attempted to be retrieved." One cause of it, he says, "is not in the power of the merchant or Builder at present to remove nor do I see any other way whereby a Remedy may be applied than by your aid. If the Demands of the Builder be higher than in the neighbouring Provinces, the Merchant will not, cannot build here without injuring himself. If the Builder undertake the work at the same Rate that is given in the neighbouring provinces, he will"..."—Jour. Leg. Coun., I: 732-3.

Clarke, in a message to the Assembly, says: "The provision for finishing the battery at New York before it is too late to 'be put in such a Condition as may secure you from the Attempts of an Enemy.'—Assemb. Jour., I: 756. On Sept. 4, in reply to a request of the house for his estimate of the expense of repairing and finishing the battery, he sent them an estimate of £1,800.—Ibid., I: 758. See Sept. 19.

Clarke writes to the Lords of Trade: "The orders I have received to Grant letters of marque and reprisal against the Spaniards, and the English new[black] tens of the month of June have possessed the people of this Province with apprehensions of a sudden war with Spain, with whom they fear France will take part against us."—N. T. Col. Doc., VI: 147. See Aug. 16.

The members of the assembly who have not had small-pox, being "still scrupulous to attend the Service of this House, in the City of New-York, because it is not yet free from that Distemper," suggest that they meet at the "House of Mr. Harmanus Rutgers, near the Fresh-Water." This is agreed to.—Assemb. Jour., I: 756. For the use of the same house during a previous epidemic, see Aug. 25, 1731.

The commissioners appointed to erect a battery in the city are ordered to lay before the house an account of the £4000 "received by them for that work."—Assemb. Jour., I: 757. On Sept. 7, they reported that they had expended, "for Materials and Workmanship for the said Battery, and making 16 Carriages, building a Store House and other Materials," £5,915:162, and still had in their hands £36:310.—Ibid., I: 758.

Rutgers petitions for payment for his services as printer to the colony from May 14, 1735, to Oct. 28, 1758.—Assemb. Jour., I: 759. On Oct. 17, he was allowed £1210.—Ibid., I: 760.

Rutgers petitions for a grant of a piece of ground 50 feet wide "at the place where his Drain is now laid into Hudsons River Abore said as far as Low Water Mark for the Making and Erecting thereof and therein such sufficient fences, Works Engines or Machines as may be proper and useful for securing & preserving the Said Drain." This grant is made in fee simple at a yearly rent of six shillings.—M. C. C., IV: 467-68. See April 6, 1733.

Clarke, with the aid of a cartographer, estimates the expense of repairing the barricades in Fort George at £500.—Ibid., I: 759-60. An appropriation of £425, to rebuild barricades at Fort George, was made on Sept. 21, 1744 (p. 76).

A committee of the assembly passes a resolution allowing £1,500 for repairing the battery at Coupey in the town of New Rochelle in a Parget of Defensive Works. This sum includes £860:310, still in the hands of the commissioners who erected the battery.—Assemb. Jour., I: 760, 761, 765. See Sept. 1, 1739; and July 6, 1745.

Again the Militia Act is revised. For the last revision, see July 24, 1714. The military exercises are now less frequent, being "at least once in every three months, the other occasion Shall require." The Troopers for the city and county of Albany "shall be clad in

THE death of William Sharps occurs. He had held the office of town clerk and clerk of the peace of New York City "for about 46 Years" (see Oct. 14, 1692), "to the Universal Satisfaction of all." He was buried Nov. 6, 1715, Yr. Nov. 12. The common council expressed concern at the loss of one who had served them "with great Integrity."—M. C. C., IV: 479. For an inventory of the records turned over to his successor, see Nov. 21.

Col. Morris moves "that as the Road from New-York to King's Bridge is now so narrow, that carriage and Chaises, cannot pass or repass without Danger" as well as inconvenient for other Carriages; he might have Leave to bring in a Bill, at the Beginning of the next Meeting of this House, for extending the Rutts of widening the said Road."—Assem. Jour., I: 775. Regarding the repair of this road, see Nov. 7, 1741.

Nov. 7, 1740

In this year, in pursuance of the act of Dec. 13, Geo. II, Chap. 7, a book was opened for entering the names, etc., of naturalized citizens of the province of New York. The original volume is now in the custody of the N. Y. Pub. Library.

An alphabetical list of the citizens of New York admitted as freemen between 1683 and 1740, and a chronological list of the same admitted between 1710 and 1718, was published by Valentine in his History of the City of N. Y. (1853), 366-70, 735-93.

About this time, the house of Leonard Lipsenard was erected in what is now the bedroom of! Hudson St., on the south line of Desbrosses St.—Rec. Title Guarantee & Trust Co.; cf. Sandford's Chancery Rep., IV: 411. A tablet has been placed on the building 598 Hudson St. to mark this site. Col. Lispenard's mansion was surrounded with ample grounds, and it was here that he received General Washington when the commander-in-chief reached New York on his way from Philadelphia to Cambridge, June 25, 1775 (g.5., 176 P. Am. State Hist. Press). The house was removed about 1835—Rec. Title Guarantee & Trust Co. See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 930; Pl. 475, Vol. III.

In this year, Sir Peter Warren built a country seat at what is now the intersection of Charles and Montgomery Sts., in the district known as Greenwich (see Nov. 17, 1729). The grounds before the house sloped down to the Hudson River. In 1745 (see Dec. 17, 1745), when the small-pox raged in the city, the assembly accepted Sir Peter's tender of his country-seat for their deliberations. This structure (later known as the Van Nest Mansion) was torn down in 1865—N.Y. Erie Post, Aug. 31, 1861. See also a history of this property in "Miscellaneous MSS." in the N. Y. Hist. Soc. under heading, "Van Nest Mansion"; Mon. Com. Comm. (1842), 528; Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 935; and "A Map of the Lands belonging to the Estate of the Late Sir Peter Warren lying at Greenwich in the Outward or the City of New York" (1773), Addenda Pl. 5-b, Vol. III, with description on pp. 86-67.

In or about this year, Lady Warren established at Greenwich a school for the neighbourhood children. See also an annotation made upon a map by Gerard Bantzer, surveyor, compiled for Col. Lispenard and surveyed in 1744, in box Greenwich in the Outward of the City of New York Library. On the modern map, the site of this school is the bend of Eighth Ave. near the corner of Jane St. It is shown on Pl. 45, Vol. I; and on a map by Bantzer, now in the author's collection, dated Aug., 1773, which is reproduced as A. Pl. 5-b, Vol. III.

The dry-goods advertised for sale at this period (see also Nov. 18, 1745) include men's velvet, black padooy (peau-de-soie) and white padooy, green alpaca, taffey, satinet, silk tabby, shagreen, widows' crapes, brocaded latticines, striped saxesets, silk cambets, percale, tabby, bambera, taffett, hairelin, cherly derry, blue English damask, Frenche double alama, blue satin, goergain (goergain), Persian, blue tabby, India brocade, flowered Spanish silk, black figured everlasting, plis, rushall, callimine, India dainty, and coarse muslin, also loop petticoats of three, five, and six rows, pink and white manusa, and scarlet stockings. From "Hist. of the Domestic Affairs of the Inhabitants of N. Y." in Mon. Com. Comm. (1848), 508.

Valentine illustrates the details of the business establishment of a leading merchant, about 1746, by describing that of Adolphus Phillips, the son of William of that name, and probably the fortunate of the Dutch burghers. Adolphus was an importer dealing in every variety of goods. "His store was of the best class of buildings in use for that purpose, and was three stories in height, exclusive of the 'garret' or space under the steep roof, which afforded considerable room. This part of the building being divided into similar compartments, was used for storage purposes for grain and other bulky goods. The next or third story was principally used for the sale of light dry goods, hardware, and as a general variety store, similar to the country store of the present day (1838). The second story was occupied by the same diversity of goods, but in bulkier quantity, and was the proper wholesale department for country merchants. On this floor also was the great chest, in which the money, (there were then no banks of deposit,) jewelry, silverware, pearls, and wampum, were kept for safety. On the next or first floor were kept the heavy articles (excluding dry goods,) appropriate to a general mercantile establishment. In the cellar or iron, iron work, etc. Attached to the premises was a store-house in the yard, and in the rear of the lot on New street was also a small store-house." Valentine describes, also, the Phileps manor-house at Tryonry. Ibid., (1838), 519. See also Abstracts of Wills in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections (1804), 571, 571.

For an enumeration of the household furniture and negroes of Rip van Dam, at this time, see ibid., 520-21.

The tavern of John de Honcure, known as the Black Horse Tavern (see Oct. 9, 1727), which was situated in William St., south of Esopus, was the scene of one of the last of those public meetings of interest to which the stock house of Nicholas Ray was advertised as being "opposite to the late Black Horse Tavern."—N. Y. Jour., Jan. 19, 1740.

A public venience is announced for this day "at the House of

Mr. Schurlock, at the Spring Guarden," of several lots of land.—Mar. N. Y. Gaz., Feb. 26-March 4, 1740. Spring Garden was first mentioned in the Minutes of the common council on Nov. 1, 1712 (p. v). It lay on the east side of Broadway in the block between Ann and Fulton Sts., and was advertised in May at Ann St. Its exact location may be seen by a reference to Pls. 26, 27, and 30, Vol. I. The old house or tavern, of which Schurlock seems to have been proprietor at this time, stood in the northwest corner of the garden, directly opposite the later St. Paul's Church. According to Bayles (Old Taverns of N. Y., 165), it was a "dwelling-house and barn," and was not mortgaged. For several years the Spring Garden was a familiar landmark in property locations. North of Spring Garden were the Commons. About the year 1755, the garden was laid out into lots, and John Dowers acquired lot No. 4, which was at the south-east corner of the garden on Fair (Fulton) St. Lot No. 1, upon which the old Spring Garden house stood, later came into the possession of Christopher Stymeats, and was the subject of litigation in 1774, when Carey Ludlow reported that the value of the property did not exceed £430, while mortgages, principal, and interest amounted to £876. It was therefore ordered that the property be sold. It was described as consisting of a "dwelling-house and a lot of ground fronting the Broadway, opposite St. Paul's Church, usually known by the name of the Spring Garden."—N. Y. Merc., May, 1747. When Christopher Stymeats mortgaged this property, in 1761, he bound it on the north (west) by the house and barn, and on the south by the lot of occupation and use of Isaac De Peyster.—Liber Mortgages, I: 300. Although Spring Garden was so often referred to in the early records of the city, only two proprietors of the old tavern, besides Scoular, are known. George Rozer apparently had the house in 1765 (see Raymond's Gen. Map, May 16), and Frederick Bevin in 1774 (see July 7, 1774). It is quite true that Dowers had a tavern on his corner lot on Fulton St. and Broadway, but he did not occupy the old Spring Garden House, as stated by Bayles. In 1769, according to Du Simiere, the old building was still in existence, but "had not been improved as a tavern for many years."—See description Pl. 12: 257. Maier and Forest, in their map published in the city in 1754 (Pl. 34, Vol. I) reliance can be placed, shows no buildings in Spring Garden except the old tavern in the north-west corner.

Ordered that the Rector and Church Wardens be pleased to purchase such number of Lewis's Exposition of the Church Cathecism lately reprinted by William Bradford in this City as they shall think proper and that the said Rector and Church Wardens do from time to time Deliver them to the Reverend Mr Charlton the Societys Chethist in order to be him given and distributed to such Carecums as he shall think proper.—Trin. Min. (1774).

Petitions from two parties, Jacques Cortelyou (2d) et al. and Thomas Stillwell, are received by the council asking for the ferry rights from Long Island and Staten Island. On April 12, Cortelyou's petition met with opposition, and, on April 24, it was withdrawn with the understanding that a petition not later than the succeeding Tuesday would be again brought forward. Galbraith, or Galbraith, Stillwell was granted the sole ferry right from Yellow Hook, Kings County, to the mouth of the Kill van Kull on Staten Island.—Ibid., 536. See, further, June 18, 1753.

The king issues a proclamation at St. James's to encourage trade with America. Referring to an act (Statutes at Large, VI: 373) passed for that purpose by "this present Sessions of Parliament," he points out that he and his successors are empowered by it, "from time to time, during the Continuance of the present or any future War," to grant charters or commissions to enable persons to join in Expeditions by Sea or Land, and to sail to, and in any of the Seas in or out of British Possessions, and to hold in the name any Ships, Goods . . . Settlements, Factories . . . Forts, Castles, and Fortifications" belonging to the enemy. Full rights of title to such property are assured to the persons taking them. The proclamation is made to inform the soldiers and sailors of the objects intended for those engaged in the prosecution of the War."—From original broadside in the N. Y. Pub. Library. The war was declared on Oct. 19, 1729 (p. 6).

The common council orders that "Aldeerman Rooote have the fence Up between the Garden of the poorhouse and the Ground of Edw Harris, and that he Agree with the Said John Harris A bout Such part of the fence As is Now Standing."—M. G. C. G., IV: 483.

THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

A committee of the common council, appointed on April 10, Sept. recommends that the board grant Peter Rutgers the land and soil" in the rear of his lot on the Hudson River on condition that Rutgers pay a yearly quit-rent of 8 shillings and that he "Leave a street of 15 foot at the North Side thereof to the West Side of a Street, fronting his Lot and a Street of forty foot wide at the Extent of the Water Lot to be granted him when he Shall See Cause to Wharf So far into the North River and as he Wharf out Shall Leave a Street or Residuce [sic] of twelve foot So long till he Comes to the Extent of his Lot."—

M. G. IV. 494, 499.

The common council appoints a committee to inspect the "Water Engines," and to have the "Boxes" or any other parts of them repaired.—M. G. VI. 4. This probably means the fire-engines, which from time to time were inspected for needed repairs. Of ibid., IV. 168, 703. Trinity vestry expresses the opinion to the committee in charge Oct. that the organ-pipes should "he guided with gold leaf."—

A petition of several inhabitants of the Out Ward is presented to the assembly, setting forth "That the King's Road or Highway, is laid out from Adrian Hogland's House, and no further, so that those who live . . . thereabouts, are obliged to go about eleven Miles road in going to Harlem; whereas, if the King's Road . . ., he laid out from Adrian Hogland's House, to the King's Road . . . at Harlem, it will be no more than three Quarters of a Mile," and asking that it be so laid out accordingly. A hearing is ordered.—Assembl. Jour., I. 785. On Oct. 15, a number of inhabitants and freeholders of the Harlem Division of the Out Ward presented to the assembly a petition urging the rejection of the request of Harman van de Water, Adrian Hogland, and others for laying out a common road from Hoogland's house to the highway that runs to Harlem. Such action, it was claimed, would be prejudicial to the former, and render their property very uncertain.—Ibid., I. 788.

At this time the Bloomingdale road stopped at the run of water just north of present 115th St. (see June 19, 1705). Evidently this petition was for a road to be laid out across the land of Hoogland's neighbours in a north-easterly direction, to intersect the Kingsbridge Road. This cross-road was never made.—See Pl. 86, Vol. III. Topographically, it would have been practically impossible to make such a road, as the high bluff on which Columbia University and many other notable buildings now stand, and whose eastern side comprises the slopes of Morningside Park, would have had to be surmounted.

The first transports carrying troops sail from Sandy Hook for the rendezvous in Virginia, for the expedition against the Spanish in the West Indies (see April 15, 1740). Other transports followed on the 19th.—N. Y. Col. Docs., Vol. 496. Alexander Malcolm presents a petition to the assembly claiming that, although he was granted an annual allowance of £200 as master of the public school for five years, from a fund of peddler's licences, there remains unpaid to him at the expiration of the five years the sum of £13120.—Assembl. Jour., I. 788. See Dec. 16, 1773. The Assembly took immediate action, and on Nov. 19 act was passed holding this amount "A just debt due from this colony," and ordering its payment.—Col. Laws N.Y., III. 86-87. Rev. George Whitefield, on his return to New York, records in his Journal: "Met with a bitter pamphlet wrote against me by some of the Presbyterian Persuasion. . . . Preached in the Morning at Mr. P.—'s Meeting-House" (Rev. Ebenezer Pemberton, pastor First Presbyterian Church, on Wall St.).

On Sat., Nov. 1, he wrote: "Preached twice as Yesterday to very crowded Audiences." Sunday, Nov. 2. Of the evening meeting on this day he wrote: "after I had begun, the Spirit of the Lord gave me Freedom, till at length it came down like a mighty rushing Wind, and carried all before it. Immediately the whole Congregation was alarmed. Shrieking, Crying, Weeping and Wailing were to be heard in every Corner. Men and Women came up to them for Fear, and many falling into the Arms of their Friends, . . ." Monday, Nov. 3. He preached again to larger congregations, "but no crying out. Near 1101. Currency were collected for the Orphans."
The common council allows John Roome £13:17 for work performed by him on the city hall and the stocks.—M. C. G., V: 8.

(1868), 689, 702; ibid. (1868), 891; ibid. (1869), 852; also Peterson & Edwards, N. Y. as in 18th Cent. Municipalities, 154-50.

Dec. Zeoger writes: "Our Streets are fill'd, with confused Heaps of 22 Snow, so that the Lovers of Sled-riding can scarcely use them without Danger, the whole Mass fell in one Nights Time, and now the Cold is so excessive, that while I am Writing in a Warm Room by a good Fire Side the Ink Freezes in the Pen."—N. Y. Jour., Dec. 22, 1745.

27. In advertisements of dwellings-houses for sale or rent at this period, the number of firesplaces is often considered worthy of special mention, as showing the size and completeness of the residence. For example, the house "over against the Weigh-house next Door to the Custom House," occupied by William Inglish, is described as containing ten fireplaces.—N. Y. Jour., Dec. 22, 1745.

Abraham Van Horne's will of this date recites, among other legacies: "I leave to my son David the dwelling house and ground where I now live, also my store house and ground adjoining, both situate on the south side of Wall street .... I leave to my son Samuel the building and baking house and ground, both situate on the north side of Wall street ...." He makes a legacy also, conditionally, for the children of his "late daughter Mary, late wife of Governor William Burnet."—Abstracts of Wills, III: 340. The lot left to David Van Horne was that now (1942) occupied in part by the National City Bank building (formerly the custom-house), and it also included (according to Pelletreau) Hanover St. south of Wall St. Pelletreau further states: "Governor William Burnet had three children by his second marriage, but one of them seems to have died before the will was made."—Ibid. For the original grant of this ground, see May 25, 1668.

In this year, the Church of the St. Eras (see July 8, 1704) was thoroughly repaired.—Wittmeyer's Introduction to Vol. I of Collections of the Huguenot Soc. of Am., XXXIII. It stood on the site of the present 18-22 Pine St. (Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 923), and was described in 1757 as "of Stone, nearly a Square [it] is 75 feet long, and 50 feet wide, plain both within and without," "fenced from the Street," and "having a Steeple and a Bell."—Smith, Hist. of the Province of N. Y. (1737), 193; Disway, The Earliest Churches of N. Y., 51. See further, Aug. 24, 1751. This church can be seen on Pl. 28, Vol. I. A water-colour sketch, signed by A. J. Davis, and dated 1874, is in the author's collection.

In the archives of the Reformed Dutch Church of New York, there is a list of the ministers, elders, and deacons of this church from 1714 to 1814. It is printed in Disway, The Earliest Churches of N. Y., 51.

"The winter which ushered in this year (ever since called the hard winter), was distinguished by the sharpest frost, and the greatest quantity of snow, within the memory of the oldest inhabitant. The weather was intensely severe from the middle of November to the latter end of March. The snow, by repeated falls, was at length six feet above the surface of the earth; and the Hudson river passable upon the ice, as low as the capital, within thirty miles from the open sea: cattle of all sorts perished by the want of fodder; and the deer of the forests were either starved or taken, being unable to browse or escape through the depths of the snow. The poor, both in town and country, were distressed for food and fuel; and, by the scarcity of these articles, the prices of almost every thing else was raised, and though since reduced, yet never so low as in the preceding year."—Smith, Hist. of N. Y., III: 63; see also Conun. Gen. (New London), May 15, 1799.

Jan. 28. The house of the Rev. Dr. Josiah Lefferts, is on fire and burnt down, leaving the town of Lefferts in ruins. During this month, 300 guns are taken from the royalists, and sent to the Royal Navy, for the defense of the Federals. Jan. 17 is printed in Disway, The Earliest Churches of N. Y., 51.

Another magazine of similar name made its first appearance in Boston in Sept., 1745 (p. 19).

The provincial council receives a letter from Admiral Vernon regarding Spanish and French naval movements; and the council orders various commissions to be issued to various officers that no provision be made for the public defense. The contributors to charitable relief having agreed that their fund of £200 shall be placed in the hands of Abraham Leiferts and Abraham Van Wyke, "to be employ'd by them from Time to Time, to such Poor House Keepers, Widows, and other necessitous People as may stand most in Need of Relief, during the Severity of this Season." Leiferts and Van Wyke propose to be at the house of Nicholas Roy (or Ray), "opposite to the late Black Horse Tavern," three days a week—Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays—from nine to twelve a.m., "as well for the Ease of those who are in real Want, as for the more regular Distribution of the Money for the End it has been given." In this connection, the following notice is published, which serves to explain further the methods of this early instance of charity organization and relief:

"First, That there will be Provided at the said House, a Stock of suitable Provisions and Cloathings, and that all those whom shall stand in Real Need of Relief, may make Application for it at the Place and Time above mentioned.

"2dly, That all those who are so Good as to make Enquiry about the Circumstances of the necessitous People, in their respective Wards, are desired to give Information thereof to the Gentlemen above named, and to assist them with their Advice, in making proper Distributions.

"3dly, That if upon such Enquiry and Information, it appears that any Credible Families are in real Want, and scruple to make it known, Care may be taken to have their Necessities Supply'd by private Hands.

"And lastly, That all those who, out of their Alliances, are disposed to send to the House above mentioned, any Provisions, Cloathing or Covering, it shall be kindly Received, and duly applied To Feed the Hungry & Cloath the Naked."—N. Y. Jour., Jan. 12 and 19, 1745. See also incidents of distress mentioned in ibid., Jan. 5.

"The Beaux Stratagem" is to be presented "at the new Theatre in the Broad Way."—N. Y. Jour., Feb. 2, 1745. This theatre was on the site of parts of 12 and 12. Broadway. It is shown on the manuscript "Plan of the City of New York In the Year 1755."—See Pl. 50, and its description, p. 263, Vol. I.

The house of the Rev. Dr. Josiah Lefferts, is knocked down, and buildings accountable for. 1742

The Negro Plot of 1741.—Journal of the Proceedings in the Detection of the Conspiracy formed by Some White People, in Conjunction with Negro and other Slaves (1744), 1. On the following day, the house of the Negro named Caesar, at 699-702—Cat. Wyke, is robbed this night of linen and other goods, silver coins, etc., to the value of over £60. Daniel Horsemann regards this as the first event in the history of the so-called Negro Plot of 1741.—Journal of the Proceedings in the Detection of the Conspiracy formed by Some White People, etc., 1744. The Negro Plot is a subject of much interest and importance, as indicating the frame of mind and attitude of the people, that it has been thought worth while to trace with some particularity the development and details connected with an episode which must always remain a blot upon the history of New York. On the 15th of March, another negro, is also arrested and examined, but he denies knowing anything of the robbery.

Hugshon's house is searched several times but none of the missing articles is discovered.—Hornswoman's Jour., 2-3.

Gary Burton, a General of Revolutionary fame, confesses that he knows something about the robbery at Hogg's (see Feb. 28), but he is afraid to reveal it, for fear "she be murdered or poisoned by the Hunghous and the Negroes." She is lodged, for safety, in the city hall with the under-sherriff. Hunghous is thereupon examined again, and he finally admits that he knows where some of the stolen articles are hidden; he delivers these to Alderman Bancier. —Horsmanden's /Jour., 3. 3

4. Matthew Burton makes a deposition, declaring: (1) that the negro Caesar (who goes under the name of John Quin) came to Hughson's house at about two o'clock on the morning of March 1, and later gave her two pieces of silver and some linen, and her master a lump of silver; (2) that, soon after, Mr. Mills came to inquire for John Quin and said he had found Negro linen, silver, and other articles; and (3) that as soon as Mills had gone, her mistress hid the linen, first in the garret, then under the stairs, and finally gave it to Mrs. Hughson's mother. Hughson admits that he received the linen and silver, but he refuses to sign a confession. He and his wife are admitted to bail and recognizances are entered into for their appearance in the supreme court.—Horsmanden's /Jour., 3—4.

White, a plumber, is mending a leak in a gutter between the governor's house and the chapel (in the fort), when a fire breaks out of the roof of the former building.—Horsmanden's /Jour., op. cit., 5 and 6. As the structure is covered with cedar shingles, and full of old floors and wainscoot, it is past saving before an engine can be brought up.—/N. Y. Col. Doc., VI: 156—57; 158—56. With a strong wind blowing from the south-east, the secretary's office, the barracks, and the chapel are also consumed in less than two hours. The fire burns rags, garrets, and carriages are not damaged. Part of the governor's furniture, and most of the books and records, are saved by the activity of the magistrates and inhabitants.—/N. Y. /Jour., March 23, 1741. For the connection of this fire with the so-called "Negro Plot," see /N. Y. Col. Doc., VI: 155—56; 157, 156, 157—58, 201—3; /Jour. Leg. Coun., I: 794. Regarding the rebuilding of these structures, see Sept. 17, 1741. See also "Governor's House in the Fort," in Landmark Map. Rel. Key, III: 974; "Secretary's Office (first site)," in ibid., III: 975; and "Church in the Fort," in ibid., III: 974. The recorder, Daniel Horsmanden, having conveyed to the common council a representation from the lieutenant-governour and council "that in the Dreadful Calamity which happened yesterday the Secretary's Office was Entirely Destroyed," and the lieutenant-governour having "Determined" that this board would assign the Common Council Room for the Keeping the Publick Books and Records of the Province. During the present Exigency, Until another proper place Can be Provided by the Legislature," the board expresses its approval and appoints the recorder to inform the lieutenant-governour.—/M. C. C., V: 16; /Col. Coun. Min., 337.

The common council orders 100 new leather fire-buckets with the words "City of N. York" painted on them.—/M. C. C., V: 16—17. As many more were ordered during the ensuing summer.—/Ibid., Vol. III: 54. The common council grants Johannes Myer £58 "for Repairing the High ways between this and Kings bridge in the Late Great Snow."—/M. C. C., V: 16.

Fire starts in the house of Captain Warren, "near the Long Bridge at the S. West. End of the Town." The fire-engines prevent it from doing much damage. It is supposed at this time that the accidental firing of a chimney was the cause.—Horsmanden's /Jour., op. cit., 6.

Apr. 1741.

1. The store-house of Mr. Van Zandt, near the river, at the east end of the city, is destroyed by fire. It is said to be due to hay being built up by a man smoking a pipe. —Horsmanden's /Jour., op. cit., 6. Up to this time, the several fires were generally believed to have been of accidental origin, but soon hereafter these fires began to be attributed to the negroes.

2. Two separate fires occur, but are quickly extinguished.—Horsmanden's /Jour., op. cit., 6.

3. Early this morning, it is discovered that some live coals had been put under a haystack near the stables of one John Murray. The coals had gone out of "themselves," otherwise the nearby dwellings would have been greatly damaged. "The five several fires in March 18th to 5th April, it is true, happened in so short a time, succeeding each other; and the Attempt made of a Sixth on Mr. Murray's Haystack; it was natural for People of any Reflection, to conclude that the Fire was set on Purpose, by a Combination of Villains; and therefore occasioned great Un- easiness to everyone that had Thought" (about it).—Horsmanden's /Jour., 6—7.

Two more fires break out in the city, and suspicion centre on the negro population. The magistrates meet at the city hall to examine the negroes, and, while they are in session, two other fires start. A negro is seen coming out of one of the houses, and this raises the alarm that the negroes are rising. "Many People had such terrible Apprehensions upon this Occasion, and indeed there was Cause sufficient, that several Negroes... that were met in the Streets, after the Alarm of their rising, were hurried away to Goal."—Horsmanden's /Jour., 7—8.

The lieutenant-governour orders that a military watch be kept this evening and this was continued all summer.—Ibid., 8.

Hughson and his wife are committed to goal, "being charged as Accessories to divers Felonies and Misdemeanours."—Horsmanden's /Jour., 8.

The governor orders the militia to aid the magistrates in a general search. This was made on April 13, but no stolen goods were found or suspicious strangers reported.—Horsmanden's /Jour., op. cit., 10.

In speaking of the numerous fires in the city, the recorder declares at a meeting of the common council that "every one that reflected on the Circumstances attending them, the Fre- quency of them, and the Causes being yet undiscovered; must necessarily conclude that they were produced by some Negroes by some Villious Confederacy of Latent Enemies amongst Us." He therefore moves that the common council offer rewards for the discovery of persons implicated. The board resolves upon the following rewards: £100 to any white person who gives information leading to the arrest of the incendiaries; £25 and his freedom to any negro who gives information, and £25 to his mas- ter; £45 to any free Negro or Indian who reveals the culprits. It is also decided to make a general search of the city for stolen goods. The governor orders the militia to aid in this search.—Horsmanden's /Jour., 11.

Pursuant to the order of April 11 (p. 1), a search of the city is made, but no stolen goods are discovered, nor suspicious strangers found. Two negroes, having things "thought improper for, and unbecoming the Condition of Slaves," are arrested.—Horsmanden's /Jour., 10.

15. The governor's council, at the request of the common council of the city, orders that a proclamation be issued offering a reward for the discovery of incendiaries.—/Col. Coun. Min., 337. See April 17.

Clarke, addressing a joint session of the legislature "at his present Residence," states that for many years the people never questioned "the King's royal Prerogative and undoubted Right, to appoint Officers for the Management of his Revenue;" but, "whether grown wanton by Prosperity, or whatever else it was, they began to deviate from the Example of the Parliament, de- manding to have the first fires in the Province, and the Management of the Money to be given, not for the Support of Government, but for extraordinary Uses; and being indulged in this, they soon grew in their Demands, and insisted upon hav- ing the Revenue likewise put into his [the treasurer]'s Hands, it being constantly before managed by the King's Officer, his Majesty's Receiver General, who had, and still has, a Salary allowed him for that Service, which is paid out of his Majesty's Quit-Rents. This prosperous Beginning encouraged them to go on further, ..." After the "Expiration of the Revenue, in 1769," he explains, they "refused to support the Government unless they had the particular Appointment of the Officers Sal- aries, thereby making themselves Judges what Officers were proper, what not." They left the auditor-general without any salary; this was an office established in the time of Charles II designed to have inspection and control of the king's accounts. The salary of this officer had been established soon after the revolution of 1689—91, and constantly paid. The people of the province, in abounding this salary, which they had been paying to a British appointee, took upon themselves the dependence of officers whom they themselves provided, "for Men are naturally Servants of those who pay them." This, in effect, Clarke asserts, "subverted the Constitution," in that they assumed to themselves "one undoubted and essential Branch of his Majesty's royal Preroga- tive." Now, he says, only a return to "a just Sense of their Duty to his Majesty," and "the Example of that august Body, the Apr. Parliament," should be their rule of action. "This, and only this," he adds, "will remove, as to this Province, a jealousy which for these years has obtained in England, that the Plantations are not without Thoughts of throwing off their Dependence on the Crown of England." (The italics are so in the printed journal of the assembly, published by Gaine in 1764.) He therefore urges that this assembly give the king such revenue as will enable him "to pay the Officers, and Servants, whereby they will be reclaimed to their proper Dependence." This, he says, "the flourishing Condition of the Province" will amply admit of; as "the great Increase of Trade, and People," is well known to be vastly more rapid than it was 40 years ago.

Moreover, that, as there is "great Cause to apprehend a speedy Rupture with France," New York City be better fortified, "by erecting Batteries in proper Places upon some of the Wharfs facing the Harbour, others upon the Side of Hudson's River adjoining to the Town, and one at Red-Hook, upon Long-Island, to prevent the Enemy from landing upon Nottulan- Island." He explains the appropriate application of the stores of war, including ordnance ordered by the king to be sent, which will govern the size of the batteries to be built. Revenue must be supplied to meet the expense of placing these stores, mounting guns, etc., when they arrive. He states that the militia be put under better regulation; and that an agent in England for this province be provided.

He refers to "the late fatal Fire that laid in Ashes the House, Chapel, Barracks and Secretary's Office, in his Majesty's Fort in this Town, accidentally occasioned by sending a Gutter on the Roof of the House, adjoining to the Chapel," and remarks that the assembly necessary it is that they be "speedily re-built," adding: "The frequent Fires which have happened in this Town, since that at the Fort, giving Room, from many Circumstances to believe, they have been kindled by Design, call for some effectual Law to restrain the too great License that the Negroes are allowed, or that they take Fire in their own Houses, in cabinets, Inns, and at Times and in Places that give them Opportunities for Cabaling." The great losses sustained, when goods have been removed to preserve them from the flames, require "some Method to secure them for the future from being stolen." He recommends that "A Night Guard of the Militia, will be very proper to be constantly kept on Foot, especially in Time of War," bound to their duty by proper penalties. Provision should be made, also, "for billeting the Men, who may be ordered to this Town for its Defence, whenever Occasion requires."—Assemb. Jour., I: 792-93.

At the request of the common council (M. C. C., V: 17), lieutenant-governor Clarke issues a proclamation offering a reward for the discovery of any person or persons "lately Concern'd in Sabotaging the House of Mr. Hogg, in the new Place, now called Red-Hook." The Negroes who have been removed have been "in the following Manner:" a copy of it appears in the New-York Journal, Apr. 20, 1741.

The supreme court begins its session for the trial of the negroes arrested in connection with the fires in the city.—Horsmanden's Jour., 11-12. See also David Grim's manuscript notes of his recollections of the "Negro Plot" (in package marked "1739-1749") in box of MSS. labelled "New-York, 1700-1760," in N. Y. Hist. Soc.; and the numerous indictments in Col. Hist. MSS. Eng., 572-68.

Clarke informs the lords of trade that, since the fire in the fort, much consternation has been caused by the recurrence of fires, sometimes as many as four in a day, and some apparently kindled by design. He has endeavoured to discover the perpetrators by offering a reward and otherwise. Several negroes have been impri- soned on suspicion, but no proof has yet been found against them. He keeps a night guard of militia who constantly patrol.—N. Y. Col. Docs., IV: 186.

Mary Burton testifies before the grand jury that her master, John Hook, and his wife, Margaret, and Peggy, together with a number of negroes, conspired to burn the city and murder the inhabitants. The accused persons were forthwith arrested and tried.—Horsmanden's Jour., op. cit., 13, 14.

The judges of the supreme court decide that, though there is "(largely) of a Plot hatched in New York, for slave Revolts in the different Colonies, for all Manner of Offences," as this seems to be a "Scene of Villany in which White People were confederated with them, and most probably were the first Movers and Seducers of the Slaves," it requires "great Secrecy, as well as the utmost Diligence, in the Conduct of the English concerning it." Margaret Kerry is ex- amined and urged to confess all she knows, but she denies everything.—Horsmanden's Jour., 14.

An address from the assembly to Lieut.-Gov. Clarke states that there was "lately erected at a vast Expense, a noble Battery, mounted with upwards of fifty great Guns, at the Entrance of the Harbour of this City" (see Jul. 16 and Oct. 20, 1775). This state- ment is made to defend the house from the charge of neglecting the matter of fortifications. The address continues: "To what is mentioned of a Jealousy in England, that the Plantations are not without thought of throwing off their Dependence on the Crown of England; we shall say the less, as your Honour declares you hope and believe no Man in this Colony, has such Intention; and we dare vouch that not one single Person in it has any such Thought or Desire."—Assemb. Jour., I: 797-98.

A committee of the common council disposers of the lease of the city docks and slips at public auction to Bartolomew Skawes for £500, payable quarterly. He is also to remove 600 cwt. loads of mud from the dock.—M. C. C., V: 19.

A committee of the whole house resolves that, for the security of the city, several other batteries and platforms ought to be erected, and a special committee is appointed to consider where these should be placed.—Assemb. Jour., I: 200-1.

The king having appointed George Clinton governor of New York "in the room of the Lord Delaware" (see June 26, 1737), the lords of trade are required to prepare drafts of a commission and instructions.—N. Y. Col. Docs., VII: 185. The commission was submitted to the king on May 29, and he signed it, and returned a copy of it appears in N. Y. Col. Docs., VII: 188-94. The instructions, submitted to the justices on Aug. 25, were in the usual form; excepting that an additional salary was allowed for providing a house for Clinton, the former house having been destroyed by fire; excepting also that mention of New Jersey was omitted (as that was now a dis- tinct government), and excepting two or three other minor changes.

Two negroes, Caesar and Prince, are convicted of robbing May the house of Robert Hogg (see Feb. 26)—Horsmanden's Jour., 18. On May 11, they were executed, the body of Caesar being hung in chains.—Ibid., 20. David Grim stated in 1813 that the gibbet was erected "at the south-east corner of the old Powder- house, in Magazine Street, (now Pearl street)." He added that the place where they were chained to a stake and turned to death was "in the valley between Windmill hill and Post-baker's hill, (now August street), about the centre of said street, and midway of (now) Pearl and Parley streets."—Description of Pl. 32-a, I: 279. For "Augusta" (Augustus), and "Parley" (Barley) Streets, see Pl. 64, Vol. I. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, Vol. III.

Arthur Price, a servant, deposes that Margaret Kerry confessed to him that the Hughesons, Prince, Caesar, and Coffee (another negro) were in the conspiracy to set the town on fire, and that she declared that if Caesar and Prince were hanged the other negroes would berevenged.—Horsmanden's Jour., 17.

Hughson, his wife, and Margaret Kerry are found guilty of receiving stolen goods.—Horsmanden's Jour., op. cit., 18. The next day, Margaret Kerry made a confession, accusing John Romme.—Ibid., 20.

The common council orders that "all the Pidgeon holes under the City hall shall be forthwith taken down and Removed."—M. C. C., V: 20. The printed transcription of this record has been verified by an examination of the original manuscript volume of MSS. "Pigeon holes" in the city hall are nowhere else found mentioned in descriptions or records of the period.

Caesar and Prince (see May 1) are sentenced to be hanged.—Horsmanden's Jour., 20-21.

Lieut.-Gov. Clarke issues a warrant to Lewis Morris, Jr., to grant letters of marque and reprisal to George Cunningham, on the petition of George Moore and Henry Cruger.—Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 543.
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1741 Under examination, Margaret Kerry declares that she heard John Romme urge the negroes to "burn the Houses of them that have the most Money, and kill them all, as the Negroes would have done their Masters and Mistresses formerly" (in 1712) and to "burn the Fort first, and afterwards the City; and then to steal and rob, and carry away all the Money and Goods they could procure." Romme's wife confesses that the negroes used to frequent her house, but denies all knowledge of the conspiracy—Horsmanden's Jour., 4:1-24. See May 18.

11 The preface to a pamphlet by David Cheeseman states that "the Gibbet on which the Body of the Negro Caesar is to be hanged in Chains, be fixed on the Island near the Powder-House." Prince and Caesar are executed on this day—Horsmanden's Jour., 25.

12 Arthur Price deposes that Coffee (a negro) has confessed his implication in the conspiracy and revealed also that Quack (another negro) was in the plot. Coffee declares there were two parties, the "Long-Bridge Boys" and the "Smith's-Fly Boys."—Horsmanden's Jour., 26-27.

18 John Romme (see May 9) having been arrested at Brunswick, N. J., is brought to the city and committed to jail. He denies all connection with the conspiracy—Horsmanden's Jour., 30.

25 A committee of the assembly votes the following appropriations: a sum not exceeding 600 to erect, "on or near the Flat Rock behind Fort George, a proper and sufficient Battery, for about twenty great Guns, leaving between it and the River, a sufficient Space for a great number of vessels" (rather than placing two blockhouses at Copshey Battery, "one at the East Side, and the other at the West Side of the present Store House already erected there;"") for filling up with sand or other material "the Space of ten Feet more of the inside of the Battery on Copshey Rocks," the floor of which is to be repaired, and, on the outside of which a beam or scantling is to be fixed "to prevent the Guns from recolling beyond the said Floor."—Assemb. Jour., 1: 803.

28 Quack and Coffee are arraigned on two indictments, one "for a Conspiracy to burn the Town, and murder the Habitants," the other for two actual burnings—Horsmanden's Jour., 36. See May 29.

30 Quack and Coffee are found guilty on both indictments (see May 28), and sentenced to be burned at the stake—Horsmanden's Jour., 36-45. See May 30.

June 4 Hughson, his wife and daughter, and Margaret Kerry, are convicted of every of the forfeiture and death of the negro Caesar—the "old negro"—Horsmanden's Jour., 59; and N. Y. Jour., 8, 1741. All except the daughter were hanged on June 12. Their execution is described as follows: He [Hughson] stood up in the Cart all the Way, looking round about him as if expecting to be rescued; as when he had been wounded in the Arm, and was sent for by the Judges. At the Gallows his Wife stood like a Steely Trunk, with the Rope about her Neck tied up to the Tree; she said not a Word, and had scarce any visible Motion. Peggy seemed much less resigned than the other two, or rather unwilling to encounter Death: She was going to say something, but the Old Woman, who hung next to her, gave her a Shove with her Hand, as it was said by some, so Peggy was silent. But they all died, having protested their Innocence to the last, touching the Conspiracy."—Horsmanden's Jour., 72.

For a new report of their part in the conspiracy, see the N. Y. Jour., June 15, 1741. See also De Voe, A True and Authentic History, etc., cited above, April 10, May 25. See also "Whitehall Battery," in Landmark Map Ref. Key, II, 946.

Six negroes, Jack, Cook, Robin, another Caesar, another Coffee, and Jamaica, are found guilty of conspiracy. The first five are sentenced to be burned at the stake; Jamaica is ordered to be hanged—Horsmanden's Jour., 61-65.

The assembly allows fifty, and to finish the battery of 55 great guns on Copshey Rocks—N. Y. Jour., June 8, 1741. See also April 8, May 25. See also "Whitehall Battery," in Landmark Map Ref. Key, II, 946.

The negro, Jack (see June 8), convicted of connection with the conspiracy, is pardoned.—Col. Coun. Min., 338. Cook, Robin, Caesar, and Coffee, sentenced on June 8 (p.3.), are executed—Horsmanden's Jour., 66.

10 Bastian, Francis, Albunky, and Curapa Dick (negroes) are found guilty of conspiracy to burn the city and murder the habitants.—Horsmanden's Jour., 67-68. On June 15, they were sentenced to be burned at the stake.—Ibid., 69. All except Bastian (see June 15) were executed on June 12.—Ibid., 73.

12 The execution of Sarah, daughter of John Hughson (see June 4), is ordered postponed until June 19.—Horsmanden's Jour., 64. See June 17.

The grand jury, on being thanked by the speaker of the assembly for detecting the "horrid Conspiracy," presents a petition to "the House" for "the better regulating of Slaves, and for preventing other Irregularities in this City." The circumstances of the conspiracy are reviewed, and reveal the fact that "the great Number of publick Houses, in which Negroes have been entertained and encouraged to buy Rum and other strong Liquors, has been a principle Incentiv to those detestable Villanies;" also that the conspiracy "was formed and agreed to, by great Numbers of Negroes, meeting together on divers Sundays, and was intended to be put in Execution on some Sunday Morning, during the Time of publick service;" as also "fetching Tea Water on Sundays, has been found to tend to the forming of the said Conspiracy, by giving Occasion to great Numbers of them, to meet in the same Place." The grand jury therefore recommends that a law be passed "to limit the Number of publick Houses within the City of New-York, also to oblige all Keepers of publick Houses, under severe Penalties, to keep good Order in such Houses, and to prohibit them from selling any Sort of strong Liquors, unless by express Leave of their Masters, in writing;" to prohibit receiving goods from negroes, except by such permission; to restrain negroes "from fetching Tea Water on Sundays;" to punish persons who harbour and entertain negroes; and to prevent negroes "being absent from their Masters Houses on Sundays, unless by the publick Worship of God, or by the express Leave of their Masters, for some necessary Service signified in Writing, and to be delivered to such Negro."—Assemb. Jour., 1: 806. See also Winsor, Nat. & Crit. Hist. of Am., V: 201, 242. Laws were passed on Nov. 7 to meet these conditions, one entitled "An Act to Let Farm the Excise on Strong Liquors in this Colony for one Year Ending" Nov. 1, 1742 (Col. Laws N. Y., 1: 152); and the other "An Act to Revive an act, Intituled an act, to Restrain Tavern Keepers & Inholders from Selling Strong Liquors to Servants and Apprentices and from giving Large Credit to others" (ibid., III: 166).

The negro, Bastian (see June 19), another of those convicted in connection with the conspiracy, is pardoned.—Col. Coun. Min., 318.

A provincial act is passed "for the better Fortifying of this Colony and other Purposes therein Mentioned." The preamble states that the buildings in the City "are not a proper Fort Number of Cannon and a Large quantity of other Stores of War" for the use of this colony, which awakened "strong apprehensions, That a Rupture is like to happen with a Power more capable, to annoy this Colony, than that with which his Majesty is in Actual War at present." The act is "to enable the governor and the general assembly of this colony to erect, at the expense of the publick, a better Posture of Defence for its Security in all Events, by amending our Present Fortifications, and Erecting New Batteries & Platforms on which the Said Cannon may be Placed . . . and at the same Time to Erect Such Buildings as are more Immediately wanting in Stead of those which lately had the Misfortune to be Burnt down in Fort George." The law therefore enacts that the act now in force, which lays a duty on tonnage, shall be continued to July 1, 1751. It allows 250 for building a new secretary's office, "in a more convenient Place and Form, Less liable to the like accident [of fire], as the present Reposite & preserve the Publick Records of this Colony in, as for Transacting the publick affairs which properly appertain to the Said office." This sum is "for Building Compleating and Finishing a such Part of the East Ward Side of the Garden adjoining to the Said Fort, as the Lieutenant Governor or Commander In Chief for the time being, Shall approve of, a New Secretary's office, not Less than Forty two feet Long, Twenty Feet wide, and one Story of Ten feet high, with a Chimney in the Middle arched with Iron and Bricks fit for two Fire Places; and the Beams to be not Less than nine Inches by Seven, at a proper Distance fit for Ceilin." John Bowsedel has undertaken to erect this building, and provide at his own expense "all Manner of Materials & Workmanship, not only for Building it, but likewise to Partition the Same into Two Rooms and an Entry, and to make a writing Desk and Benches in each of 1741: Them, as likewise a sufficient number of Shelves with Drawers or Boxes between Them as well to put Publick Papers in, as to remove them speedily without loss in Case of Accidents; also to put Four Sashes of good Glass with Shutters in the two Rooms and a proper Light over the Door, if Judged needful; Cedar Gutters all round the Building of which the Front one is to be a Cornish Gutter; and Trunks to convey the Rain Water into the Street; to Paint all the Wood Work, without and within the usual manner, to Cover the Roof with Tauricio Shingles, to Lay the hearths with one Row of Bristol Stones and the back part with Bricks on their Edge; and in General to furnish all necessary Iron Work Locks & Hinges, and to Finish both the outside and the Inside workman like to the turning of the Key, in such manner as Shall be Directed & Approved of by the Said Lieutenant Governor, or Commander in Chief if... Excepting never the Less, that he Shall have the Liberty to make use of so many of the Bricks of the Ruins of the old Building in the Said Fort as are proper or Necessary for Building of the Said office. On the completion of his Contract, Mr. Roosevelt is to be paid by the treasurer of the colony the sum agreed upon (£600), in three payments—

"one third thereof when the Foundation is carry'd to the height of the ground Floor; one other third when the Roof is cover'd, and the Remaining Third when all is finish'd."

The law also provides "That there Shall be Erected in the Wexford A New Fort of the same Length & Breadth as the old one was which Stood on that Spot, of two Stories high and that it be Divided into So many Rooms & Fire places, as Shall be approved of by the Said Lieutenant Governor, or Commander in Chief for the time being; The Stories to be no higher than between Six & Seven feet under the Beams. The partitions of the Rooms to be One Bricks Length in thickness; every Chimney to be Arched with Iron and Bricks, and all the hearths wide to prevent Fire, The Roof to be no Steeper than is necessary to make it Tight and to carry off Rain Water; and one or Two doorless Doors in the West Side of it for Receiving and Issuing of his Military Stores; and that all the Hinges and other Iron Work which is Saved of the Former Barracks, as likewise the Bricks of the Ruins in the Said Fort, Shall and may be Imploy'd... towards Building of the Barrack." The sum of £600 is to be paid by the treasurer to build the barracks.

This law further states that, in case "an Enemy Should make an attempt upon this City by a naval Force, a good Battery upon and near the Flat Rocks behind Fort George would very much Annoy Them, and at the same time be able to Flank the Battery already Erected on Copsys Rocks." For this purpose, the law specifically requires that "a good & Proper Battery, on which about Twenty great Guns, can be mounted, Shall be Built up near and near the Said Flat Rock, in such Form as Shall be judged most conducive for the Service it is intended, and at a sufficient distance from the River, That a proper Space may be Left for a Passage between them, The Merlins to be made of Sands & of a Sufficient Thickness. The floor to be flat, and at the West Side a Beam or Scantling fixt to prevent the Guns from Recollying beyond it in case of Action and that New Carriages be made for Such of the great Guns Lying in the Pasture near the Said Rock as Shall be found Serviceable & Judged proper for that Service, Unless the Cannon does in the mean while arise which his Majesty has been pleased to order for the use of this Colony." For this work £600 is allowed.

As "it is conceived that the ground already made in the Battery on the Copsys Rocks would not afford Room enough for our People if we should have the Misfortune to be attacked by any number of Ships of War," it is provided that £176 shall be allowed "for filling up with Earth Sand or other proper Materials round the inside of the Said Battery, the space of Ten feet more than is filled up already; and £612 is allowed "for amending and Repairing the Flare Thereon, and to fix at the outside of the Said Flare a Beam or Scantling, to prevent the Guns from Recollying beyond it in case of action." As, in case of attack, "it would be requisite to have some works on the Inner part of the Battery on Copsys Rocks, as well to Clear it from an Enemy, as to Shelter our People who should be placed upon Duty there," it is provided "that there Shall be Erected two additional Rooms, one in the Said Battery and the other at the West Side of the Store House already Erected there." To build, cover and complete these, there is allowed the sum of £250. As "the great Guns on the Said Battery, as well as those Intended for a Battery on the Said Flat Rock, ought to be Proved (as they have not been made use of in a great many Years past) Least Some or Them should wound or destroy Some of our own People in time of Action," the sum of £120 is allowed for the purchase of powder for such tests.

That the money, amounting to £1,880,2, may be duly applied to the objects for which it is intended (that is, "For New Barracks, For a Battery on the Flat Rock, for filling up ten feet more of ground in the Battery on Copsys Rocks, and amending its Flats. For two Block Houses on Said Battery, For powder to prove the Great Guns, and for Removing and Replacing them"); four commissioners are appointed to manage the several undertakings. These are John Cruger, William Room, John Roosevelt, and Capt. Henry Row.

In case an attempt should be made to attack the city with a naval armament, the act provides that "a flat form at Dominies Hook on Hudson's River might be very serviceable to annoy them. The sum of £250 is therefore appropriated to erect it when necessary.

The act further provides for paying Gerrit Couys a sum for the expenses incurred by him for materials and labour in making suitable conveniences in the common council room of the city hall, "as well to preserve the Records of this Colony and Sorting the Publick Books Writing and other Papers, as for keeping the Said [Secretary's] office in until another be Built for that Purpose." The secretary's office and the barracks were completed before Nov. 16, 1741 (p. v.).

The sum of £600 is contributed by the province to encourage the fitting out of two large sloops to go in pursuit of Spanish privateers cruising off the coast—Cal. L. N. Y. T., III: 143-48.

A provincial act is passed "for the more Equal Keeping Military Watches in the City of New York," rendered necessary by the recent negro disturbances. Under the act of Oct. 3, 1739, for regulating the militia (p. v.), commissioned military officers and troopers were attempted from service as constables, thus placing the burden of the city's military watch upon tradesmen and the "middling Sort of People." To alleviate this situation, all persons residing in New York City are now required to watch in their respective turns, or to provide able-bodied substitutes. Those exempted from this order are the deputy secretary, the clerk of the council, judges of the supreme court, all members of the council and assembly not bearing a military commission, and the firemen.

Another important requirement of this act of June 13 is the erection of three beacons, one on the western part of Rockaway ("where it can best be seen from the Narrows on the Island of Nassau, & Staten Island"), one at the Narrows on Nassau Island, and the third opposite it on Staten Island. Persons living near the beacons are to light them "upon the Sight or Appearance of Seven or a greater number of Ships, and when the allarme is given by one, the others are also Immediately to Set on Fire, to the End an allarme may be conveyed to New York in the Speediest manner."—Ibid., III: 148-50.

"Intimation having been given for some Time past, that there had of late been Peppish Priests lurking about the Town, diligent Enquiry had been made for discovering them, but without Effect; at length Information was given, that one Ury, alias Juray, who had lately come into this City, and entered into Partnership with Campbells, a School Master, pretending to teach Greek and Latin, was suspected to be one, and that he kept a private Conventicle; he was taken into Custody this Day; and not giving a satisfactory Account of himself, was committed to the City Jail."—Horsmanden's Journ., 94. See Feb. 28 and June 25.

On account of the trials of negro conspirators in New York," the circuit courts, which were customarily held "up Albany river," by the judges from New York, are postponed for a year.—Cal. Com. Min., 358.

3 Three negroes are hanged and two burned alive. They all protest their innocence of the conspiracy. Negroes are being committed daily so that the jails are crowded.—N. Y. Jour., June 22, 1741.

The execution of Sarah Hughson is further postponed until June 26.—Horsmanden's Journ., 98. See June 25.

The House-Committee of the Senate proposed a proclamation "taking Notice of the Conspiracy which had been set on foot, abetted, encouraged and carried on by several White People in Conjunction with divers Spanish Negroes brought hither from the West-Indies, and a great Number of other Negroes within this City and Country, for the Burning and Destroying this whole City and murdering the Inhabitants thereof. He offers a pardon to "every Person and Persons, whether white People, free Negroes, Slaves, or others," who had been or was convicted in the said Conspiracy, who should on or before the first Day of July then next, voluntarily, freely and fully discover, and Confession make of, his or her Confederates, Accomplices, or others concerned in the said Conspiracy."—Horsmanden's Jour., 56.

The common council orders that the main issue his warrant for £20 to purchase a Bill of One hundred pounds Sterling and Remit the Same to Merchants William Baker and William Mersam in London," for the purchase of "as Large a Fire Engine of the best make As that Sum will purchase," together with "a Leather pipe and Screws proper to the Engine and four fire Caps."—M. C. C., V. 22.

For an account of the first fire-engines, see May 6, 1732.

Upon payment of 20 shillings, Cornelius Coutine is given permission for one year to dig clay pits and make bricks on such part of the Commons as the alderman and councilman of the Out Ward shall deem proper.—M. C. C., V. 22.

The execution of Sarah Hughson is further postponed until July 4.—Horsmanden's Jour., 95. See July 1.

Mary Burton makes a deposition stating "That the Person Yesterday shewn to her in Prison, lately taken into Custody on Suspicion of being a Roman Catholic Priest [see June 13], is the same Person she often seen at John Horsmanden's, to whom she remembers he used to go by different Names, but whether by the Name of Jury or Ury, or Doyle, she cannot now depose positively.

"That when he came to Hugson's he always went up Stairs in the Company of his Wife and Daughter, and Peggy, with whom the Negroes used to be at the same Time consulting about the Plot; and that she has often heard Hugson, the rest of the white People, and the Negroes, talk in the Presence of the said Jury, about setting fire to the Houses, and killing the white People of this City; and has often, when such Conversation was going on, seen the said Jury, alias Ury, whispering to Hugson, his Wife, k., and the Negroes, which she understood to be joining in the Conspiracy with them."—Horsmanden's Jour., 95-96.

Horsmanden writes: "Before the issuing of the Proclamation of the 19th Instant [v.2], there were but two and Seventy Negroes in Jail, who had been already impeached; many of whom after publishing the Proclamation, not only confessed their own Guilt, in order to entitle themselves to the Benefit of it, but also discovered many of their Accomplices who were at large; who were therefore immediately taken into Custody...so that there were three hundred and thirty Negroes more added to the former, inasmuch as the Jail began to be so thronged, 'twas difficult to find Room for them; and we were apprehensive, that the Criminals would be daily multiplying on our Hands; nor could we see any Likelihood of a Stop to Impediments to Execution. The Negroes in Town were corrupted." In order to expedite the trials, Messrs. Murray, Alexander, Smith, Chambers, Jamison, Nicholls, and Lodge, "the several Gentlemen of the Law that were in Town," agree to help with the prosecutions.—Horsmanden's Jour., 109-18.

The "industrious and indefatigable Vigilance of our Magistrates" is the subject of praise in the newspapers, "there being now 11 Negroes Capitally convicted, and about 100 in Goal." Several whites are committed to jail on suspicion, one (John Ury) being "strongly suspected to be a Roman Priest." The "Blacks begin to Confess, and agree generally in their Confessions, that each had upwards of Thirty Slaves more added to the former, inasmuch as the Jail began to be so thronged, "twas difficult to find Room for them; and we were apprehensive, that the Criminals would be daily multiplying on our Hands; nor could we see any Likelihood of a Stop to Impediments to Execution. The Negroes in Town were corrupted." In order to expedite the trials, Messrs. Murray, Alexander, Smith, Chambers, Jamison, Nicholls, and Lodge, "the several Gentlemen of the Law that were in Town," agree to help with the prosecutions.—Horsmanden's Jour., 109-18.

On the following day, another was burnt at the stake, there being several persons, both blacks and whites.—N. T. Jour., July 6, 1741.

The judges of the supreme court recommend 40 of the negroes now in jail to the lieutenant-governor for transportation.—Horsmanden's Jour., 107.

The execution of Sarah Hughson is further postponed.—Horsmanden's Jour., 136. See July 10.

Sarah Hughson deposes that "she had seen John Ury [see June 4] the Priest often there [at her father's house] when the Negroes were there, and speak to them; tell them to keep Secessry, and to be true, not tell of another, if they were to dye for it; that they should burn the Town down; and in the Night cut their Master's and Mistress's Threats with Knives they should get."—Horsmanden's Jour., 135-36. See July 14 and 21.

John Ury denies being "any wise concerned in the Conspiracy for burning the Town and killing the Inhabitants," and declares that "he never was any wise acquainted with John Hughson, or his Wife, or Margaret Kerry, nor did he ever see them in his Life, to his Knowledge."—Horsmanden's Jour., 139. See July 15.

Six negroes, arraigned for conspiracy, are ordered to be transported and nine are pardoned.—Horsmanden's Jour., 140.

John Ury is indicted for implication in the negro conspiracy, and for coming into New York province and there "celebrating Masses, and granting Absolution, &c."—Horsmanden's Jour., 142-43. See July 32.

The sentence of John Horsmanden, one of the negroes Quack and Othello, who were to be burnt, is changed to hanging.—Cal. Coun. Min., 338.

Six negroes are hanged and one burnt at the stake.—N. T. Jour., July 20, 1741.

The Rev. John Ury is brought to trial, charged with being a party to the conspiracy.—Horsmanden's Jour., op. cit., 149, where a detailed account of his trial is given. See, further, July 29 and Aug. 29.

The military watch (see June 17) is continued. The new fortifications are "very forward."—N. T. Jour., July 27, 1741.

John Clemm, Jr., the son of the organ-builder, is engaged by Trinity vestry as organist for one year, beginning Aug. 10.—Trin. Min. (MS.).

It is ordered by the common council that the mayor issue his warrant to pay Johannes Roomes "for making a Gallows: two Gibbets: and work done to and Materials found About the City watch House: making Ladders and fire hooks," etc.—M. C. C., V. 25. For location and use of the gallows, see May 1. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 973.

John Ury is found guilty of encouraging the negro Quack to burn the governor's house.—Horsmanden's Jour., 155-71.

The term of the supreme court is extended.—Cal. Coun. Min., 358.

Ury is sentenced to be hanged.—Horsmanden's Jour., 173.

See Aug. 29.

John Clemm informs Trinity vestry that he has completed the organ in Trinity Church. A balance due him of £520 is to be paid, and payment made for "Shortening the Case and Making two pair of Bellows over and Above the Agreement."—Trin. Min. (MS.). See also June 11, 1759.

Daniel Horsmanden writes to Cadwallader Colden an account of the Negro Plot. He charges that it is a Catholic conspiracy. Of Ury he says: "He appears to have been a principal promoter & encourager of this most horrid & Detestable piece of Villany, a Scheme we must have been brooded in a Conclave of Devils, & hatched in the Cabinet of Hell." Horsmanden speaks of the executions of negroes and whites.—From the original letter, with the Colden papers, in the N. Y. Hist. Soc.

The governor's council orders that four Spanish negroes brought to New York for Capt. John Lush be pardoned; and that a fifth one, belonging to Capt. Surley, be executed.—Cal. Coun. Min., 358.

A Syriam negro, "deeply concerned in the late hellish plot," is hanged.—N. T. Jour., July 1741.

Cornelius Webber, of the City of New York, yeoman, conveys to Peter Warren, Esq., of the city of New York, a parcel of land Clarke informs Newcastle that he has lost by fire in the fort between £2,000 and £3,000. — N. Y. Col. Doc., VI: 205. He received a parliamentary donation which more than reimbursed him for these losses. When he returned to England his estate was estimated at £2,000. However, the expenses of secret service are so numerous, that he was reimbursed thus: "By his offices of secretary, clerk of the council, counsellor, and lieutenant-governor, he had every advantage of inserting his own, or the name of some other person in trust for him, in the numerous grants, which he was in a condition for nearly half a century, to quicken or retard. — Smith, Hist. of N. Y., II: 39.

A "Law for the Further Regulating the Publick Marketts" is proclaimed, containing a provision "for the Country people to Sell or Espose to Sale, in the Market and Broadway Market of this City Beef, pork: Yeak Mutton: & Lamb by the Joint or by pieces or Cut up the same in pound or pouds pieces: or to Great or Small Quantities: or parcells as they shall See Convenient: first paying the fees or Rates: to the Alarm of the Marketts; Or Such Other person or persons as by the Common Council Shall be thereunto Appointed: in the Same Manner: Quantity and proportion that the Butchers are to do."

It also provides "that the Market house at the Lower End of Wall Street: Commonly Called the Market Markett; and the Market house in the Broad way Called the Market Markett; are hereby Appointed and Declared to be the public Market Marketts where all persons whatsoever may Sell Utter [dry their ware] or put Out to Shew or Sale any manner of Mealls Wheat Rye: Barley: Oats: Indian Corn: Buck Wheat: or any other Sort of Meall: Coro and Grain: brought to market."

No person shall tell grain or meal elsewhere under penalty. Furthermore, country people are to "have Liberty to Cut up their meatl, in the Markettts, and advertisements to that effect are required to be printed in the newspapers." — M. G., VI: 41-42.

"The Salt, or other publick Marketts, not under the act of June 13, 1741 (g. v.), have proved very cumbersome to the poorer inhabitants of the city. As a night watch is still considered necessary, the legislature permits the common council to appoint not less than 12 watchmen who shall serve for one year beginning Dec. 1, during such hours and under such regulations as the board shall fix. To pay these men, the corporation is allowed to levy a tax of £57412s upon the real and personal estates of the inhabitants of the city. — Col. Laws N. Y., III: 158-62. On Dec. 1, the common council appointed 36 night watchmen to serve one year to be divided into three divisions, each division having an inspector. One in each division was to be on duty each night, and each division in turn. — M. C., V: 45-46. A new regulation went into effect Dec. 21, 1742 (g. v.)."

The common council having sought permission to introduce a legislative bill "for Keeping in Repair the post Road from this City to the King's Bridge, and from the Road of the town, called "from Spring Garden to fresh Water."" — M. C., V: 51-52, such an act is passed. To remove doubts regarding the course of this road, "from Spring Garden to fresh Water," it is enacted that it shall be "on a Straight Line or course from Spring Garden Aftersaid, through the New Road Lately cut through the Hill by the House of Captain John Brown where the Wind Mill formerly Stood until it meets with the old Road." — Col. Laws N. Y., III: 166-67. See Pl. 27, Vol. I.

Observing "how incorrect the Laws of this Colony are printed 13 and the irregular Manner in which they are bound up," the assembly resolves to have them printed on good paper with woodcuts and notes. Daniel Horsmanden agrees to prepare this work, and to deliver one "compleat Book thereof, bound in Calve's Leather, to the Governor or Commander in Chief for the Time being, another for the Use of the Council, and another for the Use of the General Assembly," for £50. — Assemb. Jour., I: 821-24. On Nov. 27, 1741 (g. v.), a law for this purpose was passed.

The council and general assembly address a joint petition to the king asking for a grant of money to rebuild the burned buildings in the fort. It recites the fact that there have been erected from time to time several buildings in the Fort, which has the Honor to bear your Majesties name, a House, Chappel, Secretaries Office, as likewise Barracks for the Troops, in so stately a manner, that it was allowed none of your Majesties Governors in America Enjoyed So noble a Residence. The petition refers to the fire of March 18 (p. c.v.), and adds: "That since the melancholy Incident the Colony hath erected good new Barracks for your Majesties Troops, and a Secretaries office to preserve the publick Records as they were Conceived at and Immediately necessary 'tis even this could not have been effected but by anticipating and prolonging one of its Funds." It continues with this plea: "And that the Circumstances of this Colony as well by Debits formerly Contracted, as by Erecting many Forts and Fortifications for its Defence and Safety, and some constant and Honourable support of Government Render it unable to bear the Expense of erecting Edifices suitable for the Residence of your Majesties Governor, over a Colony immediately depending on your Majesty, Seated in the Center and the most exposed of any of the British Dominions on this Continent." They therefore ask the king for "such a Sum as your Majesty in your great Wisdom & Goodness shall Judge requisite for that purpose."—Jour. Leg. Coun., I: 794. The location of the new secretary's office is shown on Pl. 12, Vol. 1, outside the gate of the fort. It was removed when the fort was demolished in 1790 (p. c.v.).—See Landmark Maps May Ref. Key-375.

An addition is made to the Militia Act of Oct. 3, 1739 (p. v.), as afterwards amended, the new topic relating to the keeping of a military watch in the city of New York in case of invasion, insurrection, or other emergency. It requires that all residents who are essential from military duty by the Militia Act (except the members of the provincial council, judges of the supreme court, members of the general assembly, and the deputy secretary and clerk of the council) be obliged, upon due warning, to watch in their turn, either personally or by substitute. They are to be furnished with the same arms and ammunition as enlisted men, to be liable to the same examination, and to be under the same penalties for failures. This act also provides for prompt conveying of alarms from the ocean front. The beacons, "already Erected by virtue of a former Act, Shall be kept up to it, one on the Western part of Rockaway, one Cape, and ye coast and a distance of a mile from the site to it on Staten Island." The colonels of those places shall take care of them, and appoint proper persons "to Set the Same on Fire, upon the Sight or appearance of Seven or a greater Number of Ships." When the alarm is given by one of these beacons, the others "are also immediately to be Set on Fire," so that "an Alarm may be Conveyed to New York in the Speediest manner." When the beacons are thus consumed, others are to be immediately erected by the respective colonels. The exemption allowed to freemen in the city of New York is not abridged by this act.—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 698-700. This addition to the Militia Act is in the vol. 3 of the Proc. of the General Assembly, p. 275.

A provincial act is passed "to Apply the Moneys granted for Support of this Government for Payment of the Salaries," etc. The governor is allowed £4,160 per annum from the time his "Letters Patent" shall be published here until Sept. 1, 1742. The lieutenant-governor is allowed £2,000 per annum for administering the government from Sept. 1 last until "the Day he may be Superceded," or until Sept. 1 next; also house rent at the rate of £10 per annum (on account of the burning of the buildings in the fort on March 18 last). Among the many other payments directed by this act, is one of £50 to John Tenbrooks, for assisting to extinguish the fire in the fort, when he was, "by the Breaching of a Ladder, So far disabled as to render him unable to maintain his Family;" and one of £10 to Josiah Parker "for a Cable & a New Rope taken from on board of his Ship, and Ruined by being used to Pull down Some Buildings at the Time of the Fire."—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 707-709.

As many people possessing considerable private estates assume residence in New York City after the tax for the minister and the poor has been laid, a statute is enacted to prevent such evasion. Until the December following the levying of the tax, all vessels are ordered to make a most strict enquiry in the most of any persons coming to the city with goods for sale. Such persons are to give a sworn statement of the value of their wares, and to be taxed accordingly.—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 179-81.

A provincial act is passed empowering the alderman and assistant alderman of each of the six wards of the city of New York or Water to appoint an overseer for each pump and well. These officers are to keep the pumps and wells in repair, and meet these expenses by, an assessment on the property of persons in each locality. As Nov. 27

Disorderly Persons have frequently been guilty of cutting the Well Reaps & breaking the Handles of Pumps," a fine of 40 shillings is fixed for such offences.—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 181-83.

Agreeable to the assembly resolution of Nov. 15 (p. c.v.), an act is passed concerning the Governor & Council for "Revise, Digest & Print the Laws of this Colony from the Happy Revolution."—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 182-94. He had not completed his task by July 4, 1745 (p. c.v.) and it was finally done by Livingstone and Smith. See Nov. 24, 1750; also Smith, Hist. of N. Y., II: 60.

Since "Gamblers by Exemptions by the Acts of Parliament & other Publick Houses for Moneys or Strong Liquor hath by fatal Experience been found to be Attended with many evil Consequences," the provincial legislature passes "An Act to Restrain disorderly & Unlawfull Gaming Houses." No keeper is permitted to have a "Common Billiard Table, Truck Table or Shuffle board Table, or suffer any Person or Persons whatsoever to Play or Game either by Day or night," on penalty of a fine of £50. Nor is liquor to be sold to any youth under 21 years of age, or to any apprentice, journeyman, servant, or common sailor.—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 191-95. See Oct. 7.

A letter of this date mentions the arrival of a rich prize captured by the "Huming Bird." Another privater is being fitted out to cruise against the Spaniards, under the command of one well acquainted with those coasts.—Upcott Coll., in N. Y. Hist. Soc., I: 145.

In a report to the lords of trade, Clarke states that when he first entered upon the administration of the government (1736) "ship building was almost wholly laid aside nigh an hundred houses in the town stood empty for want of Tenants and the rents of those that were tenant were fallen very considerably many people having left the 'Town and Province to seek their quiet in another place hoping likewise to follow their several occupations to more advantage they having then no prospect of seeing trade revive here which had for some time languished." As a result of his efforts, he states, "the houses that stood empty are now all tenant and now as many more since the Island of New York in a manner have settled and the houses that are now building are bespoke before they are finished and rents not only raised to what they were before but fell above it." He adds: "how shipbuilding and Trade in General have gradually increased under my administration, the Naval officer and Collectors accounts will clearly show."

An address has been prepared, he says, by the assembly and council jointly and sent to England to be presented to the king, asking him "to give them money to build a house Chappell & in the Fort" (see Dec. 1740). Clarke believes, in signing this, as the province, he believes, "was never in so flourishing a condition as it is now," no matter what a "selfish nigardly people say to save their money." He adds: "they say they could not build the Barracks and Secretaries Office but by borrowing from the Funds," but this, he says, is untrue; they can erect these and all the other buildings "by a Provincial Tax which would hardly be felt;" they have no general tax at present, nor have they had for several years; "there is not in America a Province less bittened [burdened] than this."—N. Y. Col. Docs., VII: 209-9.

The common council votes the sum of £20, which is to be remitted to Samuel and William Baker, merchants of London, for purchasing a "good Bell of 2000 Weight of the best Metall," and shipping it "for this place by the first Convenient Opportunity for the Use of this Corporation."—M. G. G., V: 45. See June 15, 1741.

"Trinity Church orders that the Church Wardens be Desir'd to Send to England by the first Convenient Opportunity for a New Sett of Furniture for the Communion Table Pulpit and Reading Desk of the best English Crimson Flower'd Damask with a plain Silk fringe Lining and Tassels."—Tran. Min. (Min.). These articles, which cost twenty four pounds, were brought over by Capt. Farmer on April 18, 1742.

Writing in 1743, Cadwallader Colden reviewed the causes of the fevers prevailing in New York City in 1741-2. He wrote: "that part of the town chiefly afflicted with the epidemic disease these two last summers, is built upon a swamp," and... moisture is to be observed “in every cell.” He added: “there — is no constant and sufficient care of the drains by which thecellars are freed from stagnating waters.”—From “Observations on the House,” written to the City of New-York in 1744, as given in The American Medical and Philosophical Register (1811), I: 310–30. Colden recommended draining the wet grounds, filling up the slips, and emptying all silt into the river, which could be affected only by putting the care of the drains into the hands of the city officials. He remarked: “A fresh water pond and meadow of stagnating water, not half a mile to the northward of the city of New-York, has been lately drained for the benefit of the soil, without any thought of any advantage to the health of the neigh-brouring inhabitants, though its effects in that respect be very manifest.”—Ibid., I: 329. That Colden was in error is proved by the petition of Anthony Rutgers on April 6, 1730, to the common council, for permission to drain his swampsland near the Fresh Water Pond, which, it was believed, would “greatly Contribute to the health of this City.”—M. C. C., IV: 179.

Dr. Isaac du Bois, a graduate of Leyden in 1740 (see Medical Register, 1689–9, p. 252; 1690–7, p. 258), wrote to Dr. Colden, regarding the yellow fever epidemic of this period, in part as follores: “what regards ye Infection or Contagion of said fever that was so much talked of & frightened So many out of Town, I shall not say much about; but this is certain, that ye epidemic—all fever chiefly is” said by Smiths from D. C. H. Market & M’ Gerard: Beaksians Ship where it began & ended, whether that proceeded from ye lowness & dampness of ye Situation, from whence Sulphurous noxious vapours might arise & put ye first causes that were lying hid in ye Body then disposed for ye Desease, in action, I leave to ye Learned to determine.”—From the original letter, with the Golden Papers, in N. Y.
Hist. Soc.
The city, as it existed during the period of 1742–4, is shown on a plan drawn from memory in August, 1815, by David Grim, and now preserved in the N. Y. Hist. Soc. On the back of the plan is a statement, written by Grim, giving in detail the number of houses on the principal streets in 1742 (p. 21), as well as much other interesting information. This plan is reproduced and de-Landmark No. 33 on this plan is “Rutger’s Brew House,” on the north side of Maiden Lane west of William St. There is an excellent undated survey of this brewery property, covering the site of the present 43–59 Maiden Lane, in the Bancroft Collection, N. Y. Pub. Library.

By this year, streets were laid out as far north as the present Spruce St. The Common was not fenced in, or otherwise enclosed, and was used by the public for many years thereafter. See drawing by David Grim, showing the site of the Park and surrounding lands and landmarks, including the Collect and Little Collect Ponds, the location of Leisler’s grave, and a portion of the west side of Broadway, reproduced in colours in Man. Com. Coun. (1856), op. p. 426.
The towers of several brick-kilns on the Commons at this time are named in ibid., 427.

A fire occurs at the lower end of King’s Street, near Burnett’s Key, where the houses are very closely built. The four fire-engines prevent the destruction of the “adjacent Square.”—N. Y. Jour., Jan. 25, 1742. The first two engines owned by the city arrived from London in 1731 (see May 6, 1731); two additional ones arrived in the summer of 1742 (see June 15).

Clarke writes to the common council: “After the providential Discovery of the late most excorable Conspiracy, and the hitherto and barbarous Designs of a perverse and blood-thirsty People, for the Ruin and Destruction of the whole Province, and the Inhabitants thereof; and that even at a Time when all Things were ripe for Execution, and the intended Desolation was so near at Hand; one would think our signal Preservation could never be forgot; and that no one could be so blind to himself, and regardless of his future Destiny, as to support the Negroes, or the Publick Meetings and Caballages together; thereby giving them an Opportunity of forming new Designs, or another Conspiracy; knowing them to be a People whom no Example can reclaim, no Punishment deter, or Lestivies appease; yet from the many undoubted Informations I have received from diverse Parts of the Country, the Evidences of the Negroes as greatest as they have, and they are not only suffering to have private, but even public Meetings, in great Numbers ... I must therefore require you, as you value the Peace and Safety of this City and Province, and your own Preservation ... to see the Laws against Negroes duly and publicly enforced; suffering no Meetings of them within your City and County and several Districts ...”—Horsmanden’s Jour., 1742–5.

“The House and Ground now in the Tenure of Mrs. Margaret
for sale by Andrew and Peter Frestane.—N. Y. Jour., Feb. 1, 1742.

The negro who escaped from the Jamaica Pilot-boat had formerly hung out from the tavern kept by John Dunks at the corner of Wall and Water Sts., the later Merchants’ Coffee House.—See June 19, 1728; Jan.
18, 1736.

A fire is discovered in a “shed next the Fence of the Old Dutch Church-Yard.” A negro, Tom, confesses to having started the fire, and declared that he had been invited to it by other negroes, who said that the fire in the shed “would fire the whole Town, and then the Negroes in Town, with the Negroes that were to come from Long Island, would murder the White People.”—Horsmanden’s
Jour., 1742–5.

Tom is sentenced to be hanged.—Horsmanden’s Jour., 178–89.

The government and council now order that the negro Tom be executed, having granted, on March 10, a reprieve of the sentence that he be hanged for burning the house of Widow Bratt.—Cal.

The negro Tom is executed.—Horsmanden’s Jour., 187.

A Tanner’s “Barkhouse ... in the Swamp at the East End of this City” is set on fire, but little damage is done. It is agreed “o ye Hands, that the Fire must have been put there on Purpose.”
—Horsmanden’s Jour., 178–89.

Col. Joseph Robinson hands in to the governor’s counsel a letter found under his door, addressed to “Capt.” Robinson and revealing some design against the city. An opinion on it is given

An ordinance is passed forbidding slaves to fish on waters from any source save the pump or well nearest their abodes.
Nor is a slave permitted to ride a horse or go through any street of the city “or on the Common,” on penalty of being whipped “at the Publick Whipping Post,” not exceeding forty lashes.—M. C. C., V: 50. This ordinance was passed as a result of the “Negro Coninspiracy” of 1741.

“Gallows Hill” is the name now applied in the city records to the place where the negroes were executed (see May 1, 1743).—
M. C. C., V: 23, 491 and description of Pl. 32–a, I: 270.

A “Bundle of Limesen set on fire” is thrown into the gutter adjoining Benson’s beer-house, but it is discovered before it does any damage. Several servants and others were examined in connection with this, but no one was found.—Horsmanden’s Jour., 180.

A report is received that small-pox is raging at Curaga, Apr.
and the council orders that vessels arrived from there to be April 8.

The common council sends John Tenbrook to Bellows Island (see June 28, 1758) to see that no one enters or leaves a house where any person has small-pox, save by order of the mayor.—
M. C. G., V: 50. See Feb. 20, 1744.

Frederick Philipse and Daniel Horsmanden certify that Mary Burton is entitled to the reward claimed by her for giving information leading to the conviction of the conspirators in the negro plot; an order of the governor’s council to this effect having been given the day before.—Cal. Com. Min., 340. See Sept. 3.

Clarke urges upon the assembly the need of making ample provision for putting the fort in “a Posture of Defence,” owing to the critical state of affairs in Europe. The fort is in a wretched condition, he says, “some Part of the wall being already fallen down, and other Parts in a tottering Condition, the sod Work mouldered away, and the Bastions and Curtains without Platforms.” He also urgently recommends to the assembly the rebuilding of “the House Next the Gate and other Edifices, that were consumed in the Fort, as well as the Stables and Coach-House without it.” He hopes “that when the Governor [Clinton] comes, he may not be unpereived of an Habitation.”—Assemb.
Jour., I: 827. To the council, Clarke said on April 24 that the new fort was expected late and that he knew of no house “to be built” that was fit for it, as great as the private and public

On Nov. 26, 1742 (p. v.), the assembly and council addressed a Trinity vestry orders that the church-wardens procure bills of exchange for £50 to send to London to pay for “three Branches” (candelabra) “without Guilting” for Trinity Church, which Captain Farmer had ordered of “a Small Branch proper for the pulpitt and another for the Reading Desk; and that he Give Directions to have all the Branches gilt.”—Trin. Min. (MS.).

The mayor informs the common council that, on May 7, Mary Burton applied to him, in the presence of two witnesses, for the payment of £100 which had been proposed by the board on April 11, 1741, and offered by the lieutenant-governor’s proclamation on April 17, 1741 (q.c.), to be given to the white person who made the first discovery of the persons formerly concerned in setting fire to houses in New York City.—M. C., V. 52-53. On Sept. 3, 1741, the deputy-secretary of the province presented to the common council a copy of an order of the court of chancery of the province appointing guardian him of Mary Burton; whereupon it was ordered that the mayor issue his warrant to the treasurer to pay “the said Moore to and for the Use and Benefit of the said Mary Burton; and for the sum of £90 formerly paid by him, for the freedom and Others Necessary to and for the Use and Benefit of the said Mary Burton,” makes a total of £100, “in full of the Reward offered by this board . . .”—Ibid., V. 60-61. It may be fairly inferred from previous events that Mary Burton was going to be paid, directly or indirectly, in the service and pay of the city, for as early as June 19, 1741, two months after the proclamation offering the reward, the common council ordered the mayor to issue his warrant to the treasurer “to pay to Thomas Willson or Order the Sum of Ten pounds Current Money of this Colony in full for the time of his Servant Mary Burton: and for the Chatla he has purchased for her he the Said Thomas Willson Assigning his Indenture to this Corporation.”—Ibid., V. 22. And, again, on March 6, 1742, it was ordered “that the Indentures of Mary Burton be Delivered up to her; and that she be Discharged from the Remedy of her Servitude,” and also that “the Mayor Issue his Warrant to the treasurer to pay to the Said Mary Burton or Order the Sum of Three pounds Current money of this Colony; in Order to buy her Necessary Clothing.”—Ibid., V. 48. See Sept. 3.

A provincial act is passed to apply the sum of £671715½d for reparing Fort George, for transporting volunteers to the West Indies, and for other purposes. The preamble states that “the Fort in New York is very much out of Repair and the Battery on Copsay Rocks somewhat Endamag’d by the Ice.” John Cruger, William Roome, John Roosevelt, and Capt. Henry Rowe are empowered to go West, to see the Fort and batteries and survey the place of the same, and to build a new fort and batteries, with houses, and to make a new wall and, instead thereof, a new stone Wall Erected, and the Breach on the West Side of the Fort Gate, and Sunday other Places in the Wall to be repair’d, to cause a good new Parapet of Solda to be made on the Flag Mant, and so along the Curtain & west part of the North West Bastion, and a good Platt Form to be laid along the same of thick Squaird Stones, and the outside of the Battery on Copsay Ricks to be Repair’d with good Sound Oak Plank.”

As “uppon the Arrival of the Stores of Warre lately brought from England in the Ships Judith and Mirabella, Several Charges have Arisen in the Receiving and Sending Them to Proper Stations,” the act provides that various sums are to be paid for such services. The commissioners appointed by the act of June 15 (for fortifying the colony), “for Erecting a Battery on the Flat Rock behind Fort George, have Purchas’d Materials of Wood for the Plattform of the same; but it being considered that a Plattform of Sullied down, and Instead thereof, a new Stone Wall Erected, and the Breach on the West Side of the Fort Gate, and Sunday other Places in the Wall to be repair’d, to cause a good new Parapet of Solda to be made on the Flag Mant, and so along the Curtain & west part of the North West Bastion, and a good Platt Form to be laid along the same of thick Squaird Stones, and the outside of the Battery on Copsay Ricks to be Repair’d with good Sound Oak Plank.”

A warrant is issued for the payment of £24 “for the freights of the two New fire Engines from London to this Port.” Jacob Turk is allowed £16 per annum “for his Care of the Four Engines” from May 28, 1741. A committee is appointed “to Agree with proper persons about the New Bell” and “hanging the old Bell if they think it Necessary: and also for Erecting a proper place for the Keeping of the fire Engines.”—M. C., V. 54-55. The Minutes do not show where these new engines were kept. The bell was probably intended for the new cupola of the city hall.—See July 15, 1738.

An engrossed petition, signed by 47 inhabitants of the West and North Wards, is read in the common council, asking that no other market-house be built in the West Ward before one is already established in Broadway. It recites that, in April, 1733, several of these petitioners and others asked leave to build a market-house at Thurman’s Slip in the West Ward. A committee of the common council was appointed to direct the erection of it “in such Convenient place thereabouts as they should judge most Requisite for the publick good.” They found that that slip or vicinity was not a convenient place for it; and therefore all further thoughts of building a market house there was wholly Laid Aside by the petitioners, and nothing further was done therein until the Twenty ninth day off March 1778, when A Great Number of the principal freetholders and inhabitants of the said West ward” petitioned “to Erect and Build at their own Expense a Market house in the Broadway fronting Crown street.” On that day also five of the inhabitants of the West Ward stated in a petition that permission had been granted for a market-house in Thurman’s Slip by the common council for a committee to appoint to lay out the ground for it. Both these petitions were referred to a committee, which reported on April 13, 1738 (q.c.), that they “had Viewed the said Broadway fronting to Crown Street and found it a Very Convenien place for Erecting a publick Market house.” The report was approved by the board and, it was ordered that the petition for erecting the market-house in Broadway be granted, and the petition for erecting one at Thurman’s Slip be rejected. The present petitioners therefore erected the house in Broadway, “which has been off Great Use Benefitt and Advantage to the Inhabitants.”

Their petition further recites that on Nov. 7, 1741, it was ordered by the Board that this “should be a publick Meal Market;” also “That the Country people and others Resorting to the said Market has Occasioned a Considerable trade to be Carried on the Neighboring of the Slip, which has Encouraged many off your petitioners to Lay out Great sums of Money in purchasing Ground and Building houses near the same . . . upon a Naturall supposition that no other market house would be built near it.” On learning that a petition has again been made for erecting a market-house in Thurman’s Slip, they submit the present petition against it. Their plea adds that “the Multiplying of Market houses” is a disadvantage to the inhabitants because time is consumed in “Running from Market to Market.”—From the original petition in file No. 4, city clerk’s record-room. For the result of this petition, vide infra. See summary under April 6, 1735.

Peter Menier and others for Leave to build a Market house at Cortlandt’s Slip; and a Petition the common council for the privilege of building a public market-house at their own expense “in a Slipe or street Called and Known by the Name of Cortlandt’s Street,” in the West Ward. This petition is rejected. —From the original petition, in file labelled “Filed Papers, 1700-1800,” city clerk’s record-room. See also March 15, 1735.

The action of the common council on these petitions is thus recorded: “The Petition of John Thurman and others for Leave to build A Market house in Thurman’s Slip: and the Petition of Peter Menier and others for Leave to build A Market house at Cortlandt’s Slip: and a Petition the common council for the privilege of building a public market-house at their own expense “in a Slipe or street Called and Known by the Name of Cortlandt’s Street,” in the West Ward. This petition is rejected. —From the original petition, in file labelled “Filed Papers, 1700-1800,” city clerk’s record-room. See also March 15, 1735.

The common council orders payment of £755 to Stephen Bayard “for Materials and Work done in the Markeet Barke.” —M. C., V. 58. This is the first mention of the name of this market in the Minutes; see, however, a newspaper reference to “Koenties Market,” under Sept. 4, 1732. For earlier market on this site, see April 18, 1661; and for an account of the establishing, and eventual removal, of the market, seeinfra. The market was erected here, see De Voe’s Market-Book, 115-14. David Grim’s ingenious account (MS.) of the origin and meaning of the names of the slips of this period in bundle of MSS. marked "1739-1747," in box labelled "New York, 1700-1760," at N. Y. Hist. Soc., is evidently in error in some particulars.

Capt. Win. Ellis, of the man-of-war "Goodpast," having written the letter that he has orders to sail for South Carolina and is in need of men, the council issues impress warrants. On Aug. 5, he asked that an embargo be laid on all ships until he completed his crew, but the council advised against it—Col. Coun. Min., 341.

Aug. 12. Clarke informs the lords of trade that the last assembly voted funds for the repair of Fort George, but not half enough "to put it in a defensible condition."—N. Y. Col. Doc., VI. 215. See May 22.

The common council orders that one alderman, one petty constable, and four firemen, shall patrol the streets, lanes, wharves, and alleys of the city every Sunday from daylight to the time of setting the military guard, and from five in the afternoon (or the discharge of the military guard) to the evening. On the following Sunday, one assistant alderman, the high constable or a marshal, one petty constable, and three firemen are to perform this duty. In this manner the aldermen, etc., in one group, and the assistants etc., in the other group are to take turns. These steps are taken "to prevent the Scandalous and unchristian irregularities lately So much Practised: by Negroes Children and others on the Sabbath day in this City."—M. C. C., V: 59. In December following (see Dec. 21), this plan was abandoned and, instead, a guard composed of a constable and 12 men was ordered to watch from sunrise to sunset.—Ib. Id., V: 31.

Sept. The provincial council receives a letter from Cadwalader Colden concerning Luke Barrington, arrested for seditious and treasonable words. Barrington, who has passed himself off for a schoolmaster and a Methodist preacher under the name of Singleton, is ordered to be kept in prison.—Col. Coun. Min., 341.

On John Chambers' application, the common council orders that "the Lease formerly Made by this Corporation to Coll Philipse M'John Roosevelt and himself [see Oct. 1, 1743] for the Land of the Bowling Green near the fort in this City be renewed for Eleven years to Commence from the Expiration of the first Lease upon payment of Twenty Shillings an Annum for the said Eleven years to Come."—M. C. C., V: 61. See also Man. Com. Coun. (1858), 627-38.

On the petition of Mary Burton, who is under age, George Jos. Moore, the clerk of the council, is appointed by the council to be her guardian for receiving the reward offered in the case of the negro conspiracy.—Col. Coun. Min., 341. See April 10 and May 11.

Oct. A horse-race is scheduled to be run on this date, the horses to be "entered the Day before the Race, with Adam van den Berg living on the Church Farm, or at the Post on the Day of running . . . ."—N. Y. Jour., Sept. 15, 1742. The tavern and garden of Adam van Denberg stood on the west side of Broadway between the present Vesey and Barclay Sts., upon the site of the later Aster House, and the race-track also was in the Church Farm. The tavern, or "meal-house," of Van Denberg is indicated upon the Map of Twenty Shillings in the English Annals for the said Eleven years to Come.—M. C. C., V: 61. See also Man. Com. Coun. (1858), 627-38.

This same day, a letter is appointed by the common council "to wait on the Chief Justice & Desire his opinion whether any Law Exempts the people Called Quakers: from Serving as Constables in this City."—M. C. C., V: 67. On Feb. 25, 1743, the committee reported the opinion of the chief-justice to be "that no Quaker was Compellable to Serve in the Office of Constable Ist being an Office of Trust."—Ib. Id., V: 626.

The corporation of New York City petitions the assembly, stating that "besides the great Loss and Damages, which the City and its Inhabitants have sustained, by the late wicked Conspiracy of the Negroes, a Demand is now made on the Corporation for the being of the Pilot Boat" by this law for which they are to be paid, and for the Execution of them; which the said Corporation is in no Manner of Ways able to discharge, and that it would add a very great Hardship on the Inhabitants to lay it to them, as they have already so greatly suffered by the said Conspiracy." They therefore ask for payment for the negroes, their trials, and executions, out of some public fund of the province, or for some other reasonable relief.—Assembly Jour., V: 83.

As a result of the so-called "Negro Conspiracy," 14 blacks were burned at the stake, 18 were hanged, and 71 transported.—Horn- and John's Jour., Appendix, 12-15. See Feb. 28, 1743.

The petition of Francis Cowen-hoven and Samuel Bayard to the common council for a ferry over the Hudson River to We- hawk is read and referred for further consideration.—M. C. C., V: 67. This is the first suggestion in the records of a ferry across the Hudson. The petition does not appear to have been granted. For later developments, see Feb. 23, 1753.

A vendue is ordered to be held on Oct. 27 at the "house of the Widow English," for letting the stalls and standings of the public markets.—M. C. C., V: 67-68. On Nov. 13, another vendee for farming the L. I. ferry was ordered to be held on Nov. 27 at the house of the "Widow English Near the Meal Market."—Ibid., V: 71. The death of William English, whose tavern was next the old Custom House on Pearl St, evidently occurred between Aug. 7, 1749 (see "the House of William English" in N. Y. Gen. of that day), and Oct. 23, 1743, soon after which his widow must have removed to this new site, which was near the corner of Wall and Pearl Sts.

The act of this year appropriating various sums of money for the support of the government provides, among other things, for the payment of the lieutenant-governour's house rent (£50 per annum, as before). The commissioners appointed by the act of May 22 for repairing Fort George are allowed £250 for that work and "for completing the Stone Platforms already begun in Fort George and in the Battery on the Flat Rock behind the Said Fort."—Col. Lec. N. Y., III: 233-34.

A public vendue is advertised to be held on this date for leasing the L. I. ferry for five years from March 25, 1743, "at the house of the Widow English Near the Meal Market."—M. C. C., V: 71. A new ordinance by Snipe, entitled "The Night Watch," is approved for publication. For the previous law see Dec. 14, 1731. This is declared to be necessary "to prevent the Conspiracy Insurrection or Plotting of Negro's & other Slaves." The law requires that one of the constables of the six wards south of Fresh Water, in his turn, together with 11 watchmen (or as many more as the mayor and three aldermen shall appoint), shall keep watch every night or find a substitute. The regulations are full and explicit regarding hours, routes, and duties of the constables and watchmen.—M. C. C., V: 77-81. See also Aug. 25, and Man. Com. Coun. (1859), 597. 598.

New York was described at this time as "the pleasantest & best built City in all British America. It now contains 2000 Houses [cf. Grim's statement, 1744], most of them of Stone, & has a great Trade in Furs, Logwood, and other Commodities."—"The British Monarchy," engraved in the South Sea's Duchess of York, which was published and published by act of parliament, Oct. 1, 1748, p. 170.

James Parker begins publication of The New-York Weekly Jan. Post-Boy. The date of first issue is determined by the date of the earliest issue found, that of Feb. 1, 1743 (No. 52).—See "Bibliog. of Am. Newspapers," by Bingham, in Am. Antiq. Soc. Proc. (1917), 511. For the subsequent changes in the name and ownership of this paper, see Early Newspapers, II: 427. This was the third newspaper established in New York. At that time the other newspapers published in the city were The New-York Gazette, of William Bradford & Henry de Forest (ibid., II: 420), and The New-York Weekly Journal, of John Peter Zenger (ibid., II: 421). At first, the Post-Boy was of quarto size, but with the issue of July 25, 1744, it was enlarged to folio. The last issue bearing the original title was that of Jan. 12, 1747 (No. 208). For the first change in name, see Jan. 19, 1747, p. 22.

An advertisement for the sale of the house occupied by John Waddell, together with a coach-house opposite the house of Anthony Rutgers, application is to be made to Daniel Bloom at "the Merchants Coffee House."—"N. T. Post-Boy, Jan. 16, 1743. This is the first recorded reference to Bloom's tavern (formerly the Jamaica Publick House) which later became so famous. For history of this tavern, see June 19, 1728.

May Capt. Warren informs the deserters from the “Launceston” that if they return before June 15 they will be forgiven. He also offers a reward of £5 for each sailor found more than five miles from New York without a “Ticket of leave” such sailor to be lodged in jail—"N. Y. Jour", May 30, 1745. See also Sept. 19.

June In a letter of this date, Cornelius van Horne (see Sept. 29, 1736) writes that “the Dutch tongue Declines fast amongst Us Especially with the Young people. And all Affairs are transact’d in English and that Language prevails Generally Amongst Us.”—From miscellaneous MSS. in the N. Y. Hist. Soc. Van Horne was a member of the general assembly and of the common council.—M. C.C., VI: 214, 272.

Alderman Simon Johnson, chairman of the ferry committee (M. C. C., VI: 82-85), notifies the common council of a hearing he has recently held on a complaint made by the lessee of the ferry, Richard Hallock, against the master of the Company’s ferry, John Hendrick Buist, one of the trustees of the “Township of Brookland.” Baker had demanded of Remson two shillings, one penny, for ferriage of Remson and goods in Remson’s own boat (see ferry regulations, Nov. 5, 1717). Remson claimed a right to so transport himself and goods free, but did not show any valid objection to the claim. However, Alderman Johnson gave judgment against him, ordering that he pay the demand to Baker by 10 o’clock the next morning, with costs. As he still refuses, the common council unanimously sustains the position taken by Johnson, and orders the arrest and commitment of Remson in the jail until payment is made.—Ibid., 89-90.

Capt. Warren informs all deserters from the ship “Launceston” that if they return before Oct. 5 they will be forgiven; otherwise, they will be prosecuted.—"N. Y. Jour", Sept. 19, 1745. See May 30.

George Clinton, the new governor of the province, having arrived in the preferry ship, was received by his Majesty’s Secretary of War and Warrants “near the new Battery, under the Defence of the Guns of the Loo and the Fort,” and is received by “his Majesty’s Council for this Province, the Mayor and Corporation, the Officers of the Militia, and principal Gentlemen of this City;” he proceeds to “his Honour, the Lieutenant-Governor’s (George Clarke’s residence) that they being bidden by his Majesty’s Secretary of State, remitting published his commission in Council, and taking the usual

A There was but one Printer in the Province of New-York, that printed a publick Newspaper, I was in hopes, if I undertook to publish another, I might make it worth my while; and I soon found my Hopes were not groundless; my third Paper was printed, Nov. 25th, 1734, and I continued printing and publishing of them, I thought to the Satisfaction of every Body, till the January following, when the Chief Justice was pleased to administer upon the Doctrine of Libels, in a brief Charge given in that Term to the Grand Jury, and afterwards on the third Tuesday of October, 1734, was again pleased to charge the Grand Jury in the following Words.

"Gentlemen, I shall conclude with reading a Paragraph or two out of the Case Book, concerning Libels; they are arrived to that Heighth, that they call loudly for your Attention; it is high Time to put a Stop to them; for at the same Time everything is carried on, when all Order and Government is endeavorous to be stumped on; Reflections are cast upon Persons of all Degrees, and every Thing is said in Seditious, if not in an Intemperate Language; and every Thing that may arise from any Disturbance of the publick Peace, may not in part, if not in whole, be at your Dooer."

Hawkins, in his Chapter of Libels, considers three Points, 1. What is to be called a Libel. 2. Who are liable to be punished for it. 3. In what Manner they are to be punished. Under the 2d, he says, "It is certain, not only he who transmits or procures another to com[pose] it, but also he who prints it, or procures another to publish it, are in Danger of being punished for it, and it is laid not to be material whether he who first composes a Libel, knows any Thing of the Conduct or Effets of it or not; for nothing could be more

The common council having ordered the draft of an address to His Excellency George Clinton, captain-general and governor-in-chief, it is read and approved. He is congratulated upon his services, and his name and that of his son are particularly mentioned in his speech "to the Late Assembly on Tuesday Last;" and it is voted the freedom of the city, which is to be handsomely engraved on parchment, with the affixed seal of the corporation enclosed in a gold box of about £20 value to be made by Charles Le Roux, goldsmith. — M. C. C. V: 95-97. It was delivered Sept. 30.—Ibid., V: 100. The early completion and delivery of the freedom suggests the probability that Le Roux anticipated the order for the box, and prepared it in advance.

Oct. There is advertised a "Solar or Camera Obscura Microscope," now to be seen at "the house of Mr. John Kip, in Broad street, where the sun will serve all the day long." Also a "masonic clock made by that great master of machinery, David Lockwood." The latter instrument, which is operated "by springs only," plays the "choicest airs from the celebrated operas ... the French horn pieces performed upon the organ, German and common flute, bagpipes, &c. as sonatas, concertos, marches, minuets, jigs and schoot airs, composed by Corelli, Alberoni, Mr. Handel, and other great and eminent masters of music." It has been shown before the king in St. James's palace.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 17, 1743.

The brig "Hester" and the sloop "Polly" are fitting out at New York for a "cruising Voyage against the Enemy." All "Gentlemen, Sailors and others" are invited "to try their Fortunes." The brig is "a fine new single Deck Vessel of 150 Tons, to mount 32 Guns, and to be manned with 120 Men." The sloop is "also new, Burthen 100 Tons, to mount 26 Guns, and be manned with 80 men. They have to go in Company." The "Articles" (of agreement for sailors, &c.) are "at the house of Mr. Benjamin Kierstede, Tavernkeeper on the New Dock."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 17, 1743.

The governor and council consider a letter from the lords justices against the impending war with France.—Cal. Coun. Min., 33.

Nov. Clinton addresses the council and the newly elected assembly.

He says: "The short time I have been with you has not permitted me minutely to Examine into the State of your fortifications, the security & well maintaining of which has (since my arrival) been so constantly recommended to you by His Majesty, that I am indeed very desirous of the observance of all His Majesty for a late large supply of warlike stores, it will be incumbent upon you to shew your thankfulness by making immediate provision for the purchase of such others, as in the judgment of our Superiors ought to be had at the proper Charge and Expenditure of the province." He also hopes that the inhabitants will not suffer "the usual Place of their Governor's Residence, to lie longer in the Ruins, to which the late unhappy Fire has reduced it."—Jour. Leg. Coun., II: 820. For the assembly's subsequent action on this subject, see May 19, 1744.

A petition of several inhabitants of New York City is presented to the assembly, which states that "the said City has for this two or three years past, been visited with violent Fevers, which not only carried off many of the Inhabitants, but likewise obstructed their Trade, and Commerce, which it's conceived is occasioned by the Filth and Dirt lying in the Streets and Slips, in the Heat of Summer, together with offensive Trades being carried on, and Hogs and Dogs kept within the same." They therefore "pray the Premises may be taken into Consideration, and that an Act may be passed for the Removal, and preventing for the future, the said Nuisances."—Assemb. Jour., II: 7. As a result of this and similar protests, the common council was led to pass several ordinances improving public sanitation.—See Feb. 17, 1744.

A new Militia Act is passed. It contains all the principal provisions of previous acts, as amended, with some additions. Dec. See May 6, 1744; Nov. 27, 1723; July 17, 1721; July 24, 1741; Oct. 3, 1735; Nov. 27, 1741. Among exemptions from military duty are now included the officers of the peace, high sheriffs, coroners, "and other civil Officers of his Majesties Government in this Colony, and all other officers of Courts, ... School Masters, ... One Miller to each Mill Ferryman and Persons Employed in Furnaces for making of Iron." Indians and negro slaves are still not permitted "to be Listed ... do any Duty belonging to the Militia in this Colony." The provisions of the act do not "extend to the Members of his Majesties Council the Clerk of the Council or his Deputy or their Domestic Servants." All commission officers of the regiment of New York of the independent companies, and of the Independent company, "Shall bear their Swords every Sunday during the Continuance of their Commissions," under penalty for neglect. If any naval force should "make an Attempt upon the City of New York," and there should not be sufficient gunpowder belonging to the government for the defence of the fortifications, there shall be purchased or impressed by the field officers of the New York City regiment, by order of the governor, commander-in-chief, lieutenant-governor, or the council, as much powder as necessary, and this shall be paid for by enactment of the general assembly.—Cal. Laws N. Y., III: 321-29.

This law was re-enacted with amendments Sept. 21, 1744 (p. 66). The provincial legislature passes a "Septennial Act" (following the precedent of parliament which, in the first year of the reign of "his Late Majesty," passed such an act), limiting the continuance of the general assemblies in this province to seven years, unless dissolved by the governor or commander-in-chief.—Cal. Laws N. Y., III: 191-235. The annual Act of Dec. 5, 1745. This act remained in force down to the Revolution.—Doc. Hist. N. Y., IV: 145 (footnote).

The act of this year providing for the payment of the expenses of the government contains, among other provisions, one for the governor's honourable rent, at the rate of £200 per annum.—Cal. Laws N. Y., III: 209-10.

A letter of Dec. 10 from William Smith and Samuel Clowes, addressed to Alderman Johnson, is referred to the common council by the deputy-mayor; the letter states that, at the last supreme court, on motion of Hendrick Remson, Smith was appointed council for Remson "in an Action Belating to y Right of the People of Brooklyn to Free flargage to and from the City of New York."—See under June 7, 1743. The letter states that the city be represented by an attorney at that court. A committee of the common council is appointed to secure the services of Mr. Murray, Mr. Alexander, and Mr. Clowes, as counsel for the city, to defend the suit.—M. C. C. V: 110-11. The action of "Remson vs. The Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of N. Y.," continued in the city and supreme court records for over 30 years, and was settled finally, in 1775, in favour of the plaintiff's heirs.—Vul. II, 1751, 1766, 442-43, 444, 459, 452-53, VII: 343; and Paroch. Roll, F. 230-1, in the country clerk's office. This result appears to have been justified by the terms of the Montegomery Charter, and by the Ferry Act of Oct. 14, 1712 (p. 82). A collateral attempt to break the city'serry monopoly was attempted by an appeal to the assembly.—See Jan. 7, 1746. The whole subject of the city's ferry rights is discussed in Hoffman, Treatise on the Estate and Rights of the Corporation, I: 273-307.

"A Plan of the City and Environs of New York," showing the principal landmarks at this time, was drawn from memory in 1813 by David Grin, then 36 years of age. It is now preserved in the N. Y. Hist. Soc., and is reproduced as PI. 32-a, Vol. I, with an accompanying description. On the back of the original, Grin gives the number of houses in the city in this year, as follows: "The west side of Broadway, to the river 239. The east side of Broadway, with the west side of Broad Street 232. The east side of Broad Street, with the west side of William Street 324. The east side of William Street, with the west side of Pearl Street 433. The east side of Pearl Street, to the East River 1141."

17 by the grand jury for tolerating certain nuisances, a committee of the common council is appointed to consider means of removing them. The board orders that the ordinance for cleaning the streets, lanes, and alleys of the city shall be published in all the "publick papers," and that 40 notices of this by-law shall be printed and "affixed in the most public places, with the warning that "for the future the breach of the Said Law will be duly punished."—M. C. C., V: 111-12. To further improve the public health, a committee is chosen to draft an ordinance for "Removing Such Trades out of the City as are Publick Nuisances."—Ibid, 112. For the subsequent action of the common council, see March 2, and May 17.

20 The brig "Mary and Ann" arrives from Jamaica with small-pox on board. It is quarantined off "Bedlars" Island (see June 28, 1758), and the health certificate issued by Dr. ROCKOL KIERSTED is called into question. James Jauncey, master of the vessel, refuses to go to quarantine, and prosecution against him for contempt is ordered. After Dr. Kiersted is examined, the brig is allowed to come up to the town. General quarantine measures are now ordered.—Cal. Com. Min., 343.

Gov. Clinton issues a proclamation forbidding masters of vessels to send vessels to call at the wharfs or docks where the quarantine ships have been visited and a certificate of health issued.—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 5, 1744. The proclamation has been reprinted from the Post-Boy in Man. Com. Coun. (1867), 755-56.

It is announced that on this date a race will be run "between a Mare called Ragged Kate, belonging to Mr. Peter De Lancey, and a Horse called Monk, belonging to the Hon. William Montagu, Esq; for 200 L."—N. T. Post-Boy, Jan. 30, 1744. No mention is made of the location of the track, or that the race was probably held on the Church Farm.—See Oct. 11, 1742.

The grand jury of the supreme court having indicted the city for maintaining public nuisances, and the common council having appointed a committee on Feb. 17 to consider how these ought to be removed (M. C. C., V: 111-12), this committee now advertises, "The Fly Slip is a great and Intolerable Common Nuisance; that there is "filth: Dirt and Nastiness" under the Meal Market and on the ground in front of it at low-water mark; and that Old Slip is "a Great and Publick Nuisance." All of these nuisances should be removed at the city's expense.—Ibid, V: 111-12. A provincial act to remove certain other nuisances was passed on May 3 (p. v.). See also Feb. 28, 1746.

France declares war against Great Britain. This was the beginning of King George's War, which lasted about four years. See March 24.

Members of the assembly are notified by "circular Letters" that they are to meet April 17, "according to Adjournment."—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 19, 1744. Whether these were conveyed by regular post or by special messenger is not stated in this record.

It is reported that Charles Johnson and Returning England, in their last Wednesday's morning Edition of the "New England Courant," "write a most sensible letter to the51

26 To inform persons applying to the supreme court to be naturalized, Parker publishes a clause of the act of parliament, "passed May 7th, 1743, Year of his present Majesty's Reign," entitled "An Act for naturalizing such foreign Protestant, and others therein mentioned as are settled, or shall settle, in any of his Majesty's Colonies in America." It provides that no person, except Quakers and Jews, shall be naturalized, "unless such Person shall have received the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper in some Protestant or Reformed Congregation within this Kingdom of Great Britain, or within some of the said Colonies in America, within Three Months next before his taking and subscribing the said Oaths, and making, repeating and subscribing the said Declaration; and shall, at the Time of his taking and subscribing the said Declaration, produce a Certificate signed by the Person or Persons by which he was admitted, and attested by two credible Witnesses, whereas an Entry shall be made in the Secretary's Office of the Colony, wherein such Person shall so inhabit and reside, as also in the Court where the said Oaths shall be so taken, as aforesaid, without any Fee or Reward." This person applying to be naturalized must bring with him to court the witnesses to the certificate, that they may be questioned whether they saw the minister sign the certificate.—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 26, 1744.

The common council orders that "all the Owners of the Houses between Mr. Garves or dockets by the Bowling Green have Liberty to Range their Fruits in Such Manner as the Alderman and Assistant of the West Ward shall think proper."—M. C. C., V: 117.

Paraker announces that "The New-Printing Office is now removed from Hunter's Bay to the Corner-House next Door to Mrs. Parmyter's, where all Persons may have Printing done as usual." On May 7, he announced that his printing-office was "now removed."—N. Y. Post-Boy, April 30, May 7, 1744.

For his last previous move, see July 25, 1743.

May 3. Advertiser announces: Leather Dressers: Garters: Gloves or any other use whatsoever that may be a Nuisance to the Inhabitants within this City to the Southward of Fresh Water or within One hundred Yards to the South Side thereof under the Penalty of Ten Shillings for every Day for Every such flat or Pitt So had Under said Limitation. The owner or occupant of the land where these pits are made let them up with earth, under the same penalty for neglect. No one is permitted to keep "any Live hog or hogs to the South Ward of the Fresh Water." Also "no Dye of Hatters or other dyers or Corrupted Noisom Water of Starch Makers shall be Poured or Suffered to Run into the Channel of the Streets of this City Either by Night or by Day," from March 25 to November 1 each year, "Nor Suffered to Remain in the houses and Yards or other places of the Inhabitants of this City Living to the South Ward of Fresh Water." It is further ordered that "no Dirt flitches: Shells of Oysters Clams or any Shell fish from the first Day of May to the first Day of October in every Year shall be Suffered to Remain in the Houses: Cellars: Yards or other places of any of the Inhabitants of this City to the Southward of Fresh Water" for more than 24 hours; "Nor Suffer Any person or persons Presume to Lay any Dung: Flitch: or any offal on any part of the Commons or Vacant Lots to the South Side of the Poorhouse and the House Commonly Called the Guard house of this City."

A penalty is prescribed for failure to perform each of these requirements; half the amount collected to be paid to the churchwardens for the use of the city's poor, and the other half to the person or persons who shall institute and prosecute the suit for recovery against the offenders. Persons having "flacks" or pits in Beekman's swamp (see Vol. I, Pl. 30), which are already made or have been placed there during the tenure of the present owners, are exempt from the operation of the law.—M. C. V: 118-21.

This has been banished by the city order of June 7, 1676 (p. 3-6).

On this day, a young girl is "run over by a Chaise & bruised so much that she died the next Morning."—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 7, 1744.

Street vehicles, by this time, evidently had become so numerous as to be a menace to pedestrians.—Houghton, Coaches of Colonial N. Y. (1896), 12.

Before the publication of city or trade directories, tradesmen relied upon advertisements in the newspapers to make their places of business known to the public. The following are examples of a topographical character:—"For hire to let, who for many years has lived at the Sign of the Platter in Dock Street opposite to Mr. Franks, is now removed to the lower End of Wall Street, near the Meat Market, in the House where Mr. Joseph Sacket lately lived, and has the same Sign: . . . most Sorts of Pewter-Ware, wholesale or Retail, at reasonable Rates; and gives ready Money for old Pewter and Brass."—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 7, 1744.

"Thomas Brown, Cutler, is no more removed from Hanover Square, into the House of Mr. Brandt Schuyler, in Broad Street, the Corner of Stone Street, near the Long Bridge, where any Persons may be supplied, as usual, with all Sorts of Ironmongery and Cutlery Ware, by Wholesale or Retail. Also Razors and Surgeon's Instruments ground in the best manner, at reasonable Rates."—N. Y. Post-Boy

Gov. William Shirley, of Massachusetts, writes to Gov. Thomas, of Pennsylvania, giving information of the declaration of war between France and Great Britain. The letter well illustrates the round-about methods and long delays in transmitting such important intelligence at this period. He states: "A vessel arrived from Glasgow which brought a printed Copy of the French King's Declaration of War dated the 13th of March, (I suppose New Style) against the Crown of Great Britain, and a written Copy of his Majesty's Declaration of War against the Crown of France dated the last day of March, which the Master of the Glasgow Vessel took from a printed Copy on board a Vessel which he met in his passage, both which Declarations I make no doubt are Authentic."—From the original letter, as catalogued for sale by Hendkes, Phila. (item No. 700). Oct. 22, 1819. See also May 21.

Paraker announces for publication, on May 19, A Journal of the Proceedings against the London Club in New York, in 1741 and 1742, and urges the payment of unpaid subscriptions. The price is 10s.—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 11, 1744. A preliminary announcement appeared in the Post-Boy of April 16. The work referred to was by Daniel Horsmanden, the recorder of the city. His preface is dated April 14, 1744. The book has the following long title: A Journal of the Proceedings in the Detection of the Conspiracy formed by Some White People, in Conjunction with Negro and other Slaves, for Burning the City of New-York in America, and Murdering the Inhabitants. Which Conspiracy was partly put in Execution, by Burning Excell. Major's House in Fort George, within the said City, on Wednesday the Eighteenth of March, 1743, and setting Fire to several Dwelling and other Houses there, within a few Days succeeding, And by another Attempt made in Prosecution of the same infernal Scheme, by putting Fire between two other Dwelling-Houses within the said City, on the Fifteenth Day of February, 1743, which was accidentally and timely discovered and extinguished. Containing, I. A Narrative of the Trials, Condemnations, Executions, and Behaviour of the several Criminals, at the Gallows and Stake, with their Speeches and Confessions; with Notes, Observations and Reflections occasionally interspersed throughout the Whole. II. An Appendix, wherein is set forth some remarkable Events concerning the said Conspiracy and Conspirators, which has come to Light since their Trials and Examinations. III. Lists of the several Persons (Whites and Blacks) committed on Account of the Conspiracy and of the several Criminals executed; and of those transported, with the Places where they are now. By the Recorder of the City of New-York. Printed by James Parker, at the New Printing-Office 1744.

The title sufficiently explains the contents. The author states in the preface (p. 1), as a reason for writing it, that "There had been some wanton, wrong-headed Persons amongst us, who took the Liberty to arrange the Justice of the Proceedings," and who declared "That there was no Plot at all." The author further states (p. 1) that every formality, question, and answer is not published, because "we have no here, as in our Mother Country, who make it a Business to take Notes upon such Occasions; or any others, that we know of, who are so dexterous at Short-Hand, as to be sufficiently qualified for such an employment, all that could be collected " from the Notes that were taken by the Court, and Gentlemen at the Bar."

The outcome of this publishing venture was revealed in the following notice which Parker printed Oct. 16, 1748: "The Printer hereof having by him a Number of six Volumes containing the Negroes, who lately plotted the Destruction of this City; and as he has been a considerable Loser by printing that Book, he proposes to sell 'em very cheap, viz 3s. A Piece, which is not quite one third of what they were at first sold for—And as it may be a necessary Memento in all Families in this Colony; and so 'tis probable they will never have the Opportunity of getting them so cheap again; and those who are inclined to purchase, are desired to be expeditious, lest they may be disappointed."

Merchants having made contracts to supply the French at Cape Breton Island with provisions and military stores, a proclamation is ordered by the provincial council to be issued, forbidding the exportation of these commodities.—Cal. Coun. Min., 344.

Gov. Clinton, in urging the assembly to make additional provision for fortifications, asks that "the Walk round the Battery on Copsay Rocks, be raised with sod work, as it will strengthen that Battery, and defeat the Attempts of an Enemy to land there, and that an officer's Guard of the Militia, be kept there every Night; for which Purpose the Guard Room ought to be fitted for their Reception; Gates erected at each End of the said Battery, and two or more Centre Boxes placed there, and a Quantity of Candles sufficient for that Guard."—Assem. Jour., II: 22. Such a bill was passed on May 19 (p. v).

Brandt Schuyler is appointed a city surveyor.—M. C. C., V: 122.

A provincial act provides for repairing fortifications, rebuilding the governor's house in the fort, and defraying the expense of other undertakings for the well-being of the city and security of the province. At present, "the Fortifications of this Colony are not in sufficient repair to oppose the Attacks of a Formidable Enemy, or to encourage the good People thereof, To make a vigorous defense in case of an attack. Artillery, and the present Situation of affairs in Europe is Such as render it absolutely necessary, to Repair & compleat Them at this critical juncture." The act also states that "the usual Residence of the Governors of this Colony still lags in the ruins occasioned by the late wrecked commodious house, conceived highly necessary, as well for the accommodation of the Governors . . . as for the Credit & Reputation of the Colony, To Erect a new commodious House in or near the Place, where the old one stood." It is therefore enacted that, out of the revenue derived from the liquor excise, the treasurer shall pay to the then commissioners, Peter Jay, John Roosevelt, and William Roome, who are appointed to apply the money to the objects specified, the following sums:

For mounting cannon "on the Flint Rock Battery, and Erecting one or Two Centennial Boxes," £161.

For erecting a fence at both ends of this battery, with a "Gate to open fit for a Cart to go in upon Occasion, and a Turn Pike," and also a "Turn Pike" at the north end, £171:5.

For repairing the sod work on this battery, £72:0.

For putting "the Brasses on the Carriages and Purchasing others that are wanting," £9:15.

For "Building a good & Sufficient Stone Wall at the Foot of the South West part of the Flag Mount to support the ground thereof," £5:5.

For "Repairing & Painting the Walls of Fort George," £5:3.

For "Building a good New Plat Form on Copsy Battery of Planks, twelve Inches in thickness and not less than six feet in width, and twelve Inches wide clear of Sap, on good Substantial white Oak Sleepers, not less than Five under the Length of one Plank," £8:55.

For gunpowder to be stored in the powder house of the city, £95:0.

For "Building & compleating a House for the Residence of the Governors in the Place before mentioned," £6,000. It shall be so feet long, 45 feet wide, three stories above ground, the two lower to be 11 feet each and the upper one 8 feet (high), with "a Low Roof and no Dormant windows, conformable to a Plan Signed & approved of by his Excellency the Governor," etc. The commissioners are directed "to make use of all the Stashes, Doors, Locks, Hinges, Iron, and other Materials Saved of the late House," and they are empowered "to dispose of the Plank and Timber of the Old Plat form on the Copsy Battery," and to "Employ the produce" in finishing the new platform.—Cal. Laws N. Y., III: 339-46.

The appropriation of £6,000 for rebuilding the governor's residence, as provided by this act, proved inadequate, and additional appropriations were made. Attempts against them, and the present appropriation of £6,000 for rebuilding the governor's house, which was then almost finished, had been erected according to plans approved by him, at very great expense to the colony. This residence was not completed, however, until Oct. 21, 1749 (p. vii).

A letter bearing, received by the provincial council from Gov. Shirley, with news of a declaration of the war with France, Gov. Clinton, by order of the council (Cal. Coun. Min., 344), issues a proclamation beginning: "Whereas there is the greatest Reason to believe, that War has been for some time actually declared between the Courts of Great Britain and France; and I having been informed that, since the Account thereof has been brought into this Province, a great Quantity of Gun-Powder has been bought with an order for Exportation for the Use of the Vessels belonging to persons not to export any Gunpowder out of the province, more than shall be sufficient for the Use of the Vessels carrying the same."

Connecticut is called upon to help in case of an attack on New York City.—Cal. Coun. Min., 344. (At the top of page 344 in this Calendar, 1743 is a misprint for 1744.) Connecticut responded on June 14 by promising to raise 200 men if needed.—Ibid.

Two persons (perhaps commission merchants) advertise for sale a curious assortment of property:—"To be Sold. The Sloop 'King Solomon,' Burthen about 100 Tons (more or less) with all her Guns, Tackle and Apparel, now lying at Stephen Bayard's Wharf, in New York: Also a House and Lot of Ground in New York formerly known by the Name of the Anababist Meeting house: Also a Negro Woman that understands all sorts of House Work, and a Negro Boy; a Marble Chimney Piece, three Marble Tables, three Riding Chairs and a single Horse Chaise; 16,000 two foot shingles; 150 Elephant's Teeth; three Desks, two Cases of Drawers, a Mahogany Book Case, six Dozen of Boston Axes, 350 Gallons of Spirit's sundry sorts; Whoever inquires to buy any of the above may apply to Thomas Noble and Joseph Scott, in New York."—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 28, 1744.

As explained by Mr. Geo. W. W. Houghton, editor of The Hub, in a paper read before the N. Y. Hist. Soc., March 4, 1890,

"The Colonial 'chaise' was the progenitor of the modern New England in the old English was transformed by Dr. Holmes in his poem 'The Daemon's Masterpiece, or The Wonderful One-hoss Shay'; and it so closely resembled that well-known one-horse, hooded vehicle, slung on thoroughbraces or straps connecting with long wooden braces at the rear, that no further description is required. The 'off-mentioned 'chair' was the Sedan-chair, as might at first be thought, this being the period when the wheelless sedan, borne by porters, still retained its aristocratic glory. The Colonial 'chair' was simply a small chaise from which the hood was omitted. But the Deane advertisement [see Feb. 27, 1766] also mentions the sedan, and thus shows that it was to some extent in use in New York as late as 1766. I regret that I have not been able to discover other references to it."—Houghton, Coaches of Colonial N. T., 19.

A violent earthquake shock at Boston is felt with considerably less violence in New York and on Long Island. The Boston occurrence is described in N. Y. Post-Boy, June 11, 1744.

The two New York newsmen, the brig "Hester" (Capt. S. Bayard) and the schooner "Folly" (Capt. Jellie), return to port (see Oct. 17, 1745) "with their Prize so much talk'd of, from Cape Fare." The prize "is a beautiful Ship, almost new, of near 200 Tons, and laden chiefly with Cocoa; but we don't hear that the Pieces of Eight have been found, as was reported: After unloading her at Cape Fare, several of the Men took their shares and left the Vessel. It is said a hail was beat out about 1,100 wt. of Cocoa per Man."

N. Y. Post-Boy, June 11, 1744.

The sloops "Clinton" and "Mary Ann" are fitting out at New York as privateers, and are soon to sail "for a cruising Voyage against his Majesty's Enemies." All "Gentlemen Sailors and Seamen" are invited to go with the ship. The new vessel is the Jamaica Arms on the New Docks, where they may see the Articles."—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 11, 1744. See Oct. 1.
Doctor Alexander Hamilton, a Scotch physician residing at Annapolis, comes to New York City for a sojourn which lasted nearly all summer. He records in his observations in a private journal, to which he gave the title “Itinerarium,” the many particulars of which remained unknown to historians until its publication, in 1907, by its present owner, Mr. William K. Bixby, of St. Louis. The printed title is Hamilton’s Itinerarium, being a narrative of a journey from Annapolis, Maryland, through Delaware, Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Massachusetts and New Hampshire, from May 10, 1744. This publication is edited by Albert Bubnell Hart, LL.D., professor of history at Harvard University. Mr. Bixby gives a brief history of the manuscript; while Dr. Hart’s Introduction is a biographical essay relating to the life and times of the author. It is not without, “contains abundant evidence of the crudity of much of the Colonial life;” but the author’s comments on what he saw and heard are told with entertaining good humour, and reflect, vividly, the personalities and characteristics which he encountered and described. These few extracts are selected for the facts and descriptions relating to New York City, of which they are in some instances the only, and in many, the best, record that now remains to us:

... I put my horses up at one Waghorn’s at the sign of the Cart and Horse [see Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 979]. This day fell a very considerable conflagration of towns, and of the old Scotsman, by now Jameson, sheriff of the city, and two aldermen, whose names I know not. He describes the sheriff and the scene. (pp. 48-49).

... After I had sat some time with this polite company, Dr. Colosson [Dr. Alexander Colonna], surgeon to the fort, called in, to whom I gave my opinion of the scenery. We then went to the old Scotsman, by now Jameson, sheriff of the city, and two aldermen, whose names I know not.” He describes the sheriff and the scene. (pp. 48-49).

On June 16, he records: “I found the city less in extent, but by the stir and frequency upon the streets, more populous than Philadelphia. I saw more shipping in the harbour. The houses are more compact and regular and in general higher built, most of them after the Dutch model, with their gable [gable] ends fronting the street. There are a few built of stone; more of wood, but the greatest number of brick, and a great many covered with pantile and glazed tile with the year of God when built figured out with plates of iron, upon the fronts of several of them. The streets in general are but narrow, and not regularly disposed. The best of them run parallel to the river, for the city is built all along the water, in general.”

“This city has more of an urban appearance than Philadelphia. Their wharfs are mostly built with logs of wood piled upon a stone foundation, and in several cases to the water’s edge. There is a spacious church [Trinity Church], belonging to the English congregation, with a pretty high, but heavy, clumsy steeple, built of freestone, fronting the street called Broadway. There are two Dutch churches, several other meetings, and a pretty large Town-house at the head of Broad street. The Exchange stands near the water, and is a wooden structure going to decay. From it a pier runs into the water called the Long Bridge, about fifty paces long, covered with plank and supported with large wooden posts. The Jews have one synagogue in this city.

The women of fashion here appear more in public than in Philadelphia, and less in attire. They come abroad generally in the cool of the evening and go to the Promenade...” (pp. 51-52).

Referring to services which he attended in Trinity Church, on June 17, he says: “... There was a large congregation of about a thousand... This church is above 100 feet long, and 80 wide. At the east end of it is a large semicircular area in which stands the altar, pretty well ornamented with painting and gilding. The galleries are supported with wooden pillars of the Ionic order, with carved work of foliage and cherub’s heads gilt between the capitals. There is a pretty organ at the west end of the church, consisting of great number of pipes, cold and hot; but I had not the satisfaction of hearing it play, they having at this time no organist; but the vocal music of the congregation was very good.” (p. 52).

... The castle, or fort, is now in ruins, having been burnt down three or four years ago by the conspirators, but they talk of repairing it again. The Lieutenant-Governor had there a house and a chapel, and there are fine gardens and terrace walks, from which one has a very general view of the city. In the fort are several guns, some of them brass and cast in a handsome mould. The new battery is raised with ramparts of turf, and the guns upon it are in size from twelve to eighteen pounders. The main battery is a great sloop-moored or semi-circular rampart built upon the water, being turfed upon a stone foundation, about 100 paces in length, the platform of which is laid in some places with plank, in others with flagstone. Upon it there are fifty-six great iron guns, well mounted, most of them being thirty-two pounders.” After dusk, Hamilton states, this platform is the general rendezvous of “the courtezan.” Here, he describes, with entertaining characterization, the conversation of the tipping landlord, Todd. (pp. 54-55).

On the evening of June 19, he wrote: “I went to a tavern in the Albion coffee-house along with Doctor Colchoun, where I heard a tolerable concerto of musick, performed by one violin and two German flutes.” (pp. 56-57). He heard another violinist, on July 6, at “the tavern, where he went in company with Abraham de Peyster, the treasurer of the province.

Under date of June 22, Dr. Hamilton describes the new Dutch church, completed in 1731, (see Oct. 12, 1730), as “a pretty large but heavy stone building, as most of the Dutch edifices are, quite destitute of taste or elegance.” The pulpit of this church is wrought, being of black walnut. There is a brass supporter for the great Bible that turns upon a swivel, and the pew is in a very regular order. The church within is kept very clean, and when one speaks or bows there is a fine echo. We went up into the steeple, where there is a pretty large and handsome bell, cast at Amsterdam, and a public clock. From this steeple we could have a full view of the city of New York.” (p. 60).

On board a sloop bound for Albany on June 22, Hamilton passed “a little town, starboard, called Greenwich, consisting of eight or ten neat houses, and two or three large buildings, in that on the same shore, a pretty box of a house, with an avenue fronting the river, belonging to Oliver Dulanice [Delancey]...” (pp. 60-61).

See Pls. 49 and 51, Vol I.

Returning to New York on July 6, Dr. Hamilton continued to write animated particulars of persons and places. Some of his observations may well be placed among the choicest bits of early American humour—See, for example, pp. 101-2, 104-6.

On July 7, he records: “... I waited upon Stephen Bayard, to whom my letters of credit were directed. ... I dined at Todd’s, and went in the afternoon to see the French prizes in the harbour. Both of them were large ships about 500 tons burden,—the one Le Jupiter and the other Le Saint François Xavier. Warren, who took the St. Francis, has gained a great character. His praise is in everybody’s mouth, and he has made a fine estate of the business...” (p. 105).

Recording the events of July 9, Dr. Hamilton observes: “The people of New York, at the first appearance of a stranger, are seemingly civil and courteous, but this civility and complaisance soon relaxes if he be not either highly recommended or a good drinker. To drink stoutly with the Hungarian Club, who are all bucker men, is the readiest way for a stranger to recommend himself, and a set among them are very fond of making a stranger drunk. To talk bawdy and to have a knock at punning passes among some there for good sterling wit. Governor Clinton himself is a jolly tippler and gives a good example, and for that one quality is esteemed among these dons.”

“The staple of New York is bread flour and skins. It is a very rich place, but it is not so cheap living here as at Philadelphia. They have very bad water in the city, most of it being hard and brackish. Ever since the negro conspiracy, certain people have been appointed to sell water in the streets, which they carry on a sledge in great cans and bring it from the water to the city, for it was when the negroes went for tea water [see “Sea-water Pump,” in Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 976] that they held their cabals and consultations, and therefore they have a law now that no negro shall be seen upon the streets without a lantern after dark.”

There is as much writing here by both houses of the Legislature as in any of the other American Provinces.

“They have a diversion here very common, which is the barbecuing of a turtle, to which sport the chief gentrify in town commonly go once or twice a week.”

"There are a great many handsome women in this city. They appear much more in public than at Philadelphia. It is customary here for the streets to be thronged. When the ladies and gentlemen walk the streets in the daytime they commonly use umbrellas, prettily adorned with feathers and painted.

"There are two coffee-houses in this city, and the northern and southern posts go and come here once a week. I was tired of nothing here but their excessive drinking, for in this place you may have the best of company and conversation as well as at Philadelphia." (pp. 106-8)

From July 10 to Aug. 30, Dr. Hamilton was absent from New York on a tour of Long Island and New England. On his return he found his house plundered, and put up by "patriots, a public house, whose landlord he mentions with characteristic good humour. (p. 210.) He describes the Indians "fishing for oysters in the gut before the door." Of his ride towards New York, on Aug. 31, he writes: "About three miles before I reached York I saw the man-of-war commanded by Commodore Warren lying in Turtle Bay. This was a festival day with the crew. They were roasting an entire ox upon a wooden spit, and getting drunk as fast as they could, Warren having given them a treat. I was over-taken here by a young gentleman who gave me a whole packet of news about prizes and privaterighting, which is now the whole subject of discourse." (pp. 211-12.)

Arriving in New York, Dr. Hamilton again put up his horses at "Waghorn's," and met Stephen Bayard, who took him to dine at "his brother's." Here he met a "great company of gentlemen," including Chief-Justice James de Lancey, Adrien Hageman, the wealthy merchant, Albert Moore, a lawyer, and some of those present and their conversation. (pp. 212-13.)

On Sept. 1, he again went to the Hungarian Club at night, where were present "the Chief Justice, the City Recorder, Mr. Phillips [Alphonse Philippe], the Speaker of the House of Assembly, and several others." He received news "of the Dutch having declared war against France, and the capture of some of the barrier towns in Flanders by the French, . . ." (pp. 214-15.)

Dr. Hamilton dined, on Sunday, Sept. 2, with Stephen Bayard. He records in his journal the following incident: "Just as we had done dinner, we heard two raps at the door solemnly laid on with a knocker. A gentleman in the company was going to see who it was, but Mr. Bayard desired him not to trouble himself, for it was only the "Dame." I asked who that was. He told me it was a fellow that made a course thro' one quarter of the town, giving two raps at each door as he passed to let the people in the houses know that the second bell [for church] had rung out. This man has a gratuity from each family for doing every new year. His address when he comes to ask for his presquise, is: 'Sir, or 'Madam, you know what I mean.' So he receives a piece of money, more or less. He is very necessary. This custom began when they had but one bell to warn the people to church, and that bell happened to be cracked, so, for the sake of ease, the sextons have kept it up ever since. Such a trilling office as this perhaps is worth about forty pounds a year York currency, tho' the poor fellow sometimes is drubbed for his trouble by new comers who do not understand the custom." (pp. 215-16.)

On the morning of Wednesday, Sept. 5, Dr. Hamilton went with Mr. Hogg "to the Jews' synagogue [on Mill St.], where was an assembly of about fifty of the sect of Abraham, Chanting and singing their doleful hymns round the sanctuary (where was contained the ark of the covenant and Aaron's rod dressed in robes of white silk. They had four great wax candles lighted, as large as a man's arm. Before the rabbi, who was elevated above the rest in a kind of desk, stood the seven golden candlesticks, transformed into silver gilt. They were all slip-shod. The men wore their hats in the synagogue, and had a veil of some white stuff, which they sometimes threw over their heads in their devotion; the women, of whom some were very pretty, stood up in a gallery like a hen-coop. They sometimes paused or rested a little from singing, and talked about business. My ears were so filled with their reiterated songs that I could not get the sound out of my head all day." (p. 218.)

On Sunday, Sept. 9, Dr. Hamilton went to the French Church (on King St.), and heard Rev. Louis Rou preach. "He is reckoned a man of good learning and sense; but, being foolishly carcassal, he has lost his country's honor at disputing with them so that the congregation has now dwindled to nothing." In the afternoon, he went "to the Presbyterian meeting and heard there a good puritanic sermon preached by one Pemberton." (pp. 222-23.)

Dr. Hamilton left New York on Sept. 11, taking the boat for Elizabethtown Point. Referring to his visit, he wrote: "I was sorry to leave New York, upon account of being separated from some agreeable acquaintance I had contracted there, and at the same time I cannot deny to myself that I was glad to remove from a place where the temptation of drinking (a thing so incompatible with my limber constitution) threw itself so often in my way. I knew here several mien of sense, ingenuity, and learning, and a much greater number of lops, whom I chose not to name, not so much for fear of giving offense, because I went to bed at six o'clock, as I was not worthy to be recorded either in manuscript or printed journals. These does commonly held their heads higher than the rest of mankind, and imagined few or none were their equals. But this I found always proceeded from their narrow notions, ignorance of the world, and low extraction, which indeed is the case with most of our aggrandized upstarts in these infant countries of America, who never had an opportunity to see, or (if they had) the capacity to observe the different ranks of men in polite nations, or to know what it is that really constitutes that difference of degree." (pp. 227-29.)

for encouraging his Ships of War and Privateers, are both come to hand, but neither Time nor Room permits them to be in this Week's Paper; but as both these Declarations will be printed at large immediately on his Excellency's Return, any of my Subscribers may then have them for sending."—N. T. Post-Boy, June 18, 1744.

"Four Privateers are now fitting up here with the utmost Expedition, viz. one Brig, and three Sloops, who will all be ready to sail in a few Days; they are almost man'd already; it is impossible to express with what Aleatery the Volunteers enter on board, and 'tis affirmed by all that understand the Matter, that the Articles are the most favourable to the Men of any Privateers since the Commencement of the War."—N. T. Post-Boy, June 18, 1744. A week later, they were ready; two more privateers were "in great Forwardness" to cruise against the French and Spaniards, and another was being prepared for the same service.—Ibid., June 25, 1744.

The "brave Commodore Warren" comes into port "in his Majesty's Ship the Launceston, with a French ship of 500 Tons, called Le St. Francois Xavier , which he took on the second Instant, in the Lat. 27° 31', in his Way from Antigua to this Place: She has on Board 300 Hogsheads of Sugar, 300 whereof are white Sugar, 52 Pound weight of Bar Gold, and 5000 Spanish Dollars, besides some Indigo, &c. This is the 13th French Vessel taken by this Ship, which began in Newport, and sailed for several other Vessels, and the general Acclamations of the People, as a Testimony of the Sense they have of the signal Services done by this Gentleman during the continuance of the War. The Launceston being very leaky, and long off the Careen, proceeded immediately to Turtle Bay, where she is to be fitted with all possible Expedition."—N. T. Post-Boy, June 25, 1744.

The sugar was to be sold at public vendue on July 3 "at the Store house of Messieurs Stephen De Lancey and Company."—Ibid., July 2, 1744. See Aug. 27; and Oct. 9, 1744.

The government having returned from Albany on June 26, the king's declaration of war against the French king, and his declaration for the encouragement of his ships of war and privateers, are proclaimed with the usual solemnity; "the streets being lined with the militia of this city, from His Excellency's house to the Fort, where they were first proclaimed, and from thence to the City Hall; to both places is subsoitl by all our attended and members of His Majesty's Council, the Corporation, and a great number of the principal gentlemen of this city. After the solemnity was over, they returned to His Excellency's house, where His Majesty's and the Royal Family's healths were drank."—N. T. Post-Boy, July 3, 1744.

At some time prior to this date, possibly as early as 1742 or July 1743, William Bradford took his former apprentice, Henry de Forest, into partnership, and from this time on The New-York Gazette here both their names as printers.—See Early Newspapers, II. 420; and "History of the New-York Newspapers," by Brigham, in Am. Antiq. Soc. Proceedings (1917), 416. See Nov. 19.

Aug. 10

It is ordered by Trinity vestry that "the Pulpit and Canopy be Painted a Mahogany Colour."—Trim., Min. (MS.).

5 The privateer sloop "Elizabeth" (Capt. Thomas Barnes), mounting to cannon guns and as many swivels with over 200 tons sail on a Cruise against his Majesty's Enemies," the fifth of the kind from New York.—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 9, 1744. See Aug. 31.

16 The privateer sloop "Don Carlos" (Capt. Abraham Kip), of 12 cannon guns and about as many swivels, to carry 100 men, is fitted and armed, ready to be launched anytime New York "on a Cruise against his Majesty's Enemies."—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 16, 1744. It sailed on Aug. 2 (p. 6).

The ship "David" (Capt. William Axon), of about 170 tons, is fitting out for this purpose, to mount 16 cannon guns and 16 swivel guns, and to carry 100 men. Eight cannon "to be removed to Mr. Rutger's Wharf, on the North-River, and Eight to Burnet's-Key, on the East River, for Land Batteries in Case of an Invasion," are other recommendations. In addition, the governor recommends that "The Magazine in Fort-Bedford, South-East End, be sufficiently repaired for the Reception and safe Custody of Gun-powder," and that a greater quantity, sufficient for the entire garrison, be provided (see July 3, 1745). "The rest of the Barracks in Fort-George," he says, "should be rebuilt, for the Accommodation of the two Indian Traders Companies which can not be lodged without them" (see Aug. 13, 1744). "A Battery or Foot Bank, should be raised along the inside of the Parapet on Copsey, and the Flat-Rock Batteries, to a proper Height, for the Musketeers to fire over." He advises that "The Bere on Copsey Battery" be filled up, "with Sodd Work, to prevent the Enemy's Landing there," and that "every other Gun on Copsey" should be taken away; that "each other Embrasure" should be filled up with "Sod Work:" that "Tomkins and Leader aprons should be made for all Cannon:" that "Provision should be made for sorting all the Cannon Shot, and placing them in Boxes, next to the proper Guns:" and that "Marrows with proper Officers should be provided for, to be kept in constant Exercise."—Assem. Jour., II: 25.

On July 31, the governor made the following additional recommendations: "A Battery of Six Guns at Red Hook on Nassau Island . . . maintained by the Force of the County," also "To erecting the three that were taken from the East side of this Battery in order to flank the east side of Copsey Battery as the flat-Rock Battery does to the Westward."—Jour. Leg. Coun., II: 80.

For the assembly's action on these recommendations, see Aug. 24.

Aug. 2 The privateer sloop "Don Carlos," commanded by Capt. Abraham Kip, mounting 12 cannon guns and 12 swivels, with upwards of 90 men on board, sails out of Sandy Hook, on a Cruise against his Majesty's Enemies. Two other vessels, a ship and a brig, are fitting out here for the same purpose.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 6, 1744.

Aug. 24 The assembly of New Jersey is tried before the supreme court of the province of New York "for counterfeiting the Bills of Credit of this Province, and uttering them knowing to be counterfeit." On Aug. 7 he was sentenced to death.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 13, 1744.

His plea for pardon was rejected by the governor and confirmed by Aug. 22.—Col. Coun. Min., 345. He was executed Aug. 24.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 27, 1744. See Feb. 4, 1755; Aug. 5, 1745.

10 Four privateers, the sloops "Clinton" (Capt. Seymour), "Mary-Ann" (Capt. Tucker), and "Polly" (Capt. Jeffreys), and the brig "Hester" (Capt. Bayard), bringing in six French prizes, counting to 16 cannon guns and a hundred and a half of Coppers with over 300 tons sail, was captured on July 21 and 22, "off the Grand Caycosses, after an obstinate, tho' not a very bloody Engagement of 10 Hours in which our Privateers had only one Man killed & 5 wounded by the Enemy, one Man killed by a Swivel's bursting, and 7 drowned by a Boat's over-setting. Their Cargoes consist of 1592 Hl. & 72 Barrels of Sugar white and brown, 40 Hl. & 18 Bar. of Indigo, 116 Casks Coffee, 26 Packs of Deer-Skins and a hundred and a quarter of the value of about 10,000 Pieces of Eight in Gold and Silver . . ."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 15, 1744.

Mayor John Cruger dies suddenly.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 13, 1744. For his obituary, see ibid., Aug. 20, 1744. By virtue of this chart, Gerardus Stuyvesant, the deputy mayor, becomes mayor.—M. C. V., 151. He presided for the first time as mayor at a meeting of the common council on Sept. 11—ibid., V: 125.

William Bradford (Jr.), a "Pewterer in Hanover-Square," advertises "Cannon four Pounders, and Swivel Guns, Cannon Shot of all Sizes," as well as pigs and bar iron, pots, kettles, etc.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 13, 1744. See also July 1, 1745. The elder Bradford did not suspend the Gazette until Nov. 19, 1744. He died May 23, 1752 (p. 6).—Cf. March 12, 1750.

Gov. Clinton recommends that some provision be made for the maintenance of prisoners of war. "It is utterly improper they should, contrary to all Precedents, be suffered to go about at large, viewing our Situation and Fortifications; a Practice not suffered by any other Country, in the time of the profound Peace . . ."—Assem. Jour., II: 32. On Aug. 31, the governor had received no reply regarding this matter from the assembly and demanded an immediate answer. He said it was unsafe to allow prisoners the liberty of the city, but on the other hand it might "be thought cruel to commit them to Goal, without a certain Subsistance provided for them."—Ibid., II: 35. The assembly replied on Sept. 12, by urging that the French prisoners be sent out of the colony as quickly as possible.—Ibid., II: 30-41. By Oct. 1, it had been decided to send them with a flag of truce to some of the French islands, to be exchanged for English prisoners.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 1, 1744; Col. Coun. Min., 345-46. The "French islands here referred to are probably the French West Indies (ibid., 249, 354, 359, 360, 365). See July 24.

The assembly approves of a resolution allowing £45 for rebuilding the barracks "at the New Part of Fort-George, for the better accommodation the Officers and Soldiers of his Majesty's Forces posted here."—Assem. Jour., II: 33. See July 24.

The assembly comes to several Resolutions of Allowances for repairing the Fortifications of New York, and erecting the Batteries, recommended by the Gov't, but a motion "that the South East Bastion of Fort George should be repaired," is defeated.—N. Y. Col. Docs., VI: 642.

James Parker, publisher of the Post-Boy, complains that letters left for him at the Merchants Coffee House have been destroyed or carried away by others. He hopes the legislature will take some action as "this most scandalous, base, and pernicious Practice is but too common and notorious in these Parts."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 27, 1744.

H. M. S. "Launceston" (Commodore Warren's ship), having undergone repairs—see June 23—is about ready to sail.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 27, 1744. On Sept. 16, the ship had fallen "down below the Fort," and the officers and crew were "beating up" for volunteers.—Ibid., Sept. 10, 1744. See Sept. 24.

It is computed that, with the completion of a brig in a few days, "an even Half-Share" vessels from New York will be completed for privateering against the French.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 27, 1744.

An open letter, signed "Beborah Sen.," who describes herself as a poor widow, protests against the act of May 3 (p. 3) for banishing hogs out of the city. She recounts the benefits of possessing live hogs, and the many useful parts of the dead animal, and points out, with good-humoured cynicism, several nuisances in the city that might be dispensed with to greater advantage.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 27, 1744.

The crew of Commodore Warren's man-of-war, which lies at Turtle Bay, holds a celebration. This is described by Dr. Hamilton, who remarks that "prizes and privateering" are now "the whole subject of discourse."—See June 15.

The French prize ship "Le Bon," which was captured on Aug. 8 near Cape Breton and a privateer commanded by Capt. Barnes (probably the "Elizabeth,"—see July 5), is brought into port, loaded with salt, flour, and corage.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 3, 1744.
This page contains text about the geography and history of Manhattan Island. The text includes references to historic events, places, and individuals, providing a historical account of the region. The content is dense with specific details, likely aimed at readers with an interest in early American history and geography. The text touches on various points, such as the establishment of land grants, the role of individuals like Valentine and Sir Peter Warren, and the development of the area through time. The text is rich with references to historical figures and events, such as the Dutch settlement and the British ownership. The language is formal, typical of historical documents, and uses detailed descriptions to convey the information accurately.

A provincial act is passed to raise the sum of £13,500 for putting the colony "into a proper Posture of Defence," etc. The preamble of this act states that his Majesty has at some past times been at a Vast Expense to put it in a good Posture of Defence, whilst his Majesty was engaged in a War against the King of Spain only, but he is now engaged in another with the French King, whereby it is Liable to Attacks by Land as well as by Water, Prudence & Self preservation make it absolutely necessary to Complete and Augment the Fortifications thereof, in Such Manner, as may of the one hand discourage an Enemy to Attack it, and of the other, Excite our Inhabitants Cheerfully to Exert their natural Bravery in a vigorous Defence, if any Such undertakings should be Attempted.

It is therefore enacted that the sum of £3,500 shall be devoted to this purpose, to be raised by taxation. The quota to be raised in the city and county of New York is £1,691:11s. The treasurer is required to pay to the commissioners named in the act (Peter Jay, John Rosevelt, and William Roome) the following sums to be applied by them to the objects stated.

For "repairing the Brass Cannon on the Flag Mount," £616.

For "the Additional Centinal boxes already made," £85.

For "Dredying the Exence of the Fence on the flat Rock Battery," £515, above what was allowed for it in a former act.

For dredying the extra charge "for Raising a Wall at the foot of the South Bastion of Fort George," £271:5, a former allowance.

For "making a Sufficient Fence for Copsy Battery from white haul Slip to the East corner of the Red house, & from the West corner of said Red house to the Wharf on the North West End of the said Battery, with gates at each End Of the Red house for Carts to Pass, and Turn Plates at the East & West parts of said Battery," £3710.

For "making & Erecting a Flags Staff, on the flagg Mount in Fort George," £10. (This staff was to be a red-cedar mast, not less than 55 feet high, with a "Cap" and topmast of pine 30 feet high, to be fixed by Way of Ladder, on the standing Mast."—Assem. Jour., II: 37-38.

For repairing "the Magazine under the South East Bastion in Fort George," £15.

For "Rebuilding the Barracks at the North west Port of Fort George for the better accommodation of the Officers & Soldiers of his Majesties Forces posted here," £245.

For "mending & Altering Nine proper Carriages for mounting the Said brass Cannon on the Flag Mount," £45.

For "making a Sufficient Number of Shot Boxes (One for each Gun) for the South West Bastion of Fort George," £818.

For "Providing Leadens Aprons & Tompkins for all the Guns on the Battery's & Wharfs," £12:15.

For "Removing the Cannon to the Red Hook Battery, Burnets Key & North River," £2:218.

For "raising a Banquet or foot bank all along the Inside of the Parapets on all the Batteries to a proper height, for musquaters to Fire over, and to make use of as many of the old Plank of the Platform, of Copsie Battery, as will be Serviceable for that Purpose," £1710.

For "Sorting the Shot & placing the Same in the Boxes, for each Gun on all the Batteries & wharfs," £142.

For "Altering Copsie Battery, & Reducing the Same to a Thirty Six Gun Battery, with an addition of Five foot Sod Work on the Inside of the Same," £459.

For "Raising & Building a Compleat Battery of Six or Eight Guns on the Red Hook on Nassaau Island, upon the Land of Tys Van Dyck," £159.

For "Purchasing an Additional quantity of Gun Powder for the use of this Colony, . . . to be stored in the Powder House," £200.

For maintaining prisoners of war, £550:8.—Col. Levi N. Y., III: 493-14. For further expenditures, see July 6, 1743; May 3, 1744; May 8, April 9, 1744.

Commodore Peter Warren, being informed that boatsmen and others intending to come to "the Market of New York" with wood and other necessities are apprehensive of being "impressed for his Majesty's Service" (see Aug. 27), publishes a notice that "no man be impressed, but such as belong to inward bound Vessels from sea.

—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 25, 1744.

Stephen Bayard is appointed mayor of New York City — Sept. M. C. C. V: 110. He was continued in office for three years.—Ibid., 29 V: 155, 180. For a brief account of him, see Man. Com. Coun. (1753), 408.

The "Launceston." (Commodore Warren's ship) — see Aug. 27 and Sept. 24) sails from New York on a cruise.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 8, 1744.

The New York privateer sloops "Clinton" and "Mary Anne" (see June 14) "fell down" (toward Sandy Hook), and "design to sail this Day."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 4, 1744. They sailed Oct. 7.—Ibid., Oct. 9, 1744. Regarding the success of the "Clinton," see Aug. 21, 1744.

Gov. Clinton writes to the Duke of Newcastle: "I beg leave to acquaint your Grace that I have had an interview with the Five nations of Indians, and have renew'd a treaty of peace and alliance with them. In my speech I demonstrated to them the base conduct of the French Court, and how necessary it was on their parts to guard against the false insinuations and designs of that Crown, and strongly encouraged them to be faithful and steady in our cause, with assurances to protect them against the assaults of their Enemies.

"There met me upon this occasion Comiss'rs from the Government of the Massachusetts Bay and Connecticut to treat with those Indians, by my permission, in behalf of their Governments, to which I consented. The Gentlemen from Massachusetts Bay had also a Commission to treat with me in conjunction with the Province of New Hampshire, and colonies of Connecticut and Rhode Island, upon measures for sending a proper number of forces into Canada to distress the French in their Settlements, and to act jointly in concert with them for His Majesty's service, in all respects against the common Enemy. To this I could give no other answer, but that I would recommend it to the Assembly, when they meet, and for my own part, I should be ready to contribute every thing in my power for that end."—N. Y. Col. Docs., VI: 249. Gov. Clinton encloses in his letter the proposals he made to the Indians on June 18 (ibid., VI: 262-94), the Indians' answer of June 20 (ibid., VI: 264-66), and the proposals made to him on the latter day by commissioners of Massachusetts (ibid., VI: 267). Winmore states (Nat. & Crit. Hist. of N.Y., VI: 611-12) that Clinton submitted to this convention of deputies and sachems a plan of union somewhat like the early New England confederacy.

Clinton writes to the Duke of Newcastle that a decision of the judge of the admiralty court has been against the officers of the customs of New York, who claimed duties upon prizes brought into this port by men-of-war and privateers. "Commodore Warren was the first who brought in a French prize, since the commencement of the war, he refused to pay any duty for the same, and says there was not demanded in the West Indies where he has sent many prizes.

"The Merchants of this City have been extremely active in fitting out privateers, at a very great expense, and have brought in several prizes consisting chiefly of sugar, which from the nature of the duty claimed, would anticipate most of their gains.—I must therefore beg leave to move Your Grace, that you'll be pleased to interpose (in behalf of this city) with the Commissioners of the Customs to drop their pretentions to said duties which will greatly encourage His Majesty's subjects, to annoy the Enemy."—N. Y. Col. Docs., VI: 260, 262.

A prize, having been refitted "and very richly laden for Boston, had the Misfortune to be cast-away in going through Hellgate, and it is thought the Ship and Cargo will be entirely lost."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 19, 1744.

The king's birthday is celebrated with the following demonstrations: "In the Forenoon the Militia were drawn up under arms in the Broad-Way, from whence the Artillery Company first marched in two Divisions, one to each Battery, where they were posted at the Guns, and were followed by the first Division of the Regiment and Cadets (leade by, who regularly manned the Batteries, and discharged three Volleys of their Small Arms; then the second Division marched and relieved them, and having fired three Volleys, as before, they were again relieved by the third. During this Time his Excellency, attended by the Council and a great many of the principal Gentlemen of this City, went up to the Fort, where his Majesty's and other loyal Healths were drunk under the Discharge of Pieces of Cannon, and the Night concluded with Illuminations, etc."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 5, 1744.

THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

Oct. 31. (G. 1744) & 3763 "Ward, Mettenruck, C." This deed is not recorded in New York County. The property is now known as Nos. 36 and 58 Cherry St. The document also contains the following recital: "And confirms the position [of Pell] as Keeper of houses thereon as appointed by Mayor of New York City... to the slate-houses. In Sept. 1796, Kelly is referred to as 'the former Lessee of the publick Slate-house houses of this City.' (M. C., V. 35), although on Sept. 20, 1736, he was given a lease of all the slate-houses in the city for a period of 21 years.—Ibid., IV: 243-44. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 365.

Nov. 5 Port, with upwards of 70 Prisoners on board, French and Spanish, bound for some of the French Islands, there to exchange for such of our Countrymen as may have the Misfortune to have fallen into the Enemies Hands."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 5, 1744.

Aug. 30, 1744.

3 Three New York privateers, the brig "Hester" (Capt. Bayard), and the sloops "Polly" (Capt. Morgan) and "Delight" (Capt. Langdon), completely fitted and manned, sail together from this harbour "on a Cruise against his Majesty's Enemies."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 12, 1744. See June 9, 1744, Oct. 22, 1745, April 5, 1746; Nov. 30, 1746; April 6, 1747.

11 Another privateer sloop, commanded by Capt. Richards, completely fitted and manned, falls soon to Sandy Hook, "in order to proceed on a cruise."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 12, 1744. This was evidently:—See Sept 5.

12 The Privateer Brig. Greyhound, being a fine new vessel, commanded by Capt. Jefrey (latter commander of the Polly), is in great forwardness, being almost manned already, and will sail with all possible expedition. [See Sept 26, 1745.]

The largest French Prize lately brought in here, called the Commodore, being an extraordinary Sailor, is also fitting up with great Diligence for a Privateer, and is now called the Prince Charles, to be commanded by Capt. Jacobus Kiersted, an old, brave, experienced Commander. She is upwards of 700 Tons, exceedingly well found and roomy, and is to carry 24 Carriage Guns, besides Swivels, and Men proportionable and will be reckoned the stoutest Vessel fitted out of North America. [See, further, Dec. 5.]

A fine new ship, called the Clarendon, lately launched, commanded by Capt. John Jauncy, and a Brig commanded by Capt. Rosewell, are both fitting out also for a privatering Voyage, and are to sail in Concert.

"The expected the above mentioned Privateers will be all ready at Sea before Spring, when we shall have from this City 3 stout Ships, 4 Briggs and Six Sloops, all well fitted for War."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 12, 1744.

The New-York Cork, Capt. Bayard, very Good Sea Coal.—"N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 12, 1744. About two years later, Lawrence le Teller advertised to sell it "at £5, per Chaldron."—Ibid., Jan. 16, 1747. Sea coal was the old name of ordinary coal.—Century Diet. Doubtless it was brought to America from Newcastle, as appears by John Leake's advertisement, five years later, for the sale of "Newcastle-Coke."—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 5, 1749.

Although the last issue located of The New-York Gazette, published by Bradford & De Forest, is that of Oct. 29, 1744 (No. 900), it is probable that the paper was discontinued with the issue of Nov. 19 (No. 905), to be succeeded the following week by De Forest's The New-York Evening-Post (see Nov. 26) —"See "Biblok, of Am. Newspapers," by Brigham, in Am. Antq. Soc. Proceedings (1917), 416; and Early Newspapers, II: 420.

The first afternoon newspaper published in New York makes its appearance. It is also the first newspaper printed by a native New Yorker, David Kinman. The New-York Evening-Post, a weekly, of which Henry de Forest is the printer. This date of issue is determined by the date of the earliest issue found, that of Dec. 17, 1744 (No. 4). With William Bradford, De Forest had just given up the publication of The New-York Gazette (see July 2).—See Early Newspapers, I: 423. With the issue was a change in the title of the head, involving the omission of the dash after the word 'Evening.' The issue of Mar. 24, 1758, no. 169, is followed in the only known file for this year by Sept. 5, 1758, no. 172, indicating a suspension of several weeks. The last issue found is that of Mar. 30, 1752, no. 207, in which year the paper was probably discontinued.—"From "Biblok, of Am. Newspapers," by Brigham, in Am. Antq. Soc. Proceedings (1917), 416; and Early Newspapers, II: 420.

26 Parker advertises for sale, at the price of one shilling, "An Account of the New-invented Pennsylvania Fire Places: Wherein their Construction and Manner of Operation is particularly explained; their Advantages above every other method of warming Rooms & Demonstrating the Householder to the Use of them, answered and obviated. With Directions for putting them up, and for using them to the best Advantage. And a Copper-Plate, in which the several parts of the Machine are exactly laid down from a Scale of equal Parts... The above mentioned Fire Places are also made by the Printer herein."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 26, 1744. This is the first known Franklin stove, still so popular in this country. It was again described in 1781 in a magazine article entitled "The Pennsylvania Fire-Places, commonly known by the Name of American Stoves, invented by Dr. Franklin, and improved by Mr. Sharp of Leadenhall Street" (London), illustrated by a copperplate engraving showing five different designs.—Gentleman's Mag., Lit. 415.

Cadwallader Colden writes to Alderman Johnson of New York City: "St you may remember that while I was last at New York you gave me notice that you would inform me of what had been done by the Magistrates to remove the Nuisances & draining the stagnating Waters & other Methods taken by them in order to keep the City clean & healthy And likewise to give me some account of the State of health of the City so far as it may be reasonably thought to be the consequence of the Care but I suppose more urgent Business prevented you. I now take the Liberty to put you in mind of what you promised me & when I tell you for what purpose I do it I believe you will not be displeased that I press you to it If it be found from Experience that the Care of the Magistrates has produced in any of the good effects that were proposed it will in the first place be a means to encourage them to continue their Care & to carry it further where either the want of time to do all that was requisite or other obstructions prevented them... it will induce the people more cheerfully to submit to their orders and regulations even in cases where their private profit or ease may seem to suffer... It will be of use to this City & to other places hereafter when they fall under the misfortune of such like Epidemical Distemper in taking the proper Methods to remove them & to prevent them & lastly that such of the Magistrates of New York who have distinguished themselves in so beneficial & benevolent an Undertaking may receive a publick & honourable Testimony of their Care & Vigilance on performing the Duty of good Magis- trates as may be due to their Merit While we were engaged in party disputes many pretended to a great concern for the public now when the publick benefit may be pursued without the inconveniences which necessarily attended this party controversy, the matter of no concern & this gives room to think that the publick Benefit was not really the Motive to those who formerly made so great a bustle about it."—From the original draft of the letter, preserved with the Colden Papers, in the N. Y. Hist. Soc.

In an advertisement to secure men, the privateer ship "Prince Charles" (see Nov. 12) is thus further described: "Barthen 380 Tons, to mount 24 Carriage Guns, most of them Nine Pounders, and 34 Swivels; to carry 200 Men, and will sail in 12 or 14 Days, at fairest. She is to be completely rigged and fitted as a Ship of War, and is a prime Sailing; most of her Guns are already on board, and the men are to draw two Thirds of all the Prize, without any Deduction for Armes, Ammunition and Provision. All Gentlemen Sailors and others, who are minded to go the Cruise, may repair to Mr. Benjamin Kiersted's, at the Sign of the Pine Apple on the New Dock, where they may see the Articles."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 5, 1744. She sailed from Sandy Hook Jan. 10, 1745.—Ibid., Jan. 7, and 24, 1745. After a cruise of eight months, she returned Sept. 20, but without "the good Fortune to meet with or take anything of great value." Her captain was Jacobus Kiersted.—Ibid., Sept. 23, 1745.

Dec. 30, 1745.

At this time, was beginning to show its distinctive character as the centre of the leather trade: "John Browne, lately married to the Widow Breese, continues to carry on the Leather Dresser's Trade, at the Dwelling House of the late John Breese, in the Smith's Fly, near Beekman's Swamp or Creple-Bush, at the South End of the House a Staff is erected, with a Vane on the Top of it; He sells all
The first privateer ship "Prince Charles," Jacobus Kierstede command, was scheduled to sail in twelve or fourteen days. "All Gentlemen Sailors and others, who are minded to go the Cruise," are requested to repair to Mr. Benjamin Kierstede's; "at the Sign of the Fine Apple on the New Docks."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 17, 1744.

Kierstede had been proprietor of this tavern as early as 1735. See Map, 1745.

The first proposal to tax the colonies by means of stamped paper is made this year by Lieut-Gov. Clarke. Gov. Clinton, writing to the Duke of Newcastle on Dec. 13, says that Clarke's object is "to obtain the appointment of the Commissioner of Stamps in America, as well as the inferior officers under him." Clinton doubts the expediency of the measure.—Dawson, The Sons of Liberty (1859), 41. The governor adds that the "People of North America are quite strangers to any duty, but such as they raise themselves, and was such a scheme to take place without their knowledge it might prove a dangerous consequence to His Majesty's interest."—N. Y. Col. Dist., VII: 268. See also Mon. Com. Coun. (1859), 408.

Gov. Clinton informs the Duke of Newcastle that he has received the king's declaration of war against France, and also his order "for compelling me to comply with all Cargoes of ships to which I may grant letters of marque or Commissions for private war against the King of Spain and the French King not to make price of Dutch Ships upon pretence of their having on board Spanish or French effects."—N. Y. Col. Dist., VII: 269.

"All Gentlemen Adventurers, inclinable to go the Cruise" on the privateering vessels "Lincoln" and "Triton," are "desired to repair to the House of Mr. Benjamin Pain, at the Jamaica Arms."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 17, 1744.

This tavern stood on Cruger's wharf at the foot of So. William St. It was one of the resorts of privaters and a place of venue for "pirates" captured. See ibid., Aug. 6, 1744.

"The Albany Post sets out to-morrow, at 2 o'clock in the Afternoon; Those who are minded to make Use of this Opportunity, are desired to send their letters to the Post Office by that time. The Boston and Philadelphia Posts set out last Tuesday [Dec. 11] in order to perform their Stages but once a Fortnight."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 17, 1744. See March 19.

"For the Benefit of Mr. Rice: on Wednesday next will be performed, A Concert Of Vocal and Instrumental Music, at the House of Robert Todd, To begin precisely at Five o'clock. Tickets, at 5s. each, to be had at Mr. Taylor's in Broad-Street, and at both Coffee-Houses."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 31, 1744. Commenting on this benefit, the Post-Boy of Jan. 7, 1745, said: "I was thought by all competent Judges, to exceed Any Thing of the Kind ever done here before."}

At about this time, Sieur Augustin de Langlais and his brother Charles migrated from Mackinaw, Canada, to Green Bay, and started the first permanent settlement in the present state of Wisconsin.—Wisconsin Hist. Coll., III: 197-201; Strong, Hist. of Wisconsin Territory, 41-42.

A "Plan and Elevation of the Old City Hall (etc)" during the period 1745-7 was drawn in October, 1818, from memory, by David Grim, and is now preserved in the N. Y. Hist. Soc. It is reproduced and described in Vol. I, Pl. 32-b.

In this year, George Reuld, silversmith, was admitted as a freeman of New York. He kept his shop "near the Ferry Stairs." Two candlesticks and an alms-basin, made by him, are described in Met. Museum of Art Cat. of Exhibition of Silver used in N. Y., N. J., and the South (1911), 45-46.

Jan. During the January term of the supreme court, a baker and boltier was convicted on three counts for selling unmerchantable bread, for short weight, and for "False Tare of his Casks." He was fined 500. Others are to be prosecuted for similar offenses.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 28, 1745.

Sir Peter Warren is appointed to the provincial council.—Col. Coun. 1745, 347.

"Last Wednesday [Jan. 16] the Ship Lincoln, Capt. John Jancyue [cf. Nov. 12, 1744], fell down to the Watering-Place [at Staten Island], and this day her Consort the Brig Triun, Capt. Francis Rosewell, falls down to join her, in order to sail on a Cruise against his Majesty's Enemies. And as those two Vessels were built on purpose for the Privateering Service, and fitted and equipped in a most extraordinary Manner; it is not doubted, but they will in very few days betake themselves to the little Island, and make up the Number of Thirteen stout Vessels of War fitted out here."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 21, 1745.

A farm of 30 acres belonging to the late Mangel Roll, situated on the East River a little beyond Turtle Bay, and "opposite to the sign of the Union Flag," is advertised for sale. It is described as "very conveniently situated, and has a commodious house, Landing Place and Harbour in a Cove, shelter'd from Ice and stormy Weather; it has two Houses upon it, and a good bearing Orchard, a Stream of Water running through it, and the River before it abounds in great Plenty of Fish, Lobsters and Crabs; the Rear thereof adjoins to the King's Highway." Persons desiring to buy are directed to Samuel Beekman, or Philip Mitchorn, "living next to William Sackerly's in the Bowery-Lane."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 21, 1745. The Union Flag was a tavern on the road to Boston. See Jan. 24, 1757. William Sackerly, or Shackerly, was a tavern-keeper. See also Sept. 2, 1745.

On Jan. 22, a negro named Cuffee belonging to James Alexander received sentence of death from the supreme court "for feloniously breaking open and stealing several goods from his master's shop." On Jan. 25, he was to have been executed, but, the executioner dying suddenly the evening before, his sentence was respited until Jan. 26.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 28, 1745.

 Arbitrators appointed to settle the differences between the four Privaters formerly arrived here with Six French Prizes" will meet "at the House of Robert Todd every Friday Evening 'till the whole is settled."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 18, 1745. This notice is to be found in the newspapers up to and including May 6, when it is to be assumed the "differences" were adjusted.

Madeira wine is advertised for sale "at the Sign of Admiral Vernon," at 8 s. a gallon or 7 s. 6 d. a gallon for 5 gallons or more.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 28, 1745. If a tavern existed with the "Sign of Admiral Vernon," its location is unknown, and the innkeeper's name has not been found. There was, however, a tavern with the sign of Admiral Warren, of which Andrew Ramsay was proprietor in 1749, and without doubt earlier. This tavern stood "near the Exchange" (Broad and Water Sts.). See Feb. 20, 1749.

The provincial council receives letters from Gov. Shirley Feb. regarding the intended expedition against Cape Breton, and asking for men, money, and artillery. The council records its answer, that guns can be sent, but the assembly has to meet before any answer in regard to money can be given.—Cal. Coun. Min., 347.

On Feb. 12, a conference was held with the members of the assembly then in town.—Ibid.

The "Bowling-Green" near the fort is "to be new laid with Turf, and rendered fit for Bowling, this Summer. Whosoever inclines to do that Service, may leave their Proposals with the Printer hereof."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 25, 1745. See also April 6, 1735.

Archibald Kennedy, receiver-general of the province (M. C. C., Mar. III: 488), adds to his will the following provision: "I by this codicil devote my two houses in Broadway, in the City of New York near the Fort which I have lately purchased of the widow of Peter Bayard (see Sept. 3, 1744, in one of which I now live and in the other the Custom House is kept . . . to my dear wife," etc.—Abstracts of Wills, VII: 286. At this date and somewhat before, the custom-house was kept on either the north or south half of the lot later built upon by John Watts and known as No. 3 Broadway.—See July 14, 1732; Aug. 26, 1756. In the day of the receiver-general, there were two small houses upon this plot, and there is no means of knowing in which of these he lived and in which he kept the custom-house. See Liber Deeds, XIV: 245 (Albany); see also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 974; and May 19, 1740; April 21, 1745; Sept. 3, 1742.

"Several very good Riding-Chairs and Ketteneers, to be sold reasonable, by Josiah Milliken, near the Old Slip Market."—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 18, 1745. For definition of the "riding-chair," see May 28, 1744. Regarding the "Ketteneer," Houghton says: "I am obliged to confess complete ignorance as to the character of the 'ketteneer.' It was certainly not an English vehicle, and the name suggests Dutch influence, if not origin."—Coaches of Colonial N. Y., 19. The vehicle is defined in Murray's New English Dict. (Oxford, who, however, does not give the origin of the word. The foregoing reference antedates all citations given by Murray, who finds the term to mean a covered vehicle, like a one-horse chaise or buggy.

"John Roosevelt and William Roome, Esqrs, two of the Commishiners appointed to erect and repair the Fortifications in New-York, to the Church at the Red-House (according recent Order) a Report, by which it appears, that they have employed for and towards the sundry Uses required by an Act of the General Assembly" the sum of £22118, "including the Powder stored in the Powder House, of the City of New-York; also, the further sum of £10, for and towards sundry Services, required by another Act of the General Assembly, including the Powder stored aforesaid," which two sums amount to £106018, "so that there remains still in the Hands of the Treasurer, for the Uses required by both the Acts, the sum of £2094, "relating to Fortifications." They are of opinion that an additional sum of £215, "will complete all that is required by both the said Acts.

"Likewise an Estimate of the Cost and Charge, for taking down the old Sodd Work, on Cosspey-Battery, and new Sodding the Same, to join with the Addition of five Feet," amounting to £25.

"And that an Addition of large Stone on the Outside will be of Service, to preserve the Battery, the Charge of which will amount to about Ninety Pounds, . . . " It is ordered that the report lie on the table for the perusal of the Members, and be referred to the consideration of the committee.—Assemb. Jour., II: 53. See also Sept. 2, 1745, and April 6, 1746.

The governor's house in the fort is not yet completed. More money is required for this work, and "likewise for building the Stables, and making new Fences round the Garden, and other Parts of the Fort."—Assemb. Jour., II: 53. It was not completed on Feb. 13, 1746 (p. 4). The rebuilding was begun some time after May 19, 1744 (p. 2).

Mr. Clarkson, moves, in the assembly, that an engineer, "either from the neighbouring Colonies, or from Great Britain, be encouraged by a suitable Reward, to come into this Colony, to view the Forts, Batteries and other Fortification thereof, already erected, in Order to the making such Alterations, Additions, and other new Works, as shall be thought necessary to the Security of the Colony."—Assemb. Jour., II: 53. See April 18.

In accordance with the recommendations of the commissioners on fortifications (see April 3), the assembly appropriates sums not exceeding the amounts specified for the following objects: for "completing what has been directed by two Acts of Assembly, for the Fortifications in the City of New-York," £145; for new Sodd Cosspey-Battery, £150; for large Stone, to be laid round the Outside of Cosspey-Battery, £150; for rearranging the Powder House, £150; for Flat Rock Battery, and the Fort in New-York, 28 Feet long, and 20 Feet wide, to secure and preserve the Carriages and other Stores of War," £910. It is further resolved "That there be allowed to Capt. John Waldron, for making a close Room in the red Stone-House, on Cosspey-Battery, and new chasing necessary Stores of War, for the Use of all the Batteries;"
a sum not exceeding £1261020; for "making new Axle-Trees for the Carriages," £15; and for "finishing the House in the Fort, lately erected for the Residence of the Governors of this Colony," £200.—Assemb. Jour., II: 55; but see April 17.

Letters for Commodore Warren are opened by the governor and council. One from Commodore Knowles reports the probability of an attack upon English settlements by troops and ships from Martinico. Letters from Capt. Jeffery, commander of the privateer "Greyhound" of New York, and from Capt. Wentworth, refer to the same subject. The affidavit of Thomas Vardill on the subject is taken; and copies of the letters to Commodore Warren are sent to Gov. Shirley.—Col. Conn. Min., 348.

A message from Gov. Clinton, conveyed "by his secretary" to the assembly, states that, since the adjournment (on April 11), he has received a memorial: Advocate of a company of a consideraable French Armament at Martinique. He enumerates the war-ships and transports in the fleet; and believes that its intended direction toward British dominions in South America may be diverted by the report, which is spread in the West Indies, of the expedition at present under way against Martinique. The affiant of Commodore Warren therefore advises the assembly, not only to make sufficient provision for uniting with neighbouring provinces, in the common cause ("that we may with the better Grace, call in their Aid, should there be Occasion," but also, particularly, to put "this Province into the best Posture of Defence; and that this City may, with all possible Dispatch, be as well fortified as at any Time heretofore," by setting Stockadoes round it, and erecting Block Houses, and Batteries, at proper and convenient Rates, lest it appear to the Wharfs on each Side of the river, or otherwise, that we may thereby be enabled to give the Enemy so warm a Reception, in case they should attack us, as may render their Efforts vain and ineffectual."—Assemb. Jour., II: 56.
The message was referred to the committee of the whole house, which, on the following day, arranged for the appointment of a joint committee and assembly to make proper Estimates of such other Fortifications as they shall judge necessary to be erected, and of such Matters and Things, to be made and done for the further Security of the Colony, as recom-manded by his Excellency's Message."—Ibid. See April 18.

On motion of Mr. Clarkson, the assembly requests the council to appoint a committee to act with a committee of the assembly in making estimates "of such other Fortifications as they shall judge necessary to be erected," and to consult in regard to the same "such other Persons as they shall judge proper."—Assemb. Jour., II: 56–57. See April 4. The recommendations of May 8 (p. 2) were the work of this joint committee, acting with Messrs. Heyer and Clement.—Ibid., 59. See April 20.

The common council orders "that in Case of Any Emergency that Cannot at present be foreseen by Reason of the City being Attacked by an Enemy Or by Reason of any other Unforeseen Accident, That the Deputy Clerk of this Board Use his best Endeavours to Secure the Records of this City by Removing them to Such place Within this Province as he Shall Think most Safe and proper."—M. C. G., V: 146. For further action, see Aug.
17, 1746.

James Parker, "Printer for this Government," proposes to the common council that he be appointed library keeper to the Corporation (see June 17, 1745). His application states that the city possesses "a valuable Library which May be of very great Use And service to the Inhabitants of this province; but more especially to those of the City of a library Keeper was appointed under proper Regulations, the want of which at present not only deprives Many persons of the use of the Said Books, but subjects the Books to be ruined, Or Destroyed by the Dust and paper Worm." He therefore offers, first, to prepare and print, before August first, a catalogue of all the books. Second, he promises that he will "power to let out the Books to hire at Six pence a week for Each Book to any person or persons, residing within this Government, under penalty for failure to return the book uninjured by a stated time, third, 'That no person shall hire a book for less than a Week,' Or More for building a Batch, or hiring a person to be allowed to have More than three Books at one time;" fourth, "that all Members and Officers of the Common Council be entitled to the loan of any book gratis and be preferred before all other hirers;
"fifth, that, as library keeper, he "will give his Attendance at the Library at a fixed time every week for two hours, in order to make and receive the Books;" and he will "keep a book of his procedings and Profits accruing by the loan of the Books, which Book the Corporation may Inspect at their pleasure that he will Likewise keep all the Books in repair in his own Expenditure and if any Book, or Books should happen to be lost he will Send for New ones of the same Sort in the Room of them, that he Will Print Penny Bills and do every thing above proposed at his own Expenditure without any Charge to the Corporation, he being entitled to the money arising by the hire or loan of the Books to his own Use." The proposals are agreed to by the board, and it is ordered that the key of the library be delivered to him. M. C. G., V: 142–43.
The catalogue was ready for distribution June 16, 1746
(p. 2). For an account of his activities in behalf of the library, see Kepp's Hist. of the N. T. Society Library, 172–76; also Aug. 19, 1745.

The "House of the Widow Baker" is designated as the meeting-place of a company of a convivial and musical assembly.—Assemb.
Jour., II: 57. This was a tavern, kept by the widow of Roger Baker.—See Lemoyne Map Ref. Key, III: 979.

The common council appoints a committee to build with stone the common sewer at the lower end of Broad St.—M. C. G., V:

The common council prepares, and presents to the speaker of the assembly, a petition "for the better fortifying this City." It expresses gratitude for "the paternal Care and Becoming Zeal" Apr. 26 "Our Capt[ain] General" has from time to time recommended to the assembly, particularly in his message of April 17 (p. 17), also to the council and house; but "as Most of the Inhabitants are Apprehensive that Not Only they but the Colony in General are Exposed to Great and Imminent Dangers by Our present Defences Condition," the petition asks that "Speedy and Effectual Measures" may be taken.—M. C. C., V: 4. See, further, May 8. 30 The common council orders "that a Straight Line be drawn from the South Corner of the House of Mr. Augustus Jay now in the Occupation of Peter Warren Esq to the North Corner of the House of Archibald Kennedy fronting the Bowling Green in the Broad Way, And that Mr. William Smith who is now about to Build a House (and all other persons who Shall Build between the Said Two Houses) lay their foundations and Build Conformable to the aforesaid Straight Line."—M. C. C., V: 149. See April 13, 1744: and description of Pt. 93, III: 596. Augustus Jay had built upon the site of the present Nos. 9 and 11 Broadway (see June 2, 1730); Archibald Kennedy was at No. 1, and William Smith at No. 7. The line of Broadway was a straight line on all the maps we have; but the line of the Beaver Path, the later Marketfield St., now Battery Place, ran to the river on a line which formed an obtuse angle with that of Broadway. Other lines of the Broadway grid were not parallel to the line of the Beaver Path. Under these circumstances, those who built houses facing on the west side of Broadway were permitted to build the fronts of their houses at right angles to the side walls, causing joins or gores in each lot, as far north as No. 27 Broadway. This was what was often alluded to as the "saw-tooth" line of Broadway; it was not, however, the line of the thoroughfare that was toothed; the owners of the houses had built with slight encroachments on the street. This fact is indicated on the Map of Dutch Grants, C. Pl. 87, Vol. II. In very recent times, the corporation somewhat rectified the house-line. May 8 The joint committee of the council, assembly appointed (see April 18 and 26) to make estimates of, and to give advice regarding, proper fortifications to resist a possible naval attack by the French, makes its report. Col. Morris explains to the assembly that the committee has inspected "such Places as were conceived proper and consulted the Mayor and Aldermen, and some other Gentlemen of the City, and took the Assistance of two Persons [Messrs. Heyer and Clement] who were said to have some Skill, both with Respect to its Defence towards the Water, as well as the Land." Being of the opinion that an attack upon the city by sea was more probable than by land, the committee believed "it most necessary to proceed, in the first Place, to any naval improve- ment, by erecting Batteries." Two sets of plans, one prepared by Heyer and one by Clement, are then presented to the house. In detail, the plans recommended are as follows: 1. That a Battery of eight Guns, should be immediately erected. (Dominie’s Book; see Landmark, May Ref. Key, III: 969) with a large Block House to cover the Men, and their Arms. 2. That Plans should be made whereby to erect a Battery of eight Guns, on Capt. Rutger’s Wharf, when there shall be Occasion. 5. That Places should be made whereby to erect a Battery of eight Guns, on Burnett’s Key, upon Occasion. 4. That it is absolutely necessary, for the Safety and Defence of the City towards the Harbour, to have a Battery of twenty Guns, at the East End of this City [See April 7, 1745, for the government’s recommendation.] 5. That Guns should be made for every Battery, several spare Carriages, and long Trail-Carriages, for Twelve Field-Pieces, &c. 6. As to the Battery of twenty Guns, two Places have been proposed, the one on a Wharf to be made out into the River adjoining to Lowrey’s; which Wharf, the Committee were of Opinion could not be made this Year. [See July 6, 1745, for appropriation of $800.] 7. The other Place proposed, is on Mr. Harmans Rutger’s Hill. And, in Case it should be erected on this last, the Committees are of Opinion, it will be necessary to have two Blockhouses and Fuerte to guard it, and to have a Battery of six Guns, to be erected upon Occasion, besides Peck’s, according to a Plan to be made for that Purpose. "6. With Respect to the Estimate of the Expanse, the May 8 May 11 Committees were of Opinion, that the erecting the twenty Gun Battery on a Wharf to be made adjoining to Lowrey’s, besides the Delay, would make the Charge of the above Articles, amount to about Four Thousand, Five Hundred and Three Thousand Pounds; and that if a Battery was to be erected on Rutgers Hill, the Amount of the Expanse of the above Articles is estimated at, about Three Thousand Pounds."—Assem. Jour., II: 59; Jour. Leg. Coun., II: 88–89; May 11. The assembly approves the sites for batteries as recommended by the committee on May 8 (p. 17), and also votes the approipa- tions suggested.—Assem. Jour., II: 60; but see May 14 for Clinton’s opinion of this action. The governor rebukes the legislature for assuming too much power in recommending fortifications and assigning places for them at New York, which decision he claims rests with the govern- or. He then in anger dissolves the session.—Assem. Jour., II: 61–62. This action did not entirely interrupt the preparations for defence, for work on the battery at Copley Rock was in progress on May 16.—Cal. Coun. Min., 346. See May 21. As navigation has been obstructed by Spanish and French privateers which infest the coast, the legislature allows a pre- emum "to Such Privateers as shall during the Present War take or destroy any Enemies Privateer between ... Cape Higopen, and the Easternmost part of Nassau Island, to the Northward of the Thirty Eighth Degree of Latitude." For a man on board a privateer destroyed or captured within these limits the sum of £1 will be paid, if sufficient proof is presented.—Col. Laws N.Y., III: 446–48. Accounts "of building Fort George" are received by the provin- cial council, and Commissioners Roome and Roosevelt (see May 19, 1744) are ordered to continue to serve.—Col. Coun. Min., 348. The original manuscript record in the council minutes was almost completely destroyed by the fire in the State Library at Albany, only the following being now distinctly legible: "Mr. Roome and Mr. Roosevelt two of the Commissioners attending without were called in and were directed to proceed upon Com- pleting the Batteries and Fortifications preferable to anything Else."—Col. Coun. Min. (Albany), XXI: 2. See May 29. A letter received from the Duke of Newcastle, approving of Gov. Clinton, orders him to assist Commodore Warren with men, provisions, or shipping. One received from Warren, who is on board the "Superbe," at Chapeaurouge Bay, during the siege of Louisbourg, asks for assistance; as does also one from Gov. Shirley. The council orders that money be raised by subscription.—Col. Coun. Min., 348–49. On May 27 a copy of Clement, who has been employed to draw a plan for a battery at the east end of the city, presents it to the house, with the information that his work has the approval of the governor.— Assem. Jour., II: 67. See June 25. To be Sold, A Handsome Coach and Harness about 7 Years old, not much the Worse for wear, with Good Coaches and Horses. 3 Emquy of the Printer hereof."—N.Y. Post-Boy, June 3, 1745. Most of the governors, and some prominent citizens of New York had owned coaches, so their use at this time as not unusual. For other references in this period, see March 14, 1738, and Jan. 9 and May 5, 1744. By 1738, the use of carriages had become quite general, and New York’s first coach-maker had established his business in the city.—Houghton, Coaches of Colonial N.Y., (1890). The provincial council grants warrants to James Livingston, Steven van Cortlandt, Brandt Schuyler, and William Bayard to carry French prisoners to the French islands.—Cal. Coun. Min., 349. See Aug. 25. 1744. Louisbourg and Cape Breton, the chief strongholds of the French in America, are taken by 3,000 Americans, led by William Pepperell, a wealthy merchant of Maine, strongly reinforced by the British fleet under Warren.—McLennan, Louisbourg (1918), 162. See also J. Journal of the Late Siege by the Troops from North America, against the French at Cape Breton, the City of Louisbourg, and the Territories thereunto belonging. Surrendered to the English, on the 17th of June, 1745, after a Siege of Forty-Eight Days. By James Gibson, Gentleman Volunteer at the above Siege (London: Printed for J. Nichols, 1745) contains a large folding plate, engraved by B. Cole, showing the city of Louisbourg, with the harbours and garrisons on the island of Gaspe, or Cape Breton, and the fleet. The author was a Boston merchant, who, with the

July 1745, he supervised the removal of the prisoners to France, and disbursed over £30,000 sterling in that operation. His diary of the siege was republished in Boston in 1847, under the title of A Boston Merchant of 1745. Louisburg was restored to France by the Treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle, Oct. 7, 1748 (g.v.). See also July 6 and 17.

Sir Peter Vanderbergh, on his springing to the Duke of Newcastle: "I beg leave to return your Grace my hearty thanks, for your answer, to a friend of mine, who took the liberty to ask the Government of New Jersey for me, when it should become vacant, my wife being of new York, makes it convenient for me, and Mr. Clinton, with whom he has the pleasure to be well acquainted, has assured me he has no design to get that Government added to his, as it formerly was: I would by no means offer at any thing that Interfer'd with his Interest, but if when he is better provided for, I could succeed to the Government of New York, I should Esteem it the highest favour that could be confer'd on me."

The steeple of the new Dutch church is set on fire, "close under the Ball," by lightning. It is in some parts, chiefly by the Caucus of a few Persons, who broke through the Cupola, at the Hopes of their Lives, and of having the Lead melted about their Ears." The church elders presented them with £60, and other persons gave them presents "for their Activity and Bravery."—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 24, 1745. Extols, Retells, Etc., at Curacao, and the provincial council at New York orders that all vessels from that port be quarantined.

Gov. Clinton recommends to the provincial legislature the strengthening of the fortifications. He says: "In order to put the Province into a proper Posture of Defence, it is necessary that such other fortifications be erected about this City with all possible Dispatch, as may be sufficient to enable us to repel any Force that may attack us on this Quarter: For this Purpose, a strong Battery of twenty Guns, at the East End of the Town [see May 8, for two localities suggested], in the Harbour, and some other Batteries in other parts of the City, should be forthwith erected; of which, I will direct plans to be laid before you. 'Tis worth considering, whether as Matters are now circumstance, this City may not probably Share a considerable Part of the War.—Jour. Leg. Coun., I: 885. See July 3.

In a message to the assembly, Gov. Clinton says: "Upon enquiring of the Commissioners, concerning the Money already expended upon the House in the Fort [from appropriation of May 19, 1744], I find, that what remains in the Treasurer's Hands, appropriated for this Service, is not sufficient to complete the same; I must therefore recommend it to you, to make further Provision for that Purpose, and likewise for building the Stables, and making new Fences round the Garden, and other Parts of the Fort."—Assem. Jour., II: 66. The sum of £1,200 was appropriated by the assembly July 6 (g.v.) for finishing the House.

July 1745, To be Sold at Vendue, On Tuesday morning next [July 1], the Plate, Household Furniture, and other Goods, belonging to the Honourable George Clarke, Esq; lately gone for England, at his House in the Broad-Way.—N. T. Post-Boy, July 1, 1745.

To be Sold by William Bradford [Jr.], Pewterer, in Hanover Square in New York. Cannon, six and four Founders, and Swivel Guns, Cannon Shot of all sizes, Iron Pots and Kettles of all sizes, Cart and Waggons Boxes, Baskets for Chamberies, Fullers Plates, Pig and Bar Iron, &c., &c. Where may be had money for old Brass and Pewter.—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 1, 1745. About five years later, we find him in the business of which he mentions in his advertisement, including "Trible Rules for ruling of blank Books," small compasses "to fix on a Walking Stick, and lengthen'd to a suitable Height," "Protractors," "Trunk Telescopes, Walking Stick Spying Glasses, . . . Billiard or Truck Balls . . . ."—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 11, 1745.

Gov. Clinton makes additional recommendations concerning fortifications (see June 25), among which is one for the storing of gunpowder in the magazine of the fort, which has been filled up and repaired during "the last Summer" (see July 24, 1744)—Assem. Jour., II: 69. The act for erecting and repairing fortifications was finally passed on July 6 (g.v.).

Nearly a year previously, July 27, 1744, Daniel Horsmanden notified the assembly that the work would probably be completed the following spring. As nothing further has been heard from him, a committee is appointed to investigate.—Assem. Jour., III: 66-70. See Nov. 13 and 27, 1741. Horsmanden's work was finally finished by Livingston and Smith.—See Nov. 13, 1741; Nov. 24, 1740.

Henry Cruger recommends fortifying Nutten Island.—Assem. Jour., II: 70. In November a bill establishing a lottery to raise £3,750 to finance such a project passed in both the assembly and council.—Ibid., II: 82, 87. There is no mention in the record of the governor's assent to the bill. On Jan. 21, 1746, Mr. Cruger presented another bill to raise by lottery £3,750 for more effectually fortifying the city of New York.—Ibid., III: 92. This bill became a law on Feb. 27, 1746 (g.v.).

A provincial act is passed "for Erecting & Repairing Fortifications within this Colony for defraying the Charge of several Services for the Lord, etc.," etc. The preamble of this act averts that the "moneys which have been heretofore granted for Fortifying this Colony have Proved insufficient fully to answer that Purpose." The treasurer is therefore empowered to pay the following sums for specified objects in the city of New York:

To Capt. John Walltron, for making a close Room in the Red Store House on Copy of Battreys & for Purchasing necessary Stores of War for the use of all the Batteries, £126:10:2.

To Samuel Brown, for "Cleansing the Guns on the Several Batteries," £50.

To Capt. John Walltron, "for Providing Guns [guns] for the use of the Several Batteries," £210; and "for Purchasing Lead to make Partridge Shot for the Great Guns," £5.

To Moses Clement, "for his Attendance on the Joint Committee of the Council & General Assembly and Drawing Plans of Batteries," £5; and to Christian Hoye [Hoyet] for similar services, £3.

To Adam Vanderbergh, "for Carving the Great Guns and Carriages Sent to Boston," £8:16:2; and to Jasper Bosch for freight on the same, £70.

To John "Rosvelt," William Roome, and Samuel Lawrence, the commissioners of the fortifications in the city of New York, there is allowed the sum of £3,577:10, to be used toward completing the operations directed by the acts of May 19 and Sept. 21, 1744 (g.v.), for improving the fortifications and building a new governor's house. This part of the act directs the following payments by these commissioners:

"For Procuring & Laying Large Stones round the outside of the said Battery to Secure the Foundation thereof," £50. (See Sept. 25, 1750, for further estimate of repairs.)

"For Building a Store House between the Flat Rock Battery, and Fort George, 28 feet long and 20 feet wide, "to Secure and Preserve the Carriages and other Stores of War," £59:10:

"For making Axle Trees for the Carriages," £15.

"For finishing the House Lately Erected in the Fort for the Residence of the Governors of this Colony," £1,200.

"For Erecting . . . a Battery of Eight Guns upon Dominie's Hook with a Large Block House to Shelter the Men," £500 (including £3-20 formerly allowed for this purpose).

"For Laying a Flat Form proper for Eight Guns on Capt Peter Rutgers Wharfl upon Ocean," £50.

"For Laying a Flat Form proper for Six Guns upon the City Ground behind Mr. Benjamin Peeks House upon Ocean," £50. (See developments under Feb. 5 and May 2, 1746.)

"For making a New Fence round the Fort Garden," £60.

"For Repairing the Spar before the Gate of Fort George," £8.

The act also directs that, "for Immediate use on Extraordinary Emergencies," the store-keeper of the powder-house shall deliver ten barrels of gunpowder, to be deposited in the magazine of the fort, for the guider "to Try & Exercise the Great Guns upon the Several Batteries."—Col. Coun. Min., III: 452-58.
The Palisades were erected across the island, doubtless in accordance with the general provisions of this act, though not specifically mentioned or provided for by its terms. Of these, David Grim, writing in Nov., 1819, said: "I remember the building and erecting the Palisades and Block-houses, in the year 1745, for the security and protection of the inhabitants of this time much alarmed, and afraid that the French and Indians were coming to invade this city, on which the General Assembly of this province voted a sum of money (£8,000) to build a line of Palisades and Block-houses, from the East river to the North river. Those Palisades commenced at the house of Mr. De Slabroes, No. 57, in Cherry street, (which was then the last house on the East river, to Kip's bay.) From that place, it went in a direct line to Windmill lane, (late Catey Muits') from thence, in the rear of the Poor-house, and to Dominie's hook, at the North river.

"Those Palisades were made of cedar logs, about fourteen feet long and nine or ten inches in diameter, were placed in a trench, dug in the ground for that purpose, three feet deep, with loop-holes in the same, for musketry, and a breast-work four feet high and four feet in width. In this line of Palisades were three Block-houses, about thirty feet square and ten feet high, with six port-holes, for cannon. Those Blockhouses were made with logs, of eighteen inches diameter. They were placed thus: the one was in (now) Pearl street, nearly in front of Bancker street; the second in the rear of the Poor-house, and the other between Church and Chapel streets. There were four large gates, or outlets to the city, the one at the head of Pearl street, Chatham street, Bruc'e street and Green-wich street."—From statement on back of Grim's general plan of the city, the original of which is in the N. Y. Hist. Soc. See also description of the Grim Plan, Pl. 25-3; 270-71; the account of the Holland Plan, of Sept., 1717 (2 v.); and Mannschack Plan, Pl. 54, Vol. I. A provincial law is passed appropriating 5,000 pounds towards the expedition undertaken by the government of Massachusetts Bay against Louisbourg (see April 17). The province also has been charged with the Upper Ferry at the Narrows, on the Staten Island side, begins to run a regular ferry from there to New York. He advertises that a passage-boat will set out every Tuesday and Friday, returning the same day, if possible. He also keeps "very good Entertainment for Men and Horses." The boat may be hired, on Tuesday and Friday, by inquiry at John Creger's, "a Corner-house at the Old Slip."—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 8, 1745. See also June 18, 1753.

Gov. Clinton having received an express, late on the night of July 9, from Gov. Shirley, "with the Most Agreeable News of the Surrender of Cape Breton to his Majesties Frient And Forces" (on June 17, 1745; see also July 6), the common council orders that Mr. De Joncourt be Directed to provide a Handsome Dinner for this Board And that His Excellency the Governor the Members of the Council and Members of Assembly of this City with the Field Officers be Invited to Dine with this Board," and a committee is appointed to "Order a Bonfire to be prepared without Spring Garden in the Evening and that they Order Twenty Gallons of Good Wine to the Bonfire."—M. G. C., V: 151. Peter de Joncourt's tavern stood at Pearl St. and Coenties Slip.—See Dec. 8, 1748. The dinner was given the same day,—when all the loyal Healths were drank, with thoseconnected to the continuance of Louisbourg under British Colours for ever, while the Cannon of Copey Battery and several Vessels in the Harbour were firing." In the evening "there was a magnificent Bonfire erected, at which the same Healths were repeated. At Night the whole City was splendidly illuminated, and the greatest Noise of Joy made in every House in the City, from Countenance upon hearing the good News. The Gentlemen at Dinner made a handsome Collection for the Person who brought the Express, which he voluntarily engaged to convey hither; And there being present at this Entertainment many of the Persons who, at the Instance of his Excellency our Governor, had engaged with him in a Subscription, immediately after the Dissolution of the late Assembly. A Quantity of Provisions to be forthwith transported and consigned to Governor Shirley, for the Service of the Expedition [see May 27]; The Vote of the General Court of Massachusetts Bay was read, returning their Thanks to His Excellency Governor Clinton, for that Instance of his Zeal in Promoting this important Expedition; and to desire he would acquaint the Gentlemen concerned in the said Subscription, how acceptable this Mark of their publick Spirit was to that Court."—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 15, 1745.

On Oct. 28, Gov. Shirley wrote from Louisbourg to England an account of the expedition against that place. This was published in 1746 in London, with the title: A Letter from William Shirley, Esq; Gov. of Mass. Bay, to his Grace the Duke of Newcastle, with a Journal of the Siege of Louisbourg, and other Operations of the Forces during the Expedition against the French Settlements on Cape Breton. It was reprinted by James Parker (N. Y., 1746).

To "show their unchristian Way of rejoicing" over the fall of Louisbourg (on June 17), certain young men of the city go about smashing windows and shutters. They are warned to make restitution for those broken in Beaver St., or their names will be printed.—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 15, 1745.

The provincial council received letters from Gov. Shirley and Gov. Laws giving accounts of the reduction of Louisbourg.—Cal. Coun. Min., 349.

A noteworthy character, who dies this day in New York at the age of 27, is John Dupuy, M. D., a "Man-Midwife," whose obituaries show that he was widely recognized as a "skillful Practitioner in Physic," and a "Learned Professor of Chirurgery and Medicine." One notice of his death states: "It may be truly said here, as David did of Goliath's Sword, There is none like him."—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 22, Aug. 5, 1745.

"Peter Moore, having been sentenced to be hanged on Aug. 5 by the supreme court of the province of passing counterfeit money, receives 38 lashes at the public whipping-post, and is sentenced to stand in the pillory on Aug. 13.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 12, 1745. See Aug. 3, 1744.

James Parker publishes the following notice: "Wheresoevr an Examination of the Books in the Library possessed by the Corporation of the City of New York, it appears that many of them are missing. . . . Any Gentleman or others who may have borrowed, or are in Possession of any the said Books, or any Books whatever belonging to the said Library, are hereby desired immediately to return them to the Printer hereof, and to receive the same, where they will be thankfully received, and no Questions asked."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 19, 1745. See April 19.

The privy sewer "Chilton" (Capt. Thomas Bevan) returns to port from a cruise of about six weeks with a French prize ship, "La Pomone" (Augustine Robert Houvery, commander). The prize is "of about 180 Tons, 14 Carriage Guns, and 43 men, with a Commission from the Duke de Penthevére, Admiral of France." She was taken "after a short Engagement, without the loss of a Man; her Cargo by Invoice consists of 85 Casks of Sugar, 237 Casks Indigo, containing 87,000 wt. and 17 Bales of Cotton. She is valued at near 40,000."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 26, 1745. The prize money derived from this capture amounted to more than £160 a share.—Ibld., Sept. 30, 1745.

The death of Peter Ruggers occurs. He was "Captain of the first Independent Company of Cadets in this City," and a member of the common council, with special experience in handling financial affairs. His funeral, which occurred the following day, was attended by most of the principal inhabitants.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 26, 1745. M. C. G., VIII: 403.

The brig "Castor" (Capt. Estan) and the sloop "Pollux" (Capt. Burtins), were both found in order to proceed on a Cruise against his Majesty's Enemies."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 26, 27, 1745. See Apr. 1, 1746.

The provincial council grants a commission to Nathaniel Marston, Henry Cuyler, and Phil Phillips, to carry French prisoners to French places.—Cal. Coun. Min., 370. See May 20. 17 The death of Stephen de Lancey occurs. He was a merchant, "a very noted young Gentleman, of a fair character; Brother to the Chief Justice of this Province, and Brother-in-Law to the brave Commodore Warren."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 23, 1745. It was he who built the "large brick house" so well known after the Revolution as Furnaces' Tavern.—M. C. C., VIII: 240.

19 Capt. Bevan, of the privateer sloop "Clinton" (see Aug. 23), gives a "very handsome Treat of a Hoghead of Punch and an Ox roasted whole, to his Sloop's Company, in the Fields, near Dominie's Hook, in Consideration of their deaising, at his Desire, from plundering any of the Passengers, Officers, or Sailors on board the Prize Ship lately brought in by them."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 17, 1745.

26 Gov. Clinton embarks on a sloop for Albany, "in order to meet the Five Nations of Indians there, on the 4th of October, to renew and strengthen the ancient Treaty of Peace, subsisting between this Government and those Nations."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 17, 1745; Col. C. Mi., 349, 350.

On Sept. 17, the New York privateer sloop "William" (Capt. Nathaniel Richards) arrived here; the privateer brig "Greyhound" (Capt. Richard Jofferies) arrives to-day (see Nov. 11 and 12, 1744). They were "late Consorts in the West-Indies, when they took the rich Spanish Ship so much talk'd of, in Company with two New England Privateers; which Ship with her Cargo was sold in Antigua." The prize money from this and other captures amounted to more than £90 a man.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 17, 1745.

A "fine large Snow" is launched here, "design'd for a Privateer, and is to be fitted out immediately, to sail in Concert with Capt. Jofferies: She is called the Dragon, will mount 16 or 18 Carriage Guns, and be commanded by Thomas Seymour, late of the Clinton sloop; and is esteem'd the completest Vessel of her Size for the Purpose of any fitted out of this Place."—Ibid. See Oct. 24, 1745.

29 Deputy Mayor Gerardus Stuyvesant presides at the meeting of the common council on this day, when the election of city officials occurs, and on Oct. 14, when they are sworn in. As no mayor, sheriff, or recorder have been appointed by the governor, who, with Mayor Stephen Bayard and Recorder Daniel Horsmanden, is in Albany (see Sept. 26), the present incumbents are continued in office for another year, as provided by the charter.—M. C. C., VI: 152-58. Rarely in the English colonial period of the city's history has a deputy mayor had occasion to preside.

An advertisement informs the public "that William Grant, Stone-Cutter, and Samuel Hunter, Quarrier, of New York, lately arrived from England, carves and cuts all Manner of Stones in the neatest and most curious Fashions ever done in America. The said Grant is to be spoke with at Mr. Welsh's, Sexton to Trinity Church, in New-York."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 30, 1745.

Notice is published that "the Court Bathe, from Westchester to Nassau Island" (see April 17, 1745) will be let to the highest bidder on the first Tuesday in November, at the "Court House."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 7, 1745.

13 Thirteen "Practitioners in Physick" in New York City publish a "Certificate" by five justices of the peace for this city and county, "That the Fever that this City was lately visited with, is very greatly abated; and that there are but few Persons at Present sick in this City;" also that they do not know of anyone "that has the Distemper called the Small Pox."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 7, 1745.

Many books belonging to "the Library possessed by the Corporation of the City of New York" (see June 27, 1739) are missing. Those in folio have been advertised. The titles of the missing ones in quarto are now published; and there are several others in octavo and duodecimo. "Gentlemen and others" who have borrowed them or have them in their possession are "desired immediately to return them to the Printer hereof [Parke], who is deeply concerned [see April 19] to receive the same, where they will be thankfully received, and no Questions ask'd."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 14, 1745. See also Aug. 19.

The privateer brig "Dolphin" (Capt. Richard Langdon), of New York, arrives with a French prize snow of about 130 tons and 10 carriage guns, having on board more than 200 hogsheads of wine, sugar, and other valuable commodities. She was at the port of Porto Rico on Sept. 26, having run ashore on being chased, when all but one of her men took to a small boat and escaped. "A Fortnight before that, Capt. Langdon took a Sloop from Caroacao bound to Martinico, laden with Cordage and Beef, and 'tis said some specie, which Sloop is sent into Rhode Island."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 21, 1745. See Dec. 30.

The privateer sloop "Chilton" (see Aug. 23) sails from the Hook on a cruise.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 28, 1745.

The privateer sloop "Polly" (Capt. Helme; cf. Nov. 8, 1744), "being already fitted, and provisioned well, is expected to sail in a few days on a cruise."—Ibid. See further, April 27, 1746.

The provincial council receives an order from the lords justices to give Peter Warren and Joseph Murray precedence over John Moore in the council.—Col. Coun. Min., 359.

A committee of the common council is appointed to examine the city charter, with the assistance of the chief-justice, the recorder, Mr. Alexander, and Mr. Murray, with a view of suggesting amendments advantageous to the city.—M. C. C., VI: 161.

By order of the common council, no one shall presume to deprive the tenants near the Fresh Water Pond of the pits they have dug there, nor shall dig in the future.—M. C. C., VI: 164. The tenants had been compelled to move from lands south of this locality in May (see May 5) and are thus made secure in their new location. Here their industry continued for many years. See April 26, 1753.

18 Lately imported from London, and to be sold very cheap for ready money, by Thomas Duncan, at his House in Wall Street, near the Meal Market, the following goods, viz. . . ."—A great variety, reminding one of a modern department store, were listed in this advertisement, the names of some of which are unknown to modern trade. The following are selected: "Broad Clothes, German Serge, Bear Skin, Duffils, Shallows, Worsted cambricks, . . . Flowered damasks, . . . Mix druggets, . . . Plain and striped callimancoes, . . . Yard-wide durance, Pruneloes, . . . Superfine barragon, Worsted & hair shaps, Starries, Fleecets, Turkettes, Everlasting, Bosom, Man-manoys, Mansions, Strip'd gingham, Phoats, Chiloos, Black taffeties, . . . Strip'd satins, Black velvets, Black husting, Black bombazine, Mourning capes, Silk poplin, Single and double alapignes, Closh cord, . . . cherriderry, Indiana, Black mantua silk, Barcelon and check'd silk handkerchiefs, China, and sundry India ditto, Black gauze and Scotch ditto, . . . Then follow a miscellaneous assortment of articles, including pins and needles, cutlery, hats, gloves, Scotch snuff, pewter dishes, pictures and maps, tea, looking-glasses, writing-paper, cotton and silk gowns, cloths, cinnamon, nutmegs, and raians, "Tandems, Guick hollands, Worsted, and Tandems, Worsted, Worsted cloths of all sorts, Muslin, Lawns, Kentings, Brittanias, Onsbrigs, Blue & white calico handkerchiefs, Cotton comalls, Long lawns, Ferris, Colour'd thread, & Spectacles."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 18, 1745.

News of the destruction of "Saraghtoga" is received by the provincial council.—Col. Coun. Min., 150. See Dec. 2, and 4.

A provincial statute is passed enabling the inhabitants of New York City to elect annually two vestrymen in each of the seven wards. There will thus be 14 vestrymen instead of ten as in the past (see Sept. 22, 1653). This increase is made because the "City of New York is greatly increased as well in Extent as Number of Inhabitants." As before, they are to lay taxes in conjunction with the justices of the peace.—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 505-6.

A provincial act is passed for paying £1,511:11. for the service of this Colony." Among the expenses directed to be paid is an item of £50 to Capt. John Walton "for his care & Service as keeper of the Colony Stores of War in the City of New York" for one...

The growth of the city during the period of 1717-46 is, to some extent, illustrated by the increase of the Burgie View (known as the Bakewell View), dated March 2, 1745. The March 2, 1746, map shows five churches but since the publication of the first issue are shown, as well as a few other important changes. It is reproduced and described in Vol. I, Pt. 3.

1. "I have seen wheat growing in 1746 where St. Paul's Church now stands."—From notes by Rev. John H. Abel, D. D., entitled "Rest of Abel's Book," to the Slater Historical Soc. According to reminiscences written in 1828, there were small houses of wood about the year 1745 where now St. Paul's Church stands.—Watson, Annals (1846), 176. Both statements may be approximately correct.—See PI. 324 (of 1742-4), and PI. 34 (of 1754), Vol. I.

In this year, Myer Myers, silversmith, was admitted as a freeman of New York. In 1755, his shop was "opposite the Meat Market." He was president of the New York Silver Smiths' Society in 1776, and continued active until 1790. For a description of some of his work, see Met. Museum of Art Cat. of Exhibition of Silver used in N. Y., N. J., and the South (1914), 38-39.

A committee of the common council is ordered to request the representatives of the city in the assembly to notify the corporations of any motion abridging the charter, by-laws, or any of the rights and privileges of the city, that the corporation thus may have the opportunity of being heard.—M. C. C., V: 165. On Jan. 30, the "Trustees of the Town of Brookland," presented a petition to the assembly, setting forth that a great many inhabitants of that township "living near the Ferry from Nassau Island, to New York," who had "their chief Dependance of supporting their Families, by trading to the New York Markets," had been harassed by the Ferry Act of Oct. 14, 1742 (25: 2), "from transporting their Goods in their own Vessels, to the said Markets," and thereby exposed to hardships and expense.—Assemb. Jour., II: 93. On Feb. 18, the mayor submitted a copy of the petition to the common council. Daniel Horsmanden (see Joseph Murray) was still retained by the corporation to oppose the granting of the desired relief.—M. C. C., V: 166. The petitioners were given leave by the assembly to bring in a bill to relieve them of the hardships complained of, and this bill barely missed becoming a law.—Assemb. Jour., II: 103, 107, 117, 118-19; Jour. Leg. Coun., II: 936, 954, 55. It would have destroyed New York City's ferry monopoly.—See Dec. 3, 1752; Dec. 30, 1743.

The field officers of the city, on an order from the governor, are empowered by the assembly, in case of alarm or invasion, to demand of every inhabitant of this city who shall occupy a stockade, or be able to defend it, to deliver up to the Officer appointed, or to the Place directed for the Rendez-vous, one such Slave. He is to be "employed at the Artillery of the several Fortifications in the said City under the Direction of the proper Officer." No more than two slaves are to be placed at one gun. Any inhabitant refusing to send his or her slave, shall be fined $50. If a slave is killed or rendered incapable of service as a result of such an invasion, the owner shall be paid £50.—Assemb. Jour., II: 91.

Gov. Clinton issues a proclamation to all inclined to enlist for service under Admiral Warren at Cape Breton, offering many inducements, such as free grants of land on the island after a year's service, free transportation for the wives and children of soldiers, etc. All disposed to enlist are "desired to repair to Sergeant Yonge's, at the Hartfordshire & Yorkshire House, opposite to the Secretary's Office."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 20, 1746. This house was a tavern, on the corner of Whitehall and Marketfield Strs. The Produce Exchange building now covers the site.

By his will, proved on this day, Samuel Bayard leaves to his son Nicholas "all that my house and lot on the east side of Broad street, in New York, now in tenure of Robert Tod, between the houses of Stephen De Lancey, and the house of Philip Van Cortlandt."—N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections, LVI: 62. For Tod's tavern, see May 28, 1733, and Oct. 3, 1748.

From this date until Oct. 8, inclusive, the meetings of the council of the province were irregular and migratory, as before or since; by reason of the small-town, which raged not only in New York but throughout the province. In the churches for the "Ishings out of town was as follows: Jan. 31, Greenwich; May 3, Brooklyn; May 15, house of Jas. Delancey on the Bowery Road; May 20, and June 2, Greenwich; June 6, Brooklyn; June 11, Greenwich;
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

The assembly is informed by message from the council that the latter desires a conference with the former "at Hollet's House, in the Bowery-Lane" the next day, on the subject of a pending bill for emitting bills of credit to the value of £10,000. The assembly decides that, as this is a money bill, there should be no conference with the council on the subject.—*Assemb. Jour., II: 916–17.

An act is passed to raise £1,775 by lottery for fortifying New York City. Several persons are named as managers to sell tickets and oversee the drawing of lots. The tickets, 15,000 in number, are to be sold at £110 each. The drawing of the tickets is to commence on or before the first day of June.—*Col. Law. II, 3: 528–37.

On May 3, an amendment is made to the French indemnity which provided that, if the lottery should not be drawn in time, the treasurer could advance £1,000, either from the treasury or from loans, in order not to obstruct work on the fortifications.—Ibid., III: 543–55. This was the first time that the province had undertaken to raise money for public purposes by means of government lotteries.—*Man. Conn. (1854), 508; Ross, "Hist. of Livestock in N.Y.", in Mag. of Hist., V: 145.

"It might seem to one who looked over the advertisements of lotteries in the New York papers that New York was the market for all the lotteries which were organized in the colonies. And yet a glance at the Boston or Philadelphia papers would give the impression that either of those cities were bearing the chief burden of the lotteries. The facts are all the prominent lotteries advertised and sold their tickets in the leading towns of all the colonies."—Ross, op. cit., 152.

*The essential and grievous evil of the lottery business was the issuing of tickets. The disastrous effects which developed from the practice of issuing tickets was responsible more than anything else for the storm of public disapproval which resulted in the sweeping away of lotteries simultaneously in all the states. And yet little or no mention of the subject has been made by those who have written upon the subject of lotteries in America. Of course, contemporaneous discussions of the subject teen with criticisms of the practice."—Ibid., 212.

A new Militia Act restates the old provisions, with extended amendments. York of the law were passed on February 21, 1746. While the regimental exercises are now scheduled to take place once a year, the company exercises are to be performed at least four times. As in previous laws, the uniform of the trooper, not the foot-soldier, is prescribed, and the equipment for each is not altered. While the companies of cadets in the city of New York are each to consist of 100 men besides officers, the "Blew Artillery Company" is not to exceed 150 members besides officers. The duties and liabilities of sentries, in challenging persons, are defined; also those of physicians, surgeons, and apothecaries, residing in the cities of New York and Albany, in case of invasion or attack, their willful neglect subjecting them to a forfeit of £100. The heavy fine of £500 is imposed upon a field officer neglecting or refusing to perform his duty; £100 upon a captain or other inferior officer, and £50 in the case of a private. The death penalty is imposed by this act (for the first time), in case of actual invasion, if a person able to bear arms leaxes the city or places it in jeopardy without the order of the commanding officer. The constituting and proceedings of a court-martial are newly regulated. Fuller provisions are enacted for levying and collecting fines, penalties, and forfeitures. In case of an alarm or actual invasion, every inhabitant of the city of New York and the neighboring habitations is a "Master or owner of a N. of Horns or Hogs, and Man Slave" shall deliver to the appointed officer, or to the appointed rendezvous, "One Such Slave to be Employed at the Artillery of the Several Fortifications," under penalty of £50 for neglect or refusal to deliver up or send such slave. In case such slave shall be kept and used in the province after the invasion, the owner shall be paid £50 out of money raised for the purpose.

This act contains also this new provision: "Whereas many persons have of late made it a practice to lay Boards Masts, &c. Feb.
28 Battery, and to square and work the same there to the great Incumbrance and Annoyance thereof, as well as hazard & danger, which the great height from to which the same are erected, are ings theron erected, from Accidents from Fire," it is enacted that, if, hereafter, anyone shall lay them there, "out of the Bason thereof," or "work & manufacture the same there," such person or persons shall forfeit the sum of 40s for each offence, to be re covered to the mayor, recorder, and the aldermen of the city of the
On the oath of one or more credible witnesses, one-half to be paid to the person or persons who shall prosecute and sue for it, and the other half to the poor. If the boards, shavings, etc. are not removed in two days, the head-runner of this battery shall cause them to be removed and kept in his custody until the further sum of 40s and expenses shall be paid to him.—Col. Lewis N. T., Illi.

The act was continued and amended Dec. 6, 1746 (ibid, III: 614), and expired Dec. 1, 1758, but was revived Dec. 12, 1755 (ibid, III: 616), and continued Dec. 7, 1754 (p. v.)

Inhabitants of the South Ward petition the common council for permission "to Build a Market House at their Own Expense at the East End of Pearle Street and a Slip, for Boats Or Canoes at the West End." They are given leave "to Build a Market House at their Own Expense on Such Place and of Such Dimensions as shall be directed by a committee of aldermen, appointed for their guidance, to the best advantage of the city and other public markets of the city. The petitioners are also per mited, "at their Own Expense to Make a Slip at the West End of Pearle Street to Extend to Low Water Mark and no further."—M. G. C., V: 167. This was the Whitelhall Slip Market, which stood, on the present plan of the city, at Whitelhall and Pearl Sts.

The locality had long been a market-place. In 1656 (p. v.), the "Market Place at the Strand" was established near it. The Custom House Bridge Market, and (a short distance above) the Broad Street Market, had already ceased to exist when these petitioners made their application.—De Voe (writing in 1862) adds: "At this period Pearle Street at the west end commenced on the shore, near where now runs State Street, and ran easterly, or at the east end of Pearle Street ended in Whitelhall Street; from this the continuation was called Dusk Street."—Ibid. The market-house is seen in the Babyard View (Pl. 37, Vol. I). In 1749, an advertisement refers to it by name thus: "At Mr John Whiley's, the corner house almost opposite the,White Hall Slip Market."—N. Y. Gen., Aug. 14, 1749.

It had previously referred to as the "Market-house at the end of Pearle Street."—De Voe, op. cit., citing "the Laws of 1748." This market stood only about four years, from April 1746.

Inhabitants of Montgomery Ward petition the common council for "Leave to Build a Market House in Rodman's Slip at their Own Expense," and they are given leave to do so, "in Such place and of Such Dimensions as shall be directed by a committee appointed to maintain a Luthen in the market-place, or in and near the above mentioned regulations as the other public markets.—M. G. C., V: 168. This slip had been called Van Cliffe's Slip, Lyon's Slip, Rodman's Slip, and Burling's Slip before this date; later it was again called Lyon's Slip. See Aug. 9, 1621; 1730; May 5, 1736; March 2, 1741; 1755; Landmark Map Ref. Key, Ill: 93B. De Voe calls the market Burling's Market (Market Book, 278), it being so named ("Burlin's Market") on the Maarchlack Map of 1755 (Pl. 124, Vol. I). The market stood about fourteen years, and is last noted of record as reference "Z" on the 1793 map by F. Mahlerbach.

The council and assembly meet at the residence of Gov. Clinton in Greenwich.—Jour. Leg. Coun., II: 918. The governor addresses the house: "My present Indisposition prevents my speaking to you in public: I most earnestly recommend to you to make ample Provision, and that with the utmost Dispatch for all those services which I recommended to you the last Session and hitherto remain unprovided for,"—Ibid, II: 918. On the following day, the govern or communicated to the council a message from the assembly desiring adjournment until the second Tuesday in April, "as the small pix is at Greenwich where they now sit."—Jour. Leg. Coun., II: 918. On March 17, be placed before the council two messages of the 14th from the assembly, one desiring adjournment from Westchester, where they were then sitting to Brooklyn, and the other desiring adjournment to New York. As the small-pox was "very rife" in New York, the council advises the governor to adjourn the assembly to Brooklyn.—Ibid, II: 919. For a schedule of the year's meetings actually held out of town by both council and assembly, see Jan. 31; see also the Chronology under the dates there shown.

The council at New York receives on this day (and again on April 20) a letter from Lieut.-Gov. Thomas of Pennsylvania, re garding a meeting of commissioners from the colonies. On April 11, one came from Gov. Laws (Law) of Connecticut on this subject.—Cal. Coun. Min., 352. On May 8, similar communications came from Gov. Good of Virginia, and Gov. Wentworth of New Hamp shire.—Ibid, 353.

A fine pen survey of this date, is "Performed by Order of Messrs Francis Covenhoven & Abraham Lynsen," and "Projected by a Scale of one Chain to an Inch by Bradt Schnyler," showing buildings in perspective, and Abraham Lynsen's land, adjoining the lands of Admiral Peter Warren, in Greenwich, in the Out Ward of the city. This land is "bounded on the North and on the East by the Lands belonging to Admiral Warren, on the South by Lands belonging to Mordecai David Gomer, and on the West by Hudson's River at High Water Mark" (dimensions are given). It is attested as a true copy by Samuel Giles. The survey is filed with the Bayard papers (1717-1748) in N. Y. Hist. Soc.

On account of the small-pox which has made its appearance at Greenwich, and because it prevails also in the country around Jamaica, L. I. (which has been proposed for the meeting-place of the assembly), these regulations were made to keep the assembly and governour's direction, at the house of Benjamin Barnet in the "Borough of Westchester."—Jour. Leg. Coun., II: 918; Assembl. Jour., II: 100; but see March 17 and 20. For schedule of out-of-town meetings, see Jan. 31.

The trustees of the Presbyterian congregation in New York write a circular letter addressed "To the Ministers and Churches and Congregations at Boston, and other Towns in the Massachusets Bay Colony in New England, and to all others to whom this Letter shall Come," in which they review the early history (from 1735, p. v.), and present the needs of this church in New York, saying, among other things: "For the present great diseases demand Re pairs, . . . We want Ground wherein to bury our Dead, which scarce of late have been interred with common Decency for Want of Room. We also want a Bell and Steeple not only to call the Congregation together, but also for the more honourable Support of Divine Worship, . . . But certainly most of all, we want an Enlargement of our Church or Meeting House.

"To supply all these Demands, will cost us at least £500 New York money.

"Tho' we cannot prescribe the Way, in which this shall be done, yet we would assure them, that a Collection will be made in your Churches and Congregations on the Sabbath in the Room of your stated Collections, . . . "—Extracts from the Itineraires . . . of Extra Stiles (1916), 542.

In answer to a petition from sundry Germans for leave to 13 maintain a Lutheran in the market-square, the council orders that the present minister indicate the qualifica tions for such a minister.—Coun. Min., XXII: 79 (Albany).

Letters are received by the governor's council at New York from Admiral Warren and Sir William Peppercorn at Loundsbite, asking for men.—Cal. Coun. Min., 532.

The assembly receives the following communication from the governor: "I find by two Messages from the House, of the 14th inst. that you are desirous of an Adjournment from Westchester, on Account of the frequent Occasions that arise, of sending Mes gages that Distance, to the other Branches of the Legislature, whereby the Dispatch of Business will be greatly retarded." As a small-pox prevails in the city, the governor, with the advice of the council, orders the house to adjourn from Westchester to "Brookland on Nassau Island." The assembly convened there on March 20 (p.v.)—Assembl. Jour., II: 101; Cal. Coun. Min., 532. See also Jan. 31.

A piece of land, of 116 acres, "adjoining to Kipsborough, and fronting the King's Highway, having a very convenient Landing on the East River, being about two Miles out of Town," is offered for sale. Another piece of land, of 46 acres, about a mile out of town, "being one Half a Lot of Land commonly called Lempeter's Land" (see Pl. 175, Vol. III), is offered for sale, "to be laid out into Lots of five or six Acres, as the Purchasers shall agree, some Part of it being very fit for Tanners, Curriers & Gardener's; also a salt meadow of 16 acres adjoining Leendert's Land. "An instructive Tithe will be given by Anna Pritchard, living at the Widow Brevoort.'—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 17, 1746. It should be noted (see Pl. 175, Vol. III) that the marshy ground or salt meadow along the East River between 13th and Houston Sts.
was apparently unpainted land.

The representative (of representatives) meets "in the Assembly Chamber, at the House of the Widow Sicklie," in the "Town of Brookland," having been adjourned at Westchester on March 17 (p. v.)—Assem. Jour., II: 101. The meetings of the lower branch of the legislature continued in Brooklyn until Oct. 15.—Ibid., II: 133. For the various movements of the council this year, see Jan. 1, 1745.

Gov. Clinton, in a message to the assembly, says that he has received letters from Admiral Warren and General Pepperrell declaring it absolutely necessary to raise levies of men to be sent in the spring to Louisbourg. He urges the assembly to do all in its power to raise a quota from New York Province.—Assem. Jour., II: 102.

The time expires on this day within which streets were to be made and wharfs built as provided in the grants of water lots in 1736 and 1737.—See April 15, May 5, 1736, March 24, 1737.
The House (of representatives) also affixed the completion of the exterior streets on the East River, in the localities there described.

Capt. John Jancey, "late Commander of the Privateer Ship
Lincoln of this Port," which has been lost, arrives "with a French Tartan Prize, taken by Capt. Rosewell, of the Privateer Brig Trumpeter," on the 22d of the North Side of Hispaniola." The prize is the "Annunciation" (Mons. Rapouillet, commander), of 140 tons, which had only 23 men on board, passengers included, and two guns; her cargo consisted of wine, oil, olives, almonds, etc., and "would have been acquired a pretty valuable Prize, had it not been for a busy Rhode Island Privateer called the Hector, Capt. Higgins, who appeared in sight just as she struck to Capt. Rosewell, and by that Means claims a Part of her."—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 31, 1746.
The "Lincoln" was lost on the Spanish coast on Dec. 11, 1745, while the crew were "putting the Vessel on the Careen."—Ibid., March 17, 1746.

All of "his Majesty's Forces that arrived here lately from Gibraltar [see Feb. 5] bound for Cape Breton, march'd out" of the fort and embarked on the "Ruby" to wait the arrival of the other troopships from Virginia, which were daily expected off Sandy Hawk with their two men-of-war convoy.—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 31, 1746. See March 31.

Two pieces of land on Manhattan Island, advertised for sale, are described thus: "One Lot of Land adjoining to Kipsborough and Kip's Highway has a foot landing on the East River, being about two Miles out of Town, very commodious for a Gentleman's Country-Seat or Farming, containing One Hundred and Thirty-one Acres, to which belongs a Swamp stored with Wood, which if cleared may be made good Meadow-Land. . . . Also one other Lot of Land lying about a Mile out of Town, containing near Forty-six Acres of good Land, some part cleared and the rest well stock'd with timber and Fire-wood, being one-Half of a Lot of Land commonly called Leendert's Land."— N. Y. Post-Boy, March 31, 1746. "Kipsborough" or Kipshurp, was mentioned as early as 1678, and was the Kips Bay Farm.—Riker, Hist. of Harlem, 384. Neither of the paragraphs advertised in part of the Kip's Bay tract. The farm mentioned as including 131 acres was later the John Watts estate, or "Rose Hill."—See Pl. 41, Vol. I; and Pl. 176, Vol. III. The other parcel was part of Leendert's farm.—See Pl. 175, Vol. III. It was probably later part of James de Lancey's.

The inhabitants of the city being again called upon to mount guard in the Fort, a "Centinal Citizen" proposes, in a letter to the printer (Parker), that a collection be taken up immediately to clean out the filth and rubbish left behind in the fort by the soldiers now quartered for Cape Breton.—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 31, 1745.
See Feb. 3.

The privateer "Pollux" brings in a French prize ship, whose cargo consists of "Wine, Oil, Soap, Candles, Bees-wax, Cottons, and sundry other Goods."—N. Y. Post-Boy, April 7, 1746.

The privateer ship "Prince Charles" (Capt. Tingley)—see
Nov. 12 and Dec. 3, 1744; Dec. 30, 1745—arrives with a prize,
"the largest and deepest laden Vessel of any brought into this Port since the War," a French ship called the "Rising Sun." This prize was captured Feb. 26, "out of 36 Sail and 3 Men of War, which he [Capt. Tingley] had dogged for two Days before from Porto rico." She had "22 fine New Guns, all 6 pounders," and nearly 300 men, and was bound for Marins with 1119 Bushels of Sugar, 458 Casks of Coffee, and other Goods on board." She "would hardly have been taken so easily, but for a Stratagem Capt. Tingley made use of in arming a Number of his Men like Marines, with Grenadiers Caps on, by which he was taken for a Man of War.
This trick was on board the Prize when the Judge of the Admiralty, who are brought in here; but the most of the Men were set on Shore at Mendi. We hear the small plunder amounts to above 1000 lrs."—N. Y. Post-Boy, April 14, 1746. See May 18, 1747.

It is resolved by the common council that the "Poor House" be enlarged, and a committee is appointed to prepare a plan of alterations. The plan was reported at the next meeting (May 9), and the committee required to "forthwith Purchase Materials And Agree With Workmen for Building and Completing the said House,"—Assem. Jour., II: 107. March 24, 1745. On May 8, the committee reported that the work was finished.—Ibid., V: 187. See Nov.
15, 1743, for the building of the first poorhouse.

The provincial council receives a letter from Admiral Warren asking for support, as French militia and Indians are arming to attack Louisburg.—Col. Coun. Min., 55. The council also takes cognizance of a royal order to "the master general of ordnance" for sending an engineer to New York.—Ibid.

In a message to the assembly, Gov. Clinton says: "Pursuant to a memorial presented by my Direction, to the King, in Council, representing the Necessity of having a skillful Engineer employed in this Province, his Majesty has been graciously pleased to concede to my Request; and, by order in Council, of the 16th of January last, has directed an able Engineer to be employed in repairing our Fortifications, erecting Batteries, and building Forts, upon our Frontiers, under the direction of the Governor for the

The little privateer sloop "Polly" (Capt. Helm)—see Oct.
27, 1745—arrives here from Rhode Island, "having taken and sent into Newport, a Spanish Sloop laden with Coca, but said to belong partly to Coroaco; Capt. Helme arrived at Rhode Island in order to have her tried there."—N. Y. Post-Boy, April 28, 1746.

"We have now five of our Privateers in Port; but the Brig Hester, Capt. Samuel Bayard, is again completely fitted, almost mounted, and very convenient for action and for running along on the East River, being about two Miles out of Town, very commodious for a Gentleman's Country-Seat or Farming, containing One Hundred and Thirty-one Acres, to which belongs a Swamp stored with Wood, which if cleared may be made good Meadow-Land . . . Also one other Lot of Land lying about a Mile out of Town, containing near Forty-six Acres of good Land, some part cleared and the rest well stock'd with timber and Fire-wood, being one-Half of a Lot of Land commonly called Leendert's Land."— N. Y. Post-Boy, March 31, 1746. "Kipsborough" or Kipshurp, was mentioned as early as 1678, and was the Kips Bay Farm.—Riker, Hist. of Harlem, 384. Neither of the parcels advertised in part of the Kip's Bay tract. The farm mentioned as including 131 acres was later the John Watts estate, or "Rose Hill."—See Pl. 41, Vol. I;
and Pl. 176, Vol. III. The other parcel was part of Leendert's farm.—See Pl. 175, Vol. III. It was probably later part of James de Lancey's.

The inhabitants of the city being again called upon to mount guard in the Fort, a "Centinal Citizen" proposes, in a letter to the printer (Parker), that a collection be taken up immediately to clean out the filth and rubbish left behind in the fort by the soldiers
now quartered for Cape Breton.—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 31, 1745.
See Feb. 3.

The privateer "Pollux" brings in a French prize ship, whose cargo consists of "Wine, Oil, Soap, Candles, Bees-wax, Cottons, and sundry other Goods."—N. Y. Post-Boy, April 7, 1746.

Also quoted: "I say to the printer to appreciate this favor to putting Fort George in good repair."—Assem. Jour., II: 105.

The privateer ship "Prince Charles" (Capt. Tingley)—see May 5, 1746. The -works for the Sandwich Wharf, at the South End of the city, are under way with the utmost activity.
For the early spring, the wharf is expected to be completed.

The provincial council receives a letter from Gov. Shirley
The provincial council meets at the house of James de Lancy.

It is the second issue of the Royal Council of New York.

Gerardus van Terting (Capt. Hardy) arrives at Sandy Hook, 15 days from Cape Breton, "where having seen the Troops from Virginia sailed [see Jan. 31; Feb. 31 March 29], is returned here to convoy the Ship with the Remainder of those Troops from this Port, which they were not then lose time to call for." — N. Y. Post-Boy, May 19, 1746.

Gerardus Duyckinck, living near the Old Slip Market in New York, continues to carry on the business of his late father deceased, viz. Limning, Painting, Varnishing, Japanning, Gilding, Glazing, and Silvering of Looking Glasses, all done in the best Manner.

"He also will teach young Gentlemen the Art of Drawing, with Painting on Glass; and sells all sorts of Window-Glass, white Lead, Oil and Painter's Colours." — N. Y. Post-Boy, May 19, 1746. See also M. C. C., VIII: 259.

A committee of the provincial council reports on a letter, received on April 11 (Cal. Coun., 352) from the lords of trade, relating to the Moravians. — Ibid., 354.

On complaint of Rev. Mr. Knoll, John Lodwick Hodgson is forbidden to officiate as minister of the Lutheran Church. — Cal. Coun., 352. See Kretzmann, The Oldest Lutheran Church in Am. (1914), 37.

June

A proclamation is issued prohibiting the sailing of vessels from New York for a month. — Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 577. June 2 is the date given in Cal. Coun., 354. For the text of this proclamation, see N. Y. Post-Boy, June 9, 1746. On June 3, the council gave directions to fire on any vessel which might try to leave port contrary to orders. — Cal. Coun., 354. Apparently this was thought to be a necessary war measure. For the partial suspension of the embargo, see June 17.

Goldborow Banyar is appointed deputy secretary of the province by John Catherwood, who has been acting secretary during the absence of Secretary Geo. Clarke, Jr. (see June 24, 1739), and he is sworn in at this meeting of the provincial council at Greenwich. — Cal. Coun., 354. See July 3.

"It is ordered by the council that a proclamation be issued calling for volunteers for the defence of Louisbourg. The draught of this proclamation was read and approved on June 7; and ordered to be printed...Ibid."

Clinton, in his capacity of "General and Governor-in-Chief of the Province of New York, and the Territories thereon depending..." appoints Henry Bodman, as a "General of the Red Squadron of His Majesty's Fleet," issues a proclamation prohibiting the sailing of any vessel from this port for the next month. — N. Y. Post-Boy, June 9, 1746; Cal. Coun., 354.

The provincial council, in the city hall, orders that French prisoners be sent to Jamaica, L. I.; also that vessels trying to leave port contrary to orders shall be fired upon. — Cal. Coun., 354.

The population of the city (and county) of New York is 11,718; and of the province, 61,589, exclusive of Albany County, which could not be enumerated "on account of the enemy," — Doc. Hist. N. Y. (4to ed.), II: 447. According to the Rancher MSS. (in N.Y. Pub. Library), the population of the city was 12,017; and of the province, 74,657.

The common council permits the inhabitants of the West Ward "to Make An Addition of Twenty One feet at the South End of the Market in the Broad Way at their Own Charge." — M. C. C., V: 172. See April 13, 1738.

The provincial council, meeting in Brooklyn, issues orders to the sheriffs of Kings and Queens Counties in regard to French prisoners. — Cal. Coun., 354.

Chaloner, the snow "Dragon" (Capt. Seymour) and the brig "Greyhound" (Capt. Jeffries)—see Sept. 26, 1745—return with a capture, the sloop "Grand Dable," a Spanish privateer, which they "made a Consort of." The following recital is typical of the sea-fights of the period: "On the second Day of May last, said Chaloner were cruising in the Bay of Mexico, they fell in with a large Spanish Ship of 36 Guns, and upwards of 500 Men, with whom they all engaged for the greatest part of two Days; but were at last obliged to leave her, after expending most of their Ammunition. They did all that was possible for Men to do with a superior Force, and left her a perfect Wreck, but at the same time were not in a better Condition themselves, having almost all their Mast so much wounded, that they every Moment apprehended their going overboard, and as they found that they were obliged to make the best of their Way home. The Dragon lost not a Man in the Engagement, but had several wounded, and Capt. Jeffries himself unhappily received a small wound near the right Eye. Of the Enemy they saw many fall, and their Colours were 5 times shot away, but always hoisted again immediately." — N. Y. Post-Boy, June 9, 1746. Concerning later exploits of the "Dragon," see March 20, 1747.

Sir Peter Warren writes from Louisbourg to the Duke of Newcastle: "Since my letter to ye Grace dated the 6th inst, I have read an account of the Death of Governor Morris of the new Jerseys; as my little fortune lies in the Colony of New York where I married I shall Esteem it as the highest favour if your grace will be pleased to Appoint me to ye Government, with a prospect of succeeding Mr Clinton when it shall be agreeable to him to leave New York. I fancy myself I can do his Majesty as much Service in that Situation as any and it will be a means of establishing my health..." — From "British Transcripts" in the Lib. of Congress, the original being in the Public Record Office, London (Colonial Office, class 5, Vol. 44, folio 27).

To be Sold. On board the Ship Jacob, John Anderson Master, at New York, a parcel of Young Men Servants, just imported. — N. Y. Post-Boy, June 9, 1746. It was a custom of the time for immigrants unable to pay passage money to reimburse the shipmaster by allowing their services as apprentices to be sold. — See June 19 and Nov. 14, 1748; April 23, 1739.

It is ordered by the governor's council that the governor's speech and the addresses of the council and assembly be printed separately; also in the N. Y. Post-Boy. — Cal. Coun., 354.

The council orders that bounty be given to volunteers. — Cal. Coun., 355.

Goldbore Banyor puts forth a proclamation forbidding carpenters in the city to perform any work other than on the bateaux which are being built for the war against Canada. — Cal. Coun., 355. More drastic action was later taken in this matter. — See July 21; see also ship-building measures in Queen Anne's War, June 27, 1711; and in the French and Indian War, May 3, 1755.

James Parker, having been appointed keeper of the library in the city hall (see April 19, 1745), advertises that he has, at his own "Chargé and Trouble," printed a catalogue of the books, which will be given away to any "Lovers of Reading." He will attend at the library, after June 24, every Tuesday at 4 o'clock. — N. Y. Post-Boy, June 16, 1746.

The printed catalogue of the library is not listed by Evans in his American Bibliography, and no copy is recorded.

The provincial council, meeting at Brooklyn, orders that a proclamation be issued to take off the embargo (see June 1 and 2, except for military stores). — Cal. Coun., 355.

The exportation of gunpowder, arms, ammunition, military stores, white pine inch boards, or provisions such as "beef, pork, Ship Bread or Cornell Indian corn or peas," is prohibited, from Sept. 1 until the end of the present hostilities, by a provincial act, which, however, is not to apply to the supplying of war vessels, privateers, or trading vessels engaged in operations against the enemy. — Cal. Laws N. Y., III: 569-70. See proclamation of June 1. See also act passed July 15, 1746. — Ibid., III: 570-71. The act was invoked on July 8, when New Jersey was not allowed to purchase arms in N. Y. Cal. Coun., 356.

A committee of the assembly meets at the house of the Widow Wagorbine. — Assemb. Journ., II: 114. On the following day, a committee of the council met there. — Jour. Leg. Coun., II: 931. This house was doubtless a tavern. No reference to its situation appears of record.

The provincial council, meeting in the city hall, issues warrants for salaries, public services, Indian presents, fortifications, transporting soldiers, etc., and printing bills of credit. — Cal. Coun., 355.

The Six Nations of Indians having refused to enter the war, Gov. Clinton urges the colony to make them presents, in addition to those authorized by the king, in order to secure their allegiance; he also asks for an appropriation for provisioning troops. — Assemb.
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

The assembly appoints a committee to receive and entertain July 15 Brig. Gen. Gooch on his arrival in New York, and congratulate him upon his diligence in the enterprise against the French in Canada. After adopting an address of allegiance and congratulation, the assembly determines to meet in Brooklyn on July 10. Meetings were held in Brooklyn through Oct. 8 (see Jan. 14, 1746).—Assemb. Jour., II: 112-23.

The provincial council orders that Gen. Gooch be received with military honours.—Cal. Coun. Min., 356. Chief-Justice De Lancey presides at this meeting, Gov. Clinton having left for Albright.

A Spanish flag of truce arrives at the fort with letters for Gov. Clinton. On July 21, these were translated and sent to him.—Cal. Coun. Min., 356-57.

"Whereas some malicious and evil-minded Persons, have lately been guilty of doing very considerable Damage, both to the Walls and Tombs of the Jewish Burying-place, near this City: This is therefore to give Notice, that if any Person or Persons, shall discover the Offender or Offenders, so that he or they may be brought to Justice, they shall receive a Reward of Five Pounds, paid by Jacob Franks."—N. T. Post-Boy, July 21, 1746. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 927.

The Rev. Henry Basley, having been chosen by the vestry of Trinity Church, and admitted by Gov. Clinton, to succeed the late William Vesey as rector, is inducted into the office.—Eccles. Rec., IV: 207-30.

We have Advice from Albany, that the Forces raised in this Province, having been reviewed at the Place of Rendezvous, do amount to 1580 effective Men, exclusive of Officers; and that last Week, these Forces, together with those raised in New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Maryland, have all marched from Albany to the Carrying-Place.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 27, 1746.

The common council agrees to a proposal of the "Joint Committee of the Council and Assembly" that the city "Cause to be Built a Small Watch House near the Powder House," with the understanding that "the Said Committees would provide a proper Number of Watchmen to Watch the Said Powder House this Winter, and a Convenient Magazine for the same Purpose within the Stockade by it is ordered that "the Committee for Enlarging the Poor House Cause a proper Watch House to be Built in Such Manner and at Such Place As they Shall Think Convenient."—M. G. C., V: 183. On Dec. 8, the watch-house was reported finished.—Ibid., V: 187.

The king's birthday is celebrated "with great Demonstrations of Loyalty and Joy." The provincial and municipal officials review the militia and then drink "his Majesty's and all the Loyal Healths." Cannon are fired and the city is illuminated.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 3, 1746.

The sheriff advertises for sale, on execution, "at the House of William Gilden, in the Hamlet of Dutch Drongen on the New Dock," the effects (including a young negro), of a blacksmith.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 13, 1746. See Sept. 3, 1744.

The privy-beg "Hester" (Capt. Troup), completely fitted and manned, falls down to Sandy Hook, "in order to proceed on a Cruise against his Majesty's Enemies;" also the privy-beg "Dolphin" (Capt. Beely).—N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 1, 1746. See April 27, 1746; April 6, 1747.

Capt. Beverley Robinson advertises for the recovery of four soldiers who, on Nov. 18, deserted from his Company of Foot, now serving in Florida, to the River Manacu, within the Stockade by it is ordered that "the Committee for Enlarging the Poor House Cause a proper Watch House to be Built in Such Manner and at Such Place As they Shall Think Convenient."—Committee of the Council and Assembly.—T. R. Min. (MS.).

"The Maryland Forces are all sail'd for Albany, but the Virginia Company [see Sept. 30] is encamped in our Fort; and it is now hoped all Well-wishers to their Country, will endeavour effectually to prevent the Desertion of any of those Forces, by stopping and apprehending all deserters that cannot have a very good Account of themselves."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 20, 1746. Regarding provisions for the Maryland troops, a letter from Gov. Bladen of Maryland, received by the council, states that he ought to have nothing to do with it after the troops have left his province.—Cal. Colon. Min. Nov. 6.

By resolution of the governor and council, Rev. Henry Bar- clay is named to succeed the Rev. Mr. Vesey, deceased (see July 11), as rector of Trinity Church.—Cal. Colon. Min., 360.
William Smith records that the college project was "early in the eye of the patrons of the public school, formerly trusted to the care of Mr. Malcolm who, for services as schoolmaster, was paid by the town the sum of £50 on April 6, 1733, and April 4, 1739."—M. C. C., VIII: 346 (Index), favored by the purists of that institution now rising to manhood, and forced by a general spirit of emulation on discovering the sundy advantages our youth had acquired by an academical education in Great Britain and Ireland, but chiefly at the neighbouring Colleges of New England." He refers to the origin of the "seminary" at New Haven, from which "many of the western churches in New-York and New-Jersey were afterwards furnished with their English Clergymen," and adds: "Mr. Smith who was a tutor and declined the Rector's chair of Yale College, on the removal of him, was the first lay character of it, belonging to the colony of New-York. Their numbers multiplied some years afterwards, and especially when, at his instance, Mr. Philip Livingston, the second proprietor of the manor of that name, encouraged that academy by sending several of his sons to it for their education.

To the disgrace of our first planters, who beyond comparison surpassed their eastern neighbours in opulence, Mr. Delancey, a graduate of the University of Cambridge, and Mr. Smith, were, for many years, the only academicians in this province, except such as were in holy orders; and so late as the period we are now examining, the most capable and most notable scholars amongst them, had not his bachelor's degree at the age of seventeen, but two months before the passing of the above law, the first towards erecting a College in this Colony, though at the distance of above one hundred and twenty years after its discovery and settlement of the country, was benedicted by an episcopalian bishop."

There being then in the morning of life, there was no academical but Mr. Delancey on the bench, or in either of the three branches of the Legislature; and Mr. Smith was the only one at the bar. Commerce engrossed the attention of the principal families, and their sons were usually sent from the writing school to the counting-house, and thence to the West India islands—practice introduced by the persecuted refugees from France, who brought money, arts, and manners, and figured as the chief men in it, almost the only merchants in it from the commencement of this century until the distinction between them and others was lost by death and the inter-communion of their posterity by marriage with the best stock and the new immigrants from Great Britain and Ireland. The French Church of New-York contained, before their divisions in 1724, nearly all the French merchants of the capital."—From "Smith's Continuation of the Hist. of N. Y.," in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections (1836), V: 91-95.

The Post-Boy of this date contains a paragraph cenuring the government, and this causes a dispute in the council meeting. As Clinton explained in a letter to the lords of trade (Feb. 4, 1747), this paragraph showed the spirit of some of the council, who aimed to awaken a popular faction. Clinton also referred to "the small number of the Council and Assembly" and "the low condition of the authority of the courts, no recollection above thirteen months the ages of the judges."—*N. Y. Col. Docs., VI: 128-29. On Jan. 29, 1747, Colden explained to Clinton his connection with the episode, as one who was an object of the cenure.—*Ibid., VI: 331-40.

The common council orders payment of £10,011;5.5, balance due to Samuel Lawrence for "Repairing the Meal Market and Dock."—*M. C. C., VI: 188-89.

An advertisement in the Post-Boy gives a view of the business activities near Coenties Market: "Peter De Joncourt, living near Coenties Market, having left off keeping Tavern, continues to sell out of Doors, by small Measure, good old Madera Wine, Jamaica Rum and Arrack, in Quart; He also sells retail by retail sundry sorts of Dry Goods, all Sorts of Spice, Tea, Kraitins, Sugars, &c. He likewise keeps very good Accommodation for Lodgers."—*N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 8, 1746. De Joncourt's tavern had been an official resort of the period.—See M. C. C., Dec. Vol. I: 151. In 1747 he became master of a brigantine.—Col. Coun. Min. 1746, 364.

12 Clinton describes the "Present State of the Province" to the lords of trade. Among other things, he says: "In the fortifications they have everywhere employed Men entirely ignorant of the art, who have no more pretence to knowledge than the meanest plowman, and have squandered away large sums of money with no other view than that of appearing useful to Relations, or to such persons as they thought could serve them in future Elections. The works have been so manifestly absurd that they have been in most places altered, & rebuilt at their own desires. In making repairs to the Fort, which not only defends this town, but likewise the principal Battery at the entrance of the Harbour, they refuse repairing the side next the town, and even left the Guns dismissed on that side; There can be no reason assigned for this, but a malicious intimation that the town may be in Danger from a Governor whose Residence is in the Fort; Yet as the Town is open the Fort may be more easily attacked from the Town than any other way; and as soon as an enemy gets possession of the Fort, all the Batterys must fall into their hands, because the Fort commands them... In order more perfectly to conceive what power a small faction may obtain, it must be observed that the Assembly of this Province, as all the others in North America, consists of ordinary Farmers & Shop keepers of no education or knowledge in public Affairs, or the World; & in this Province the greatest numbers are Foreigners, or of Foreign Extract, many of which do not understand the English Language and are generally led by some cunning Attorney or Reader of pamphlets."—*N. Y. Col. Docs., VI: 462. There is the deepest misgiving in Clinton's remarks regarding extravagance and waste in rebuilding and repairing the fort. The constant appropriations asked for and granted for "necessary repairs" by each succeeding governor must have led the reader to much the same conclusions.

An advertisement (that of Peter de Joncourt) is "To be Sold,"—*N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 29, 1746. This was Sold Lane.—See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 1009. See also Aug. 10, 1770.

In this year, "Little Bloomingdale," a farm or tract of land once in the occupation of Stephen de Lancy, the younger, and later known as the Somerendyck land, was mentioned in a partition deed between James de Lancy, Peter de Lancy, Oliver de Lancy, Peter Warren and Susannah, his wife, and John Watts and Anne, his wife, recorded in Libr. Deeds, X: 258 (Albany). See also Oct. 9, 1780 for mention of a tract of Little Bloomingdale made at the request of George Stanton and John Somerendyke, showing 15 acres along the Hudson, and the course of the Bloomingdale Road.

The terms of the lottery act for the benefit of the college (see Dec. 1746) are published in the Post-Boy. The lottery consists of 10,000 tickets, offered at £1 each, with prizes of £1,000 each, and the proceeds are represented by the price-winning tickets. "As the late Lottery [side infra] has given general Satisfaction, the same Care will be taken, and the same Regulations observed in this, with respect to the Tickets, the Drawing, keeping the Books, and other Particulars, as near as possible. The Blanks as well as the Tickets may be had at the Dwelling-houses of Messrs. Peter Valette and Peter Van Brugh Livingston, who are appointed Managers."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 5, 1747.

No record has been found of the "late Lottery" here referred to. Quite possibly it was not connected with the proposed college, although an earlier lottery was referred to in the trustees report of Nov. 1, 1754 (p. v.), which shows that the lottery of 1747 was the "second."—Assemb. Jour., II: 397. See further, June 1.

The provincial council issues an order in regard to "La Fleur," a French prize taken by the "Greyhound," and suspected of having smallpox on board. The next day, however, the prizes were taken, and the prize ordered to be examined. A report on this was returned on Jan. 15, and orders issued the next day.—Col. Coun. Min. 1746, 6-63.
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1747 Fire breaks out from the roof of the city hall. The flames are soon extinguished by the magistrates and the inhabitants, "who have always been remarkable for their Readiness & Dexterity on such Occasions." Especially noteworthy is the work of "Francis Davison, a Carpenter (being the same Person that was so instrumental in extinguishing the Fire formerly in the Cupola of the New Dutch Church) who got out upon the Roof with an Axe, and cut the Roof open where the Fire was, the Engineers at the same time playing the Water upon him, & the Weather being intensely cold, by the time the Fire was out he was cloathed with Ice." Two other persons, Duncan Brown, mate, and John Evetts, mariner, also render remarkable assistance. Despite the fire being started by prisoners in the building, as it broke out in a room under the roof where they were confined, at a distance from the chimney.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 19, 1747. On the following day, the common council granted to the three men the freedom of the city; in addition, Davison was presented with £5 and the others with £3 each.—M. C. C. V. 190. See March 30.

15 Edward Willet, lessee of the ferry, in a petition to the common council, states that "he has been a Great Sufferer by the Dispute Subsisting between this Corporation and the Township of Brookland and also by theInsolent Diversions that have been in this City." In consequence he asks for an abatement of his rent. A committee is appointed to inquire into the matter.—M. C. C. V. 100. In consideration of his losses, he was allowed a reduction of £160 from his rent.—Ibid., V. 191.

19 With the issue of this late (No. 209), James Parker changes the name of his newspaper from The New-York Weekly Post-Boy to The New-York Gazette, revived in the Weekly Post-Boy.—See Jan. 4, 1743. For the next change of title, as well as ownership, see Jan. 1, 1753.

25 At a board the ice-bound ship "William," aground in the harbour between two other ships at a distance from the shore, is extinguished by the exertions of the inhabitants, who "at length got an Engine to play upon her."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 26, 1747. This was an unusual instance of the use made of the city's fire-engines.

29 At a consistory of the Dutch Reformed Church, the elders request the ministers not to preach more than one hour, "so as to remove the complaints of long sermons, to increase the audiences and hold the people together, and so enlarge the alms and other revenues of the church." The ministers promise to comply.—Essex, Bk. IV. 2657.

Feb. Because of continued cold weather, firewood has become "so scarce and dear as was never equalled here before," having reached a cost of from 40s. to 58s. a cord. Many inhabitants of the city are in want, also, because of the high price of provisions; for example, beef, which scarcely exceeded 7s. 6d., has lately been sold for 5s. a fat Fowl for 1s. 6d. a pound of Butter for 14d. and many other things proportionable: Under all these Disadvantages, what must our Poor suffer!"—N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 9, 1747. See also De Vor, Market Book, 250–51.

Mar. 20 A petition to Gov. Clinton from "Several of his Majesty's Loyal Subjects & Freeman of this flourishing City of New York," asking for relief against the encroachments of out-of-town workmen upon those of this city, is read in council, and referred to a committee for investigation.—Cal. Com. Min., 56. It states that inhabitants of neighbouring provinces, particularly the Jerseys, "make a practice of coming into this City after the laying of Our Taxes yearly, there to exercise their several handicraft Trades such as Carpenters Bricklayers, &c., undermining Us, the ancient Freeman of this [aforenamed] City, by offering the Services of themselves, Journeymen, &c., at 10s. to 20s. a week, at the rate of 20s or 50s per job (or distinct article of workmanship) less than has been agreed for by us . . . The names of about 100 petitioners are inscribed at the end of this petition.—From a manuscript copy or duplicate of the petition, filed with the Hor- manden Papers (pp. 175–77) in the archives of the N. Y. Hist. Soc.

22 The document is endorsed in Hormanden's handwriting: "Re- port upon it verbally 10 April 1747. Advised the Govt to give for answer to the petitioners that they should pursue the ordinary & regular method prescribed by the Law of the City." See also Cal. Com. Min., 364. A complaint of this sort occurred again on Aug. 24, 1764 (see p. 365 above) at the hands of the common council.

By Vessels from the West Indies we have an Account, that Capt. Troup, in the Privateer Brig Hester [see Nov. 30, 1746], of this Port, had lately met with a Danish Vessel which had a Spanish Merchant with 8,000 pieces of 8, on board; Capt. Troup thought proper to accept of the Money, and paying the Dane his Freight very civilly dismissed him.—N. Y. Post-Boy, April 6, 1747.

The assembly orders that "the Commissioners for building the Governor's House in the Fort [see June 27, 1745], do lay before this House, as soon as may be, the charge hitherto incurred on the same, and an Estimate of what further may be wanting to com- plete the said Building."—Assemb. Jour., II: 144. On April 15, the committee submitted an account, wherein it appeared they were "in advance" the sum of £2750.05—Ibid., See Oct. 23, 1747.

Samuel Johnson writes from Stratford, Conn, to CadwaladerColen in part as follows: "I beg to assure your Gazettes, that you are at length resolved to have a College in your Government. This is what, I doubt not, you have much at heart, & I heartily wish Success to it, & shall willingly correspond with you in any thing in my little power that may tend to promote it, & wish it may take Effect specially that you may not suffer the Jersey College, (which will be a Common School, and not a College,) to raise itself above the original letter, preserved with the Colen Papers, in the N. Y. Hist. Soc. In 1754, Johnson became first president of Kings (now Columbia) College. See Oct. 13, 1752.

The Virginia company of newly raiied levies, commanded by Capt. Beverly, reported the ground accordingly.—Ibid., V. 198. The work of regulating the other streets of these wards was continued by other committees, appointed from time to time.

For summary of street regulations in Montgomerie Ward, see Sept. 11, 1744. For the regulations in the North Ward, see M. C. C., V. 191, 345, 358; VII. 17–18; VII. 28–51.

Mr. Hormanden having informed the common council that "It is the opinion of the Government and Council and the Committee now in Council That the House which the Poor Housed in the Most proper place for Building the Magazine," the board consents that work proceed, provided the city "have the Appointment of the Keeper and the Benefit of the Storage of all Powder lodged there belonging to private persons."—M. C. C., V. 192.

farm in which their Tenant now Lives and also the Ground near Apr. the Bowling Green [see Pie. 27, 32, Vol. I], which Washes away

I have Rand to agree with the Said Tenant for Repairing the Said House and preventing the Ground Washing away . . . .

—Trin. Min. (1745).

24 Gov. Clinton addresses a lengthy message to the assembly, reviewing in detail his efforts to defend the frontiers, in the course of which he observes “Your declining every Expense that seems necessary for the Security of the British Possessions in North-America, and the well-being of this Province at this Time, and the disres- pectful Behaviour to me (such as was never shewn to any Governor in Chief, before me in this Place) . . . . that I am laid under a Necessity . . . , to speak out some Things, which otherwise, I should have thought proper to conceal.”—Asem. Jour., II: 145-58. See May 19, and Oct. 9.

25 An advertisement amusing to secure the capture of a runaway Indian lad, 18 years old, belonging to Capt. Abraham Kip, describes the clothes he wears, and mentions “an iron ring about his neck and one about his leg, with a chain from one to the other.”—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 25, 1747.

May The council accepts an agreement, signed by David Clarkson, 2 Paul Richard, Joseph Haynes, John McEvers, John Livingston, and Robert R. Livingston, to furnish the provincial government £5,500 sterling (£9,075 New York currency). Difficulties arose on May 5 about this money, promised by the assembly, and time for drawing the bills of exchange to be taken by them was extended to 90 days.—Cal. Coun. Min., 364.

3 In addition to the news, received May 2, of the refutation of Capt. Tiebout’s company and others to march to Saratoga, the council is informed by letter from Col. Peter Schuyler that Jersey troops are mustuous, in both cases for want of pay.—Cal. Coun. Min., 364.

15 Proceedings are begun to establish a public ferry between New York and Staten Island. Otto van Tyle (Tuyl) and others petition the provincial authorities against granting a patent to Jacob de Hart for a ferry between their land and the river, as well as for the land between high- and low-water mark (on Staten Island). On Sept. 30, 1748, Van Tyle issued a caveat against granting a ferry in front of his land.—Cal. Land Papers, 252. On Nov. 24 (v.p.), Solomon Comes asked that his ferry between New York City and Staten Island be declared a public ferry.—Ibid., 252. On Dec. 31, the petition of De Hart was tabled.—Cal. Coun. Min., 367.

On Jan. 12, 1749, the petition of Comes was again heard, as well as the objections of Staten Island inhabitants who claimed that they would be excluded from the benefit of ferrying from their own lands.—Ibid., 372; Cal. Land Papers, 252. Finally, on March 17, 1749, ferry rights were granted to Comes, and a table of fees was ordered prepared.—Cal. Coun. Min., 372. The success of this venture is doubtful, for the corporation of the city of New York, nearly ten years later, found it necessary to establish a Staten Island ferry.—See Jan. 16, 1755.

18 “We have Advice that the Siw Prince Charles of this Port, John Bryant, Master [see April 10, 1748], was lost in a Storm in the Harbour of Leghorn, the Day before he was to set Sail for this Place; the Cargo, Sails and Rigging were saved.”—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 18, 1749.

Henry Moore advertises that he will open a school on June 8, “In Dock Street, at the Corner of Broad-street, over against Mr. Depyster’s.” Besides “Reading, Writing, Arithmetic,” he proposes to teach surveying and “Navigation in its three kinds, viz. Place, Proportion, and Sec. Sailing, Astronomy and Dyalling.”—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 18, 1749.

“In the House, at the back Part of Mr. Benson’s Brew House is proposed to be opened on Monday next, a School to teach young Ladies Reading and Writing, all sorts of Needle Work and making of artificial Flowers for future use, and various enquire of the Printer heretofor.”—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 18, 1749.

“To be Sold at the Corner House, opposite to the City Hall, in this City, several Sorts of Bibles and other good Books, hard Ware, Chests of Drawers, Desks and Tables, several sorts of Stockings, and other Dry Goods, at a reasonable Price for ready Money.”—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 18, 1749.

19 The governor, in his message of April 24 (v.p.), having “charged the House, with neglecting to provide for the Safety of the Colony, with treating him with Disrespect; and insinuating a Susicion, that there are Schemes concerted between the principal Traders and richest Men in Albany, and the Enemy, for obstructing any Enter prise against Canada,” the assembly, on that day, resolved “that an humble Representation be presented to his Excellency, in Answer thereto.”—Asem. Jour., II: 118. The resolution is now agreed to, and entered in the Journal, on May 19. It denies any intention of giving offence by “our humble Address of the 16th of April,” and reviews in much detail the intentions and desires heretofore entertained by the house, particularly with reference to the defense of the frontiers. It concludes by proving that its appropriations have been liberal, the remonstrance states, among other things, that the assembly has “provided for re building the Governor’s House, that had been destroyed by the late Conspirators, and a noble Edifice was erected according to a Plan approved by your Excellency, and is almost finished, at a very great Expense, in a Time when the Colony is not in a Condition well to afford it; but the great Desire the Assembly had to make your Excellency, and Family, easy, rendered all Objections against erecting that Building, of no Weight; and until that be fitted for your Excellency’s Reception, a good Habitation, with all suitable Conveniences for your Accommodation, has been pro vided at the Expanse of the Colony: Thus much with Regard to your Excellency, whereby we rest assured it is manifest, that the Assembly have given repeated Proofs of their Respect towards you; that they have not, and never, been of the unfriendly and not Words, are the infallible Language, and best betoken the sincerity of the Heart.”—Ibid., II: 151; and see Oct. 23. The extensive fortifications erected in New York City are also mentioned: “The considerable Sums granted by the Assembly, for erecting new Batteries and a Line of Stockades a-cross, from River to River, with Block-houses at convenient Distances, and for repairing the old Fortifications in and about this City, under the Inspection of Committees, of the Gentlemen of the Council and Assembly, with your Excellency’s Approbation, for putting this Place into a great Posture of Defence, and which beyond what it was before; for the purchasing Gun-powder (no Inconsiderable Sum), and purchasing, making and repairing Carriages for the Cannon, and other Implements of War of lesser Note, which were found to be wanting and necessary; moreover the providing a Fund of, Forty Thousand Pounds, merely for carrying on the Expedition, which by the large Bounty granted and given, vix. Nine Pounds, a Man, to every one that would enlist upon that Service, and the victualing the sixteen Companies of the new Levies of 100 Men each, raised under that Encouragement, is now near exhausted; these, as we humbly conceive, are not only Demonstrations of our Duty and Loyalty to his Majesty, but also, so many Inconsiderable Proofs of the Reality and Sincerity of our Intentions of taking Care of ourselves; but your Excellency may be pleased to remember, that the Assembly granted a liberal Contribution to our Neighbours of the Massachusetts Government, towards carrying on the Expedition against Cape-Breton; and paid all the Charges of trans porting from New-York, ten Pieces of battering Cannon, Carriages, &c. to be employed by the New-England Forces, in the Siege of that Place; and we were extremely rejoiced to hear of the signal Service they did, and the Success that attended them, and thought our Money well employed. “We wish we could say, the large Sums which have been expended by this Colony, from Time to Time, in making Fortifica tions, had been properly employed likewise; but the Want of a skillful Engineer to make Draughts, and see the Work well performed, has, in our Opinion, occasioned a great deal of needless Expense.”—Ibid., II: 152.

The death occurs of Capt. William Walton, “a very eminent Merchant in this City.”—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 25, 1747. His son, of the same name, built the well-known Walton house on Pearl St., one of the finest residences of the day.—Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 255; M. C. C., VIII: 459 (Index).
May 24

Henry Moore advertised that, in "Dock-street, at the Corner of Broad-street, over against Mr. Depeyer's," he "intends, God willing, to open School on Monday the eighth of June next."—N. T. Post-Boy, May 25, 1747. For a partial list of the early schoolmasters of New York, from 1659 to the Revolution, see Valentine, Hist. City of N. T. 1747.

June 1

The managers of the college lottery (see Jan. 5) meet, as the lottery act requires (see Dec. 6, 1746), at the city hall, with two clerks and two inspectors from the common council. A few drawings were made throughout the week of June 1, there being still a few tickets unsold. On June 15, the full schedule of drawings was published, the highest prize (£300) being drawn by Joseph Murray.—N. T. Post-Boy, June 1, and 8, 1747. The original record book (MS.) is still owned by Columbia Univ.

June 3

A committee of the common council meets at an address of Hugh Crawford.—M. C. G., V. 193. This is because "his Majesty's Council" is to meet at the same time in the common council chamber. The Crawford house was near the city hall.—N. T. Post-Boy, June 15, 1747. For grant of the use of the common council chamber to the present vacancy, Oct. 19, 1746.

A committee of the common council reports for approval the draft of a petition to the governor, asking for "Relief at this present Juncture of and from the Great and Extraordinary Burthens and Difficulties that the Inhabitants of this City now Groan and Labor under Occasioned by the Continual Night and Day Watches in his Majesty's fort in this City." One evil result of this military watch is that "many inhabitants of the City have three or four Sons And as many Servants and Apprentices and all those with themselves Are Obliged to Watch in their Turns which falls out or happens About Once in Every four or five Weeks the plain Consequence Whereof is the Loss of forty Shilling and Sometimes More to Every Such Inhabitant." As a remedy, it is suggested that one of the independent companies now at Albany or one of the companies of the new levies be ordered down.—M. C. G., V. 196-97. See also June 7. On Oct. 1 (p. v.), a company of fustlers arrived from Albany for this purpose.

Cadwallader Colden writes from New York to his wife in part as follows: "The Gov't has receiv'd an address from the Corporation of New York with compliments to him on his administration an answering of which I expect will be in the papers & has given a good deal of talk in this town being so very different from what comes from the Assembly. What is remarkable in this address is that it comes from the Magistrates chosen by the People annually & the Mayor who is appointed by the Gov't went out of town & did not attend & they in the Opposition made the Deputy Mayor Drunk that he could not attend the common council at the time they had agreed to deliver their address" (of June 4, p. v.).—From the original draft of the letter, among Colden Papers in N. Y. Hist. Soc. For the address and Clinton's answer, see N. T. Post-Boy, June 8, 1747.

In a proclamation, Gov. Clinton explains the exceptional dangers at this time in a threatened epidemic of small-pox. At present there is but one case in town; but, he says, "during the time the said Distemper lately prevailed in the City, the Inhabitants thereof were greatly distressed, such of the People living in the adjacent Counties, and in the neighboring Provinces, who had no means to relieve them, or to prevent such scourge, being terrified from coming into the said City, and the Price of Provisions thereby considerably increased: Besides which, if the said Distemper should again become rife, it is probable at this Season of the Year it may be more Malignant and Mortal. And in case an Invasion there would be a necessity for the Assistance of the Inhabitants of the several Counties within this Province, of whom great Numbers have hitherto escaped the said Distemper, who may thereby be deterred from coming into the said City to assist in the Defence thereof. And whereas I have received Information that some People lately come into this City, in order to be inoculated for the Small-Pox [see June 8, Col. Coun. Min., 365], which if not prevented, may be a Means to spread that Distemper here again. . . ." He therefore forbids physicians, surgeons, and others to inoculate for the small-pox any person in the city and county of New York, on pain of prosecution.—N. T. Post-Boy, June 15, 1747; Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 283. See also March 25, 1731 and Oct. 3, 1736.

The governor informs the council that he proposes to set out for Albany this evening in his endeavor to cooperate in the present design among the new recruits. He recommends caring for the poor of the city during his absence. If anything extraordinary should happen, the members of the council are to consult together over the necessary and expedient steps, and to inform him of subjection by express. The council has directed the post master to forward to Albany any dispatches directed to him and any correspondence which the council thinks proper to send.—From Horsemorden Papers, 187, in N. Y. Gov. Clinton embarks on board a sloop and sets sail for Albany. N. T. Post-Boy, June 22, 1747.

Gov. Clinton, in a report to the lords of trade, describes the growing power of factions in the government of the province, and the design of Mr. DeLancy to gain control, so that "the Gov't shall be no more than the first Officer of the Council." He sees that the tendency will be to lessen the power of his Maj'y's prerogative, and thereby the dependence on Great Britain." Clinton believes that the strength of the popular faction proceeds from his own imprudent act in making DeLancy chief-justice. He states that the distraction in government affairs in Cohoky's administration arose from DeLancy's ambition to be chief-justice. Clinton now seeks the removal of DeLancy from his post, and to check the Commission of Chief Justice during good behaviour, the Profession of the Law entered into an Association the effects of which I believe Your Lordship had formerly opportunity of observing some striking instances. They proposed nothing less to themselves than to obtain the direction of all the measures of Government, by making themselves absolutely necessary to every Governor in assisting him while he complied with their measures & by distressing him when he did otherwise. For this purpose every method was taken to agrandise the power of the Assembly, where the profession of the law must allwise have great influence over the members, & to lessen the Authority & influence of the Governor . . . Their power is greatly strengthened by inlarging the powers of the popular side of government & by depreciating the powers of the Crown . . . All Associations are dangerous to good Government, and especially so in distant dominions, & Associations of lawyers the most dangerous of any next to Military."—N. T. Col. Doc., VII: 705. See July 24.

The privater brig "Revenge" (Capt. Alexander Troup) "is compleatly fittted, and will sail in a few Days on a Cruise against his Majesty's Enemies."—N. T. Post-Boy, June 23, 1747.

The privater brig "Castor" (Capt. Arnold) "is fell down [toward Sandy Hook] in order to proceed on a Cruise."—Ibid.

Gov. Clinton desires to return to England, and seeks the appointment of Cadwallader Colden as lieutenant-governor.—N. T. Col. Doc., VII: 377. For the reply of the home government, see Oct. 27.

The council receives a letter from Gov. Shirley about a meeting of commissioners at New York; and also decides upon the meeting of a general court for providing means to prosecute the expedition against Crown Point.—Col. Coun. Min., 365.

The council declared not that Distemper was so much as the subject of the disposal of troops to be Aug. 10, employed against Crown Point and Niagara.—Col. Coun. Min., 365.

Among the claimants for Trinity Church land, under the old Bogardus claim, was a family named Browsers, who had "forcibly Enter'd" and "Detained" a certain portion of the Church Farm. The church-declarers declared not that Distemper had caused some Partizans lately come into this City, in order to be inoculated for the Small-Pox [see June 8, Col. Coun. 28 The Rev. Mr. Whitefield arrives from Boston, and preaches in the evening (Friday) in the "Presbyterian Meeting House." He prayed again twice on Sunday, Aug. 30. On Aug. 31, he went to Long Island.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 31, 1747.

31 Gov. Jonathan Belcher, of New Jersey, comes to New York on a visit. On landing, he is "conducted by the Honourable Captain Clinton, our Governor's only Son, to his Excellency's House in Town," where he meets "his Excellency," and is "saluted by the Guns of the Fort," and then goes "to Dine with his Excellency at his House in Greenwich." In the evening, "he returned bither, and accepted of the Rev. Mr. Pemberton's Invitation to lodge, and during his stay in Town was complimented by Persons of the best Distinction, on his Majesty's repeated Favour in appointing him to the Government of New Jersey; and on Tuesday last [Sept. 8] his Lady & Family, and waited on Lady Warren to wish her a happy Voyage to Great-Britain; Then return'd bither, and after Dining with the Honourable Mr. Livingston, went into Capt.

Jefferies Barge, when he was again saluted by the Guns of the Fort, and by the Scarborough Man of War as he pass'd her, and we hear he got safe to his Government in the Evening."—N. Y.

1747 It is ordered that the committee of the common council appointed (M. C. C., V: 193) "to Cause the Common Sewer Under the Exchange at the Lower End of the Broad Street to be Arch'd with Stone and the floor Laid with flat Stones" shall also cause
"the Gravel and the Long Bridge over the Same Common Sewer to Be Repaired."—Ibid., V: 193.

40 Gov. Shirley of Massachusetts sends to the governor and council a copy of his commission appointing Samuel Wells, Robert Hale, and Oliver Partridge delegates to the meeting of commis-ioners to be held at New York (see July 28).—Cal. Min., 366.
See, further, Sept. 11.

1747 A horse-race is advertised to be run on Oct. 11, for a purse of not less than 10 pistoles, "by any Horse, Mare or Gelding that never won a Plate before on this Island, except a Horse called Parrot, carrying ten Stone, Saddle and Bridle included." Horses intended for the race "are to be entered the Day before the Race with Adam Van Denberg, living on the Church Farm." The entrance money is to be run for "by any of the Horses except the Winner, and those distanced."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 7, 1747.

7 The council receives from Gov. Law of Connecticut a copy of his commission appointing Roger Wolcott, Thomas Fitch, and Benjamin Hall delegates to the gathering of commissioners to be held at Hartford, and the returns from New York (see Oct. 7).

1747 Daniel Horsmanden, being suspended from the council, demands the reason.—Cal. Min., 366. Soon after, Stephen Bayard was also suspended.—Ibid., 367. These two dismissals were the outcome of the bitter political wrangle between Gov.
Clinton and Chief-Judge De Lancy.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 11, 1747.

22 The governor and council prepare a commission for the New York commissioners to the congress of delegates to be held in this city, granting to them the same powers as those given to the Massachusetts and Connecticut delegates by their respective governors (see Sept. 11, and r.i.). Horsmanden's name is left out.— Cal. Min., 366. See, further, Sept. 22.

22 Draughts of instructions to the commissioners for the meeting at New York (Philip Livingston and Joseph Murray of the council, and William Nicoll, Philip Verplanck, and Henry Cruger, of the assembly) are read and amended by the council, requiring them to confer on measures for the encouragement of the Six Nations.—
Cal. Min., 366.

and as city recorder."—N. Y. Col. Docr., VI: 404.

27 Clinton writes to the lords of trade: "Popular faction and power are become so very prevalent not only in this, but in all the Northern Colonies, that unless some extraordinary assistance be given to his Majesty's Gov't to suppress it, I am humbly of opinion it will not be in the power of Gov't to support his Majesty's Authority."—N. Y. Col. Docr., VI: 399; see, further, 395, 400, 411, 29 Edward Holland is appointed mayor by Gov. Clinton.—

M. C. C., VII: 201. See Sept. 12. He was installed on Oct. 14.—
Ibid., 204-5. He was continued in office until his death, on Nov. 10, 1748 (q.v.).—Ibid., V: 225, 257, 399, 348, 380, 415, 464; VI: 35.

30 Over the protest of the members, Gov. Clinton adjourns the assembly until Oct. 5, because he has not received reports from the commissioners of the several provinces regarding the agreement for prosecuting the war.

29 Oct. 6, the house passed a resolution to the effect that the delay in making arrangements for the defense of the frontiers was due to "the late frequent Adjournments and Prorogations of the House, by his Excellency."—Assemb. Jour., II: 168-69. On the same day the governor sent a message to the assembly, together with the agreement (see Oct. 1, Cal. Min., 367) entered into by the commissioners of New York, Massachusetts Bay, and Connecticut, concerning the number of men and the supplies needed on the northern frontiers. He urged also that presents be sent the Indians, especially the sachems, then in New York, to gain their fidelity. He claimed that he had "at a very great Expense to the Crown," and provided and preserved the affection of the Six Nations, but could not and would not continue this charge to the crown. He proposed that the province take over into its pay the forces levied for the Canadian expedition, which are now so "Jesed by Death and Desertion" that they number more than the allotment assigned to New York.

The house, having considered his message, returned an answer on Oct. 8. They agreed to all necessary provisions for the defense of the frontiers: they resolved to make a proper present to the eight sachems in New York; but they questioned the use the governor had made of the "large Draughts on the Crown" for Indian presents during the past summer, and were persuaded he had no order from the king to curtail such expenditure; however, they appropriated $300 for this purpose lest "his Excellency's Failure in that Respect, should cause a Defection" among the Indians. They asked, also, what provision had been made for "Saragatrogs," concerning which the governor made no mention in his message. Clinton's reply was peremptory (see Oct. 9, 1747) be would consider nothing but what related to his message. Afterwards there would be "Time enough to go about any other Mat-departure from America.—See Dec. 4, 1746, and July 29, 1752.

The council refers to the assembly an agreement made by Oct.
the commissioner of the colonies, in session at New York.—Cal.

appealing De Lancey as lieutenant-governor, to be given to Oct. 1747. This appointment is directly opposed to the governor's wishes.—See July 14. For his reply, see Feb. 13, 1748. The commission was not delivered to De Lancey until Oct. 10, 1753.—See events related under Oct. 6, 1753.

A published warning counterfeiting New Jersey fifteen shining bills states that the genuine bills are printed from common types on a printing-press, while the counterfeit bills are from a copperplate.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 2, 1747.

Solomon Comes petitioned the provincial authorities that his ferry between a community and his Diekock Island and New York may be declared a public ferry. This was renewed on Nov. 2 and Dec. 7, 1748.—Col. Lands Papers, 1751 Col. Coun., Min., 372. See May 15.

A provincial act is passed for raising £2,000 by a tax on real and personal estates, "for defraying the Expense of Several Services necessary for the Defence of the Frontiers and Annoyance of the Enemy," also for emitting short term bills of credit for this amount.—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 660. A tax of £5,000 was laid on July 15, 1746 (p. v).

A provincial statute is enacted to prevent private lotteries. This act is taken because "Several Persons of late have Set on Foot and opened private Lotteries within this Colony, which being under no Restrictions by Law, are attended with pernicious Consequences to the publick by encouraging Numbers of Labouring People to Assemble together at Taverns where Such Lotteries are usually Set up."—Act assembly.

Gov. Clinton dissolves the assembly in a message which reads in part as follows: "Your continued grasping at Power, with an evident Tendency to the Weakening of the Dependency of this Province, on Great-Britain, accompanied with such noxious and publick Dirsct. or the Character of your Government, and Contempt of the King's Authority intrusted with him, cannot be longer hid from your Superiors."—Assemb. Jour., III: 202-5. For the assembly's reply, see Dec. 15, 1747.

The following extract from a letter written by a gentleman of one of the neighbouring colonies to a friend in New York, is published: "The violent party Spirit that appears in all the Votes, etc. of your Assembly, seems to me extremely unseasonable, as well as unjust: and to threaten Mischief, not only to your selves, but to your Neighbours. It begins to be plain, that the French may reap great Advantages from your Division: God grant they may be as blind to their own Interest, and as negligent of it, as the English are of theirs."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 21, 1747.

Candidates for the general assembly—the recent members, Dec. 21, 1747. David Clarkson, Major Cornelius Van Horne, Capt. Paul Richard 1747. and Henry Cruger—publish a notice, addressed "To the Freeholders and Freemen of this Province," calling on all persons to vote for their neighbors for their votes at the next election.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 6, 1747. Doubtless this is an appeal for public confidence, in view of Clinton's published notice of Dec. 24 (p. v). They were duly returned.—Ibid., Feb. 15, 1748.

Cornelius van Denbergh, as Albany Post, designs to set out for the first time this winter, on Thursday next: All Letters to go by him, are desired to be sent to the Post Office, or to his House near the Spring Garden."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 6, 1747. The house of Adam van Denberg was near the old farm house formerly attached to the King's Farm, and stood on the site of the later Astor House. He was, apparently, still in occupation of these premises in 1770, when a petition was made to erect a liberty pole on the site of the old one, or "opposite Mr. Van Denbergs near St. Paul's Church a small distance from where the two Roads meet."—Original MS. in the No. 4, city clerk's record-room. Van Denberg died before the great fire of Sept. 17, 1776, but his house was still standing, and was not destroyed, according to the Diary of Ezra Stiles (II: 87-88), who says it "stood at the corner of Berkeley-street." Cornelius van Denberg, probably a son of Adam van Denberg, later became proprietor of the old Bulls Head Tavern of Mem. Hist. of N. Y., II: 269. See also Oct. 11, 17521 and Landmark Map Key, III, 981. Under this date there is recorded "A Letter from some of the 15 Representatives in the late General Assembly of the Colony of New York, to his Excellency Governor Clinton. Principally in Answer to his July 24, 1747, and Nov. 25, 1747, desiring him to subscribe to the Declaration of Independence."—A. Jour., II: 206-11.
The advertisement of a scrivener reads: "Writings relating to law and trade, &c., done by an elderly man who has practiced these branches many years in this city and other places . . ." He gives notice that he "attends at Mrs. Boord's, next door to Mr. Latouche's, on King street, to write for lawyers, merchants, executors of wills, &c., such writings as they have not time, or will not take the trouble, or have not ability to do."—N.Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 24, 1747.

Daniel Bloom, formerly proprietor of the Merchants Coffee House, on Wall and Water Sts., secures the lease of the ferry to Long Island and the ferry-houses for a period of five years from March 23, 1745.—M. C. C., V: 235, 219. He was unsuccessful in this venture, and in July, 1750, transferred his lease to Andrew Ramsay.—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 17, 1750.

As Bloom's death, which occurred between Nov. 5, 1750, and Apr. 26, 1751, the city corporation permitted the executors of his estate to settle for $500 the arrears still due on the rent of the ferry.—M. C. C., V: 314, 333, 339.

Notice is given that the mayor has the sole right to grant licenses to tavern-keepers and retailers of liquors within the city. No person has a right to retail liquors either within or without doors without such license.—M. C. C., V: 215.

— Some time prior to this year, the Horse and Manger Tavern was erected.—Liber Deed, LV: 31 (Albany). This tavern stood at the south-east corner of Nassau and Spruce Sts. Edward Willett, its proprietor, advertised it as "near the Slaughter House . . . where all Gentlemen (that put up) may depend upon due Attendance for themselves and Horses."—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 15, 1749. On Nov. 12, 1750 (p.c.), it belonged to Edward Broomhead. By the year 1758, it was known as the Coach House (Liber Deed, LV: 61, New York). Abraham B. Marting took it before 1766, keeping here also the "New Theatre."—The Minerva, &c. Erie Advertiser, June 1, 1756. It was long known as "Martling's," and in the "long room" met a society known as "Martling-Men"—a branch of the Republican (later Democratic) party, who were also known as the Chartistians.—Willis, History of N. Y., II: 288. Marting sold the place in 1817.—Liber Deed, CXXX: 255 (New York); ibid., CXXII: 297. The site is now covered by the building of the American Tract Society. See Landmark Map Ref. Key, II: 973; Pl. 174, Vol. III.

— A description of New York City in this year reads as follows: "As this Town stands upon an Eminence, and contains upwards of a thousand Houses well built with Brick and Stone, with a Wall and Forts, which serve as well for Ornament as Defence, there is scarce any Town in North America that makes a better, and but a very few so good an Appearance. It has also an excellent Harbor, large and commodious, and employs some hundreds of Ships and Vessels in its foreign Trade and Fisheries. The public Buildings are the several Churches belonging to those of the Church of England, to the Swedes of the Lutheran Persuasion, to the Dutch Calvinists, the French Refugees, and the English Sectaries; but the church of England may well be looked upon as the established Religion, because the Constitution of the Government is the same as in England. In the rest, however, are tolerated, and capable of Posts in the Government, and of sitting in the House of Representatives, as I apprehend. The other public Buildings are the Town House, and that whither their general Assemblies and Courts of Justice are held. As to their Fortifications, they are not, I doubt, capable of defending them against a European Enemy, any more than those in the rest of the Plantations, for this unanswerable Reason: because they were some Years ago confessed to be so bad, that it was not fit to enquire into the State of them, lest Foreigners should be acquainted with our Weakness on that Side."—From Navigantium atque Iterinarium Bibliotheca, or, A Complete Collection of Voyages and Travels, etc., by John Harris (1744-8), II: 281.

Jacob Dyckman, Jr., and his brother-in-law, Adolph Benson, built from George Dyckman 30 acres of land adjoining the highway (Kingsbridge Road), to the rear of the Benson Point farm, which they divide into two tracts of ten acres each.—See Riker, Hist. of Harlem (ed. of 1881), 306. The land occupied by Dyckman was in the neighborhood of the present 105th St., in Central Park, about on the line of Sixth (Lenox) Ave. On part of it he built a stone house, which for several years he conducted as the Black Horse Tavern. During the epidemic of small-pox in 1752, Dyckman's house was made the meeting-place of the assembly.—Assemb. Jour., II: 327; N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 29, Oct. 15, 1752. In March, 1756, Dyckman offered his house for sale.—N. Y. Merc., March 5, 1756.

In 1756, he sold this house and some ground to Andrew McGown (not to Mr. Daniel McGown, as has been stated by Riker in his History, but to her son).—From James Riker's memo from a deed in the possession of the late Isaac Adair; cf. a mortgage, McGown to Benson, May 3, 1755, recorded in Liber Mortgages, I: 52 (New York). Undoubtedly the widow McGown, whose husband, Captain Daniel, was lost at sea, and her son Andrew kept the tavern together. It was, says Riker (p. 490), "a favourite resort, before and during the war, of gentlemen coming from the city with their horses for Indulging in the sport of fox-hunting." This possession by the McGown family gave to the slight valley between rolling heights at this point the name of McGown's Pass, which it still bears. The widow and her son kept tavern here for several years longer, but on Collen's Map of 1789 (Pl. 51, Vol. V), the inn is called Legget's.

The property remained in the possession of the McGown family until 1845, when one Odell purchased the land and building then upon it; he sold it April 1, 1847, to Elizabeth Boyle (Sister Elizabeth of the Sisters of Charity of St. Vincent de Paul). The place became known as Mount St. Vincent, and occupied at first the rather modest frame dwelling which had succeeded the old stone tavern. From time to time, however, several wings were added, and the property much improved and beautified. "Lastly, in 1825, a stately brick edifice, containing a beautiful chapel and large dining-rooms, completed the group of academic buildings."—4th Ann. Report, Am. Scenic and Hist. Pres. Soc., 429 et seq. The Academy of Mt. St. Vincent was removed, in 1878, to an estate bought of Edwin Forrest, the actor, at Fort Hill, on the banks of the Hudson, where the institution now remains. The Sisters of Charity, however, during the Civil War, opened and maintained a military hospital in the old buildings in Central Park.

The coming of Central Park, its bounds having been extended beyond 106th Street by the will of T. Riker, 1853, led to the acquisition for the city of the Academy grounds and buildings by the commissioners of estimate and assessment in 1876. After the Civil War, the commissioners (Oct. 19, 1866) leased this property to Alexander McC. Stetson, who thereupon maintained the place as a roadhouse or place of refreshment to those visiting the park. From 1872 until 1881, the place, often still called Stetson's, was run by Rasford & Ryan.

On Jan. 2, 1881, fire broke out in the frame building used as a hotel, and soon destroyed both this and the near-by brick building which had been maintained as an art gallery. The recent hotel in the park, known as McGown's Pass Tavern, was built in 1885.—See Dr. Edward H. Warren's History of McGown's Pass and Vicinity.

The Presbyterians are obliged to "enlarge the Old Church," originally built in 1719 (p.c.). They now "erect and complete" a stone edifice, 50 feet long and about 60 feet wide, on ground on "the North-eastern side of Wall Street," measuring in front and rear 88 feet, and about 120 feet in length, English measure.—Doc. Hist. N. Y. (410 ed.), III: 701; Case of the Scotch Presbyterians (N. Y., 1773), 16. The steeple, raised on the south-west end, was 143 feet high. On the front, between two long windows, on a strip of black slate six feet long, was cut in gold letters the following inscription, in Latin of somewhat questionable purity:

AD INTRICAS SUI \ HANC ADEM \ CULTU DIVINO SACRAM \ IN PERPETUUM \ CELEBRANDO, \ AD MDCCLXIII. \ PRIMO FUNDATAM \ DEPO POSITUS REPARATAM \ ET \ AMPLIATRE ET ORNATOREM \ ACER MCXLVIII \ CONSTRUCTAM, \ NEO-EBORANCENSES PRESBYTERIANI \ IN SUUM ET SUBORUM SUUM \ CONDENTES, \ IN HAC VOTIVA TABULA

Jan. 18. The conduct of the assembly towards Gov. Clinton is discussed at length in a published article written by "a Freeholder." The writer finds the heavy charge against the governor to be "the Converting to his own use, the public Money of this Province, with which he was intrusted;" on the other hand the governor claims that, because of the failure of the assembly to advance money for the forces at Albany, he has "risked the whole of his Estates," in drawing bills to pay the forces, and that he was willing, at any time, to pass a bill or clause to prevent embezzlement of the public money. The writer reminds the assembly that, during the recent campaign, provisions in large quantities were condemned as unfit "to be eat yet this cost the Country the same Price with the Good." He warns the assembly that "Rumour and Report was a fine Engine to throw Dirt upon a Governor;" but those not assembly men might "think it proper an Implement against Assembly Men Commissioners."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 18, 1748.

The common council orders "that the Neighborhood of the Meal Markets in this City have Leave at their own Expence to make and Erect a Dock and Stairs for the Convenience of the Ferry Boat which is to Land there in such manner as the same shall be directed by . . . " (a committee of aldermen and assistants).

—M. of the C. for earlier mention of this ferry, see Feb. 28, 1738; and Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 942.

Feb. In a message to the assembly, Gov. Clinton asks for the payment "of the Rent to the first of May next, of the House" where he resided, "till the House in the Fort was put in a proper Condition." He also recommends the "compleating of the House in the Fort; the building of Stables," and such other conveniences as are necessary for his accommodation.—Assem. Jour., II: 223.

13. Gov. Clinton, replying to the Duke of Newcastle, acknowledges the receipt of a leave of absence. The governor protests against the appointment of James de Lancy as lieutenant-governor and begs that he be allowed to withhold it, in the terms of the N. Y. Gov. Draft, V: 416-17, 431. De Lancy's appointment was not delivered until after the arrival of the next governor, Sir Danvers Osborn.—See Oct. 6, 1751.

15. "To be Sold. A Corner Lot of Ground, fronting Anne-Street, commonly called the Cart and Horse Street; . . . it fronts also a small Street facing Mr. Bohana's Door . . ."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 15, 1748. Horse and Cart Street was the present William Street. The designation Anne Street is not known in records of the period, and probably was a casual, local application for a block on William Street.—Gf. Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 1021.

On the general subject, see Report of the Regents on N. Y. State boundaries, transmitted to the Legislature May 28, 1873.

Hereafter, any member who, fill the vacancies to attend the common council has been given to him or to some white person of his family, does not appear within half an hour shall be fined 2 shillings, 6 pence (see June 9, 1670) if he falls altogether to attend, he shall be fined 5 shillings.—M. C. C., V: 18.

Mar. A public lottery is to be held on the 24th of the "House and Ground now in Possession of Agnes Minott, known by the Sign of the White-Swan, situate near the Ferry-Stairs." Applications are to be made to Nicholas van Dam or William Cockerell.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 15, 1748. The sign suggests that the house was a tavern, but there is no further record to substantiate this assumption.

After repeated requests by Pennsylvania for the loan of cannon, the provincial council of New York assents.—Cal. Gov. Min., 368, 369.

The common council orders the issue of a warrant to pay Henry Bogert £5813, as balance of his account "for Laying the pavement at the Lower End of the Broadway," in addition to a payment to Brandt Schuyler of £591111, advanced by him on the same account.—M. C. C., V: 182.

The common council gives to Jacobus Ryckman "a Spot of Ground in the City Common for a Brick Kiln."—M. C. C., V: 219.

Near midnight, the Brooklyn ferry-house, barn, and stable (the property of the corporation of the city of New York) are entirely destroyed by fire. As soon as the blaze was noticed from the Manhattan side of the river, "many of the inhabitants made the best of their Way thither with one of the Engines."—N. Y. Post-Boy, April 4, 1748. See also Stiles, Hist. of Brooklyn, III: 555. For a view of the old ferry-house, see Pl. 25, Vol. I. For a law passed appointing commissioners to examine and report on the public accounts of the colony of New York from 1713 to Sept. 1, 1750,—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 692-94. This law is the outcome, probably, of charges of misappropriation made against Gov. Clinton. See Jan. 18.

An act is passed for raising £1,800 11. 0 sd. by a Publick Lottery, for a further Provision towards Founding a College, for the Advance of Learning within this Colony." The law is framed with practically the same provisions as the last one (see Dec. 6, 1746). The drawings are to begin Sept. 1.—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 679. They, however, were not held owing to an insufficient number of subscribers to the tickets. Another act was therefore passed, on Oct. 28, reviving and continuing the act of April 9, the drawings to begin on Nov. 14.—Ibid., III: 731. See also April 20.

"The Philadelphia Post now puts up at Mr. Lewis's at the Sign of the Devonshire Man of War, near the White-Hall Slip."—N. Y. Post-Boy, April 11, 1748. This tavern was still run by Capt. Lewis in 1754, and was described as opposite the house of Benjamin Nicholls.—Ibid., April 22, 1754. Benjamin Nicholls owned the Steenwyck house at Whitehall and Bridge Sts. See "King's Arms Tavern," in Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 397.

Trinity vestry considers it "absolutely Necessary to Build a 15 Chappel of Ease to Trinity Church," and appoints a committee, with one of the churchwardens, to select a proper location.—Trin. Min. (M. B.). See May 3.

A public lottery (see April 9) are published as a broadside or "Advertisement." One of these, now in the N. Y. Pub. Library, is reproduced as Pl. 35-A, Vol. IV. It shows that the lottery was to consist of 8,000 tickets, at 30s. each, 1,104 of which were to draw prizes. Instructions for the drawing, etc., are given. Two original lottery tickets, dated 1747 and 1753, are attached to this broadside. The date of the broadside is misspelled "April 20, 1748." See also N. Y. Post-Boy, June 13, Aug. 15 and 21, 1748; Jour. Leg. Coun., 1116.

The provincial council receives a petition from clergymen complaining that justices of the peace perform the marriage ceremony.—Cal. Gov. Min., 369.

"For the Entertainment of the Curious. To be shown, The most surprising Effects of Phenomena, on Electricity of attracting, repelling, and Ellenies Force, particularly the new Way of Electrifying several Persons at the same Time, so that the Fire from each Part of their Bodies, has been exhibited to the Satisfaction of the Curious, in all Parts of Europe. Electricity became the Subject in Vogue; Princes were willing to see this new Fire which a Man produced from himself: And it is to be of Service to many Ailments. To be seen any Time of the Day, from 8 o'Clock in the Morning till 9 at Night, when the Weather proves dry, and no damp Air (a Company presenting) at the House of Mrs. Wilson, near the Weigh House, in New-York; where due Attendance is given by Mr. Richard Brickell."—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 2, 1748.
MINUTES OF THE COMMON COUNCIL FOR MAY 14, 1742, SHOWING LIST OF BOOKS, PAPERS, ETC., RECEIVED BY THE CITY FROM THE EXECUTRIX OF WILLIAM SHARPAS, CITY CLERK. SEE P. 99.
Inhabitants of the city living "near the White Hall in the South Ward" petition the common council not to allow David and Samuel Van Horne to build a still-house in their neighborhood, as they are about to do. They state that it will endanger the health of the neighborhood, by adding another source of contagious disease. They are apprehensive that the "violent fevers" which "have carried off a Great Number of the Inhabitants" for several years, "during the Heat of Summer," may have arisen "from the Dirt and filth Lying in the Streets and Slips of this City from Some Noxious and Offensive Trades being Carried on."—From the original petition in File No. 4, in city clerk's record-room.

On June 18, the common council expressed its opinion "that the building of a Still House and keeping the Same under proper regulations Can be no nuisance to this City."—M. C. C., V. 224-25. See July 18.

Cornelia Rutgers, Leonard Lipenard, John and Jacob Roosevelt, and Christopher van der Lan, in a petition to the common council, state that they own a parcel of land adjoining the East River between the house and lot of James DeBrosses and the land of Harmanus Rutgers, and ask for the grant of the water lot fronting their property.—M. C. C., V. 224.

The inclination of the board to grant this petition led to the suspicion of official corruption.—See Feb. 1, 1753.

"Order'd That the Side of the Street fronting the Church and Church Yard be paved as Soon as Conveniently may be."—Trin. Min. (MS.).

The common council appoints a committee to take the advice of Alexander, Murray, and Chambers, counsellors at law, regarding the proper steps to be taken with Israel Horsfield, "who hath Lately Erected and set up a slaughter House at the Ferry between High and Low Water Mark."—M. C. C., V. 226. This was evidently on the Long Island side.—See ibid., IV. 245.

Gov. Clinton embarks on board a schooner, "prepared here for that Purpose," and sails for Albany, "in order to meet the Chiefs of the Six Nations of Indians there, to renew the ancient League with them, and deliver the Presents sent by His Majesty to those People."—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 11, 1748. See July 23.

A committee of the vestry, which was appointed July 4 "to purchase Six Lots of Ground fronting Nassau Street and Fair Street from David Clarkson . . . in order to Build a Chappell of Ease to Trinity Church thereon," reports that it has "Agreed with Mr. Clarkson for the said Lots for £500 to be paid in a Year." Several residents of the Montgom erie Ward have suggested "that the Lots of Capt. Beekman fronting Beekman Street and Van Cliff's Street would be more Commodious for Building the said Chappell on, And proposed that if the Vestry would agree to the Building the Chappell there, the Inhabitants of Mont gomerie Ward would Raise Money among themselves Sufficient to Purchase the Ground, and further that if Mr. Clarkson agreed on the performance of the Agreement with him for his Lots they would take a Conveyance for them and pay the purchase Money." This proposal was accepted by the vestry.—Trin. Min. (MS.). See Nov. 7.

Robert G. Livingston invites that he has moved from Broad Street to a house next door to Mr. Henry Cuyler, Jr., near the Meal Market (see Pl. 27-A, Vol. I), and has just imported, among other things, "Camblets of diverse sorts, strip'd and plain camblettes, plain and flower'd camalucques, . . . strip'd dunjars, strip'd Turkey tabbies, damaskes of diverse sorts, yard wide Colleen stuffs, fine scarlet stuff, flantes, plain'd, chintz, chevettes, shallows of all sorts, . . . plain and barley corn'd everlasting, double and single appalances of diverse sorts, Baragon drugget, yard-wide dafey's, boy'd baragons . . . and divers other sorts of goods . . ."—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 11, 1748.

A congress is held at Albany to cultivate friendship with the Six Nations and their allies and induce them to join the expedition to Canada. Gov. Clinton, Cadwallader Colden, Philip Livingston, James de Lancey, and Archibald Kennedy, of the New York council, are present.—N. Y. Col. Decs., IV. 441. The governor, writing to the Duke of Bedford on July 29, stated that "the chief justice, Mr. Horsemann, and Mr. Murray to attend him as counsellors, but they all refused, giving different excuses.—Ibid., IV. 448. See also Wrenor, Nat. & Crit. Hist. of Am., V. 612.

David van Horne, who is about to erect a "Still House" near "the White Hall," obtains a permit from the common council to lay a drain from it.—M. C. C., V. 227. See June 21.
The governor and his council receive a letter from the Duke of Bedford with a royal proclamation announcing the cessation of hostilities between Great Britain, France, and Holland.

The freedom of the city is granted by the common council to William Shirley, commander-in-chief of the province of Massachusetts Bay, for his services in forming the plan for capturing Louisbourg, and, in conjunction with Gov. Clinton, in reconciling the Six Nations.

A committee for the county of the Dutch Church exhibits a plan which it has prepared for a school and dwelling-house. This is unanimously approved, and a resolution is passed "to proceed with the construction of the building, according to the said plan."—Eccles. Rec. IV: 3024. This is explained by the committee's resolution of Aug. 27, which Bratt has ascribed to the "New Church" (Nassau St.). For the latter purpose he was to be provided with a dwelling and school-room near the "Old Church" (Garden St.), the committee being appointed to prepare "a plan for the building of a school and dwelling-house."—Ibid. IV: 3025. See March 17, 1793. For an account of the various Dutch schools established prior to the eighteenth century, see "The Dutch Schools of New Netherland and Colonial New York," by Wm. H. Kilpatrick, in U. S. Bu. of Education bulletin, 1912, No. 12.

A public vendue is advertised to be held on Sept. 8 "at the Sign of the Leopard," near the long bridge. —N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 29, 1748. The site of this tavern was more definitely located later in an advertisement of Simon Franks, who sold all sorts of perukes at his store "next Door to the Sign of the Leopard, at the North West Corner of the Great-Dock."—Ibid., Nov. 7, 1748. The tavern evidently stood near the corner of Water St. and Commerces Slip. The proprietor was Thomas Lepper, who moved in 1750 to the "Duke of Cumberland," opposite the Merchants Coffee- House. —See Sept. 20.

A public vendue was advertised at Mr. Thomas Burn's, opposite the Merchant's Coffee-House, on Wednesday the 7th instant, and to be continued till sold, the Cargo of the Prize brig Charming Molly, consisting of Cotton Wool, Sugar, Fustic, Ligurnum Vita; and on Monday next, the said Brig, with Tackling & Appurts, as part inventory to be seen at the Merchant's Coffee- House. —N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 5, 1748.

Thomas Lepper is elected a constable from the South Ward. —M. G. C., VI: 231. Later, he was appointed high constable by the mayor, and was sworn in on Oct. 14. Lepper was a tavern-keeper "from London," having been "at the Sign of the Leopard near the long bridge."—See Aug. 29, 1748.

A letter having been received from the Duke of Bedford, announcing that Spain and Genoa have signed the preliminaries of the treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle, the provincial council orders that a proclamation be issued announcing the cessation of hostilities with Spain. —Cal. Coun. Min., 371. The draft of it was ordered printed Oct. 6 next day. —Ibid. For the terms of the treaty, see Oct. 7, 1748.

David Cox, proprietor of the Exchange Coffee House, advertises that he has for sale "A Choice Parcel of Winter Wigs of divers Colours; Also very good English Hair of several Colours, with which Gentlemen may be supplied by signing their credentials," at 447 Broad St. and Roget's, for Peruces, Trimming, Oyle. —N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 3, 1748. This coffee-house stood on the north-east corner of Broad and Water Sts., and is probably identical with the "New Coffee house" which was referred to as early as Sept. 22, 1709 (p. 2.) It was owned by Philip van Cortlandt, 1749.

Before Dec. 18, 1749, Andrew Ramsey had succeeded Cox, and had removed the sign of the Exchange Coffee-House to a house next door in Broad St. formerly occupied by Robert Todd, who died a year or two previously. This latter house was owned by Nicholas Bayard. Richard Clark Cooke soon succeeded Ramsey, who, in the N. Y. Post-Boy of April 9, 1750, called in his accounts, and announced that he intended soon to sail for the West-Indies. By March 6, 1753 (p. v.), George Buras had moved here from the House and Cart Tavern in William St., of which he had been a proprietor, but, in a short time, he found Buras removed to the Trenton Ferry House, and a little later the Broad St. tavern, which Buras called the "King's Arms," was in the possession of a Mr. Hewlet. —N. Y. Merc., Dec. 15, 1755.

Mrs. Lighthorn appears to have been here in 1757 (N. Y. Merc., Feb. 16, 1757) as schoolmaster of Miss Sessions. She moved in 1765 to a house at Whitehall, taking the old sign with her.

On April 21, 1756, John Holt, proprietor of the N. Y. Gazette, announced that he had removed to the tavern formerly kept by Mrs. Street near the Exchange. The printing-office was still maintained here in 1765, when Nicholas Bayard offered for sale the "House and Lot where the Printing-Office is now kept at the Exchange, being the same where the King's Arms Tavern was kept for many Years before."—Supp. to N. Y. Jour., Jan. 22, 1767. In all probability, the old house was never reopened as a tavern. It would have been difficult for it to compete with the growing popularity of the Queen's Head next door, at the south-east corner of Broad and Pearl Sts., which had been opened by Sam Francis in 1762. The site of this King's Arms Tavern is definitely fixed in a description of property mortgaged, on June 13, 1762, by William Milliner to Philip van Cortlandt.—Liber Mortgages, I: 394-5.

The old coffee-house and lot stood on the corner of Broad and Water Sts., facing the river. Behind it, on Broad St., was a vacant lot, and next to that the house of Nicholas Bayard, at this time in the possession of Thomas Steel.

The Treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle, terminating the war of the American Succession which opened after the death of George I, in England, Germany, Spain, and Genoa. It seemed to promise a breathing-s spell in the strife between the French and English in the colonies. By this treaty, England gave back Louisbourg and Cape Breton Island (see July 6, 1745) to the French, and all the work of Perperril and Warren was undone; all the fruits of the war in America seemed lost. —Winsor, Nat. & Crit. Hist. of Am., I: 506; V: 9, 134, 413, 476, 490; VI: 13; VII: 475.

Among other appropriations for the support of the government, Gov. Clinton asks the assembly to alter the method adopted in 1743 of making arrangements yearly for the salaries of the governors, judges, and other officers; and to return to the former custom of establishing the salaries at the time of the appointment of these officers for a term of five years. —Assembly Jour., II: 243. The assembly, on Oct. 19, refused to grant this request, one reason being that, had such grant been made, they felt certain the governor, under the "unusually Influence" of the "Collett" person (Collett ?), would have "filled the Office of third Justice" of the supreme court "with some unworthy Person, in the Room of a Gentleman of Experience and Learning in the Law," whom he had removed (Horsmanden—see Sept. 22, 1747).—Ibid., II: 245-6. Clinton, having secured a caution from one of the messengers of the assembly, refused permission to the house to present it, and, on Oct. 26, the house resolved that the governor's refusal is a "manifest Violation of the Rights and Privileges" of the house. The controversy between the governor and the assembly over these provisions for war expenses, salaries, and other matters continued until Nov. 12, when Clinton pressed this point in a meeting in March. —Ibid., II: 257-58. It was removed, however, in the next

17.8 session, and again the governor procured the assembly, declaring Oct. 27th that no public business could be conducted as matters stood.—Ibid., Oct.

A law is passed by the common council "To Prevent the Firing of Leather Guns Pistols Pop Guns Squibs Crackers & all Sorts of Fire Works in the City of New York."—M. C. C., V: 239.

"It is a Committee appointed for. Letting the stalls & standings of the several market[s]," Mayor Holland objects because he has "A Right to the profits . . . as Clerk of the market." The common council orders that the stalls be leased at public vendue, and appoints a committee to attend the auction and return the conditions of sale.—M. C. C., V: 239-40. See ibid., VI: 80, 209, 210, 262.

Peter Kalm, "Professor of Oeconomy in the University of Abo in Sweden Finlaad, and Member of the Swedish Royal Academy of Sciences," visits New York City, his sojourn lasting until Nov. 3. The suggestion to send Prof. Kalm to North America came from Dr. Linnaeus, the great naturalist, who modified the original proposal of Baron Bielke, to the Royal Academy of Sciences at Stockholm, that an able man be sent to Siberia and Iceland for the purpose of making observations and collecting seeds and plants to improve the husbandry, arts, and sciences of Sweden. Prof. Kalm kept a journal of his observations in Swedish which was published in three volumes in Stockholm in 1755-1764.—See Sabin's Dict. of Books Relating to Am., IX: 381. An English translation of this, by John Reinhold Forster, F. A. S., was published in three volumes,—Vol. I in 1790 at Warrington, Eng., and Vol. II and III in 1792. Most of the book is "A Voyage into North America; containing Its Natural History, and A circumstantial Account of its Plantations and Agriculture in general, with the Civil, Ecclesiastical and Commercial State of the Country, The manners of the inhabitants, and several curious and important remarks on various Subjects." The following extracts from Vol. I of this work are selected to present his observations regarding the city of New York.

Coming toward New York from Philadelphia, where he had landed in the middle of September, Prof. Kalm crossed to Staten Island from Elizabeth town Pointy and then came by "yacht" to New York, a distance of "right English miles," in three hours. (See pp. 236-37.) Valentine describes the boats used in this service as "perisauques" or "perryaugas,"—"a boat without a keel, with two masts, and two large sails, the lack of keel being supplied by lee-boards.—Man. Com. Coun. (1855), 570-71.

On Oct. 31, Prof. Kalm began his observations regarding New York and its vicinity: "About New York they find innumerable quantities of excellent oysters, and there are few places which have oysters of such an exquisite taste, and of so great a size; they are picked and sent to the West Indies and other places; which is done in the following manner . . . ." (pp. 277.)

"On our journey to our country we saw high heaps of oyster shells near the farm-houses, upon the sea-shore; and about New York, we observed the people had carried them upon the fields which were sown with wheat. However they were entire, and not crushed." (pp. 273-74.)

"Lobsters are likewise plentifully caught hereabouts, picked much in the same way as oysters, and sent to several places . . . ." (p. 240.) He refers also to clams, which "are met with in vast numbers on the sea shore of New York, Long Island, and other places." He adds: "The shells contain a large animal, which is eaten both by the Indians and Europeans settled here." (p. 243.)

"Besides the different sects of Christians, there are many Jews settled in New York, who possess great privileges. They have a synagogue and houses, and great country seats of their own property, and are allowed to keep shops in town. They have likewise several ships . . . . In fine they enjoy all the privileges common to the other inhabitants of this town and province." He describes their domestic habits, and the customs of the synagogue. (pp. 245-46.) See also Hamilton's Itinerary, June 15, 1744.

"The situation of it [the city of New York] is extremely advantageous for trade: for the town stands upon a point which is formed by two bays, and is one of which the river Hudson and its branches are far from the town; New York is therefore on three sides surrounded with water: the ground it is built on, is level in some parts, and hilly in others: the place is generally reckoned very wholesome." (p. 247.)

". . . in size it comes nearest to Boston and Philadelphia. But with regard to its fine buildings, its opulence, and extensive commerce, it disputes the preference with them." (p. 247.)

"The streets do not run so straight as those of Philadelphia, but have sometimes considerable bendings: however they are very spacious and well-built, and most of them are paved, except in high places, where it has been found useless. In the chief streets there are trees planted, which in summer give them a fine appearance; the heat, at that time, at this latitude, is extremely cool. Shading: I found it extremely pleasant to walk in the town, for it seemed quite like a garden: the trees which are planted for this purpose, are chiefly of two kinds. The Water beech, or Linnaeus' Pilaures, are the most numerous, and give an agreeable shade in summer, by their great and numerous leaves. The Locust tree, or Linnaeus' Robinia Pseud-acacia is likewise to-quaint its fine leaves, and the odoriferous scent which exalates from its flowers, make it very proper for being planted in the streets near the houses, and in gardens. There are likewise lime trees and elms, in these walks, but they are not by far so frequent as the others: one seldom met with trees of the same sort next to each other, they being in general planted alternately." (p. 248.)

"Besides numbers of birds of all kinds which make these trees their abode, there are likewise a kind of frogs which frequent them in great numbers in summer, they are Dr. Linnaeus' Rana shorean, and especially the variety of that animal. They are very clamorous in the evening and in the nights (especially when the days had been hot, and a rain was expected) and in a manner drown the singing of the birds. They frequently make such a noise, that it is difficult for a person to make himself heard." (p. 249.)

"The houses built of brick are generally strong and neat, and several stories high. Some had, according to old architecture, turned the gable-end towards the streets; but the new houses were altered in this respect. Many of the houses had a balcony on the roof, on which the people used to sit in the even-tings in the summer season; and from thence they had a pleasant view of a great part of the town, and likewise of part of the adjacent water and of the opposite shore. The roofs are commonly covered with tiles or shinglet; the latter of which are made of the white firtree, or Pinius Strobos . . . which grows higher up in the country. The inhabitants are of opinion that a roof made of these shingles is as durable as one made in Pennsylvania of the White Cedar, or Cupressus thyoides . . . . The walls were white-ashed within, and I did not any where see hangings, with which the people in this country seem in general to be but little acquainted. The walls were quite covered with all sorts of drawings and pictures in small frames. On each side of the chimneys they had usually a sort of alcove; and the wall under the windows was wainscoted, and had benches placed near it. The alcoves, and all the wood work were painted with a bluish grey colour." (pp. 249-50.)

"There are several churches in the town, which deserve some attention. 1. The English Church, built in the year 1665 [error for 1669-88;—see Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 914], at the west end of the town, consisting of stone, and has a steeple with bell. 2. The new Dutch Church, which is likewise built of stone, is pretty large, and is provided with a steeple; it also has a clock, which is the only one in the town [the one in the city hall was now in disuse—see March 20, 1747]. This church stands almost due from north to south. No particular point of the compass has here been in general attended to in erecting sacred buildings. Some churches, stand as is usual from east to west, others from south to north, and others in different positions. In this Dutch church, there is neither altar, vestry, choir, scones, nor paintings. Some trees are planted round it, which make it look as if it was built in a wood. 3. The old Dutch church, which is also built of stone. It is not so large as the new one. It was painted in the inside, though without any images, and adorned with a small organ, of which governor Burnet made them a present. The men for the most part sit in the gallery, and the women below. 4. The Presbyterian Church, which is pretty large, and was built but lately. It is of stone, and has a steeple and bell in it. 5. The German Lutheran Church. 6. The German Reformed Church. 7. The French Church, for the French refugees. 8. The Protestant Episcopal Church. 9. To these may be added the Jewish Synagogue, which I mentioned before." (pp. 250-51.) For later references to the churches, see Oct. 12, 1750, and 1756.

"Towards the sea, on the extremity of the promontory is a pretty good fortress, called Fort George, which entirely commands 1728 the port, and can defend the town, at least from a sudden attack on the sea side. Besides that, it is likewise secured on the north, or 30 to the shore, by a palisade, which however (as for a considerable time the people have had nothing to fear from an enemy) is in many places in a very bad state of defence.” (p. 251-52.)

“There is no good water to be met with in the town itself, but at a little distance there is a large spring of good water [Doubtless the “Tea-water Pump,” which stood on the present Park Row, east of Baxter St.—see Landmark Map, Ref. Key, III: 976], which the inhabitants take for their tea, and for the uses of the kitchen. Those however, who are less delicate in this point, make use of the water from the wells in town, though it be very bad. This water of good water lies heavy upon the horses of the strangers that come to this place; for they do not like to drink the water from the wells in the town.” (p. 252.)

“The port is a good one; ships of the greatest burt hern can lie in it, quite close up to the bridge: but its water is very salt, as the sea continually comes in upon it; and therefore is never frozen, except in extraordinary cold weather. This is of great advantage to the city and its commerce; for many ships either come in or go out of the port at any time of the year, unless the winds contrary, a convenience, which . . . is wanting at Philadelphia . . .” (p. 252.)

“New York probably carries on a more extensive commerce, than any town in the English North American provinces . . . it is said they send more ships from thence to London than they do from Philadelphia. They export to that capital all the various sorts of goods which they buy of the Indians, sugar, logs, and other dying woods, rum, mahogany, and many other goods which are the produce of the West Indies; together with all the specie which they get in the course of trade. Every year they build several ships here, which are sent to London, and there sold; and of the same year they have shipped a quantity of iron to England. In return for these, they import from London stuffs and every other article of English growth or manufacture, together with all sorts of foreign goods, . . .” (pp. 253-54.) The shipping to other points is described.

“The goods which are shipped to the West Indies, are sometimes paid for with ready money, and sometimes with West India goods, which are either first brought to New York, or immediately sent to England or Holland. If a ship does not choose to take in West India goods in its return to New York, or if no boll will freight it, it often goes to Newcastle in England to take in coals for ballast, which when brought home sell for a pretty good price. In many parts of the town coals are made use of, both for kitchen fires, and in rooms, because they are reckoned cheaper than wood, which at present costs thirty shillings of New York currency per fathom;” (p. 256.)

“So it is; these notes of what has yet been established here; at present they get all manufactured goods, such as woollen and linen cloth, &c from England, and especially from London.” (pp. 257-58.)

“I have found by the Pennsylvania gazettes that from the first of December in 1749, to the fifth of December in the next year, 211 ships entered the port of New York, and 222 cleared it; and since that time there has been a great increase of trade here.” (p. 258.)

“The country people come to market in New York, twice a week, as much in the same manner, as they do at Philadelphia; with this difference, that the markets are here kept in several places.” (p. 258.)

Prof. Kalm then describes the government of the province of New York. He praises Gov. William Burnet, who was one of the sons of Dr. Thomas Burnet (so celebrated on account of his learning), “and seemed to have inherited the knowledge of his father.” “But,” he adds, “his great assiduity in promoting the welfare of this province, is what makes the principal merit of his character. The people of New York therefore still reckon him the best governor they ever had.” (pp. 258-59.)

“There are two printers in the town, and every week some English gazettes are published, which contain news from all parts of the world.” (p. 266.)

“. . . The water melons which are cultivated near the town grow very large; they are extremely delicious, and are better than in other parts of America, though planted in the open fields and never in a hot-bed. I saw a water melon at Governor Clinton’s in Sept. 1750, which weighed forty seven English pounds . . . they were reckoned the biggest ever seen in this country.” (p. 268.)

“Through the province of New York has been inhabited by Europeans, much longer than Pennsylvania, yet it is not by far so populous as that colony.” This he attributes partly to the troubles the Germans (Palatines) had as land-holders, after their settlement here about 1710, when many of them fled, and went to settle in Pennsylvania. He attributes it also to the high prices charged for land by the rich land-holders among the Dutch.

Prof. Kalm came again to New York on June 3, 1749, after passing the winter and spring at Philadelphia, Reading, N. J., and other places, but recorded no observations about the city. He left on June 10 in a “yacht” bound for Albany. “All this afternoon we saw a whole fleet of little boats returning from New York, whither they had brought provisions and other goods for sale, which on account of the extensive commerce of this town, and the great number of its inhabitants, go off very well.” (Vol. II: pp. 253, 327.)

Benjamin Franklin, writing from London, March 5, 1773, to David Golden of New York, thus expressed his estimate of Kalm: “Kalm’s Account of what he learns in America is full of idle Stories, which he picks up among ignorant People, and either forgetting of whom he had them, or willing to give them some Authenticity, he has ascribed them to Persons of Reputation who never heard of them till they were found in his Book. —And where he really had Accounts from such Persons; he has varied the Circumstances uncalled for; and many Errors broke by the Populace, of such who were not apprized of putting Lights into their Windows, or whose Estates perhaps could not afford it . . .” It is hoped that, as this is the first, so it may be the last of the kind “in a Part of the World too much already deviated from the Rules of true Christianity.” —N. T. Post-Bay, Nov. 7, 1748. The anniversary of the Gun Powder Plot (known in England as “Guy Fawkes’ Day” —see Nov. 5, 1605) had been celebrated in New York before (see Nov. 5, 1737), but the character of its observance had evidently changed.

Corresponding with Secretary Barcroft, of the Society for Promoting the Gospel, the Rev. Henry Barclay, rector of Trinity Church, writes that, for the further encouragement of Joseph Hildreth, master of the charity school, a subscription of more than £500 has been made. To this sum the vestry will add an amount sufficient to build a handsome school and dwelling for the use of the society’s schoolmaster. The foundation is already finished, being 50 feet in length and 25 in breadth, with a wing 18 feet square.—Trin. Min. (M.S.). See also a copy of this letter made in 1736 by Rev. F. L. Hawks, from the society’s documents in London, filed with the Hawks MSS. in Church Mission House, N. Y. City. Regarding the completion of the charity school, see April 28, 1749. The building was on the south side of the present Reeder St., between Broadway and Church St., opposite the church. The location is well shown on a survey by Brandt Schuyler, dated April 27, 1749, in Box B-F of the Bauncker Collection, N. Y. Pub. Library.

In accordance with the law of April 9 (p. 5), as extended by one of Oct. 28, the drawings in the “Government Lottery” for the benefit of the college begin. The prize-winning numbers were published two weeks later.—N. T. Post-Bay, Nov. 21 and 28, 1748. See also Sept. 1. Gov. Clinton, in a letter to Mr. Catherwood, describes a riot which occurred on Feb. 2, in which he alleges that Oliver de Lancy persecuted and insulted a certain Jew and his wife with indecent language. The leading attorneys of the city (Murray, Chambers, and Smith) advised the Jew to "make it up," as the persons concerned were "related to the principal People of the Town." This shows, Clinton observes, that "notwithstanding Mr Delaney is under prosecution by the Crown he goes on in his riotous manner, bidding defiance to everybody, as no lawyer will undertake to prosecute him, being afraid of the chief Justice [James de Lancy] 's power." Clinton describes another instance when the attor-ergy referred to a like reason failed to give redress for personal injuries inflicted by Oliver de Lancy. He advises that the chief-justice "must take the business," but that his Edition of 1749.

 Lancy's "land at Bloomendall in the out ward of this City" surveyed, in order that the board may know whether "any part of the Commons of this City have been taken in or encroached on by him." If any "incroachment" be found, de Lancy desires that the board convey them to him "in fee simple," their value being appraised by impartial persons.—M. C. C., V: 245. For the outcome of this, see May 21, 1751.

A proposal of John and James Roosevelt and John Chambers is read in the common council. It states that they are the owners of "Several Lots of Land in the swamp or Cripples Bush and making good"; that they have erected a line of two hundred pounds in order to have a Convenient street or way from Queens street" to their lots in the swamp; that they "are willing to appropriate and set a part fourteen foot of a Lot of Land" which they purchased "from the widow and devises of George Elwood, deceased from fronting on the Street, in breadth from the Easternmost side of the said Lot and then down the said Swamp to be and remain as a publick Street of fourteen foot wide by the name of ferry Street;" that they are willing, as soon as they can obtain a conveyance for it, "to add to said Street Six foot more of ground in breadth adjoining to the East side of said Lot," which they purchased for that purpose from Theophilus Elswor, deceased (the deed for which he did not give them, although they had paid half the purchase price); and, finally, that such conveyance they will permit to be entered in the public records of the city. It is ordered that it be recorded.—M. C. C., V: 253-54. This was the first record of Ferry Street which was extended to the river under the same name; the part from Pearl Street to the River afterwards bearing its present name of Peck Slip. The swamp or criplesbush was Beckman's Swamp, the modern boundaries of which would be about as follows: Somewhat north of the lines of Spuyten duyvil Street, extending down the Center Bridge and line of Frankfort Street; mostly between Gold and Cliff Streets. This part of New York has always been called "The Swamp," and has long been famous as the seat and centre of the leather trade. The transfer of Ferry Street to the city was not made by the Roosevelts and others until March 27, 1759 (q. v.).

Hearings having been held on Jan. 11 (q. v.), and on March 10 and 16, on Solomon Come's petition for ferry rights from Staten Island to New York (see Dec. 7, 1748), the provincial council grants the petition, and orders that a table of fees be prepared.—Cal. Coun. Min., 372. This was submitted on April 15—Cal. Hts. Misc., Eng. 588. The table of fees was approved on May 18.—Cal. Coun. Min., 373. For the full proceedings leading to this grant, see also May 15, 1747.

The committee of Trinity vestry which was directed on Jan. 25 (q. v.) "to agree with Coll[i] Henry Beckman for Six Lots of Land to Build a Chapple of Ease" on reports that Beckman and his wife have executed deeds for these lots, "and that Capt[i] Aspinwall, on behalf of the Inhabitants of Montgomery Ward, had paid £645 for the Same..."
The vestry orders that when John Killmaster and his wife execute the Trinity corporation in a lot adjoining to the Lot N° 32 Lately purchased by Coll[i] Beckman and hiswife," the church-wardens shall affix the seal of Trinity to an agreement to purchase for Killmaster a lot and house of equal value (so adjudged by John Aspinwall); and, until such purchase is made, the church-wardens shall pay Killmaster the rent he now receives for such house and lot (£90 a year).—Trin. Min. (MS.).

The foundation of the church was to be laid the same spring (see Nov. 7, 1748), and during the rest of the year the work must have been under way (see June 15, 1755).

There is advertised to be published on March 30, by the printer of the Post-Boy (Parke), the "Laws, Statutes, Ordinances, and Constitutions" made by the common council on Jan. 27 and Feb. 1, 1749 (foot of record in the Minutes), the collection having an appendix containing extracts from the acts of the general assembly relating to the good government of this city. "A few of these books are printed on line paper; which will be sold to those who apply first. The Carmen's Law be had separate by those who think it not worth while to buy the whole, Price £6.1/4. —N. Y. Post-Boy, March 27, 1749. There is a copy of the laws, Statutes, Ordinances, and Constitutions (1749) here mentioned in the N. Y. Pub. Library; it bears the autograph of Alderman Brandt Schuyler. See also, G. N. Amer. Bibliography, II, 299.

On March 31, Peneke had paid £70 and an additional £1 for "his extraordinary trouble in printing by way of Appendix abstracts of Several acts of the General Assembly of this Colony so said by Laws and other things relating to this Corporation not Included in the Agreement" (see Feb. 17).—M. C. C., V: 256.
The "Law for Regulating of Cartes and Car-Men" contains the following provision:

"XIV. And be it further Ordered by the Authority aforesaid, That no Hay be unloaded within this City, on the South Side of Fresh Water, but at the Places herein after mentioned, to wit: At Hudson's River, near the House late of Thomas Ellis, and to the Northward thereof; at the South End of the Broad-Way, near White-Hall;" etc. —Ibid., 18.

Mayor Holland produces to the common council a list of Apr. licenses granted to retailers of strong liquors within the city (probably since he became mayor, Oct. 14, 1747). The total liquor license tax amounts to £1558, 14s. 9d. He is ordered to pay this sum to the treasurer. He is also ordered to issue his warrant to the treasurer to pay the deputy clerk of the board £3176 for granting 126 liquor licenses at five shillings each; and the treasurer is ordered to pay the mayor £5342 for granting 126 licenses at four shillings each.—M. C. C., V: 256-57.

From April 20, 1749, to Feb. 1, 1750, 58 persons took liquor licenses, paying in all £636.12. Another list showed 196 persons who took out licenses from March 25 to Aug. 1, 1750, paying the mayor £258.8. —Ibid., V: 301. On Sept. 12, he was ordered to pay the combined sum (£94415) to the treasurer, retaining four shillings and paying the clerk five shillings for each license.—Ibid., V: 305. Again, from March 25, 1751, to March 25, 1753, 374 persons took out licenses, paying £4457.7s.5d, and the mayor was ordered to make payment as before.—Ibid., V: 369. From March 26, 1753, to March 25, 1754, 160 persons took out licenses, paying £31944, and the same order was given.—Ibid., V: 407. The following year (to March 25, 1755), 192 persons paid £668149. —Ibid., V: 458. When Mayor Holland died, Nov. 10, 1756, he was considerably in debt to the city for these fees, and the city brought action to recover.—See Oct. 26, 1759.

A fire, breaking out in a house on Dule Street, in a crowded section, threatened to spread to other parts of the city, but is put out by the activity of the citizens. The fact that a number of the houses in the neighbourhood had old-fashioned tile roofs is believed to have prevented in large part the spread of the fire. A writer in the Post-Boy believes that the corporation should "be at some scheme to discourage thatched roofs, and encourage slate or pantile roofs.—N. Y. Post-Boy, April 24, 1749. See also Sept. 11. Not until Dec. 31, 1746 (q. v.), was a provincial law passed requiring new buildings south of the Fresh Water Pond, in N. Y. City, to be made of stone or brick and roofed with slate or tile.

James Parker advertises in his newspaper that he has for sale, besides other prints, "a Plan of the City of London;—A View of the City of New-York, . . ."—N. Y. Post-Boy, April 24, 1749.
The last-named may be the Burgis View, republished in 1746 by Bickwell.—See Pls. 25 and 33, Vol. I.

Brande Schuyler surveys and draws a plan of the ground at the south-west corner of Broadway and Rector St., showing the location of the English school-house and the old Lutheran Church. The original is in the Bancker Collection, N. Y. Pub. Library. See also description of Pl. 46-A, Vol. I, and April 28.

It is ordered by Trinity vestry "That Coll[i] Henry Beckman furnish and pay such Money as shall be necessary (over and above the Subscriptions) for carrying on and Completing the Building for the Publick School."—Trin. Min. (MS.). For its location, see Nov. 7, 1748. This building was destroyed by fire on Feb. 23, 1750 (q. v.).

News reaches town that the snow "Irene" (Capt[i] Garrison) May has arrived at Sandy Hook from London, with over 100 passengers "of the Moravian Brethren" on board.—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 1, 1749.

East River water lots, between Beeckman's Slip and Peck's Slip, are surveyed by Francis Maerschalk.—See the original
This street was first shown on Pl. 34, Vol. I (1755), where it was July called Dyes Street. It is named, however, for the Day family, through whose farm it ran.

It is believed that "Provisions must soon fall from the exorbitant price [see Nov. 24, 1749] which they have been held at here, for upwards of Twelve Months past; occasioned too probably by the unnatural as well as unlawful Practices, of feeding the Enemies of our King and Country..."—N.Y. Post-Boy, July 15, 1749.

Gov. Clinton, in an address to the assembly, declares that Aug. although the printer (Parker) receives a yearly salary from the government; yet he prints "injuries Reflections and Falshoods against the government of the province, and "Lampoons and Sarcasms" against the home government.—Assemb. Jour., II: 271-74.

The "Effigies of the Royal Family of England" and others, to the number of fourteen wax figures, are advertised to be seen from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. at the price of 1s. 6d. At the same time, and evidently at the same place, the site of which is not mentioned, Punch's company of comedians is advertised to give a performance of "Whittington and his Cat," to be concluded with a "Musical Clock."—N.Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 28, 1749. A similar advertisement appeared later, signed "James Wyatt."—Ibid., Oct. 30, 1749.

On Oct. 9, the wax figures and a "Puppet Show" were advertised to be exhibited "On Monday next... at the Sign of the Brig. Dolphin, near the Work-House," for the benefit of poor debtors, tickets to be had from Mr. Lepper (whose tavern, "at the Sign of the Leopard," is situated at the foot of Broad St.), as well as from Mr. Ramsey (proprietor of the Exchange Coffee House—see Oct. 3, 1749), and at the printer's.—Ibid., Oct. 9, 1749; see also Oct. 16. In 1752, the "Sign of the Dolphin" still hung out from the same house, "facing the Common."—Ibid., July 6, 1752. Stevens places this tavern near the site of the courthouse in City Hall Park.

The provincial council issues an order on the representation of Capt. Roddam, of the man-of-war "Greyhound," regarding the refusal of carpenters to come to Turtle Bay to repair his ship.—Col. Coun. Min., 375.

The common council orders "that the Ferry house to be 26 built at Brookland belonging to this Corporation [replacing the one destroyed by fire on March 28, 1748, p.1] be all built of stone and that the same be built with two smooth Sides and two random Walls Ruff Cast." It is ordered that the committee in charge have power to employ workmen, etc.—M. C. C., V: 270. Payment for roofing the new ferry-house was made on Nov. 5, 1750.—Ibid., V: 511. On March 19, 1751, the last payment was made by the city for building and finishing this structure.—Ibid., V: 327. Two "felmakers," Everardus Brower and Abraham de Lancy, are registered as freemen.—M. C. C., V: 271.

The attorney-general is ordered to proceed Otto van Tuyl 30 for disrespectful words spoken of the governor and council, in a conversation with Solomon Comes, of Richmond County, relative to their respective claims to the Staten Island ferry.—Col. Hist. MS., Eng. 595; Col. Coun. Min., 374.

A German lino-cutting controversy arises in the Lutheran Church, Oct. 1749, which splits the congregation.—See original Lutheran records, in possession of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of St. Matthew. See, further, March 22, and April 4, 1750.

A concert of vocal and instrumental music is advertised to be performed, for the benefit of Mr. Quin, "in the Court Room of the City Hall," on Oct. 16 (p.9).—N.Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 2 and 9, 1749.
In this year, Archibald Kennedy, the receiver-general of the province, wrote a pamphlet on the encouragement of trade and industry in the colonies. It was entitled Observations on the importance of the Northern Colonies under proper regulations. Although printed by Parker in 1750, Kennedy failed to issue it, inasmuch as the Right Hon. Henry Pelham ("Chancellor and Under-Treasurer, First Lord Commissioners of the Treasury and One of His Majesty’s Most Honourable Privy-Council"), to whom it was addressed, had died. In 1756, Holt advertised the pamphlet at one shilling, the notice stating that Parker had not been paid for printing it.—N. Y. Post-Buy, March 21, 1765.

From recollections written in 1770 it seems that about 1750 the locality of the present St. Paul’s Church was a wheat field; also it was said that there was a “ferry house” in Broad Street, above Exchange Place (then Garden Street), where the Indians used to sit in the street, and make and sell baskets.—Watson, Annals of N. Y., 171-72. This tradition of a ferry-house in Broad St. appears to have no foundation in fact. The Dutch never ran any ferry up the gracht; and we do not find any record of such ferry being established in English days before the filling up of the ditch and the paving of Broad Street in 1766.

In this year, Thomas Clarke bought a house and tract of land (Lot 1503, D.) in the row of houses between the same street and the little lane, which was standing on what is now the south side of 253 St., 200 ft. west of North Ave. It was destroyed by fire about 1776.—C. C. Moore, LL.D., in Man. Com. Coun. (1854), 576. Chelsea House was built on the same site subsequent to 1777 (q.v.).

The house-plan and furnishing of the home of Abraham Lodge, a successful lawyer, are described by Valentine to illustrate the style of living in New York at this period. The furniture of the front or spare bed-room may be considered typical of the best style of that day. It contained: a mahogany bedstead, with eagle claws; teaster and curtains of red-stamped calico; eight mahogany chairs, with red ballamano seats; a large mahogany easy-chair, with eagle’s claws, a crimson-silk damask cover and cushion; a mahogany dressing-table, with drawers; a mahogany tea-table, with eagle claws; a large iron-bound chest, two large stenciles, with gilt frames; three large gilt-framed pictures, three small glass pictures, two small black-framed pictures, a large blue and white china bowl, six burners-china coffee-cups and saucers, a painted table-cover, and a small gilt leather trunk.” The other rooms were furnished in similar manner.—Man. Com. Coun. (1858), 521-22.

In this year, the making of mathematical instruments was conducted in New York by Anthony Lamb.—Bishop, Hist. of Am. Manufacturers, I: 535-39. (See also Lamb’s advertisement of an earlier date, under July 1, 1745.) Soon after this, metal buttons were manufactured by Henry Witten, near the Fly Market.—Ibid.

At this time, Richard van Dyck, son of Peter van Dyck (see 1704), had a shop in Hanover Sq. Occasional advertisements in the New York papers from 1753 to 1756 show that he gradually drifted away from his early profession of silversmith, and became an importer of “pictures, European and Indian goods, looking glasses, scissors and Florence oil.” A bowl made by him is described in Met Museum of Art Cat. of Exhibition of Silver used in N. Y., N. J. and the South (1911), 60. See also ibid, xxx.

A silver strainer, made by Elias Pelletreau who was admitted as a Freeman of New York in this year, is also described in ibid, 41.

Richard Smith advertises that he will open a school on this Jan. 8 day “at the House of Mr. Kilmonster’s, joining to the New English Church, in Beekman’s-Street.”—N. Y. Post-Buy, Jan. 1, 1750.

Isaac de Peyster is appointed treasurer or chamberlain to succeed his father, Cornelius de Peyster, deceased.—M. G. C., V: 280, 286. The latter had served for almost 32 years, having been appointed on Sept. 20, 1715 (q.v.).

As the freeholders of Harlem have granted the corporation of the city of New York leave to survey their lands, a committee of the common council is appointed to make this survey.—M. G. C., V: 280. This was a continuation of the Harlem Line controversy.—See Jan. 27, 1741(2) July 12, 1750. In this connection, there was made by Francis Maerschalk, some time this year, a carefully-drawn survey of that part of Manhattan Island lying between the present 44th and 155th Sts., to show the location of the “Division Line Between Harlem and New York Common.” This map was preserved until recently in the office of Francis W. Ford.
city surveyor (successor to Amerman & Ford), at No. 8 James St., New York. A photograph of it, in possession of the author, is reproduced as Pl. 56, Vol. IV.

Adolph Philipse died in his 85th year. He had been one of the king's council, a judge of the supreme court, and for many years a representative and speaker of the general court. He was interred "in his own Church and Family Vault" at Philadelphia.—

The first coach-maker of New York advertises his business thus:
"Chair-Boxes, Chair and Kitteren-Boxes, with all sorts of Wheels and Carriages for the same, are made by James Hallett, on Golden-Hill, at the Sign of the Chair-Box, at the most reasonable Rates, with all Expedition."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 22, 1750.
His sign in later years became the "Sign of the Chair-Box and
The "Riding Chaise," for which James Beekman paid $57 in Sept.
1755, may have been made by Hallett.—Ibid., 15. This, however, was not the Beekman coach, now in the collection of the N.
Y. Hist. Soc.—Ibid., 21. For definitions of the various vehicles of the period, see ibid., 19-21.

February of this year from various conveyances in New York, see under 1766; Man. Corr. Coun., (1858), 592. The earliest known representation of a horse-drawn vehicle on Manhattan Island (1679-80) is found on Pl. 19, Vol. I

Two new fire-engines are brought over from London for the use of the city, making a total of six in New York.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 8, 1750. On Feb. 13, a warrant is given to the treasurer to reimburse Brandt Schuyler to the amount of £1933, for the freight and Entry of two fire Engines lately Imported for the use of this Corporation," which he had paid; and it was ordered that the recorder and Mr. Schuyler "Do pay the Ballance of £163 out of the Treasurer's Funds," and that all appear to be Due for passage."—M. G. C. V, 285. See Feb. 28.

Fire starts in the building of the charity school (see Nov. 7, 1748) kept by Joseph Hilkreth, clerk of Trinity Church. Though the school "stood at a considerable Distance from the Church, yet the Flames ascended so high, and carried with them such Abundance of live Coals, as to put the Church in imminent Danger, particularly the Steeple; which was set on Fire fire several Times, almost at the Top, what little Wind there was setting directly on it; notwithstanding which, by the good Providence of God, and the Diligence and Activity of a few Persons within ... it was happily extinguished. ... There was scarce any Thing saved out of the House, from the Fury of the Fire; and we are assured, besides a great deal of Furniture and other Things, the Records of the Church are entirely consumed. The whole Loss sustained, is supposed to be near Two Thousand Pounds Value."—N. Y.
Post-Boy, Feb. 8. See March 11. A notice of the occurrence was published in ibid., March 5. See also Jan. 11, 1751.

Hilkreth was cleared of suspicion of having caused the fire.—Ibid.,
March 5, 1750.

On the same day (Feb. 23), the vestry orders that Mr. Charles Jandelier fortifies the Corner of the Spire of Trinity Church and Repair the Fences round the与时俱进 which were broke and burnt at the unhappy fire at the Schoolhouse this Morning and that he also make proper Ladders or Stairs to go up in the Belfry into the Spire of the Church."—Trin. Min. (MS.). See also description of Pl. 4-2, ii 44-45.

On Nov. 16, 1747, Rev. Samuel Auchmans, rector of Trinity Church, made an affidavit that "on the twenty fourth day of February, A. D. 1747/9, the Records of Christening Marriage &c., belonging to said Trinity Church were unfortunately destroyed by fire; so that no other Records of Christenings can now be obtained, but from Family Bibles,"—N. Y. Hist. Soc. Bulletin (Jan., 1922), citing the original MS. among the De Peyster Papers.
"For the Benefit of the Charity School," the tragedy of "The Orphan," by Otway, was presented on March 27 (q.v.) "at the Theatre in Nassau Street." The play was presented on the same site as the old one was completed some time before Oct. 3, 1751 (q.v.).

A news item reads: "Last week arrived here a company of comedians from Philadelphia, who we hear have taken a conven-tient room for their purpose in one of the buildings lately belonging to Robert Sebring, a Silversmith, in Nassau Street, where they intend to perform as long as the season lasts, provided they meet with suitable encouragement."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb.
26, 1750. On the same date, the paper contains an advertisement of a presentation, on March 5 (q.v.), of the tragedy of "King Richard III," "Wrote originally by Shakespeare, and alter'd by Colly Cibber, Esq." The play is to "begin precisely at Half an Hour after 6 o'clock, and no Person to be admitted behind the Scenes." On March 12, the "Theatricals," the "Tragic-Comedy," the "Spanish-Fryar" or, the Double-Discourse, wrote by Mr. Dryden," were to be presented.—Ibid., March 12, 1750.

The common council appoints a committee "to get a sufficient house built for one of the Large fire Engines to be kept in some part of Hanover Square."—M. C. C. V, 288. See Feb. 4. Regarding payment, see Aug. 16.

"The Committee Appointed the 23d of February last to Mar. Enquire who were Active and Serviceable in a particular Maner at putting out the fire on the Spire of Trinity Church Reported that on their Enquiring they were Informed that Davis Hunt was the first Man in the Spire of the Steeple and he put out the two Lowermost fires being assisted by a fat Man whose Name he does not know and he soon went away. AndrewGotier and Francis Davis put out the uppermost Flame in the Spire, and Gortier and David Robinson [built] a horse-post out of the horse-drawn vehicle for the fire. Mr. Davidson put the flames on the Cornish (cornice) with one Cornelius Mc Carty who was also very Active there.
Mr Kippin the Blockmaker was all the time on the Roof of the Church and Mr Goffier was also there for some time with him. that this Information was given them by officer Davison, Hunt and Mc Jandine" (£50 ordered distributed with the vestry's thanks).—Trin. Min. (MS.).

The theatre in Nassau St. opens with a performance of "Richard III" (see Feb. 26).—N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 26, 1750. It was closed on July 23, reopened on September 13, and closed again on July 8, 1751.—Sonneck, Early Opera in Am. 15.

William Bradfords, Jr., Hanover Square, advertises his business as a dealer in various merchandise, including "Choice good Madeira Wine ... by the Pipe, also choice Iron Chimney Backs, and Plates for Cabbage." He also "gives ready Money for old Pewter and Brass."—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 12, 1750.
Q. July 14, 1754.

"A reward of £60 is offered for the apprehension of "some lowliv'd People" who broke into and stole "the Brass Knockers of several Doors of Gentlemen's Houses" in the city, a practice which has been "frequently repeated" for some years past.—N.
Y. Post-Boy, March 12, 1750. See also ibid., March 25, 1751.

Robert Provost is appointed overseer of the poor and keeper of the poorhouse, in place of Frederick Sebring (see May 27, 1747), who is incapacitated by blindness.—M. C. C. V, 286.

Robert Bencogdengree (Robert Beckett) the 3d son of Skinner's St., Montgomery Ward," by an unrecorded deed (now in the possession of the Title Guarantee & Trust Co.).

On the back of this deed David Grin has endorsed the statement that it was upon this land that the German Lutheran Church was built in 1750 (see, however, April 4), and that the structure was destroyed in 1767. It was in the year 1767 (May 1) that this congregation removed to Christ's Lutheran Church (the "Swaemp" Church) at the north-east corner of Frankfort and Williams Sts.—

The earliest American play-bill known to be in existence is for a performance of the tragedy called "The Orphan," given at the theatre in Nassau St. on this date. Acquired under the terms of the will of the late Evert Jansen Wendell, it is now owned by the Harvard Graduate Library. The play is a seven act tragedy, adapted by Robert Govert and the text is by Mr. Geo. Parker Winship, and a copy of the original announcement of the play in the N. Y. Gazette, reprinted in the weekly Post-Boy, for April 4, 1750.

According to an advertisement, "The Orphan" (see Mar. 26) 27 is again to be presented, by "His Excellency's Permission; the Theatre in Nassau-Street, for the benefit of the New School, which was destroyed by fire on Feb. 23 (q.v.).—N. Y. Post-Boy,

"Petty-Officers and Sea-Men" belonging to H. M. S. "Greyhound," who are absent with or without leave, are summoned by published notice to return to duty on board their ship "in Turtle Bay, New York," or before April 1, 1760, as directed by the act of parliament. Those absent without leave, and returning, will be pardoned.—N. Y. Post-Boy, April 2, 1760.

Andrew Ramsey, who, since late in 1749, has been proprietor of the Exchange Coffee-House in Broad St., which he leased of Nicholas Bayard (see Oct. 3, 1749), advertises that he "intends shortly for the Wessington papers," and that the property and settle his accounts.—N. Y. Post-Boy, April 9, 1750.

Cadwallader Colden writes from "Coldenham," N. Y., to Dr. Betts, at University College, Oxford, in part as follows: . . . the first principles of Action in Matter which were published in my mentioned book, is this: I will own a book in this place with a view only to submit it to the Judgement of some few men of learning. The London Edition was without my knowledge. You are the first in England that has been pleased to give me any particular sentiments of it & my hearing so little on the subject I began to suspect that it had gain'd so esteem in the learned world & was neglected.—From the original draft of the letter, preserved with the Colden Papers, in the N. Y. Hist. Soc.

A committee is appointed by the common council "to Treat and agree with persons to Discount the Carriage Guns of the Several Battalions within this City and to have them Laid upon Skids and the Carriages housed in proper and Convenient places."—M. C. C., V: 292.

The common council appoints a committee "to agree with any person or persons to Remove the market house near the Battery at the Corner of pearl Street."—M. C. C., V: 293. See Feb. 28, 1746.

A committee of the common council appointed "to Run out a plan of a peer on the west side of Coenties Dock on a Range with the house now in the possession of Mr. David Abel" reports a plan; and its execution is ordered.—M. C. C., V: 293. On May 3, another committee is appointed to purchase materials and employ workmen.—Ibid., V: 294. The expense of this work was met by corporate bonds.—Ibid., IV: 314, 342, 371; and see Nov. 5, 1750. On Aug. 23, 1751, the managers for building the pier were ordered "to take up the Two small Piers at each side of Coenties Dock and Remove and take away the same," as they were "very Inconvenient and Dangerous to the Market house there, in Case any Vessels fastened to the said Piers sh'd Slip or Brake their fast." The managers were also required to use the materials in building the new pier.—Ibid., V: 345. For an alteration in the building plans, see July 8, 1752. This became known as the Albany pier. —See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 488; where the date "prior to 1767" should read in 1750.1 It is first shown on the Maerschall Plan of 1755, Pl. 34, Vol. I.

The agitation of several years which preceded the important development of the docks at Hunter's Key ("Queen Row") began at this time with a petition of Charles "Sandine" (Jandine) and others, asking "a Grant of the Water Lots of this City opposite to their Lots."—M. C. C., V: 292. This was again read on Nov. 30, "praying Grants of the Water Lots facing to Hunter's Key;" and there was also a reading "a Remonstrance of John Waters and others" to the same effect. —Ibid., V: 317. The date for bearing the petition and remonstrance was postponed from time to time (ibid., V: 336, 379), until July 26, 1751, when the hearing took place. The letters patent of King George I to John Theohald and others were read; the subject was argued by counsel; but the resolution by the common council was again deferred.—Ibid., V: 342. This occurred again on Aug. 13, 1751, when the remonstrance of John McEvans and others came up in opposition.—Ibid., V: 347. No further action appears in the Minutes on this particular petition. Applications for water lots at Hunter's Key were renewed, however, on May 21, 1754 (q.v.), this time by William Walton and others; and on Apr. 7, 1761 (q.v.), the subject was reopened and considered for seven years before grants were made to St. Leiper's tenant for the same Hunter's Key, see Feb. 9, 1751, at which time it was established. It lay along the East River front from Old Slip to Wall St.—Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 990.

The vestry of Trinity Church resolves "that all Lots to be let for the future he let for Twenty One Years and that at the Expiration of the Term the Buildings thereon be Valued and the Church have it in their Choice to take the Building at the Appraised Value or that the Tenant have Liberty to take away the Buildings. —Trim. Min. (M.C.)

Margaret Johnson, merchant, one of the most prominent members of the early Jewish colony in New York, in his will of this date leaves to his family Isaac and Jacob his "dwelling house and lot situated and lying in the Shoat." He was buried, according to his wish, in the Jews' burying-ground, a part of which still remains on the New Bowery, and where his grave may still be seen. For early history of this burying-ground, see Aug. 23, 1728; Dec. 17, 1729; and Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 927.

The "Shoat" mentioned in the Gomes will was a narrow street at the rear of the lots on Hanover Sq. The present Beaver St. takes in a part of it. —Ibid., IV: 310. See also "Shoat Lane," in Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 1000.

Richard Clark Cooke advertises that the "Gentlemen's and Exchange Coffee House and Tavern" is now kept at the "Sign of the King's Arms, in the same House which was lately kept by Andrew Ramsey, near the Long-Bridge."—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 7, 1750. See Oct. 3, 1748.

For stealing goods from a shop window, a man named David Smith is sentenced to "be whip'd at the Carts Tail round the Town, and afterwards stand in the Pillory." The sentence was executed the next day.—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 14, 1750.

John Bonin, who has obtained a shop in St. S., where he sells "Rum, Sugar, and most kinds of European Goods usually sold in Shops," advertises that his customers "shall be welcome to view his famous Optical Machine Gratis."—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 14, 1750. See also Dec. 5, 1748; July 3, 1749.

This is to acquaint the Publick, that there is lately arrived from London, the Wonder of the World, An honest Barber and Peruke-Maker, who might have worked for the King, if his Majesty would have employed him; It was not for the Want of Money that he came here, for he had enough of that at Home; nor for the want of Business that he advertises himself, But to acquaint the Gentlemen and Ladies inhabitants of this City that he is now in Town, living near Rosemary Lane, where Gentlemen and Ladies may be supplied with the Goods as follow, viz. Tyes, Fullbottoms, Majors, Spencer's, Fox-Tails, Ramilies, Tucks, cuts and bob Perukes: Also Ladies Tatem tongues and Tovers, after the Manner that is now worn at Court. By their humble and obedient Servant, John Still."—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 21, 1750. "Rosemary Lane" has not been found in other advertisements or title records of the period.

Owen Rice and Rudolph van Dyck, deputies of the Unitas Fratrum (Moravians), inform Gov. Clinton by letter that they intend to build a church in New York City.—Cal. Hist. M.S., Eng., 596.

Thomas Lepper, "from London," who has been keeping a 28 tavern at the "Sign of the Leopard," at the north-west corner of the great dock (see Aug. 29, 1748), from which he has recently moved to the "Sign of the Duke of Cumberland," opposite the Merchant's Coffee House," announces that he has opened a "Regular Ordinary."—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 21 and 28, 1750.

Prior to Lepper's occupancy of this house, it had been conducted by George Burns, who removed, in the spring of 1750, to the House and Cart Tavern in William St. Lepper's tavern was the scene of a disagreeable fracas during a club meeting on Aug. 28, brought on by a certain James Porterfield, who had been informed that membership in the club had been denied him because he was "too talkative." The Post-Boy of Sept. 3 contained a long account of this unpleasant affair, which was evidently the town talk of the day. Before Nov. 19, Lepper had given up the tavern and taken the ferry-house on Staten Island.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 19, 1750.}

Coriolanus Clopper, "living in Broad Street, near the Long-Bridge," advertises several lots for sale, "all lying together, adjoining to each other, and bounded easterly on Queen-street, northwesterly on the ferry-house of Mr. Robert Benson, and southwesterly, on the Lutheran Church, and southerly on Street-Stage."—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 28, 1750. The same advertisement in ibid., Sept. 24, mentions "Hague-Street" instead of "Stage-Street."

The popularity of horse-racing and the general use of carriages at that time is evidenced by the numerous "Horse Race," which was run "on Hampstead Plains (Long Island) on this day, for a considerable Wager." It "engaged the attention of so many of this City, that upwards of 70 Chairs and Chaises were carried over the ferry from hence the Day before—besides a far greater Number of Horses and it was thought that the Number of Horses on the Plains at the Race, far exceeded a Thousand."—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 4, 1750.

June

An early instance of the "hunger strike" is found in the following record: "There is now in the Work-house one Hugh Winchon who designs to starve himself to Death, he having been thirty odd Days already without any Virtuals at all, except Small beer and Water, Just to moisten his mouth, he is so low that he can scarcely speak (this is fact.)."—N. Y. Eye Post, June 11, 1750.

People in the city and country are notified that there are several children in the asylum from Ten Years and under, to be put out Apprentices. "Applications for the children are to be made to Abraham Lefferts and Abraham van Wyck, churchwardens.—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 11, 1750.

The gunner's mate, James Parks, of the English ship "Greyhound," having fired, on June 7, upon a boat belonging to Col. William Ricketts, of Elizabeth Town (the latter not understanding the signal to stop), and having killed a young woman in the boat, the coroner brings in a verdict of "Wilful Murder."—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 11, 1750. On Aug. 13, Parks, on being called to receive judgment, pleaded for pardon, and was discharged.—Ibid, Aug. 15, 1750. The case is thus summarized by Gittaman in his chapter on "George Clinton and his contest with the Assembly," in Wilson's *Mem. Hist. of N. Y., II.: 255-76: The boat carried a flag, which it did not strike on approaching the man-of-war Greyhound, commanded by Captain Riddall, Clinton's son-in-law. As it had failed to salute the man-of-war on previous occasions, the lieutenant in charge of her resolved to enforce the admiralty rule . . . The assault had been committed between Governor's Island and the Battery, so that the coroner of the city claimed jurisdiction under the Montgomery charter, and held an inquest. Captain Riddall had not been on board the vessel, and instantly put his lieutenant under arrest and sent his gunner's mate to testify at the inquest. Chief Justice De Lancey, on Ricketts' complaint, arrested the gunner's mate for murder, even before he confessed his obedience to orders . . ." Gittaman explains the bearing of the case upon the factional dispute between Clinton and De Lancey.

Trinity vestry orders "That the Committee Appointed for Building the Chappell of Ease [St. George's] have power to build Galleries therein and to agree (if they think proper) for the doing thereof and for the Inside work of the Chappell by the Great (i.e., by contract).—Trin. Min. (A.M.). See Jan. 14, 1751.

The committee of Trinity vestry appointed "to Agree with proper Persons for Rebuilding the School-house" (see Feb. 23) reports that they have agreed with John Brown and James Naper for $575 certain, and $25 more when the building is completed if to desire it.—Trin. Min. (A.M.).

"To be Seen, next Door to the Play House, A most curious Piece of Rock and Shell-Work, superior to any Thing of the Kind in America; A lively Prospect of the memorable Battle of Culloden; with Views of several of the Grandest Cities, Palaces, Hospitals, Villas, &c. in the像 and Europe. The House is now at one Shilling each Person, and the Prospects at One Shilling per Dzent: Children at half Price."—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 25, 1750.

Herman Rutgers, brewer, by his will of this date, leaves to his son's widow the dwelling-house, "with the ground thereto belonging in the County of New York," from the west boundary of my land between Maiden Lane and my brew house, along Rutgers street, as the same is now railed in and planted with trees." He also orders that "the land between the ground of Vanwater and my lot planted with trees, and as far as my land extends eastward, shall retain the name of Rutgers street, and remain open for the use of all my children."—Abstracts of Wills, IV: 445-46. An excellent undated survey of the brewery property of the Rutgers family, on the north side of Newland Lane, between 52 and 53 Maiden Lane, is in the Bancroft Collection.

The common council appoints a committee "to meet the Trustees of the Town of Haerlem and to hear the proposals to be offered by them relating to the accommodating and settling the Concourse Depending between them and this Corporation for Lands Claimed and belonging to this Corporation.—M. C. C., June 29. On Aug. 23, 1751, Abraham Lodge, who had acted as attorney for the city in 1750 to a trespass and ejectment suit (ibid., V: 504), was appointed counted for the city, together with Joseph Murray, in support of the city's title to the lands claimed by the town of Harlem.—Ibid., V: 545. This action evidently has reference to the disputed partition line (see Jan. 27, 1749; Jan. 9, 1750) which had been surveyed in 1727 (see April 25, 1727). The dispute "with Respect to the Boundaries of this Corporation and the Township of Harlem" continued until March 13, 1755, when the common council appointed a committee to meet a committee of the "freeholders of Harlem" to settle the difference.—Ibid., V: 397. It was not settled at that time, however, but ran on to March 20, 1771 (p.v.).

The Boston post now puts up at Mr. Jonathan Ogden, "the Sign of the Black Horse and Fur, near Mr. Robert Benson's."—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 23, 1750. In earlier years, the sign of the Black Horse hung from a tavern on William St. See Oct. 9, 1727. Ogden died some time before Feb. 16, 1753 (p.v.), and by Aug. 16 his tavern had been taken over by John Holland.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 16, 1753.

Gov. Clinton writes to Gov. Benning Wentworth, agreeing to the proposal to submit the question of deciding the boundary between New York and New Hampshire to the king. On Sept. 2, Gov. Wentworth replied, contesting to the exchange of representations made by each province separately to the king. On Sept. 29, the attorney-general of New York wrote to a friend of his, giving his opinion on the differences between the two provinces.—Doc. Hist., N. Y., IV: 537. See also a letter of March 23, 1754, from Gov. Wentworth to the lords of trade, relative to the boundary line, in Ibid., IV: 548; and see Hist. MSS., Eng., 604. "George Burns, who lately kept Tavern opposite the Merchants Coffee House," removes to the "noted Sign of the Cart and Horse."—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 30, 1750. The tavern opposite the Merchants Coffee House was known as the Duke of Cumberland (see May 28). Burns's ship, returning, ran aground near the Horse and Cart, and the man stood on William St., south of Fulton, was briefly. On Jan. 28, 1751, the "well-acquainted Inn, known by the Name of the Sign of the Horse & Cart, . . . with all the Out-Houses and Stables," was offered to be let by Thomas Bohanna.—Ibid, Jan. 28, 1751. George Edmonds became proprietor in the early part of 1751 (see June 3, 1751), but in less than a year he had been succeeded by Edward Willett. From the advertisements of both Edmonds and Willett, it is apparent that the house had lost much of its former popularity. Willett says he has "reviv'd the "once noted Horse and Cart Inn."—Ibid, March 25, 1752. From an advertisement of Thomas Grigg, in the Mercury of May 27, 1754, the house appears to have been turned into a furniture shop. Grigg announced that he had moved to the Horse and Cart, where he continued "to make house-chairs, couches, closestool chairs," etc. He offers to let the stables of the Horse and Cart.

For a number of years, the Horse & Cart was mentioned as a landmark in records of property transfers; but no reference is found to its use as a tavern again until 1771, when the "Society of House Carpenters" fixed upon the house of Mr. David Phillips at which to hold its meetings, and where "drawing Plans, Elevations, Profiles, &c. of the Shell Works." In later advertisements, David Phillips is mentioned as the proprietor of the "Horse and Cart."—Rivington's N. Y. Gazetteer, March 31, 1774. Although Bayles and other writers state that the house was known during the Revolution as the "Golden Hill Inn," no contemporary record has been found to substantiate this statement. See Landmark Map Def. IV, p. 268, Vol. III. The name of this tavern appears indiscriminately as "Horse and Cart" and "Cart and Horse."
The Lutheran Church is struck by lightning and set on fire, but is little damaged.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 6, 1750.

Thomas Barnes surrenders his lease of the slaughter-house on the East River, and relinquishes his office of keeper.—See deed of surrender in Libr. Deeds (City Grants), XXIV: 245. On Aug. 31, the common council approved the draft of this deed; and on the same day a committee was appointed "to view the Ground proposed by Mr Nicholas Bayard for the Building a Slaughter house."—M. C. G., V: 302. For further action of the board, see Sept. 12.

Capt. Thomas Clarke, a retired officer of the British army, buys an estate from Jacob and Tannis Somerendyke, consisting of a farm of several hundred acres bordering on the Hudson and running east as far as the present Seventh Ave.—Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 948. The house which was on this property was burned about the time of the Revolution, and its owner died soon after.—N. Y. Sentinel, Aug. 28, 1750.

The city of New York pays £30,000 for erecting a fire-engine house in the South Ward.—M. C. G., V: 500. On Sept. 1, the committee reported its plan for regulating these streets, beginning at a point opposite the middle door of the new English church (St. George's).—Ibid., V: 506. On June 18, 1751, the order regarding Beekman Street was revoked and a new committee appointed to perform the same services.—Ibid., V: 340–41. For early references to this street, see Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 995. Beekman Street was first shown on the Bradford Map of 1750 (see Pl. 27, Vol. I). See also April 25, 1803; March 11, 1816.

The city of New York has £30,000 for erecting a fire-engine house in the South Ward.—M. C. G., V: 500. On Nov. 5, another payment was agreed to, making a total of £10,000, probably in Hanover Square.—Ibid., V: 288, 317. See Feb. 28.

A horse-race is advertised to be run on Oct. 11, for "the New York Subscription Plate of Twenty Pounds Value," by "any Horse, Mare, or Gelding, that never won a Plate before on this Island, carrying Ten Stone Weight, Saddle and Bridle included, the best in three Heats, two Miles in each Heat."—Horses that are intended to run are to be entered the day before the race "with Adam Van Denberg, living on the Church Farm, paying Two Dollars each, and at the Post the Day of Running, paying Four."—The entrance money is to be run for the day after, "by any of the Horses, excepting the Winners, and those distant."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 27, 1750. See Oct. 11.

Two horsemen, called "the two Moor Princes," attempting to show "their Dexterity or their Ignorance on Horseback," run over and nearly kill a child; they are committed to jail.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 5, 1750.

Parker prints a letter, addressed to him and signed "Tribunus Populi," which refers to the unanimous re-election, "in the Field," on Aug. 27, of the four "Representatives for the City and County of New York" (in the assembly), "by a much greater Number of Persons than ever appeared there on the Like Occasion." The writing of the New York Post-Boy's Wit was read, the People expressed the most ardent Affection for their former Representatives, by three of those popular and triumphant Huzzas, which are so extremely expressive of a People's Eulogium at the Disappointment of the Covert, when engaged against the Interest of the Country. From which we may fairly infer, that the Conduct of these Gentlemen is universally approved of by their Constituents, notwithstanding the false and malignagant Aspersions of some of our late ministerial Scrubblers. Parker also publishes a letter of thanks "To the Freetholders and Freemen of the City and County of New York," signed by the four assembliemen, David Clarkson, Cornelius Vanboule, Paul Richard, and Henry Greyerger, in which they declare that, while none of the people as usual "insisted in our Declaration as your Representatives in General Assembly to serve you gratis," they nevertheless will so serve them.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 3, 1750.

Similar sentiments were expressed when they were re-elected in 1752 after a dissolution of the assembly.—Ibid., Feb. 14, 1752.

Lewis's "next Door to the Treasurer's in the Fly," offers for sale "White Sarsons; black, brown, lemon, blue, plum and pink colour'd 3/2 Ell and 3/2 wide Lutestring; green, blue and pink colour'd English Damask, black Alamode, white water'd Taffy; blue, brown and black rich Padusious; white and pink colour'd Ducases; black, white and Cloth colour'd Balladine sewing Silk," besides window glass, wine, and "Boxes of Bristol Pipes."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 3, 1750.

Gou, Clinton reminds the assembly that the government of the province has been, for two years, without any financial support, and urges payment not only by the present, but future support of the government.—Assem. Jour., II: 276–77.

The provincial council swears in Edward Holland as a member in place of Philip Van Cortlandts, deceased, ou receiving a royal manifold appointing him.—Cal. Coun. Min., 376.

A notice is printed for a meeting on the 3d of October of the Merchants Coffee House on Sept. 11 to take measures against the importation of English copper half-pence. The most effective means of checking their importation, it is believed, would be to follow the example of Boston and Philadelphia merchants and refuse to accept half-pence except at so reduced a value that there would be no advantage in importing them. As matters stand, neighbouring colonies benefit by sending their half-pence to New York. By reducing the value of the half-pence to fourteen for a shilling their importation would undoubtedly be checked, and they would pass at par in Philadelphia and New York, with a somewhat higher rate at Boston. Thirty merchants have agreed to meet at the Coffee House Sept. 11 "at 12 o'Clock" to sign such an agreement, to which meeting all other merchants and others interested are invited.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 10, 1750. See Dec. 1, 1753; and Sept. 15.

Nicholas Bayard (see Aug. 14) is allowed by the common council to build a "publick Slaughter house pen and pinfold" (sic) on his own land in the Out Ward, adjoining the land of Mr. Mithorn. The exact location is defined as "on the south Side of the point of upland Near the fresh Water pond being about Eleven or Twelve Chains to the Westward of the high Road or Bowery from the South Eastward to the present Lee's Pond." The lease is for 21 years from March 25 last, on the same terms "as the late publikc Slaughter houses of this City were leased to John Kelly" (see July 22, 1756).—M. C. G., V: 303. The lease was ordered to be delivered to him Feb. 14, 1751.—Ibid., V: 353.

An agreement between the corporation and Bayard on Sept. 24 recited that, as the situation of the slaughter-houses on East River had become inconvenient and was likely to become a great nuisance, and since Bayard proposed to build slaughter-houses at his own expense on his farm in the Bowery Division of the Out Ward,—he was required by this agreement to build "three or more Good Substantial and convenient Slaughter Houses and one or more Good and Sufficient penn and pinfolds." These were to be deemed "the publick Slaughter houses of the said City of New-York." Bayard (or his executors, administrators, and assigns) was given the office of keeper; paying a yearly rent of one peepcercon on the feast of St. Michael the Archangel. These houses, with penfold and necessary tackle, were to be finished on or before the following Sept. 12, and thereafter kept by him in repair, scoured, and cleansed. He, or his successor, was not to receive more than one shilling for killing and dressing each head of cattle. Unless these accommodations become too small, no other slaughter-house is to be built in the Bowery Division of the Borough Ward, and such houses that have been built since the last mentioned law shall be removed. Persons may, however, slaughter elsewhere, on their own premises, for their own use.—From a copy, dated Oct. 1, 1765, of the grant to Bayard, on file in the city clerk's record-room. The original is entered in City Grants, XXIV: 425 et seq. See also Feb. 6, 1752; and Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 962.
The common council passes an ordinance making it a "Standing Rule of this Board" that, "whenever a Committee shall be appointed for the future for any matter or thing to be done in any of the wards of this City," the "alderman of such ward shall be Chairman of such Committee."—M. G. C., VI. 594.

On receiving an address from a law of petitions against the provincial council issues an order that the act for preventing the importation of copper money be repealed.—Cal. Coun. Min., 376. See Sept. 8.

"The provincial council grants a petition from Jacob Corses for a patent for his ferry between his land on Staten Island and the shore of Bergen in East New Jersey.—Cal. Land Papers, 158; Cal. Coun. Min., 916.

Henry Witten, who has served an apprenticeship with Caspar Witter, "Brass Button-Maker in Philadelphia," advertises that he has "set up the same Business in New-York," at a shop in Maiden-Lane, between the Fly-Market and the New Dutch Church.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 17, 1750.

Commenting on the presentation at the "Theatre," on the previous Thursday evening, of Addison’s tragedy of "Caro," Parker observes: "As it was the fullest Assembly that has appear’d in that House, it may serve to prove, that the Taste of this Place is not so much vitiated, or lost to Sense of Liberty, but that they can prefer a Representation of Virtue, to those of a loose Character."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 24, 1750.

It is estimated that £214110 are necessary to repair the Copsey Bottle.—Assemb. Jour., II. 283.

In the spring of 1741, there is one collection or custom-house district, kept in the port of New York." For the twelve months, to this date, there were 232 inbound vessels, and 286 outbound vessels (ships, snows, brigantines, sloops, and schooners).—Douglass, A Summary, Historical and Political (1760), 257.

Franklin at Philadelphia, on March 3, 1752, said: "The effect which the discharge of your four glass jars had upon a fine wire, tied between two strips of glass, puts me in mind of a very similar one of lightning, that I observed at New York, October 1750, a few days after I left Philadelphia. In company with a number of Dutch tlemens, I went to take a view of the city, from the Dutch church steeple, in which is a clock about twenty or twenty-five feet below the bell. From the clock went a wire through two floors, to the clock-hammer near the bell, the holes in the floor for the wire being perhaps about a quarter of an inch diameter. We were told, that in the spring of 1750, the lightning struck the clock-hammer, and descended along the wire to the clock, melting in its way several spots of the wire, from three to nine inches long, through one-third of its substance, till coming within a few feet of the lower end, it melted the wire quite through, in several places, so that it fell down. They showed me the wire; which spots and, when it got to the end of the wire, it flew off to the hinge of a door, shattered the door, and dissipate. In its passage through the holes of the floors it did not do the least damage, which evidences that wire is a good conductor of lightning (as it is of Electricity) primes, and, as that is much, and might, in this case, had it been continued to the earth, have conducted it without damaging the building."—Quoted in Experiments and Observations on Electricity, made at Philadelphia, by Benjamin Franklin (1760), 180-81. See also The Works of Ben. Franklin, ed. by Bigelow, II. 242.

Franklin added a footnote to "J. B."s letter, stating, that in the summer of 1765 (June 15, 26.), after the wire had been replaced by a brass chain, the church was again struck by lightning with the same result. The chain was destroyed, and the door shattered, but the floor was uninjured. He adds: "The steeple, when reared, was guarded by an iron conductor, or rod, extending from the foot of the four-pinnacle down the outside of the building, into the earth.—The newspapers have mentioned, that in 1765 [Aug. 30, p. 9], the lightning fell a third [error for fifth—see July 20, 1761] time on the same steeple, and was safely conducted by the rod; but the particulars are not come to hand."—Experiments and Observations, Phil. Soc. Min. Com. Coun. (1769), 419. For the first, see July 1, 1762.

It is stated in Maclay’s How to see New York and its Environs (1876), 44, that, in 1757, "From the belfry of this church [Middle Dutch] Franklin flew his silken kite, and taught the lightning he was about to use the electric machine, unfortunately, we have been unable to find any authority supporting this statement.

On order of the provincial council of Oct. 8 (Cal. Coun. Min., 377), a proclamation is issued requiring owners of mills or engines for slitting or rolling iron, of every platting forge that works with a tilt hammer, and of every furnace for making steel, erected before June 24 last, to report the situation, with the names of the owners.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng. 593. This step was taken in conformity with a law of the province respecting the same colonies.—N. Y. Cal. Doc., VII. 604-5; see also 1750. For the report concerning New York City, see Nov. 3.

The "New-York Subscription Plate" (see Aug. 27) is run for "at the Church Farm, by five Horses, and won by a Horse belonging to Mr. Lewis Morris, jun."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 5, 1750. The race was run again the next year.—Ibid., Sept. 9, 1751. See also April 16, 1753.

James Birket rides to New York from Kingsbridge, after a tour of the cities of New England. He records in his journal that he dined, at Kingsbridge, at the tavern of one Stephenon, a Quaker, who keeps one of the Best Eating houses" he has visited. He says:"... we had a Bass fish taken out of the river by the door before our Eyes & some very Good oysters," adding: "This is one of the best built houses for a Tavern I have yet seen in America being all built of good Stone the Apartments large and lofty And all vesseles..."

Arriving in town, he "put up at the Sign of the Horse & Cart in the upper part of the City and prov’d to be very bad lodgings, altho ‘tis a house much used." He continues: "the wharf & places where there vessels ly are on the Eastside of the Town & for the Whole Length of it there is a good depth of water And all vessels Load & Discharge without the help of boats or lighters which is very convenient."

"Neither their Streets nor houses are at all Regular Some being 4 or 5 Story high & Others not above two. Not any of the Modern houses are build wth the Gable End to the Street as was formerly the fashion amongst all the old Dutch Settlers, but are many of ‘em Spacious Genteled houses Some are built of hewn stone Others of English & Also of the Small white Hollands Bricks, which looks neat but not grand, their houses are Generally neat within and well Furnished. Notwithstanding there Still remains too much of the Old houses we see. Now a house is built for the Advantage, The Streets (as above) are very Irregular & Crooked & many of ‘em much too Narrow they are Generally pretty well paved which adds much to the decency & Clean-ness of the place & the Advantage of Carriage, The Water in the Pumps & Springs here is a Little of the Brickdust Tast. "Their Publick Buildings are; first the City Hall a large Strong Stone Building the lower part is Seemingly intended for a Change to meet in, as it Stands all upon Arches and is Open like a Market house; Above Stairs are Apartm’ts for the Gov’t Council & Assembly to meet in, And make Laws for the good of the province, there Also is Other Rooms for the Courts of Justice to Sit in, and Order these Laws to be put in due force & Execution & other public buildings which prevents its Appearing to have no Advantage, The Streets (as above) are very Irregular & Crooked and many of ‘em much too Narrow they are Generally pretty well paved which adds much to the decency & Clean-ness of the place & the Advantage of Carriage, The Water in the Pumps & Springs here is a Little of the Brickdust Tast. 1750 Stone, and as it must be allowed to be the most fashionable religion.

12 America to Prevail here is also four Dutch Churches Two of the Lutheran the other of the Calvinistic Order, All which are Large, & formerly were very much crowded but many of the Young People fall in with them. As do the women in general from the French Church which now has but a Small Congregation. Here is also A Presbyterian Meeting house which is large, and has great number of that Society which frequents the Same, and duly attend their prayers, Lectures &c times every Sabath day; One Jew Synagogue And one meeting of Friends and is built and their Meeting house is of Brick which is neat, built about Two years ago, 1 Moravian & 1 Whitfield m° do but both in private houses [see also Oct. 30, 1748 and 1750].

The People here are very gay in their dress but more particular in the furniture of their houses &c They have of Late a very Extensive trade to the Bay of Honduras for Log wood which has been of great Service to the Place in making their European Reritances for dry goods &c which without this trade pulls them a good deal when bills are Scarce.

They also Build many vessels here of all Sizes, And are well Supply'd with Timber wood by Jirs from Long Island and also from Staten Island which I believe to be Best in this part of the Country as it grows near the Sea and upon a Clay Soil.—

13 Daniel Orieens has that a Stage boat for transporting both people and merchandise which, "if Wind and Weather permit, shall attend at the late Col. Moore's Wharf in New-York, every Wednesday in every Week, (and at other Times if Occasion) and to proceed to the Ferry at Amboy on Thursday, where, on Friday he will receive his passengers as well as Wood, Grain, or whatever shall be ready to receive them, and immediately proceed to Borden's Town, where there is another Stage Boat ready to receive them, and proceed directly to Philadelphia. All People may depend on the best Usage, and all Passengers and Merchandise shall be transported at the same Rates as are customary from New-Brunswick to Trenton: And as the Passages by Water are much shorter and easier perform'd than the Brunswick-Way, and the Roads generally drier, it is hoped this Way will be found the most deserving of Encouragement.—"—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 22, 1750. Cf. March 25, 1751.

An anonymous writer discusses trade conditions in New York. The "great Frauds carried on in the manufacturing Wheat into Flour, in the Article of Bread Beet, Pork, Bacon, are so notorious abroad," he says, that he has often been ashamed to own that he is a native of this place. When such commodities are wanted, only enough are purchased to satisfy present wants "till some Vessel arrives from Philadelphia, for a Supply of better Commodities of the Sort."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 22, 1750. This complaint, in the shape of a remonstrance from the grand jury of the city of New York, was laid before the assembly on Oct. 24 (p. v.).

The assembly receives from the grand jury for the city of New York a remonstrance, stating that for some years past many complaints have been made in the West Indies and other places regarding the poor quality of New York flour, "the staple Commodity of this Province." The grand jury seeks action by the legislature in this matter.—Assemb. Jour., II: 294-95. For an early complaint, see Dec. 19, 1715.

On Oct. 28, a number of merchants also addressed a petition to the legislature on the same subject, and complained that the late years such great abuses have been committed in the packing, marking, and selling, New-York Flour — that those Markets [French and Spanish: West Indies] have absolutely refused to purchase the same. These merchants also asked for action to overcome these evils.—Ibid., II: 295-96. In response, a law was passed, regulating the exportation of flour.—See Nov. 24.

One John Durgen, having been convicted of stealing, and being by Law entitled to his Clergy, was last week "burnt in the Hand."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 29, 1750. The old English law of "Benefit of Clergy," whereby an offender purges himself of a felony, was not wholly repealed until 1857.—Cent. Dict. (title "Clergy") citing the case of this conviction, 1750, as late, as that in Duke Street, the School House [see Feb. 23], and This, happen'd to be situate within Reach of the Rivers; by which Means, the Engines could be supplied without great Difficulty . . . ."

But suppose a Fire should come to a Head . . . . in the Heart of our City, how should we master it?" The Wells and Cisterns in a Neighbourhood, we know are soon dry . . . .

"I propose, that a Drain, or Brick Channel, may be carried up at Low-Water Mark, from under the Long-Bridge, in Broad Street, that, at three or three convenient Places opposite to Street Markets, a large Pump or two be fixed in such Drain or Channel, to serve in Case of Fires in those Streets or Neighbourhood; that the Drain end in a large Well or Basin, near City-Hall, having three or four pumps to serve in all the Neighbourhood about that publick Building: and perhaps an Expedition may be found to convey the Water issuing out of this immense Drain to boats, or other, to other parts of the City remote from the Water Side. The same I would propose, to be put in Practice from under the Fly-Market, up to, or near the Widow Rutger's Brew-House, as also in any other convenient Part of the City; so that we were sure to find Water in any Part of the Town, although remote from the River Side; for as we are still struggling to bring the River farther off, by wharfing out, we ought to be secure another Way. I think it would not be amiss, if the Magistrates should reserve to them: Grants, certain Sinks, Slips or Drains, to let the River Water come to its old Stations, for such Use . . . ."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 5, 1750. Cf. Jan. 11, 1753.

The assembly orders that the commissioners appointed under an act for repairing and completing the fortifications of the colony, and for building a new residence for the governor (see Oct. 19), shall submit to the house sworn statements of the disposition of all money entrusted to them.—From the original order in the Jour. Papers in folder lettered "Twentie-eight Documents," N. Y. Hist. Soc. The assembly made additional provision for this work on Nov. 24 (p. v.).

Sheriff John Ayscough, of the city and county of New York, makes a return that there are no mills or engines for slitting or rolling iron, and similar works, or his "balkivise." The same return is made by the sheriffs of other counties. Joseph Sackett, Jr., reports that there are iron works at Murderskill, called finery works, supposed to be in Ulster Co., belonging to the estate of Nathaniel Hazard, deceased, and Samuel Bratter.—Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 1759. See Oct. 10. On Dec. 14, Clinton issued a certificate that there was a plating forge with a tilt hammer, but no operation, belonging to Laurence Serawley, blacksmith, at Wawaganda, Orange Co., and that there were no plating forges, mills, or engines for slitting or rolling iron, or any furnaces for making steel, within this government.—Ibid., 396. See Dec. 5.

For the second time, the city issues a municipal bond. The first occasion was on March 31, 1751 (p. v.). The present bond is issued to Christopher Bascker, merchant. It provides for a payment to him of £200 on Nov. 5, 1752, under penalty of £250; and is to cover the expense of building the pier at the west end of Coenties Dock, which has already cost £42714s.7—M. G. C., VI: 514; see also April 26, 1750. To pay this obligation (which it did on Jan. 15, 1754), the city was obliged to borrow from the excise revenue, under a special act of assembly passed for the purpose.—Ibid., VI: 454. After this the issuing of corporate bonds became frequent. —See also ibid. (Indios), VIII: 188, title "Bond." See also Man. Com. Coun. (1809), 508.

1750. The "House in the Commons, formerly called, the Horse & Manger [see 1749, belonging to Edward Broomhead, Coachman to the late Governor Burnet,]" is the subject of an advertisement of one George Dubbins, who desires to discharge any outstanding mortgages upon the property.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 12, 1750.

"We hear Capt. Tingley, in the Ship Indian King, from Holland, has arrived at Sandy-Hook, with a Number of Passengers on Board."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 12, 1750. On Nov. 19, the paper reported that "Capt. Tingley, mentioned in our last, is come up [to town], and has bro't in about 340 Palatines, all well."—Ibid., Nov. 19, 1750.

In this connection, Parker prints the following request: "An eminent Professor in the greatest University in Germany, has lately desired a Gentleman of Pennsylvania, to send him an Account of the first Settling of Germans in North-America, and what Encouragement was then given them, with the Situation and Privileges they now enjoy; in order to have it printed. Now as the first German Settlers were several Palatine Families, who came into New-York Province; and for their Encouragement had a Patent for Land near Newbury [Newburgh] in the High-Lands, with a Glebe of 500 Acres for a Lutheran Minister, &c. if any Person is acquainted with that Affair, and will be so good as to forward the Account, to the Printer hereof, as it will greatly contribute to the Satisfaction of that Professor, and undeceive the poor Germans, so it will be thankfully received, and communicated to the Publick; and will, doubtless, much oblige all Lovers of Truth, Liberty, and Property."—Ibid., Nov. 12, 1750.

 Provision is made by the legislature for paying the salaries of a number of provincial officers. Among these appropriations are the following: £40 for taking care of the cannon and several batteries; £10 for taking care of the battery and cannon at Red Hook; £14 to Philip Verplank for surveying and laying out the ground "to Erect a Curtain about the City of New York & Drawing a Plan of the Same" in 1751; and £50 to 210 for "Building & Completing a Stable [see Oct. 19] for his Excellency, & Providing Horses."—Col. Laws N. Y., Nov. 12, 1750.

A provincial statute is passed "to restrain Tavern Keepers and Inholders from Selling Strong Liquors to Servants & Apprentices & from giving Large credit to others." No tavern-keeper is allowed to sell liquors to a servant or apprentice without the consent of his or her master. No is a tavern-keeper permitted to receive from a servant or apprentice any clothing or other goods in payment for liquors or in pawns. See Dec. 3, 1657. A tavern-keeper, is further prohibited from giving credit over six shillings to any person other than a traveller.—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 378-59.

In this state is enacted "to prevent the Exportation of Unmerchantable Flower & the false Tarring of Bread & Flower Cakes." This act is passed because the "Flower of this Colony (its Greatest Staple) has in a Great measure lost its Reputation abroad" (see Oct. 24). Every bolt of flour oraker of bread is ordered to provide himself with a brand mark with which he is to designate every cask exported from the city of New York. All bakers and bakers are also notified to enter their brand marks with the clerk of the court of general sessions.—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 788-91.

The brand marks were entered in the Minutes of the Court of General Sessions, March 21, 1750 (manuscript volume in custody of clerk, criminal, 11 Centre St.).

A provincial law is passed which provides that the laws of the colony be revised, digested, and printed. For a consideration of £5,000, William Livingston and William Smith, Jr., agree "to revise, digest & collect in one Volume exact Copies of all the Laws in Force in this Colony" from the revolution (1691) to the end of the present session of the general assembly. At the rate of 20 shillings for every sheet of printed paper, James Parker undertakes to print the book "on the best Paper & large Folios & with the usual Tipes for Such Work, and to deliver one Printed Book thereof compleatly bound in Calves Skins" to the governor, one to the council, and one to the general assembly. This act repeals the one of Nov. 27, 1747 (p. 2).—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 820-25.

Under the authority of this act, the edition of the statutes made by Livingston & Smith was published on Aug. 10, 1752 (p. 2). The same editors published the colonial laws enacted since 1751, down to and including May 22, 1762.—Ibid., I: 327; Explanatory Notes. See also Dec. 20, 1760. The work done by Livingston and Smith in 1750-2 was previously undertaken by Horsemann in 1741.—See Nov. 13, 1741; July 3, 1745.

The provincial legislature passes an act for the "Relief of In solvent Debtors with Respect to the Imprisonment of their Persons." If the debts of any person confined in jail for insolvency do not exceed £50, he or she may appear before a court and submit an account of all assets and liabilities. Wearing apparel, bedding, tools and instruments of trade, not over £50 in value, are exempted from the operation of this statute. The debtor must also swear that all commutation of his property has been sold, leased, or otherwise disposed of for self-aggrandizement or to defraud creditors. Satisfied with the truth of such declarations, the court may order an assignment of the debtor's goods for the benefit of creditors, and the debtor shall be discharged from custody.—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 322-28. Another act respecting debtors was passed Nov. 23 and 24.

March 25, 1752, and that the board would pay him £1210, and permit him "to put the Beams of his house into the Walls of the ferry house which may hereafter be built by this Corporation on their Water Lot Next Adjoining" to his lot. This the board agreed to.—Ibid., V: 319-320. See March 6, 1752.

Rev. Louis Rou, professional for "70 years part" of the French Protestant Reformed Church in New York, dies. On this following Saturday, he was interred in the French Church, "near the Pulpit he had so long occupied."—N. T. Post-Boy, Dec. 31, 1750. This interesting evidence proves that there were burials in the French church, as in Trinity and the Dutch churches, in New York City.

A. Stockton, lately arrived from England, has just opened an Ordinary, at the house lately possessed by Mr. Richard Cooke Clark, opposite to Mr. Frank's in Dock's Street. . . ." Dinners and suppers are "from One Shilling to Two Shillings Price, drest after the best Manner."—N. T. Post-Boy, Dec. 31, 1750. This house "in Dock's-Sreet" could not have been the Exchange Coffee House or King's Arms, as some writers have assumed, since at this time that tavern was on Broad St., just north of the corner of Water and Broad Sts. The house referred to must have been that from which, apparently, John Wilson, the King's printer in the spring of 1750 (see May 7, 1750). At any rate, Anna Stockton appears to have abandoned the idea of tavern-keeping almost immediately, having been "advised to teach young Ladies to sew and embroider, and Millinary."—N. T. Post-Boy, Jan. 21, 1751.

In this year, George Washington, 19 years of age, was appointed adjutant-general for the Northern District of Virginia.—Winsoo, Nar. & Crit. Hist. of Am., V: 268.

In this year, Maerschalk made a survey of the city from Paritition (Fulton) St. northward to Reade St., and from Broadway to the North River. His drawing shows the old line of fortifications and gates along Chambers St.; also the "Boulding Green," between Warren and Chambers Sts., near the river. This manuscript plan was recently in the collection of old maps owned by Francis V. Ford, Esq. (successor to Amerman & Ford). See description of Pl. 54, pp. 275-276, Vol. I.

In this year, Maerschalk also made a map of Kip's Bay, which, also, in 1910, was in the Ford collection.

This year, Archibald Kennedy wrote and published, from the press of James Parker, The Importance of Gainning and Preserving the Friendship of the Indians to the British Interest Considered. It is one of the timely and important tracts written by Kennedy, relating to the political and economic affairs of the province. A letter at the end was written by Benjamin Franklin.

This year, Archibald Kennedy, the receiver-general published (June 22), a tract advocating a plan of union for the colonies. He urged a yearly meeting of commissioners from the various colonies at New York or Albany, to arrange the quotas of troops, to apportion the expense, and to provide for joint payments for the importation of immigrants. There is a copy of this pamphlet in the John Carter Brown Library at Providence (see that library's catalogue, III: 955, 957).

During the early part of this year, little else was done in New York than prepare for the great Indian congress at Albany. Gov. Clinton invited representatives of all the colonies from New Hampshire to South Carolina to meet the Six Nations for compacting a league.—See Dec. 15, 1750; Winsoo, Nar. & Crit. Hist. of Am., V: 618. The journal of the commissioners is in the Mass. Archives, XXXVIII: 160. See also Wilson, Mem. Hist. of N. Y., II: 279. See, further, April 12.

Alexander Colden is appointed surveyor-general with his father (see April 19, 1730)—Col. Coun. Min., 378. On Feb. 19, 1762 (q. v.), he assumed the total responsibility of the office.

An advertisement announces the presentation, at the theatre in Nassau St. (see Feb. 26, 1750), on Jan. 14, of "The Beggar's Opera," with entertainments between the acts; at the end of the first act, a"canary" is sung ("The Green Cock"); and at the end of the play, "the Drunken Peasant," "all "by a Gentleman lately from London." To all this will be added a farce entitled "Miss in her Teens," and an oratorio, sung by Mr. Keen, for whose benefit the performance is given.—N. T. Post-Boy, Jan. 7, 1751.

The Staten Island ferry-boat is caught fast in the ice and driven by the tides back and forth before the city until "the next Evening," when the passengers, "without Sustenance, may be ashore at the lower Ferry in the Narrows, on the Long Island Side."—N. T. Post-Boy, Jan. 14, 1751.

"Order'd That the Committee Appointed for Leasing the Church Lots have Power to Agree with Dick Dye about Leaving a Street between the Church Lands and his upon such Terms as the shall think Convenient. (Mr. [Mayor].) See March 8.

The committee of Trinity vestry, empowered on June 15, 1750 (q. v.), to employ workmen to build galleries, pewns, and other inside work for "St. George's Chappel" (so called for the first time in the records), advertises that it will meet every Friday at 2 o'clock at the house of William Cook, near the city hall, to treat with carpenters and masons who will undertake to do this work.—N. T. Post-Boy, Jan. 14 and 28, 1751. The committee reported to the vestry on Feb. 4 that workmen had been engaged.—Trin. Min. (Mass.).

A notice is published declaring that the "Keeping Accompts, and giving Credit for Postage of Letters" is troublesome and inconvenient, and that hereafter no letters will be delivered at the post-office till the postage is paid.—N. T. Post-Boy, Jan. 21, 1751.

James Parker, in answer to reports "that Mr. [Thomas] Keen [see Dec. N. T. Post-Boy, Jan. 7], for his Benefit Night on Monday last, had caused a better Number of Tickets than be printed that the House would hold," certifies that "there were but 161 Pit Tickets, to Boxes, and 111 Gallery Tickets, printed in all; and it is well known that as large a Number have been to the House at one Time." He explains that, "This it was then determined not to receive any Money at the Door, as it was afterwards found to be a Measure impracticable to be followed without great Offence; and such whose Business could not permit to come in Time, have since had their Money return'd."—Ibid., Jan. 21, 1751. The small capacity of the "Playhouse" or "Theatre" on Nassau St. appears to be thus definitely established. For its exact location and history, see Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 985.

A man "lately come to Town," who "keeps at Scotch John- ney's, upon the Dock," advertises for pupils to form a Latin school.—N. T. Post-Boy, Jan. 21, 1751. Some time prior to this date John Thompson, generally known as "Scotch Johnny," opened a tavern on Whitehall Slip near the ballroom battery, at the "Sign of the Crown and Thistle."—Ibid. His tavern was patronized by travellers passing back and forth on the ferry, and was also, very properly, the meeting-place of the St. Andrew's Society.

Thompson retired in 1758, and was succeeded by George Burns, who had been conducting a tavern on Wall St., "opposite the Presbyterian Meeting House," at the sign of Admiral Warren. Burns retained the old sign for a time, but, by Nov. 17, 1760 (q. v.), had replaced it by the sign of King George's Head. On June 13, 1765 (q. v.), Burns having moved to the Province Armes, in Broad- way, John Graham, Esq., a former proprietor of the Duke of York's Head, also at Whitehall, announced that he had moved to the house lately kept by George Burns. His stay was brief. Perhaps by this time the old tavern had lost its popularity. By May 14, 1764, Graham had removed to the "Sign of the Marquis of Granby in Elizabeth Town."—N. T. Gaz., May 14, 1764.

Notice is given that a committee of the vestry of Trinity Church will meet every Friday, "at 2 o'clock in the Afternoon, at the House of William Cook, near the City-Hall . . ."—N. T. Gaz., Jan. 21, 1751.

That well-acclaimed Inn, known by the Name, of the Sign of the Horse & Carr,' is advertised by Thomas Bohanna to be let.—N. T. Post-Boy, Jan. 28, 1751. See June 3.

Cardwaller Colden writes from "Coldengharn" to Prof. Carolus Linnaeus, of Upsala, Sweden, in part as follows: "I never saw an Opossum nor heard of any in this Province I think Seals have been seen in the Bay before you come up to the City of New York on rocks near Staten Island."—From the original letter, with Colden Papers, in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Compare Kalm's Travels, Oct. 15, 1748.

"A Large Stable and Chaise-House, that will hold two or three Chaises, behind White Hall Ship, facing Copycy Battery, is advertised to be let by Obadiah Hunt, living near the same," who states "its ready for receiving Horses for and from the Ferry-Boats, and seldom wants Custom, if Attendance."—N. T. Post-Boy, Feb. 4, 1751; see also ibid., Feb. 17, 1752.

A windstorm breaks, or bends down, the "Iron Work, Ball and Cock" on the spire of the Presbyterian church.—N. T. Post-Boy, Feb. 18, 1751.

"The publick Whierry of the City of New-York being lately dead; if any Person inclines to accept that Office with Twenty Feet to apply to the Mayor, and be enter'd."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 11, 1751.

An advertisement, seeking the return of a run-away negro boy, states that he had "On a blue Watch-Coat."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 11, 1751. We have seen, as early as Nov. 9, 1698 (p. 9), that blue was the colour adopted for the "Livery" of the mayor's marshal. At some subsequent time, it appears to have been adopted for that of also the watch.

12 The common council appoints a committee to regulate Queen Street (part of the present Pearl St.), "from Alderman Benson's Mill to the Ferry Water."—M. G. C., V: 353; Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 1008.

The common council appoints a committee to run the lines between the lands of the corporation and those of Jacob Duckelman in the Bowery Division of the Out Ward.—M. G. C., V: 351. The order involves determining the line of the Common Lands. Cf. map of the Harlem line and surrounding territory, drawn by Francis Maerschelack in 1750 (see Jan. 1750).

18 This date is found on a manuscript survey of the Trinity Church property, drawn by Francis W. Maerschelack, city surveyor. It is reproduced and described in Vol. III, Addenda, Pl. 3-b. See also Mar. 8.

Frances Moore, widow of the late John Moore, a prominent merchant, advertises for sale "Four Lots of Ground, situate on the South Side of Crown-Street, being one half of the Ground commonly known by the Name of Barberie's Garden; each Lot containing about twenty feet front, six feet depth, about 100 feet. —N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 18, 1751. On May 14, 1755, Mrs. Moore and John Bariberie of Perth Amboy advertised various lots to be sold, including "A Lot of Ground situate at the West Side of Crown-Street, adjoining the New Dutch-Church Ground, being one half of the Ground, commonly known by the Name of Barberie's Garden, containing about 100 feet Square."—Ibid., May 14, 1755.

Although Mayor Holland asserts his claims to the profits of the several markets, "as Clerk of the Same," the common council leases the "Stalls and Standings" of the markets to Bartholomew Skatts (a goldsmith), for one year, from May 1, 1751, to May 1, 1752, for £106. At the same time, they lease to Skatts the "Docks of this City," for the same period, at £120, giving security and agreeing to take 60 seow loads of mud and dirt out of the dock. It is also ordered that he repair, at the city's expense, any damage to the dock, from time to time, as directed by the alderman and common council man of any ward.—M. G. C., V: 255-256. Skatts had leased be of the dock and slips since April 26, 1749.—Ibid., IV: 488; see also ibid., V: 8, 10, 112, 120, 148, 168, 185, 191, 218.

Major Holland renewed his contention the following year concerning the rents from the rents from the Wharf, and the rents from the Docks (and ibid., Errata, VIII: 134). See also 1755 (ibid., V: 396); and 1754 (ibid., V: 441). After his death in 1756 (ibid., V: 74), the common council appointed a committee, Jan. 25, 1757, to confer with his executors, in order "to settle the fees of the stalls and standings of the several Markets" received by him. The committee was empowered to commence legal action, if necessary, against them.—Ibid., V: 80. On April 1, 1760, a new committee was appointed, with powers extended to treat also with the executors of the late mayor John Cruger (Sr.) and Stephen Bayard, and with the present mayor (John Cruger, Jr.) for the same purpose.—Ibid., VI: 269. This committee was allowed to retain "Mr Smith the Elder" as counsel.—Ibid., VI: 220. The executors of Mayor Holland having been sued by the city for the fees derived from liquor licenses (ibid., VI: 192), the committee was able to report, on Sept. 18, 1767, that all the executors concerned were willing to pay to the city "All the Monies in their hands by them Respectively Received for Licences to Tavern Keepers deducting one half of the Amount of what the said Stalls and Standings Soll for During their Respectively Majoralties." The common council accepted this offer, preserving the right to retain in future all the monies derived from the stalls and standings unless an explanatory clause could be added to the charter, appropriating a sum not over £100 per annum for the use of the mayor, and the remainder for the use of the city. The common council accepted the report, and a committee was appointed to prepare the amendment to the charter, and solicit its adoption.—Ibid., VI: 262.

A committee of the common council is chosen to inquire into the matter of rents due to brick-makers for brick kilns in the Commons, and is empowered to agree regarding the leasing of part of the Commons for brick kilns.—M. G. C., V: 255.

The common council orders "that Every Merchant not born in this City who shall hereafter apply for the freedom thereof shall pay the Sum of five pounds."—M. G. C., V: 256. The native merchant appearing to require only £3.—Ibid., IV: 97. See also April 24, 1694.

The committee of Trinity vestry "APPOINTED [see Jan. 10] to Agree with Dirck Dey about the Street between the Church's Lands and the said Dirck Dye's Land" reports that it has been agreed with him that he may leave fifteen feet and the Church Twenty five feet for a Publick Street And that he pay to the Church Sixty pounds by the first of May next."—Trin. Min. (MS.). The agreement, which is entered in these minutes, shows that a street 40 ft. wide is to run from Broadway to the North River. The original MS. of this agreement between the wards and vestrymen of Trinity Church and Dirck Dey is preserved in the archives of the N. Y. Hist. Soc., with MSS. relating to churches. It is dated Feb. 26, 1750 (1751), and has reference to the opening of Partition St. (so named from its location), which is the present Fulton St. (named in 1807 as Broadway).—See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 1000. For the cession of this street, with others, by Trinity Corporation to the city, see Sept. 18, 1761.

"The Committee Appointed to Petition the Corporation for the Watter Lotts behind Trinity Church report that they have made an Agreement with the City Surveyor and a Draft made; and sent for Messrs* Bayard Schuyler and Roosevelt who have Lots Bounding upon the Churches Lands, and who they were informed Claimed some part of what was Conceived the Churches Land, That Mr Bayard Declared he was Satisfied with the Line as the Pew Now Stands, But Mr Schuyler and Mr Roosevelt Insisting that by the said Draft they shall Loose three feet of Ground of Each Lott, and that they had a said three foot and that the Committee having Conceived it would be very Difficult and Expensive for the Church to Appertain [assert] their Right to the said three foot of Ground, thought it proper to Agree that they and the Owners of the Lotts to the Northward should take in the said three foot and that a Pricket or Red line be made in the aforesaid Draft three feet to the Southward of the present Black line Beginning at Lombard Street and Running to Low Water Mark be the Division Line or North Bounds of the Churches Lands and the South Bounds of those that Claim Land to the Northward."—Ibid., V: 74. See March 19.

The prisoners in the city hall appeal for fuel, having not even "One stick to burn," and having been without fire for several days. Unless relief is forthcoming they must "unavoidably perish in the cold."—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 11, 1751. On March 16, they addressed a letter of thanks, in verse, to all their benefactors.—Ibid., March 18, 1751.

Parliament passes "An act for regulating the commencement of the year, and for correcting the calendar now in use." The act was introduced in the house of lords in an eloquent address by Lord Chesterfield on Feb. 25, 1751, and seconded by the learned Earl of Macleesfield. For the report of their speeches, see The Parliamentary Hist. of Eng. (1814), XIV: 795-92; also Chesterfield's Letters to his son, II: letter No. 215. The act explains that, in England, "the legal supputation of the year," which heretofore began March 25 (the date of the Feast of the Annunciation), has been "attended with divers inconveniences," some of which are described. It states that the Julian Calendar, heretofore in use, has been discovered to be erroneous. This error is explained, as well as the confusion which would arise if not removed. The reformed system has already been adopted by almost all other nations of Europe; and, as stated, the proposed change "will be of general convenience to merchants and other persons corresponding with other nations and countries, and tend to prevent mistakes and disputes in or concerning the dates of letters, and accounts, if the like correction be received and established in his Majesty's dominions."

It is therefore enacted that the old "supputation" shall not be made use of after the last day of Dec., 1751; and that the first day of January next following . . . shall be reckoned . . . to be the first day of the year" 1752; and the first day of January
After Jan. 1, 1754, "the several days of each month shall go on, and be reckoned and numbered in the same order; and the feast of Easter, and other movable feasts thereon depending, shall be ascertained according to the same method, as they now are, until Sept. 22, 1754. "The natural day next immediately following" Sept. 2, 1754, shall be "called, reckoned and accounted" to be Sept. 14, "omitting for that time only the eleven intermediate nominal days of the common calendar," and the days that follow shall be in numerical order from Sept. 14, "according to the order and succession of days now used in the present calendar." The act further provides that "all acts, deeds, writings, notes and other instruments of what nature or kind soever, whether ecclesiastical or civil, publick or private, which shall be made, executed or signed, upon or after the said first day of January . . . [1754], shall bear date according to the said new method of supputation. The two fixed terms of St. Hilary and St. Michael (Michaelmas), in England, and also all courts are to be held on the same nominal days. All "meetings and assemblies of any bodies politic or corporate, either for the election of any officers or members thereof, or for any such officers entering upon the execution of their office, or for any other business whatever, which . . . are to be held and kept on any fixed or certain day of any month . . . shall . . . the said second day of September, be held and kept upon or according to the same respective nominal days and times . . . [as now], but which shall be computed according to the said new method of numbering and the locating the days of the calendar. . . ." The new calendar says, "say eleven days sooner than the respective days wherein the same are now held and kept . . . ." For continuing and preserving the calendar, or method of reckoning, and computing the days of the year in the same regular course, as near as may be, for all time to come, it is further enacted that every hundredth year, beginning with 1800 (1800, 1900, 2000, 2100, 2200, 2300, etc.), except only every fourth hundredth year (of which the year 2000 shall be the first), "shall not be esteemed or taken to be bissextile or leap years, but shall be taken to be common years," of 365 days and no more. The years 2000, 2400, 2800, and every other fourth hundredth year, from the year 2000 inclusive, and also all leap years as at present reckoned, shall for the future be esteemed leap years, consisting of 366 days, "in the same sort and manner as is now used with respect to every fourth year." The act prescribes that Easter and the other movable feasts are to be observed according to the new calendar. Annexed to the act are tables and rules which shall be prefixed to future editions of the Book of Common Prayer of the Church of England instead of the calendar, tables, and rules at present prefixed to it. An act to be continued to be observed, or anticipated the time of payment of any rent, annuity, or sum of money, which shall become payable by virtue of any custom or agreement now subsisting, or which shall be made, signed, sealed, or entered into, before Sept. 14; nor shall it accelerate the time of the delivery of goods, the commencement or expiration of any lease or demise of land, etc., or of any contract, or the time of attaining the age of 21 years, or the expiration of apprenticeship. The same respective natural days and times when these and other things are appointed to be performed shall prevail, until the full number of years or days shall elapse as prescribed in such agreement, law, etc.—Geo. II, Chap. 23, P. 314, statute, 32 Geo. II (1767), XXI: 186, 368. See, further, Sept. 3, Nov. 16, 1752.

In a petition to the common council, Trinity corporation seeks a grant of the water lots fronting the church land, described as the "Lands fronting their School house Church yard and Ground from the rear of their Lott into the North River," 200 feet beyond low-water mark, comprising 60 feet wide beginning at low-water mark, agreed to be released to Nicholas Roosevelt. The petition is granted, with a yearly rental of threepence per foot, and a committee is appointed to examine the premises and have them surveyed.—M. C. V: 128. See Feb. 15, 1703, for an earlier grant. On March 22, the committee reported that it had met a com-mittee of Trinity and proposed that the city release a strip of 85 feet instead of 60 feet to Nicholas Roosevelt, "in order to make the Slip at the End of Thomas Street more useful and Convenient for the Publick." This the Trinity committee agreed to, with the understanding that the city would make, at its own expense, "an Ell at the end of that Slip;" and this, the committee of the common council agreed, ought to be done "wherever the said Slip is Carried out." The report recommended that one of the covenants in the grant should be that Trinity "Leave a Street [later Greenwich St.] along high water mark," 40 feet wide; and also that, at a distance of 135 feet from that Street (which would be along the line of low-water mark), "another Street [later Washington St.] be Left," 40 feet wide, parallel to the first mentioned street; and, thirdly, that, at a distance of 200 feet beyond low-water mark, "another Street [West St.] . . . be Left," 40 feet wide and parallel to the first two streets mentioned, to be taken out of the 200 feet, "according to a Draft or plan made by Mr Francis Marschall." This report was agreed to by the common council, who ordered that the draft of a deed be prepared accordingly.—Ibid., V: 330-31. On May 21, the draft was presented and approved, and ordered to be engrossed and executed.—Ibid., V: 337; City Grants, Liber C: 215; Man. Com. Coun. (1870), 760. Maerchall's plans, A. Pl. 74, Vol. III, dated Feb. 18, 1754, is probably the "Draft or plan" here referred to.

It is ordered by the common council "that no Top sell [top-sail] or Sea Vessells whatsoever Do Lay along the Peer of the Great Dock between the first of March and the first of December every or any year Unless such Vessell shall pay the Sum of Ten Shillings for every Day that is the Lay thereon, to say eleven days sooner than the respective days wherein the same are now held and kept . . . ."

Daniel Obrien advertises a "Stage Boat," to carry passengers and goods between New York and Philadelphia, to attend at the late Col. Moore's Wharf in New York." The route is "to Mrs. John Cluck's, near Amboy Ferry, . . . where there is a Wharf, Store-house, and good Entertainment," and whence a "Stage-Wagon" proceeds "to Bordens Town, where there is another Stage Boot . . . to proceed directly to Philadelphia." He gives times of departure, etc., and adds, "as Passages this Way are generally performed in 48 Hours than they can be by Way of New Brunswick, it is hoped the Undertaking will meet with the Encouragement it deserves."—N. T. Post-Boy, March 25, 1754. Cf. Oct. 13, 1750. For earlier references to the Amboy route, see April 3, 1753.

Charles Dutens, near the Long Bridge, sells "Diamond Rings, Mourning, Fancy, Enamell'd, or Moto do.[dot] Stone Buttons set in Gold, Ear-Rings, Solitaires, Stay-Hooks, Seals or Lockets . . . He also sets Rubens, Saphires, Diamonds, Emeralds, or any other kind of Stones, after the newest Fashion."—N. T. Post-Boy, March 25, 1751.

A teacher's advertisement reads: "Reading and Writing, in Apr. Dutch, French, and Latin, with Arithmetic and Geography, are carefully taught, and due Attendance given, by Reinhold Jan Klockhoft, at the House of Mr. Bratt, wherein the Widow of Mr. J. P. Zeugler [Aug. 2, 1755] now lives, upon Golden-Hill, in New York; also sewing and darning, or other Needle Work, carefully taught, by the Wife of the said Klockhoft."—N. T. Post-Boy, April 1, 1751. Such instruction was quite common (see Oct. 26, 1747; Aug. 6, 1750, Nov. 6, 1751; May 31, 1756, and Jan. 30, 1758.

A house and lot on "Golden-Hill" are advertised for sale. The lot fronts on "Orange-street," and the rear is on "Rider-street."—N. T. Post-Boy, April 8, 1751. Valentine explains that Golden Hill was the name of a "place of public resort, in early times called Vanderchild's Orchard," which was "situated along the East River, in the vicinity of the present John Street and Convent with Cliff street." He says that "this tavern was, for over fifty years, one of the most frequented suburban houses of entertainment;" also that "it gave the name to a part of the present John street, which for many years was called Golden Hill."—Man. Com. Coun. (1870). See May 10 to last-named property. For other references to property on Golden Hill, see N. T. Post-Boy, Aug. 13, 1755; ibid., Dec. 22, 1755; ibid., Jan. 17, 1757; ibid., Sept. 18, 1758. The houses mentioned in the last-named advertisement are "on the south side of Nassau-Street."

An act is passed “for Vesting in Trustee” the sum of $3,445 18 raised by way of Lottery for erecting a College within this Colony.” It states that this sum has been raised but is considered insufficient “without further Additions to answer the Said end of Erecting compleating and Establishing a College,” and that it is necessary to appoint trustees for “the Setting at Interest” the sum already raised, and “Receiving the Contributions and Donations of Such persons as the Gov. shall Charitably dispose to be benefactors and, Encouragers of So laudable an undertaking.” The act names as trustees the eldest Councillor residing in this Colony, the Speaker of the General Assembly, and the Judges of the Supreme Court the Mayor of the City of New York and the TREASURER OF THIS COLONY for the time being, together with James Livingston, Esquire, Mr. Benjamin Nicol, and Mr. William Livingston." Their duties are defined. They are enabled to receive proposals from any city or county in the colony which desires to have the college erected there; and they are required to render a sworn accounting "to the Governor Council and General Assembly, when by them or any of them thereunto required."—Col. Letters N. Y., III: 842. For a fuller exposition of the duties and plans of the trustees, see Jan. 26, 1752. See, further, March 5 and 23, 1752. The powers of the trustees were enlarged, and the funds at their disposal increased, by an act of July 4, 1752 (p. 27), which appropriated for the support of the college 630 pounds sterling. The trustees were discharged by the act of Dec. 1, 1756 (p. 9), which transferred their obligations to the college governors.

An act is passed "for mending and keeping in Repair the Public Road [Bloomendale Road] or highway from the House of John Horne in the Bowery Division of the out Ward of the City of New York through Bloomendale Division in the Said Ward to the House of Adrian Hoogelandt." Pursuant to a previous statute (see Oct. 23, 1713), a road four rods in breadth had been built for the dwelling of John Horne (23d. St. and Fifth Ave.).—See 1716 through "Bloomendale Division or District of Adrian Hoogelandt" (115th St. and Riverside Drive). The inhabitants of the "Bloomendale District or Division, who are but few in number, have been under great hardships not only by Keeping the Said Road in Repair, (which is double the breadth Necessary) but also by having been obliged to Work in Repairing the Post Road between New York and Kings Bridge." The justices of the peace for New York City are therefore ordered to appoint annually a resident of the Bloomendale district as surveyor of the public road. His duties are to lay out the road two rods in width and make all necessary repairs. He is authorized to summon any number of inhabitants of the Bloomendale district with carts, spades, and pickaxes. A team, wagon, and driver shall be regarded as the equivalent of three days' work. Every inhabitant failing to appear shall be fined at the rate of six shillings per day. No person can be compelled to work more than three days at a time nor more than six days a year on the road; nor need any inhabitant of the Bloomendale division work on the post-road from New York to Kingsbridge.—Col. Letters N. Y., III: 842-47. See also June 19, 1753.

An act "to prevent frauds in Debtors" is directed against persons who have estates sufficient to discharge their debts but depart from the colony and order their effects to be sold, thereby securing the proceeds. The act is also aimed at debtors who conceal themselves somewhere in the colony. To end these fraudulent practices, if an abscinding debtor owes more than £10 to one creditor, the sheriff, the mayor, or any other person is required to attach the estate of such debtor. A judge is then directed to have a notice inserted in all the newspapers of the colony that the property will be sold unless the abscinding person returns within three months. If he or she fails to appear, the judge is to appoint three trustees, who are to sell the property at auction, receive moneys due, and settle equitably with the creditors.—Col. Letters N. Y., III: 835-34.

A statute is enacted "to prevent the breaking or otherwise Injuring Glass Lamps in the City of New York." Some of the inhabitants are "willing at their own Expense to hang out, or fix up in the Night time before their dwelling Houses large Glass Lamps to Illuminate the Streets of the Said City [see Nov. 23, 1697], but are discouraged therefor from fear that Such Lamps may be broken, taken down, destroyed, or Carried away, or the lights therein put out." Such offenses hereafter will be punished by a fine of £6.—Col. Letters N. Y., III: 835-37. See Dec. 23.

Following the statute of Nov. 25 (p. 9) against breaking glass lamps in New York City, several persons have set up lamps in the streets before their houses. Many others intend to do so.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 23, 1752.

In this year, Benjamin Franklin established the relation between electricity and lightning, and introduced lightning conductors for the protection of buildings. See Oct. 1756.

On the 13th of October, 1755, William Walton, Esq., a large mansion, one of the finest of the period, on a lot inherited from his father near the family's ship-yards on Water St. The date is determined, 1752 approximately, by a notice which appeared in the N. Y. Post-Boy, May 14, 1753, advertising a house for sale "in the upper end of Queen Street, next door but one to Captain Walton's new House, near Peck's Slip." For a detailed description of the house, see 1752, where, however, the date of erection, as erroneously stated by John Fink, is given as 1754. An error was committed by Dunlop, in his Hist. of the New Netherland (1860), II: 143, and by Wilson in the Mem. Hist., III: 305. Walton's, in his Annals (1846), 359, gave the date as 1757 and Valentine, in the Man. Com. Coun. (1858), 324, as about 1760. The building stood for 157 years at 236th St. near the street of the same name. It is known as "The Walton House." It was demolished in 1855 (see Nov. 12, 1851).—See "Sketches Biographical and Historical," by John Austin Stevens, Jr., 60, in Colonial Records, Chamber of Commerce, 1768-1784 (pub'd, 1872) and Mag. Am. Hist., II: 40. Valentine indicates the style of furnishing of the house at a later period than that of its early magnificence, including an inventory of the family silver-plate.—Man. Com. Coun. (1858), 324. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 993. William Walton was a son of Capt. William Walton (see M. G. C, VIII: 459), an eminent merchant of New York, who died May 23, 1747 (N. Y. Post-Boy, May 25, 1747).

Walter Rutherford, writing in 1800, recorded the fact that in 1752 there were 2,011 houses and 532 storehouses, stables, etc., in New York City, "as counted by a gentleman" he knew.—Rutherford, Family Records and Events, 190. In accordance with the act of parliament of Jan. 18, 1751 (p. 7), "for regulating the commencement of the year," the "New Style" goes into effect in Great Britain and her colonies. "It is thought to be done by some daring Rakes, in order to convince the Owners, how easy those Lamps might be demolished without Discovery."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 3, 1752. See Nov. 25 and Dec. 23, 1751.

1753. William Wood advertises: "The Albany Post sets out on Saturday next: Letters may be left at Mr. McEwen's near the City-Hall, or at the North River, at the House of the said Post."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 27, 1752. For his change of address, see Dec. 4.

February 3 the "keeper of the Common Horse of the City of New York" advertised, "for the recovery of a running Mann ... of Irish Descent, ... of about 23 Years of Age," who "had on when he went away, a Bearskin Coat made Frock Fashion, with a scarlet Jacket green Velvet Lining, and a Silk Frock Jacket at the Back," and Buckskin Breeches, white or Blue Worsted stockings, a brown bob wig, and a large brim'd Beaver Hat, round toe'd Shoes, with square Steel Buckles."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 3, 1752.

An ordinance is passed which provides that all neat cattle shall be killed at the public slaughter-house of Nicholas Bayard (see Aug. 14, 1750), instead of at the old public slaughter-house "by the Water-side."—M. C. C., V. 337. For later amendments to this ordinance, see ibid., VIII: 27-28, 387-98.

13 "Meet! Livingston and Jefferses appearing at this Board alluding that they had been at a much greater Expense in Erecting their Stillhouse and Works behind Trinity Church than they Expected to be at and prayed this Board to Consider the Same and Grant them Thirty Years Lease Instead of Twenty five Years which they Agreed with the Committee for which Request being Considered is Order'd that the Lease for the said Stillhouse and Ground be for Thirty Years upon the Rent of Thirty pounds per Annnum formerly Agreed upon."—Trin. Min. (MS.). See also May 26, 1758.

The council orders "That an Advertisement be Inserted in MF Parker's News Paper for letting that part of the Churches Farm to the Northward of the Stockadees Either Intire or in parcels."—Trin. Min. (MS.). The advertisement, which was published, read: "That Part of the Church's Farm, (commonly called the King's Farm) which lies to the Northward of the Stockadees is to be let, either entire or in Parcels," and those interested are directed to apply to Col. Joseph Robinson.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 17, 1752. See March 25.

Adam van Denberg, who has maintained a tavern and garden on the Church farm, at the present Broadway and Vesey St., since 1735, and probably for many years, is ordered by the majority of the Trinity Church to lease "the old Bowling Green" for 21 years from March 25, 1752, "the part of it already let to Elias De Gruchie [see May 25] to be Excepted."—Trin. Min. (MS.). Van Denberg's meal-house, on Broadway, and the "Old Bowling Green" (later Vauxhall), which was on the Hudson River near the present Greenwich and Chambers Sts., are very clearly shown on the MS. Map of 1753 (Pl. 30, Vol. I). Elias de Gruchia had a ropewalk which extended from Broadway to a point beyond Church St., between Warren and Chambers Sts. See Pl. 34, Vol. I; and Landmark Map Ref. Key, J. 360. See also April 23, 1752, and April 23, 1753.

Parker, the publisher of the Post-Boy, having antagonized a number of readers by articles printed in his paper, makes a defence. He "fears God; honours the King; loves his Country, and would serve all Mankind," but reminds his readers that "the Press is esteemed one of the grand Bulwarks of English Liberty," and be, himself, placed by Providence "to be the Instrument of using it."—Feb. 1752.

Sidney Breese, about to leave New York for England, advertises various goods for sale, including, "Lately imported from London, 72 Volumes, in folio, all Manuscript, neatly bound, gift, and letter'd, being the Manuscript of the House of Commons, for above 30 years, from which many Presidents [sic] may be quoted, very useful to Representatives of this or any other Kingdom they were Part of the Duke of Chandos's Library."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 24, 1752.

On petition from lawyers practicing in the mayor's court for an ordinance on fees, the provincial council orders one prepared.—C. G. M., Min. 385.

Trinity vestry agrees "that a proposal be made to the Commissioners Appointed to Receive proposals for the Building a Colledge [see Nov. 25, 1751] that this Board is willing to give any Reasonable Quantity of the Churches Farm which is not let out for the Erecting and use of a Colledge."—Trin. Min. (MS.). This proposal was presented to the trustees of the college on April 8 (q.v.). A similar resolution was adopted by the vestry, with a very material condition added, on May 14, 1754 (q.v.). See also Nov. 4, 1754.

The common council orders that three lamps be purchased, and two erected in front of the city hall and one in the rear, and that they be provided with oil and kept clean.—M. C. C., V. 358. For the initial step taken to light the city with lamps, see Nov. 23, 1751.

Benjamin Peck (see Dec. 21, 1750) releases to the city "a piece of Wharf By the Sheriff's Line in the North East side of his Lott in Montegomie Ward."—M. C. C., V. 358. Peck's Wharf is shown on Pls. 26, 27, 27b, Vol. I, and on later plans.—See Landmark Map Ref. Key, J. 360.

The "House of George Burns fronting the Long Bridge" is the place designated by the common council for leasing the stalls and standings of the markets, and the docks and slips, of the city.—M. C. C., V. 358. (For lines omitted from the printed record, see ibid., VIII: 154.) His house was again appointed on Dec. 14, for leasing the ferry between New York and Nassau Island.—Ibid., V. 358. This was the King's Arms Tavern, just north of the corner of Broad and Water Sts. See Oct. 3, 1754.

The common council appoints a committee "to agree with fit persons to make a Vault behind the Watch House of this City for the use of the said House," and also to "have a Box or Tourrette made over the said Watch House to hang a Bell therein."—M. C. C., V. 359. On Nov. 8, payment was made "for making a Vault at the House."— Ibid., V. 356. In the printed Minutes of the common council subjects relating to the workhouse and almshouse are included under "Posthouse."—See M. C. C., VIII: 360-85.

Jorin Brinckerhof and others, in a petition to the common council, state that "they have Lately taken into their possession a small parcel of Ground fronting the Battery on Which they have been at a Considerable Expense in Erecting some Small Buildings thereon Since which they have been Informed that the said Ground belongs to this Corporation and therefore pray this Corporation would be favourable pleased to Grant the Same to them under Such Rents Reservations and Restrictions as they shall Seem meet."—M. C. C., V. 360, 442.

One of the city's labourers who is an object of charity is permitted by the common council "to set in any of the Publick Markets of this City and there Expose to Sale by Retail Battle Knives Pins &c. for the period of three months."—M. C. C., V. 360.

On account of the small-pox in New York, Gov. Clinton issues a proclamation to prorogue to April 28 the meeting of the general assembly, which was to convene on March 31.—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 16, 1752. See also Jour. Leg. Coun., 1094; and Oct. 16.

The trustees of the college fund (see Nov. 25, 1751) agree to meet every Thursday afternoon at 6 o'clock in the common council room in the city hall. "And All Persons having Occasion to take up at Interest, any of the said Money, upon Mortgage, are desired to apply to Mr. William Livingston, Attorney at Law, and lay their Title Deed before him; And those who shall be willing to have any upon good personal Security, may apply to him, or any other of the said Trustees, at any Time."—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 25, 1752. See also Aug. 20.

"The once noted Horse and Cart Inn, in the City of New York is revived by Edward Willitt."—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 25, 1752. See June 3, 1751.
Trinity Church (see Feb. 15) leases to Adam van Denberg, for Mar., five years from this date, that part of the "Church Farm" in the 25 West and Out Works north of the "Stockadoes," except what will be needed for building a college and four acres leased to a man named Burnham.—Bogardus v. Trinity Church, Sanford's 24, 1752, and April 18, 1753. Several lots are offered to be let near "Sir Peter Warren's New Wharf," at the Wharf.—N. Y.

Notice is hereby given to the Curious. That at the House of Mr. James Trotter in the Broad-Way, there will be exhibited, to begin on Thursday next, and continue from Day to Day, (the weather being suitable) for two or three Weeks, a Course of Experiments on the newly-discovered Electrical Fire, containing, not only the most curious and important discoveries of that science that have been made and published in Europe, but a considerable Number of new Ones, lately made in Philadelphia; to be accompanied with Methodical Lectures on the Nature and Properties of that wonderful Element."—N. Y. Merc., May 18, 1752.

Joseph Leckler, Jr., informs the public that he sells "at his House in Smith-Street, opposite to Mrs. Carpenter's, at the most reasonable Rates; all sorts of Pewter-ware, by wholesale or retail, and makes Worms for Stills of all Sizes, by a compleat Way at the lower Price Likewise, makes Hogheads, Barrell, or Bottle Crames, either with or without Cocks, and makes the Infusion-Pots, so much approvd of in Cold States, and any uncomon Thing in Pewter, in any Shape or Form as shall be order'd; likewise does all sorts of Lead-work, either House or Ship-work.

He also engraves on Steel, Iron, Gold, Silver, Copper, Brass, Pewter, Ivory, or Turtle-Shell, in a neat Manner, and reasonably."—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 18, 1752. See also Staufffer, Am. Engravers on Copper and Steel, I. 159.

William Bradford, the printer, dies.—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 15, 1752. The newspaper account states that he was "in the 94th year of his Age," also that he came to America "upwards of 70 years ago, and landed at a Place where Philadelphia now stands, before that City was laid out or a House built there." This statement, as well as the one on his tombstone, which gives his age as 92 years, are in error; for he himself is authority for the statement, printed in 1739 in Leed's Almanack, under date of May 20, that "The Printer [was] born the 26th 1669." This would fix his age at 99 years. See also description of pl. 17, I: 259-60.

An advertisement refers to "Elia Degrushe [see Feb. 13], of this city, Rope-maker, at the upper End of the Broadway."—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 25, 1752. Degrushe's ropewalk extended west from Broadway in the block above Water St.—See pl. 54, I: 147. It refers to "the Great House in Wall Street, " to give the address of the governor's house, not to depart from their instructions, which, of late years, "have been dispens'd with and neglected, upon slight & unwarrantable pretences." These instructions are intended "for the support of His Majesty's Prerogative and the protection of his subjects in their just rights, for the establishing and preserving good government in his Colonies."—N. Y. Col. Docs., VI: 760-61. Regarding the violation by the people of New York of the king's "prerogative," see Aug. 6, 1751. See also Andrews, The Colonial Period (1912), 8.

On June 3, the "Great House," the Guard-House, is offered for sale. Enquirers are directed to John Livingston or Dick Lefferts.—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 8, 1752.

Steps are taken to build a new exchange. Regarding the first one, see March 24, 1760. "Several Gentlemen in this City hav- ing Voluntary Subscribed to wards Erecting an Exchange at the Lower End of Broad Street near the Long Bridge," John Watts appears before the common council "with a plan thereof" for their approbation. It is unanimously approved, and "for the Encouragement of so Laudable an Undertaking," it is voted that the mayor issue his warrant to the city treasurer to pay $1000 to the managers of the building to be applied toward that object. A member of the board, John Livingston, is appointed to assist the building managers chosen by the subscribers.—M. C. C., V: 367-68.

- On Aug. 27, 1752, to have a room built, 12 feet high, "over the Exchange," at the city's expense, and to borrow $2000 to purchase materials; a committee being appointed to execute the order.—Ibid., V: 375. On Sept. 1, it was ordered that the west side of the foundation be taken up, "and that the same Be made four feet wide, and laid a large Bell." On Jan. 29, V: 476, it was ordered that "the whole or so much of the foundation on the East side of the Exchange is as is Necessary Be taken up, and that five Arches Be made on each side instead of Six, with two at Each End," and that materials be procured for completing the building.
- The lot, V: 386. On July 13, 1753, it was ordered that the second Store [storey of the Exchange] be not Exceeding fifteen feet in height and not Less than fourteen feet, and that the Room be arched from the height of the Said fourteen feet and that a Capola be Erected on said Exchange under the Direction of the Committee appointed for Compleating the said Exchange."—Ibid., V: 480.

From time to time, from Dec. 14, 1753, to Nov. 1, 1754, payments were made by the city for labour and materials, and to repay the money advanced to prosecute the work.—Ibid., V: 393, 405-6, 407-8, 409, 413, 415, 439, 432, 434, 437, 444, 441, 461, 463, 465, 470, 474. Among the materials and labour provided were rails, window-frames and glass (p. 429); one lot of 4,333 bricks costing $20 (p. 475); another lot of 1,000 bricks costing $315 (p. 456); painting (p. 451), and cattage sand (p. 467). The building had progressed so far toward completion by Feb. 1, 1754 that it was ready for occupancy.—See Jan. 15, 1754. The "Exchange" was "a House belonging to the Corporation of the said City."—Ibid., VI: 342-348. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 924.

The first Moravian church in the city is dedicated. For outline of its history, see June 16, 1761. See also description of "The Shoemakers' Land," Pl. 24-4, I: 223.

Nicholas Duplesis, a surgeon, recently arrived from London, advertises that he may be found "at his House in Crown-Street (Liberty St.), near Pot-Baker's Hill, opposite the House of Mr Jonathan Fish."—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 24, 1752. This "Pot-Baker's Hill" was not the one known as "Crotlos," described in Landmarks Map Ref. Key, III: 967; and Map. Com. Draw. (1756) 469. A few later advertisements serve to show its exact location, and the period when the name was used: The Widow Sommer lived "next door to Mr Laffert's on Pot-Baker's Hill in Smith [William] Street."—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 14, 1753. The address of Cornelius Knop, a painter and glassier, was "on Pot-Baker's Hill, next door to Mr. Dick Leffert's."—Ibid., Nov. 10, 1753. Richard Curson sold wines "on Pot-Baker's Hill, near the New-Dutch Church" (corner Nassau and Liberty Sts.).—Ibid., Jan. 17, 1757. James Watt, a book-binder, was "At the House of William Eustick, on Pot-Baker's Hill, near Joseph Haynes."—Jervis Roesbeck, a tuck-cutter, lived "at the foot of Pot-Baker's Hill in the Fly Market [ Maiden Lane at Pearl St] and the New Dutch Church."—N. Y. Gal., Feb. 4, 1761. Benj. Coates lived on "Pot Baker's Hill in the house opposite the New Dutch Church."—Ibid., May 16, 1763. Sam'l Brown's address was "at the foot of Pot Baker's Hill between the New Dutch Church and Fly Market."—N. Y. Merc., Feb. 4, 1767. The "nailery" of Harry Usticck was "on Pot Baker's Hill in Smith Street."—Rivington's Gazetteer, March 3, 1774. A house and lot offered for sale were "in Smith Street, on Pot-Baker's Hill, near the New-Dutch Church" (the North Dutch Church, before it was called St. Paul's).—Ibid., Jan. 19, 1775. The North Dutch Church, it should be noted, was built in 1765 (p. v, July 2, 1775), on lots inherited under Harpending's will in 1724 (see Jan. 15, 1767). Pot Baker's Hill was therefore the declivity lying eastward from William St., north of Liberty St., and is indicated approximately as Block 68, on Landmark Map, Pl. 174, Vol. III.

The trustees of Georgia surrender their charter, and the colony becomes a royal province.—Windsor, N. & C. Crit. Hist. of Am., V: 389.

St. George's Church (see Jan. 14, 1731) is consecrated. The digonietes of Trinity Church, attended by 58 charity scholars, walk in procession from Trinity vestry-room in the charity schoolhouse to the city hall, where they are joined by the city officials. Then all proceed to the newly-finished chapel, where divine service is performed, "with the utmost Decency and Propriety."—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 6 and 13, 1753.

St. George's Church was built in 1748-52 (p. v), on the northwest corner of Bedaman and Cliff St. The architect was Robert Crommelin, a member of the vestry. The building was 92 feet long, exclusive of chancel, and 72 feet wide. It was faced with hewn stone and had a tiled roof. The steeples, 172 feet high, contained a large bell. On Jan. 3, 1760, it was ordered that the "whole or so much of the foundation on the East side of the Exchange is as is Necessary Be taken up, and that five Arches Be made on each side instead of Six, with two at Each End," and that materials be procured for completing the building.—Ibid., July 13, 1753. It was ordered that the second Store (storey of the Exchange) be not Exceeding July 1752

July 23, 18
TO BE KNOWN AS "ST. GEORGE'S CHAPEL," OR "OLD ST. GEORGE'S JULY 1752.

In 1860, the Church of the Holy Evangelists withdrew, and for a time thereafter the chapel was maintained as the Free Church of St. George's Chapel, but in 1868 it was sold to the firm of Phelps, Dodge & Co., and soon demolished.—Anastice, Hist. of St. George's Church, 227, 271, 61-63, 65, 167-68, 178-79, 192-94, 211-13.; Berrian, An Historic Sketch of Trinity Church, 8, 92. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 935.

An advertisement for sale of the "Still House near the Battery fronting the Guard-House," with all the utensils for making the best and highest kind of spirits, being the property of John Livingston or Direk Leferts.—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 6, 1752.

George Goodwin, "who lately lived wth Mr. Dawson," announces that he has taken stables to keep horses "at the Sign of the Dolphin facing the Common, being the Place where Mr. Dobkins lately used to keep Horses."—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 6, 1752.

The "Sign of the Dolphin" was a tavern which stood near the site of the present county courthouse. See Aug. 28, 1749. Roper Dawson was a patron of the race-track.

The common council appoints "Managers for the Ordering and Counseling to make a Good and Sufficient Stone Drummarch with Ring of Two Foot and a Half high and Two Foot half low Clear at the End of the Meal Market to Carry the Fifth mud and Dirt from thence into the East River."—M. C. C., V: 370. On Aug. 27, 1752, 723:24 was paid for this work.—Ibid, 374.

The common council changes its plan for building a pier at the end of the East River, and now order Laid "instead of Carrying on the peer at the Southernmost End of said Dock Eighteen foot to the Westward and forty foot to the Eastward, that there Be now added forty foot to the Thirty Foot already laid to the East ward."—M. C. C., V: 371.

A committee of the common council appointed "to See the Lands of Adolph Benson and Jacob Dayckman Run out in the Outward" (M. C. C., V: 167), reports that "there is Vacant Lands Between the Bloomenland patent, and Harlem line; also that Benson and Dyckman desire to lease from the city whatever lands belonging to them they have not been appointed to survey the city's lands "Between Harlem patent and Bellows patent."—Ibid., V: 370-71. Unfortunately, at the present time there is no map of the common lands known, earlier than 1785, showing the location of these properties; see, however, description of Pl. 824, B, III: 554-55, for references to the lands of Dyckman and Benson. See also Riker, Hist. of Harlem; and the Mareshalck map of the Harlem line of 1750, referred to under date of Jan. 9, 1750.

Archibald Kennedy receives a grant of "a Small Lot of Ground in the City" where formerly stood the custom-house. His petition reads as follows: "The petition of Archibald Kennedy, Collector of his Majesty's customs in the City of New York, That upon the Surrender of this Country by the Dutch, there was a lot of ground with a store house upon it, belonging to the Dutch West India Company, which was become vested in the crown and being a Proper Situation at that time for a Custom House it was Sett apart for that Purpose, but our Assembly having Neglected to Keep it in repair though often requested by your petitioner as may appear from the several memorials laid before them. The house became ruinous, and was at Last presented by a Grand Jury as a Nuisance & by order of Court demolished; your petition has been obliged ever since to Shift from Place to Place with the books and Papers belonging to the Office to the no small Inconvenience both of the Officers and traders & charge of the Crown for the rent of a house to keep the Custom House in.

"That the said lot of ground is of no use at present to the Crown of any use whatever, as is shown by the following:

"That the granting the said lot of land for such a yearly rent as the grantee can afford and applying that rent yearly to the Lessening the Charge of the rent of a Custom House will be so far useful to the Crown forever.

"That the Petitioner being humble Prays he may have a grant of the said Lott, reserving such rent to be Applied towards the hire of a Custom House as your Excellency & Councill in your Great Wisdom may think the Value of the Thing Will bear & your petition will ever pray &c.

"Arch. Kennedy,

"[Signet]."

This was followed by a warrant from Gov. Clinton to William Smith, the attorney-general; and a plan or survey, dated July 21, 1752, showing the lot between Bridge and Dock Sts., with land of Capt. Hilton on the west and of John Watts on the east. The survey of the land is signed by Francis Mareshalck, city surveyor, and within the four lives of the house plot dated 1660. July 1752.—Land Papers, XIV: 171-72. This is the plot formerly occupied by the pack house of the West India Co., which was erected in 1649 (q.v.). See Castello Plan, II: 263-66; Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 867; Pl. 174, Vol. III. See also June 4, 1735; March 17, 1745; and "Custom House in the Outskirts of the City," Map Ref. Key, III: 744.

Sir Peter Warren died in Dublin. His life and character were reviewed in the New York papers of October and November following. A monument, bearing an inscription extolling his virtues, was erected to his memory in Westminster Abbey. He is there referred to as "Knight of the Bath, Vice-Admiral of the Red Squadron of the British Fleet, and Member of Parliament for the City and Liberty of Westminster."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 16, 23, 30, and Nov. 6, 1752; Wilson, Mem. Hist. N. Y., II: 267.

On May 16, 1753, before a notary in London, Lady Warren, of Cavendish Square, "widow, relieff and acting executor," made Sir Henry Frankland, Charles Athorp, and Thomas Hancock of Boston her attorneys to collect, settle and adjust with the debtors of the late Sir Peter Warren in Massachusetts, "subject to follow in all things the orders and directions from James De Laney, Peter De Laney, Oliver De Laney, and John Watts of New York." On Dec. 26, 1753, he now ordered his executors to "instead of Carrying on the peer at the Southernmost End of said Dock Eighteen foot to the Westward and forty foot to the Eastward, that there Be now added forty foot to the Thirty Foot already laid to the East ward."—M. C. C., V: 371.

The farm property owned by Sir Peter Warren in New York later became the residence of Abraham van Ness.—Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 955; Man. Com. Coun. (1874), 228. See also A. Pl. c-b, Vol. III.

The common council directs that a common road be laid out for Elbert Herring (Haring), "for him to go to his Land, Lying in the neighborhood of his Dwelling, to the River" (M. C. C., V: 372. The road, when laid out, was Amity Lane, running from Broadway to Macdougal Street.—See Pl. 175, Vol. I; and Pl. 175, Vol. III (reference nos. 535-41). See also Holmes' Map of the Haring Farm. Amity Lane is now obsolete; it should not be confused with Amity Street (now West Third Street).

Judging from the date and number of the earliest issue located (that of Aug. 31, 1752), the first issue of Hugh Gaine's weekly, The New-York Mercury, was published on this day, and bears this date. Writing 13 years later, Gaine stated, however, that Aug. 8, 1742, was "the Day this Mercury was first published here." (N. Y. Merc., Oct. 28, 1766.)—Early Newspapers, III: 422, Ford, in his annotation of the Jour. of Hugh Gaine, I: 4-9, gives an account of the printer's various offices, and says that the fifth number indicates that the paper was first printed "on Hunter's Kill, next Door to the Printer, and not in the City," to the 8th of July, 1753.

"The Laws of the Province of New-York, being now finished, are ready to be deliver'd to the Subscribers, &c."—N. Y. PostBoy, Aug. 10, 1752. These were the compilation made by Livington and Smith (see Nov. 24, 1750). On June 1, 1753, the general assembly, in a communication to the governor, refers to this publication as "not in every Part correct; nor proposed from the Lords Justices; but they are nevertheless "persuaded" it "will not be disapproved, when properly repre sented to our most gracious Sovereign."—Assembly Jour., II: 336. This set of laws comprises those in force at this time, which have been enacted New York until 1771; inclusive.—Col. Laws N. Y., I: v ("Explanatory Note"). The same compilers published another collection in 1762 (q.v.).
“There is also a Subscription on Foot for erecting a little College in this Province; But I think the Multiplication of such small Seminaries, tho’ it may a little increase Knowledge, will not advance Learning to any remarkable Pitch; as the Endowments must be small, and their Libraries ill-stocked, to what those of our general College or University might be.” — Macparran, America Dissertiad (Dublin, 1753), 58. See also Nov. 21, 1754; March 23, 1752.

The common council appoints a committee “to View the Long Bridge at the Lower End of Broad Street,” and estimate the cost of up-keep for five years.—M. C. G., V. 374.

“New Style begins to take Place in all the English Dominions, when that Day, which would have been the 3d, must be reckoned the 14th of September, and from thence forward, our Reckonings of Time will be agreeable to that of most modern Nations.” — N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 31, 1752. More correctly speaking, the New Style began on Jan. 1, 1752. This was in conformity with the act of parliament passed for the purpose March 18, 1751 (p. 6). The civil year (as distinguished from the solar year), according to the ancient Roman method, began with March 25; it was moved to January 1 by the Gregorian system (or New Style). When, therefore, this system was adopted, Jan. 1, 1752 became the beginning of the year 1752 in New York. For a clear and concise explanation of the Old Style (or Julian Calendar) and the New Style (or Gregorian Calendar), historically considered, see Lardner’s Cyclopaedia (1853); for a more technical explanation, see Encyc. Britannica, title “Calendar.” See also 1752, Addenda.

When the Gregorian Calendar was put into effect by Great Britain and her colonies, 11 days were dropped without being reckoned in the calendar; the holders of bills, promissory notes, etc. were obliged to abide by this arrangement, and landlords were obliged to make the same allowance to their tenants.—Diary, Feb. 16, 1757.

As the calendar is reckoned by the common council, this day is Tuesday. The last meeting, one week ago, was held on Tues.-Day, Sept. 1. The New Style is therefore now in operation, as, by the Old Style, the 19th would fall on a Saturday; 11 days have therefore been dropped.—M. C. G., V. 375, 376. At the next meeting, Friday, Sept. 20, the Minutes themselves state that fact is “Nowstile.”—Ibid., V. 378.

John Watson and Hannah Jones now keep the ferry-house on Staten Island, where Thomas Lepper lately lived. Watson has taken a lease of this ferry for a term of years.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 25, 1752.

A proclamation is issued proroguing the general assembly to Oct. 23, then to meet at the house of Jacob Dyckman, near Harlem, in the Out Ward.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 601; Jour. Leg. Coun., II: 1998.

Oct. 17.—A Prisoner arrived here Capt. Pickeman from Holland, with 2 about 250 Palatines on board.”—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 2, 1752. The same issue of the paper contains an advertisement of “A Parcel of healthy Palatine Servants, Men, Women and Children, among which are several Tradesmen,” to be disposed of on “board the Snow Johannes, Capt. Pickeman;” or by application to Richard Tole, near the Old Slip Market.

Another ship-load of 200 Palatines arrives; 20 died on the voyage.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 16, 1752.

“Tis said to be very few families in New York that have not been visited by the small-pox, so that it is believed the city will soon be clear of the epidemic.”—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 16, 1752. See also March 14, 1753, and May 30, 1753.

The anonymous author (later disclosed as William Smith—see March 2, 1753) of the “Pastoral” on the death of Sir Peter Warren published in the Post-Boy of this date announces in the same issue that to-morrow will be published and sold, at the “New Printing-Office in Beaver-Street,” at the price of one shilling, “Serious Thoughts on Education, with Reasons for erecting a College in this Island, and founding the same in New York.” To which is added, a Scheme for employing Masters and Teachers in the mean Time; and also for raising and endowing an Edifice in an easy Manner. The whole concluding with a Poem, being a serious Address to the House of Representatives.”—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 23, 1752. Evans makes no mention of this work.

The publication of this essay called forth an appreciative Oct. effusion in the next issue (Oct. 30) of the same paper, and a “Louder of Merit.” He says in part: “To set apart the Interest of the Money already raised, as a Salary for Masters or Teachers, and the raising the Edifice by an easy Lottery, is certainly the best Method; for to set about building, while our Youth are neglected in the mean Time, would be very preposterous; but by this Scheme both may be done at the same Time; and if two Masters are not found sufficient, there are many Gentlemen in New York who, I hear, would willingly subscribe to encourage one or two more, till a greater Sum shall be raised and added to the present Capital (514 l.) for that End. In a Word, I am now in full Hope this Assembly will at last do something to the Purpose in such a needful Work, and give that Attention which is due to such a pith-black-spirited Essay as that of which I now speak.”—Ibid., Oct. 30, 1752.

Other comments of the same nature, signed “Phil-o-patria” (very probably written by William Smith himself, or possibly William Livingstone; cf. March 15, 1756), appeared in ibid., Nov. 6 (Supp.), 1752. This writer suggests “… that it should first set out under the Presidency of a grave and learned Provost (if Peace to give the Name) or any other Name which the Charter may give to the Head of the College; and therefore it seems as the first Step must be, to obtain of his Excellency the Governor a proper Charter, well devised, to vest in proper Persons the several Powers and Authorities necessary to give Dignity to the College, and Privileges to the Members of it. Suppose the Corporation of any City in America, the City of New-York; the Provost for the Time being, always to be one. … But at present it seems very certain, that no Place is so proper as the City, for beginning Collegiate Instruction, (I mean after the Small-Pox is out).”

1st, The City-Hall may furnish Room for some Years. 2d, The City may furnish a tolerable Good Library, to serve until a better may be expected from charitable Donations; for which Application may be made with Prospect of good Success, after a Charter is obtained for a Corporation. 3d, If the Gentlemen of the Church think fit, the Provost of the College may serve as a Minister for their new Church, and their Contribution for that service, enable him to subsist honourably upon a less Salary from the College; which sort of Oconomy will be very convenient, especially at first setting out; and perhaps Dr. Johnson, of Stratford (see April 15, 1747), may give Satisfaction to both, if he can be prevailed upon to accept it.”—See, further, March 2, 1753. Johnson was in due time appointed.—See Nov. 22, 1753.

Gov. Clinton recommends William Smith to the lords of trade for appointment to the place in the council made vacant by the death of Sir Peter Warren. Smith had been serving as attorney-general by Clinton’s appointment after the death of the former attorney-general (cf. June 28, 1749), but that place had already been “pre-engaged” by William Kenne, who was appointed attorney-general in England on Nov. 21, 1751. Kenne arrived in New York with his family on Nov. 4, 1752.—N. Y. Col. Docs., VI: 766, citing Commissions, 31, and N. Y. Gist.

“Whereas there has been a Stage carried on for one whole Year past, by Boats and Wagons, from New-York to Philadelphia, by way of Amboy and Bordentown, and by Experience, been found to answer the End it was designed for, as much as we could expect in so short a Time” (b) There is to the Printing, that Daniel O’Brien, being provided with a Boat exceedingly well fitted, with a very handsome Cabin, … propose to give his Attention at the late Col. Moore’s Wharf, every Wednesday and Saturday, (and may be spoken with at the House of Scutch Joiney) and next Day, Wind and Weather permitting, to proceed for Amboy Ferry, to John Chuck’s, where a Wagon kept by John Richards, will be ready to receive either Goods or Passengers, and proceed with them to Bordentown’s Town, where a Stage Boat will be ready to carry them to Philadelphia; and the same Method will be followed from the Crooked-Bill’s Wharf at Philadelphia, to Bordentown’s Town, and shall proceed Load or no Load twice a Week, by which Means Passengers or Goods may never be detained on the Road. They expect to give better Satisfaction this Year, than last, by Reason they are more acquainted with the Nature of the Business, and have more convenient Boats, Wagons, and Stages, and will endeavour to use People in the best Manner thereto are capable of,

Christopher Blondel, the store-keeper of the fort, petitions for a lease of a certain lot and tenement situated on the Hudson River to the north-westward of the north-west corner of Fort George, on the south side of the street (now Battery Pl.) leading westward to the Hudson River between the Bowling Green and the fort. It was formerly granted by Gov. Hunter to Thomas Elde (armourer of the fort), who has used it for "about 40 years, and no repairs having ever been made, the house is become ruinous and a sort of Pest House for the sole of the city as well as a nuisance both to the owners and the citizenry."—Land Papers, XV: 25 (sec. of state's office, Albany). On Nov. 16, the council granted it for 99 years at 26. 6d. quit-rent, and an order was issued on Nov. 23 for a lease.—Ibid., XV: 29. The building is seen in Pl. 44, and described at pp. 347-48, Vol. I. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 945 (house of Thos. Coker). For earlier references, see Dec. 8, 1657; May 2, 1659.

The governor's council at New York receives the act of parliament relating to the correction of the calendar, and its publication is ordered.—Col. Coun. Min., 386. This was doubtless "An act to amend an act made in the last session of parliament..." [see March 18, 1751] (intituled An Act for regulating the commencement of the year, and for correcting the calendar now in use)." This act of amendment was the act of 25 Geo. II, Chap. 30; Pickering, Statutes at Large (1765), XXII: 368.

For "stealing Linnen out a Washing-Tub," a man named William Bishop is "whipp'd at the Carr's Tail, from the City-Hall, thro' Wall-Street, Hanover-Square, and Broadway-St., up to the Hall again: After which he was to depart the City in 48 Hours, and never to be seen here again under very severe Penalties."—N. The first number of The Independent Reflector, a weekly paper published by James Parker, appears. It might be classed as a magazine, the first one published in New York. Although it bore the appearance of a newspaper, and concerned itself with the topics of the day, it consisted of miscellaneous essays and letters, mainly of a political and religious nature. William Livingston used this weekly to express the views of Dissenters on the relations between Church and State, and to voice opposition to the control of King's College by the Anglicans (see March 22, 1753).—Sedgewick, Life of William Livingston; Corwin, Manual of Reformed Church, Chap. 7. With its 52d number, dated Nov. 22, 1755, the paper was suppressed by "exciting fears in the ministers of Dissenters..."—Rec., V: 1460-60. Livingston then brought out a title-page and preface of 31 pages, dated Jan. 19, 1753 (error for 1752), etc.

William Wood [see Jan. 27], being Albany Post for this Season, proposes, to set out for the first Time, on Monday, next, Letters may be left for him, at Mr. Benjamin Faint's, at the Old Slip, or at his own House, on Thurman's Dock at the North-River.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 4, 1752.

A contributor to the Reflector complains of the numerous dogs in New York. He says, in part: "It appears, Sir, from the most accurate Calculation, that we have in this City, at least a Thousand Dogs; I do not mean of the human kind..." These Cerises are a perfect Nuisance to the Inhabitants, and with respect to Forty Nine in Fifty, answer not one valuable purpose in Life. They "consume as much equitable Provision, as would suffice Five Hundred Men." The writer wants to secure a "Law of the Corporation, whereby it may speedily be Witnesses of their perpetual Exile."—Independent Reflector, Jan. 18, 1753.
Trinity vestry orders "That Mr [William] Tuckey have the use of the Charity School Room and also of the Ferry Room two nights in the Week for the Teaching of his Singing Scholars, till further Orders."—Trin. Min. (M.S.).

William Livingston (see Nov. 25, 1751) publishes in his Independent Reflector "Remarks on our intended College." The subject is continued in the Reflector for April 5, 12, 19, and 26. He announces the principle that: "The true end of Education, is to qualify Men for the different Employments of Life, ... to improve their Hearts and Understandings, to infuse a Public Spirit and Love of their Country; to inspire them with the Principles of Honour and Probity; with a fervent zeal for Liberty, and a passive Benevolence for the Soul of Mankind, in a Word, to make them the more extensively serviceable to the Common-Wealth ...." (pp. 67-68). He pleads for freedom of thought, a non-parochial college; although he would always, "for political Reasons, exclude Papists from the common and equal Benefits of Society" (p. 74). He opposes a college founded on a royal grant, on account of the danger of the introduction of arbitrary power. He thinks "a Charter College will prove ineffectual to answer the true End of the Encouragement of Learning." (pp. 73-76).

On the other hand, he says, "I would propose, that the College be founded and incorporated by Act of Assembly, and that not only because it ought to be under the Inspection of the civil Authority; but also, because such a Constitution will be more permanent, better endowed, less liable to Abuse, and more capable of answering its true end, "which" is to be conceived, as belonging to the People of this Province, for advancing their private and public Happiness; of which the Legislature are the lawful Guardians" (pp. 79-80).

He urges several arguments in favour of such incorporation (pp. 80-82); and points out eleven features which he deems necessary or desirable to embody in the incorporating act. For example, "that all the Trustees be nominated, appointed, and incorporated by the Act," and that vacancies be supplied "by Legislative Act;" that they hold office "only at the good Pleasure of the Governor, Council and General Assembly; And that no Person of any Protestant Denomination be, on Account of his religious Persuasion, disqualified for sustaining any Office in the College." Secondly, "That the President of the College be elected and deprived [discharged] by a Majority of the Trustees ...." who, in turn, report to the assembly. By this means, "the President, who will have the supreme Superintendancy of the Education of our Youth, will be kept in a continual and ultimate Dependence upon the Public." His fifth proposal for the articles of incorporation is "that no religious Profession in particular be established in the College; but that all Officers and Scholars be at perfect Liberty to attend any Protestant Church at their Pleasure." Likewise, his seventh proposal is "That Divinity be no Part of the public Exercises of the College, that it be not the Subject of an separate Establishment: That the Corporation be inhibited from electing a Divinity Professor; and that the Degrees be conferred, be only in the Arts, Physic, and the Civil Law" (pp. 83-86). He develops further, in his last paper, the idea of making the college non-sectarian, but "founded on a free and catholic Bottom." He asserts that "an equal Tolerat ion of Conscience, is justly deemed the Basis of the public Liberty of this Country" (p. 90). See also Hist. of Columbia Univ. (1902), 5-6; and Feb. 29, 1754.

These doctrines were embodied in an assembly bill, written by Livingston the next year, after a charter had been granted, giving the college the use of the Episcopal ritual, etc.—See Nov. 14, and 6, 1754.

For "removing a Shift the Property of one of her Neighbours," one Mary Wilson is "oblig'd to hugg the Post opposite the City-Hall, when she received the Discipline of Thirty One" (Jaske).—N. Y. Post-Bew, March 28, 1755.

Inhabitants of the South Ward petition the common council for the establishment of a ferry "from this City to Harsimus" (Horsimus Island, of which Paulus Hook is a projection; see Pl. 58, Vol. 1), with a landing-place "at or near the West end of Pearl Street." Consideration was delayed, and that, "as it has not been thought expedient to have been taken."—M. C. C., VI: 395. See Feb. 23. The first ferry established across the North River—a private enterprise, is revealed by an advertisement in the Post-Bew, June 25, 1764 (p. 2).

Courses of study and buildings are described in detail. His work is 1735 entitled: A General Idea of the College of Mirrors; with a Sketch of the Methods of teaching Science and Religion, in the several Classes:
and Some Account of six Rise, Establishment and Buildings. Address'd more immediately to the Consideration of the Trustees nominated, by the Legislature, to receive Proposals, &c. relating to the Establish-manship of New-Park. It contains an "Advertisement" stating, in part: "The following Sheets were planc'd at the same Time with the Pamphlet on the Situation, 1753]; and design'd to follow it whenever the Public, by a more property, as being more profitable and County of New York,? also the king's commission under the great seal of the province for these offices during good behaviour. He succeeds John Chambers, resigned. He is sworn in, and Lambert Moore is sworn in as his deputy. The common council orders that Chambers deliver to Van Cortlandt the charters, city seal, the public records, seal of the mayor's court, and all papers belonging to the corporation, to be kept by him.—M. G. C., VI: 202–5. Van Cortlandt had been deputy to Chambers.—Ibid.,

A letter from the Earl of Halifax (see May 28, 1754), written to Cadwallader Colden from "Grovenor Square" (London), and sent by way of Halifax, reads in part as follows: "I am very sensitive of your Abilities, and the part you have acted in support of Majesty, which has been made a point to maintain and preserve them; but as the Affairs of the Government of New-York have long been in a state of disorder and distraction before I was in a Situation to apply any remedy to them, I must be excuse enter unneccessarily into so disagreeable a Detail, and recourse to the Suffering of the Inhabitants under your care, and variety of Measures pursued thro' the Course of such unhappy Divisions.

"This however it might now become my indispensable duty May 20, to do, but that his Majesty has render'd it needless by having named Sir Dauvers Osborn as a Successor to Mr. Clinton in his Government, and I hope he will be in readiness to set sail for New-York in about six or seven weeks time at latest; so that Mrs. Clinton may return home before the winter season. The idea of his going to his State of Health, both he and his Friends apprehend may prove dangerous consequence to him.

"The same Zeal and Loyalty which you have hitherto shewn in the support of His Majesty's Rights, I flatter myself you will continue to exert; and I hope that all such as have a true regard of the people in general, the Province will unite in their Endeavours to support it's Constitution, which may as effectually be destroyed by unjust attacks on the Prerogative of the Crown on the one Hand, as on the Rights and Liberties of the People on the other.
My Earment wish is that even the Remembrance of former Accomplis-ties may no longer remain, and that the only Contention for the future may be who shall most effectually promote the welfare, Peace, and Tranquility of the Province."—From the original Andrew Ramsey, "late of Long Island Ferry" (the ancestor of which he had purchased from Daniel Bloom in July, 1770), has "revised" the "Trenton Ferry," where "all Travellers [between New York and Philadelphia], who are pleased to put up at his House, may depend on having good Entertainment for themsehers and Horses." He is "providing a Stage Wagon to go from Philadelphia to Trenton, and a Stage coach to go from Philadelphia to Trenton." Dates of departure, etc. are given.—N. Y. Post-Boy,

The assembly meets at the house of Benjamin Hinckman in 30 Jamaica, L. I. (the court-house of the town being "an inconvenient Place to sit in"), and responds to a summons to meet the governor and council in joint session "in the Council-Chamber, at the House of the Widow Stillwell," where the governor delivers a message. The location, he explains, is "free from the Infection of the Small-Pox," whereas the city of New York, while almost free of it, might cause uneasiness.—Assem. Jour., II: 337. Clinton recommends that they pass the complete and well digested body of new laws ordered by the king on April 16, 1752 (p.v.).

He also calls attention to the ruinous condition of frontier forts; the intrusion of others upon the lands of this province, etc.

He says further: "The Resolution you made at the Close of the last Session [see Nov. 25, 1751], for establishing a Seminary for the Education of Youth within this Colony, is laudable and worthy your diligent Prosecution, and most serious Attention."—Jour.
Leg. Coun., 1110.

The Post-Boy's account refers to this tavern as "the house of George Burns... near the 'Cherry.'"

An account of William Hallam's recent coming to New York with his players is thus given in the Mercury, as an introduction or appeal to the public:

"The Case of the London Company of Comedians, lately arrived from Virginia, humbly submitted to the Consideration of the Public; whose Servants they are, and whose Protection they intreat."

"As our Expedition to New York seems likely to be attended with a very fatal Consequence, and our selves haply censur'd for undertaking it, without Assurance of Success; we beg leave, humbly to lay a true State of our Case before the worthy Inhabitants of this City; if possible, endeavour to remove those great Obstacles which at present lie before us, and give very sufficient Reasons for our appearance in this part of the World, where we all had the most sanguine Hopes of meeting a very different Reception; little imagining, that in a City, to all Appearance so liberal, that the Muse would be banished the Walls of the immortal Shakespeare, and others of the greatest Geniuses England ever produc'd, deny'Admissance among them, and the instructive and elegant Entertainment of the Stage utterly protested against: When, without Boasting, we may venture to affirm, That we are capable of supporting its Dignity with proper Decorum and Regularity."

In the Infancy of this Scheme, it was proposed to Mr. William Hallam, now of London, to collect a Company of Comedians, and send them to New York, and the other Colonies of America. Accordingly he assembled a company at a room in Wapping, bought Scenes, Cloathes, People, &c. &c. And in October 1750, sent over to this Place, Mr. Robert Upton, in order to obtain Permission to perform, erect a Building, and settle every Thing against our Arrival; for which Service, Mr. Hallam advanc'd no inconsiderable Sum. But Mr. Upton on his Arrival found here that Serv of Pretender, with whom he joined, and unhappily for us, quite neglected the Business he was sent about from England; we never heard from him after."

"Being thus deceived by him the Company was at a Stand, till April 1752, when by the Persuasion of several gentlemen in London, and Virginia, we were under the advice of Mr. William Lee [sic], and arrived after a very expensive and tiresome Voyage, at York River [Va.], on the 25th of June following: Where we obtained Leave of his Excellency the Governor, and performed with universal Applause, and met with the greatest Encouragement; for which we are bound by the strongest Obligations, to acknowledge the many and repeated Instances of their Spirit and Generosity. We were there eleven Months before we thought of removing; and then asking advice, we were again persuaded to come to New York, by several Gentlemen, whose Names we can mention, but do not think proper to publish. They told us, that we should not fail of a genial and favourable Reception; that the Inhabitants were generous and polite, naturally fond of Diversions rational, particularly those of the Theatre: Nay, they even told us, there was a very fine Play-house Building, and that we were really expected. This was Encouragement sufficient for us, as we thought, and we came firmly assured of Success; but how far our Expectations are answered, we shall leave to the Candid to determine, and only beg leave to add, That as we are People of no Estates, it cannot be supposed that we have a Fund sufficient to bear up against such unexpect'd Repulses. A Sea Journey by Sea and Land is Fifty Hundred Miles, is not undertaken without Money. Therefore, if the worthy Magistrates would consider this in our Favour, that it must rather turn out a publick Advantage and Pleasure, than a private Injury; They would, we make no Doubt, grant Permission, and give us an Opportunity to convince them, we were not cast in the same Mould with our Theatrical Predecessors; or that in private Life or..."
THE INOCOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

Occupation, we have the Affinity to them."—N. Y. Merc., July 2, 1753.

For the first performance in New York by the Hallam and 2 their company, see Sept. 17.

"William Hallam, the originator of this company, had been the manager of the theatre in Goodman's Fields, London...

"The company was formed on the sharing plan, and consisted of twelve adult individuals and the three children of Lewis Hallam. The shares were—each adult performer being entitled to one, and the manager one in addition for his services in that capacity, and one for his three children, and each shareholder being entitled to a benefit night. Four shares were assigned to the property, from which the profits of the speculation were to be realized by the originator and his brother, who were made equal partners in the scheme. The business is supposed to have resulted very favorably for, in 1754, William Hallam arrived from England, where he soon returned with his proportion of the profits and the value of his two shares, which he sold to his brother Lewis for a handsome premium."—Ireland, Rec. of the N. T.: Stage, I: 16-17.

"By a person lately arrived in this Town, Painting upon Glass, (commonly call'd burning upon Glass) is performed in a neat and curious Manner so as to never change its Colour: Perspective Views neatly colour'd for the Camera Obscura. N. B. Young gentlemen and Ladies are instructed in either of the above,

By the same Person, Land survey'd, Designs for Buildings, Plans and Maps neatly drawn. Enquire at Mr. John Ditcher's, Tallow Chandler and Soap-Boller in the Strot."—N. Y. Post-Buy, July 9, 1753.

"Charles Love, Musician, from London, at his lodgings... in the first lane from the Bowling-Green, that leads to the North-River, proposes teaching gentlemen musick on the following instrucments, viz. Violin, Flageolet, German and Common Flutes, Bassoon, French Horn, Tenor, and Bass Violin, if desired."—N. Y. Merc., July 2, 1753.

On account of the rupture in the allegiance of the Mohawks (see June 11), the council and assembly, in a representation to Clinton, recommender of the Collector and Auditor, on the 2d of July, ordered the Indians who arrived at Onondaga, to remove their unneatness, to bury the hatchet, and to preserve the friendship of those nations.—Jour. Leg. Coun., II: 1122.

The general assembly finds it necessary to deny a rumour that,
"in Case the Money received by Lottery, for erecting a College within this Colony, should prove insufficient for that Purpose, the General Assembly intend to supply the Deficiency by a Tax on the People;"
and a rumour that the people are to be taxed for the maintenance of the college, and that 5000 is to be appropriated out of the excise fund for establishing the college. All these reports are declared to be "groundless, false and malicious."—Assembly Jour., II: 330. See July 4.

The province authorizes the following appropriation: £735 for "repairing Copsey battery [see earlier appropriation, Nov. 7, 1752; see also April 9, 1754 and Several other Repairs Necessary for the Collect and the New York and New Jersey Governors House in the

An act is passed for raising £1,125 by public lottery "for a further provision towards founding a College for the advancement of Learning within this Colony." Peter van Brugh Livingston and Jacques Roosevelt are appointed managers, their duties are de-defined, and the details of the operation of the lottery are prescribed.
The terms are similar to those enacted for the earlier college lotteries (see Dec. 6, 1746; April 9, 1748)—Col. Laws N. T., III:
S99. See July 23.

An act is passed "further to continue the Duty of Excise and the Currency of the Bills of Credit emitted thereon for the purposes in the former Act and herein Mentioned." The title does not reveal the chief purpose of the act, which is to appropriate prov-inancial funds for the benefit of the college. The act recites the passage of an act "for laying an Excise upon all Strong Liquor in that quantity for the term of 14 years ending Nov. 1, 1774, which by several subsequent acts was prolonged to the year 1757.
Then it states that "it has been the Intention of the Legislature for Several Years Past to Establish a Seminary within this Colony for the Education of Youth in the Liberal Arts and Sciences And as presented of other means can be had, by a further Proceeding of the Aforesaid Act and the Bills of Credit Issued thereupon and his Excellency the Governor having been pleased to approve of the Intentions of the General Assembly to proceed upon that good design at this Session as Signified by their Votes at their last Meeting," it is enacted that "the before Mentioned Act" shall continue from Nov. 1, 1753, to Nov. 1, 1767.

And be it further enacted by the said Authority Provided That the Treasurer of this Colony for the time being is hereby Enabled and Directed to Pay into the Trustees Mentioned and appointed ...[by the act of Nov. 25, 1751, 9:1 out of the Money's arising by the Duty of Excise the Annual Sum of Five Hundred Pounds for and during the Term of Seven Years to Commissioner from and After the first Day of January next now ensuing to be by them apportioned and distributed in Salaries for the Chief Master or head of the Seminary by whatever denomination he may be hereafter Called and for Such and so many other Masters and Officers uses and Purposes Concerning the Endowment of the said Seminary as the Said Trustees shall from time to time in their discretion think Needful, Allways Provided that the whole Charge and Expense of the Same do not exceed the Above Sum."

The trustees are empowered "to Appoint and Appoint the Quantum of the Salary's of the Several Masters and officers of the Seminary hereby intended to be Established and to direct the Payment hereof by Quarterly or half Yearly Payments as they in their discretion Shall think Most fitting And Convenient."

Also, the trustees "Shall Ascertain the Rates which each Student or Scholar shall Annually Pay for his or their Education at the said Seminary they shall with the Governor or Commander in Chief for the time being the Council or the General Assembly when by them or any of them thereunto Required And which Said Sums shall be Applied to and for Such use or uses as shall be directed by Act or Acts hereafter to be passed."

Finally, this act disposes of "all the Residue of the Money arising by the Said Duty of Excise" by applying it toward Cancelling the Bills of Credit Issued from the Said Fund," unless the bills be all cancelled by this fund before 1767, in which case the residue shall remain in the treasury.—Col. Laws N. T., III: 908-10.

Concerning the latter—N. Y. Post-Buy, July 16, and 23, 1753. In 1752 the island became a quarantine station.—See May 3, 1753. It was owned during this period by Archibald Kennedy.

Letters received from London, dated April 30 and May 12, mention the appointment of "Sir D'Anvers Osborn, Kt. to the Government of the two Provinces of New-York and New Jersey," and state that it is to be embraced in the Act, that it will be within six weeks from the latter date.—N. Y. Post-Buy, July 16, and 23, 1753.

Water, in the out-ward of this city, on monday the 18th ult. a grey horse; supposed to be stolen...—N. Y. Merc., July 16, 1753. Sullivan's tavern may be identical with the later "Plow and Harrow."—See Jan. 3, 1762.

Of twenty-two "Ladies of Pleasure, who were taken out of several Houses of ill Repute in this City," and committed to the workhouse, five, who can give "but a poor Account of themselves," being condemned "to receive 12 New Shillings and 100 Blanks for the Post." The sentence is "performed accordingly, before a vast Number of Spectators, with Orders to depart the Town in 48 hours after, under Pain of Imprisonment."—N. Y. Merc., July 23, 1753.

The draft of a commission is approved by the king in council for Sir Danvers Osborn to be governor of New York, and it is ordered that a warrant issue to pass it under the great seal.— N. Y. Col. Docs., VI: 791-92. It was ordered, Aug. 10, that his instructions be prepared.—Ibid., VI: 793-94.

The new lottery to raise money for the college (see July 4) is described. It was opened Aug. 11, to be sold at 30 shillings each, 1,014 of them "to be fortunate." There are 3,066 blanks.

The capital prize is £50; 15 per cent. is to be deducted from the prizes to cover expenses. Receipts from sales will amount to

By a Law passed the last Session, a Publick Lottery is directed, for a further Provision towards Founding a College for the Advancement of Learning within this Colony, to consist of 8000 Tickets, at 30 s. each, 1304 of which to be fortunate.

£5,500. Drawings are to commence at the city hall the first Tuesday in November, "or sooner if full" (that is, if all tickets are sold).

The Managers would acquaint the Publick, that upwards of One Thousand Tickets are already engaged to the Hand in Hand and American Fire Companies in this City, to whom the Tickets are already delivered. N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 23. The results of the drawings were published in ibid., Nov. 19. Another lottery for the same object was soon on foot.—See Dec. 12.

25 The attorney and solicitor-general of England report, in answer to queries, that the commission of James De Lanecy, as chief-justice of the province of New York, can only be revoked by Congress, and not by General Court.—N. Y. Col. Diet., Aug. 7, 1752. After being lieutenant-governor he returned to the office of chief-justice (Jan. 1, 1756).—Ibid., VII: 32.

A third member of the supreme court is added by the appointment of Daniel Hornsmanden to that office by the governor, with the advice and consent of the council.—Col. Gazz. Men., 389; N. Y. Merc., Aug. 6, 1753.

25 The Post Office, Will be removed on Thursday next [Aug. 2] to the house of Mr. Alexander Colden, opposite to the Bowling Green, in the Broad-Way, where the Rev’d Mr. Pemberton lately lived; where Letters will be received and delivered out every Day, at Eight in the Morning till Twelve at Noon, and from Two in the Afternoon till Four, except on Post Nights, when Attendance will be given till Ten of the Clock at Night: And all Letters going to Town that remain uncalled for on Post Nights, will, on Monday Morning, be sent out by a Penny Post provided for that Purpose.

N. B. No Credit for the future will be given for Postage of Letters.—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 30, 1753; see also N. Y. Col. Diet., VII: 799.

26 As a gentleman in London writes to a friend in New York: "Sir Dauvers Osborne, who is appointed your Governor, sets out, in a day or two, for Portsmouth, to embark on board his Majesty’s Ship the Arundel, ..."—N. Y. Merc., Oct. 1, 1753. See Aug. 13.

3 Margaret St. Maurric, Capmaker, from London, at the printing office opposite the Old-Slip-Market, makes and sells all sorts of men and women’s velvet riding caps, men’s morning caps, bath bonnets, and hats for ladies, bags and roses for gentlemen’s wigs, pillarians and hoods, hats and caps for children, all in the newest manner and newest fashions. She grants stockings in the newest manner, and has an assortment of leather caps ready made."—N. Y. Merc., Aug. 6, 1753.

3 A dwelling-house at the corner of the Old Slip belonging to the estate of Elizabeth Klock, and in possession of Martin Cregier, tavernkeeper, is offered for sale at public vendue.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 12, 1753. Mr. Matthew (or Matthias) Cregier had a tavern "on the Dock," probably in this same house.—N. Y. Gaz., July 25–Aug. 2, 1736. John Cregier, later proprietor of the "Cross Keys" on the Kingsbridge Road, was occupying the "corner-house at the Old Slip" in 1745.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 12, 1753. Still earlier in the city’s history, Martin Cregier, perhaps the father of John and Martin, kept tavern at the present No. 3 Broadway. See 1679. For a view of the Klock house at the Old Slip as it appeared in 1718–9, see PL 25, Vol. I, and description, p. 247. For John Cregier’s tavern, see 1756.

1 Archibald Kennedy, collector of customs, seizes the colony’s gunpowder stored in the magazine of the city, on the pretense that it was unlawfully imported.—Assemb. Four., II: 565–64. For the action of the colony in this matter, see Dec. 4.

1 The instructions to Sir Dauvers Osborne, of this date, refer to the "Disputes and Animosities" in the province of New York, as a result of which the course of justice has been obstructed, and the royal prerogative "invaded in a most unwarrantable and illegal Manner." The new governor is instructed to inform both the council and the assembly of the king’s displeasure over “their Neglect of, and the Contempt they have shewn to, our royal Commission, Instructions, and Laws" by passing Laws of so extraordinary a Nature, and by such their unwarrantable Proceedings; and that we do strictly charge and enjoin them for the future, to pay to our said Commission and Instructions, due Obedience. The governor is forbidden to receive any gift or present from the assembly. His salary is fixed at £4,000, but the assembly may settle an annual sum upon him, in addition, provided the same be done by the first Assembly, and within a Year" after his arrival in the province. This additional allowance is permitted because it has been represented to the king that £1,000 per annum is not sufficient "for the Support of our Governor, and the Dignity of our Government." N. Y. Col. Diet., VI: 947–50, 960. In a message to Lieut.-Gov. De Lanecy, the assembly denied its position.—See Nov. 6.

3 "This is to inform the Publick, That there is just arrived in this City, and to be seen at a new House built for that Purpose, in Mr. Adam Van Denberg’s Garden, This Evening being Monday, the 13th Instant, The Surprising Performances of the celebrated Antonio Joseph Dugue ... On a Slack Wire scarcely perceivable, with and without a Extremity." Parade follows.—N. Y. Merc., Aug. 13, 1753. Van Denberg’s old garden and tavern were on Trinity Church property at Broadway and Vesey St. Van Denberg had also acquired the pleasure resort on the North River called the Old Bowling Green (see Feb. 15, 1752), but the performance now advertised was undoubtedly held in a new building on Broadway where, on Dec. 29, 1753 (p. 96), Richard Breckell, a clockmaker, advertised a puppet show.

A ship-load of 500 Palatines has recently arrived.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 20, 1753.

9 An advertisement of a house to let describes it as on William St., opposite the Sign of the Three Pigeons (probably a tavern).—N. Y. Merc., Oct. 15, 1753. The "Sign of the Three Pigeons" is more definitely located in an advertisement of Nov. 19, 1759, in which Richard Curson, "Near the Widow Ratgeber’s Brunchhouse, and opposite the Three Pigeons," offers mullets, tinned, and other liquors.—Ibid., Nov. 19, 1759. This locality was known as Golden Hill.

James Parker introduces a new weekly paper called The Occasional Reverberator. In his other paper, The New-York Gazette: or, The Weekly Post-Boy, for Sept. 17, he published the following item regarding it:

"The Enemies of Liberty, and a freedom of Reflection, having by the most inquietuous Arts, engrossed the New York Mercury, and utterly excluded their Antagonists from a fair Hearing in that Paper; and the Printers of the Gazette declining the Insertion of any Thing that favours of political or religious Controversy, another paper, entitled, The Occasional Reverberator, has been set up, to be published every Friday, as often as Occasion shall require: The First Number was printed on the 7th Instant, and the Second on Friday last. Any person inclining to take them, or buy them, may have them at the Rate of 2s. 6d. per Quarter, reckoning thirteen Papers to a Quarter, or at 5s. a piece single, at the New Printing Office in Beaver Street." Only four numbers of the paper were issued.—See Early Newspapers, II: 456; Brigham, "Bibliography of Am. Newspapers," in Am. Antiquarian Soc. Proceedings (1917), 472. The four issues of this paper are bound up with the Independent Proceedings of New York (see 1752) in the volume of the latter in the N. Y. Pub. Library.

"Just imported in the Ship Fame, Capt. Seymour, from Hamburgh, and to be Sold on board the said Vessel, by Joseph Hayes, or said Master. A parcel of very likely healthy Palatines, of all Trades. As also Women and Children, &c."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 10, 1753.

The Company of Comedians, who arrived here the past Summer [see July 2], having obtained Permission from proper Authority, to act, have built a very fine, large and commodious new Theatre in the Place where the old One stood; and having got it in good Order, design to begin this Evening: As they propose to carry here but a short Time, we hear they design to perform three Times a Week."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 17, 1753. According to this announcement, the "new Theatre" was erected between July 2 and this date. As it stood "in the Place where stood the Old Theatre," it was on the site of Van Dam’s building in Nassau St.—See Feb. 26, and March 5, 1750. See also description of PL 30, I: 165 (the year 1751 mentioned in I: 165, being an error for 1753). For later history of the site, see "Nassau St. Theatre," and "First German Reformed Church (first site)." in Landmark Map Ref. Hist., III: 985, 955.

The advertisement of the opening performance at this theatre is also published in the above-mentioned issue of the Post-Boy. The play announced is "The Conceited Lovers," with the names of the characters, and also of the players, including Mrs. Hallam, Mrs. Schuyler, and Master I. Richter. The Prices are: "Box, 8s. Pit, 6s., Gallery, 3s. &c... Gentlemen and

Ladies that chuse Tickets, may have them at the New-Printing-Office in Beaver Street. To begin at 6 o'clock." See Sept. 21.

There is advertised, to be given, "By Permission," on this evening, at the "usual Place," for the benefit of "the poor Prisoners, now under Confinement, in the City-Hall," an exhibition.

By Anthony Joseph Dupee, the young Physician of Little Neck, Boy, of "the accustomed surprising and entertaining Performances, on the Stuff-Rope, and Slate-Wire," followed by "the wonderful Feats of Strength and Activity, of Mrs. Dugee, Which has given so much Satisfaction to her Royal Highness the Princess Dowager of Wales, and the Royal Family of Great-Britain, that they were pleased to call her, The Female Samson. These Feats of a Strength are detailed in the advertisement. The performance is to "conclude with a Dance, called, the Drunken Peasant."—N. Y. Merc., Sept. 17, 1753.

"A Parcel of young healthy Palmiters, both Tradesmen and Farmers, just imported in the Snow Johannes, Capt. Pickerman, from Holland, to be disposed of. Enquir of Richard Tale, Merchant, or the said Captain on board."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 17, 1753.

The lists of trade write to Sir Danvers Osborn, the new governor, on the proceedings between Clinton and the Mohawks (see June 11), and direct that a treaty be arranged between the Indians and all the colonies.—Doc. Hist. N. Y., II: 555; N. Y. Col. Docs., VIII: 800.

Philip Schuyler, a young man of 20 years, visiting New York from Albany, attains one of the performances at the little theatre in Nassau St., which is under the management of Lewis Hallam. Writing to a friend in Albany, he says: "A player is a new thing under the sun in our province... We bought our play tickets for eight shillings apiece at Parker and Weyman's printing-office in Beaver Street. We had tea at five o'clock, and before sundown we were in the theatre for the players commenced at six." The play was Steele's "The Conscious Lover," in which Mr. and Mrs. Hallam appeared. Young Schuyler was evidently not much impressed by the performance, for he writes: "I was not better pleased than I should have been, in the Ehru, where, last year, I went with cousin Stephen and heard many wise sayings which I hope profited me something."—Life and Times of Philip Schuyler, by Benson J. Lossing (N. Y., 1860), 68. Cf. Sept. 17.

John Fredmore and Daniel O'Brian advertise the revival of the Burlington stage-wagon to Philadelphia. Twice a week, "Wind and Weather permitting; Daniel O'Bryan [sic], with a commodious Stage Boat, well fitted for that Purpose, will attend at the White-Hall Slip, near the Half-Moon Battery, at the House of Scots Johnny, in New-York, in order to receive Goods and Passengers, on Saturday and Wednesday; and on Mondays and Thursdays will set off with them for Tivoli, where there is kept a good Stage-Wagon ready to receive them, who will on Tuesday and Friday Mornings, set out and proceed with them to the House of John Fredmore in Cranberry, where there is kept a fresh Set of Horses and Driver, who immediately proceeds with them the same Day, to the House of Jonathan Thomas, in Burlington, where there is kept a commodious Stage-Boat waiting for their Reception, Patrick Cowan, Master, who immediately sets out and proceeds with them to the City of Philadelphia."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 24, 1753. See also O'Brien's advertisements in ibid., July 8 and Sept. 25, 1754. See, further, Feb. 23, 1756.

"The petition of John Teller, Jacobus Stoughtenburgh and Mary Van Vlack in behalf of themselves and others" seeks a grant of "some Lands belonging to this Corporation in Exchange for the Negroe burying place, as also for a small Slip of Land on which a Pott house cellar is built." Consideration of the subject was deferred to the next meeting of the board.—M. C. C., V: 416. It was not reported further in the Minutes.

Payment of £6 is advanced "towards the Ex pense of fixing a Pump in the well at the South west Corner of the New Dutch Church [Middle Dutch Church] in the North ward."—M. C. C., V: 416. The city was the owner of the other pumps and pumps. See titles "Well," and "Pump" in M. C. C., VIII: Index. See also Dec. 12.

An advertisement signed by Lewis Hallam announces a performance to be given this evening at the "New Theatre in Nassau Street."—The Centaur, Oct. 1. Another, of the same date, says: "The Anatomist, or, Sham-Doctor" will be presented by "a Company of Comedians from London." Hallam adds that "The Company intend to play on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays."—N. Y. Post Boy, Oct. 1, 1753.

The ship "Arundel" arrives at Sandy Hook, having on board Sir Danvers Osborn, the newly appointed governor of the province. —N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 8, 1753. On the following day, he landed at White-Hall Slip, and little Negro Boy, where he opened the season, and the new governor was received "by his Majesty's Council for this Province, the Mayor and Corporation, the Officers of the Militia, and most of the principal Gentlemen of this City, and from thence proceeded to the Governor's House in his Majesty's Fort of George, where an elegant Entertainment was provided for his Reception, and his Majesty's with all the Loyal Healths were drank, as are usual on such Occasions."—Ibid., Oct. 8, 1753.

On Oct. 8, Clinton arrived from Flushing, and Sir Danvers was entertained at a public dinner by the members of the council. —N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 15, 1753. The next day, the common council gave directions for an address of welcome to the governor, voted him the freedom of the city, with seal in a gold box, as usual, and ordered a dinner "at the house of George Burns, near the Long Bridge." The committee in charge was also directed to "Cause a Bonfire to be made in the Commons Near the work and Procure three Dzen of Wine to be sent to the said fire, that the City Hall, the Alms house and the ferry house be Illuminated, that half a Barrell of Cannon powder be provided by the said Committee to Discharge some Cannon that Lay in the Commons, near the Bonfire."—M. C. G., V: 420-21.

On Oct. 19, Ex-Gov. Clinton, Governor and Chief-Judge De Lancey, in council, the king's commission appointing De Lancey lieutenant-governor (see Oct. 17, 1747; Nov. 6, 1753).—N. Y. Col. Docs., VI: 804. At the same time, Clinton was granted a leave of absence.—Cal. Colon. Min., 389.

Sir Danvers published his commission in council on that day, and while the usual Oaths were taking, the Corporation, the City Representatives, the Militia Officers, the Clergy, and all the principal Inhabitants, assembled in the Parade [lower end of Broadway—see Pls. 26, 27, 27-A, Vol. I] and together with the Council, would proceed on his Excellency's Parade, to his residence, and vast Concours of People, to the City Hall, where his Excellency's Commission was a second time published. Thence his Excellency, in like manner attended, to return to the Fort, amidst the repeated Shouts and Acclamations of the People, where the usual loyal Healths were drank; the Guns in the Common and Harbour firing, and the Bells of all the several Churches in the City ringing. As soon as the crowd was a little dispersed, the Corporation waited upon his Excellency with an address.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 15, 1753. In this address the common council expressed the hope that the new governor "would be as averse from Contemporaneous as we are from Breaking of our Oaths, that would secure the Inestimable Liberties, Civil and Religious."—M. C. C., V: 422. This address displeased Sir Danvers Osborn considerably, but he finally gave a brief reply to the corporation.—Smith, Hist. Province of N. Y., II: 183.

He then dined with the corporation, but left soon after and declined to go out to the bonfire, complaining of "a great Disorder in his Head and that his Thoughts and mind were much disturbed."

From affidavits in office of secretary of state, Albany (see Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng, 609-10), copies of which are with "Misc. MSS.," N. Y. Hist. Soc. "Two and Forty Cannons were discharged in the Common; Two large Bonfires were erected: Some Thousands of the Population crowded the Commons; and the whole Town was for several Hours most beautifully illuminated."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 15, 1753. But his Excellency found himself indisposed, retired to his Lodgings soon after Dinner, and could not attend the rejoicings. In the Evening: It gave great concern to many. On Thursday, he still complained of his Disorders...—N. Y. Merc., Oct. 15, 1753.

On Oct. 12, Sir Danvers, who was staying at the house of Joseph Murray until his own residence in the fort could be prepared, was found dead in Mr. Murray's garden, suspended by a lamb's hearth that lassels to a goblet on the top of the garden fence.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng, 609-10.

A meeting of the council was held the same day, with James Alexander presiding, and James de Lancey was sworn in as lieutenant-governor. His commission was published in the Fort, and on the Park-Road.—Oct. 13, A Trip to the Enemy.—The Governor's Address expressed the respectfulness of the meeting toward the General and the Gentlemen of the Council, and the officers of the Garrison, the mournful occasion forbidding, as his

The instructions of Sir Danvers were also read in council, appointing Cadwallader Colden, James Alexander, Archibald Kennedy, James de Lancey, George Clarke, Jr., Joseph Murray, John Rastard, Edward Holland, William Johnson, John Chambers, and William Smith, of the council. —Cal. Coun. Min., 390.

A committee of inquest on Sir Danvers’ death was appointed, consisting of Mr. Alexander, the eldest councillor present; Mr. Chambers, the second justice of the supreme court, and Mayor Holland, all members of the council.—Idel., 390; N. Y. Col. Dists., VOL. 804. The following depositions were made regarding the case:

1. by John Milligan, surgeon, as to having ineffectually endeavoured to resuscitate Sir Danvers;
2. by Thomas Pownall, his secretary, giving an account of his excellency’s previous health; 3. by Lieut. James Cunningham, of Col. Warburton’s regiment (New Scotia), giving an account of the late spirited and depressed condition of Sir Danvers during the voyage from England, and after his arrival at New York; 4. by William Keen, Sir Danvers’ valet, describing the distress in which the governor appeared to be on the night of Oct. 11, stating that about 12 or 1 o’clock he was engaged in burning the papers and abstracting them from the head, and the next morning was found hanging on the fence at the foot of Mr. Murray’s garden; 5. by Joseph Murray, member of the council, that Sir Danvers stayed at his house after his arrival at New York, and until his residence in the fort could be prepared, that he was very spirited and composed, though being unwell at supper, and that next morning Phillips Cosby informed him that Sir Danvers had hanged himself. —Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 609-10. Despite disturbing rumours, it was generally accepted that the governor died at his own hands. A committee was also named to take an inventory of his estate and arrange for his funeral.—Cal. Coun. Min., 390.

On the 13th, his body was temporarily placed (until May 27, 1754, p. 27) in a vault in the chancel of Trinity Church.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 15, 1753; Smith, Continuation of the Hist. of the Prov. of N. Y., in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections (1870).

Philip Livingston, writing to John Witherspoon concerning the governor’s suicide, under date of Oct. 15, said, “You Cannot Imagine, Sir, what an Excessive Damp this Affair Stuck upon people’s Spirits, for a Gentleman of an Independent Fortune, at the head of a Government where he was rec’d with the utmost demonstrations of Joy, by all ranks of people, & Everything was great & good was expected from his Administration as his Character was that of an honest Virtuous & Truly religious man as well as a man of Sense & Learning I say for a man of such a truly good & Amiable Character, to be left all of a sudden to Exert himself & dying so hastly, is amazing & Indeed I Can truly say That I never saw a number of people so affected & Truly Sorrowsful as the people of this City, upon this Occasion. The Coroners Inquest found him by their Inquisition, Lamentick so that his Corps had an honourable & private burial in the great Church & his Estate is Saved To his Children. .. Mr De Lancey Our Chief Justice now Commanda this province. Last week we had three Governors In less in [then] 48 hours.— Winthrop Papers, XIV: 153, in Mass. Hist. Soc.

With the affidavits (which were presumably made at the inquest) was an inventory of Sir Danvers’ personal effects. The affidavits showed that on the evening of Oct. 11 the governor had been engaged in burning his papers and documents.—See list of affidavits in O’Callaghan’s Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 609-10. On Oct. 29, Oliver de Lancey, Thomas Pownall, and Charles Williams were appointed administrators of Sir Danvers’ estate.—Cal. Coun. Min., 392. The news was published and declared as Drowned in a London paper of Dec. 14, 1753.—Uppcott Coll., in N. Y. Hist. Soc., IV: 239. It is there stated that “the Hon. George Clinton, Esq; who for many Years has been Governor of that Province, and was to have embark’d the Day that Sir Danvers Osborn died, put off his Departure till Directions are received from England how long to act.” This is followed by a brief account of Sir Danvers Osborn’s life.

The body of Sir Danvers Osborn was taken “home” to England on, or immediately after, May 27, 1754 (p. 27). 8

All Persons indebted by Bond, to the Trustees of the College of New York, are hereby desired to pay the Interest due on their respective Bonds, without further Delay, or they may depend on being prosecuted with further notice.”—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 8, 1753. See Nov. 1, 1754.

Two New York oath rolls are begun on this day, consisting of two rolls of parchment, each measuring 30 in. long by 12 in. wide, stitched together at the top. One is the abjuration oath; the other the declaration against transubstantiation, both with signatures. An additional strip of five inches is added to the left-hand edge of the former oath, increasing its length to 35 in. The latter oath is endorsed “Rolls begun the day of 1753,” with spaces for day and month left blank. The date on which the rolls were begun is determined by an examination of the names, in comparison with the mention of the arrivals of the autumn of Gov. Osborn, as published in the N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 8 and 15, 1753. This is fully explained in a study of the “New York Oath Rolls of 1753-55,” in N. Y. Pub. Library Bulletin, Jn. 14-50. The rolls are preserved in the MSS. Div. of the N. Y. Pub. Library.

The earliest known reference to the famous Blue Bell Tavern, which stood on the old King’s Bridge Road, at about the present 1814 St., is found in a letter attributed by Benson J. Lossing to Cadwallader Colden, and published in an article on old taverns in Appleton’s Jour., Dec. 15, 1875. Colden writes: “I have been so pleased with Phillips Cooby’s account of it that I have made a journey to the place. It stood, therefore, close by the wall of the Arrivaille, its date is lost. It has ceased to exist, but it was exactly in the center of the highest part of a hill; there is a large piece of ground there, surrounded by a high wall, which was the road to the tavern, and the road to the inn was directly across the street from the tavern.”

“I started early yesterday morning, and dined with Phillips, at Yonkers. Mary has become a pretty young lady. I expected to reach New York early in the evening; but when I approached the King’s Bridge, it began to rain smartly. It was sunset; and, as the moon would not rise before nine o’clock, I knew it would be a very dark evening. So I concluded to stop for the night at the Blue Bell, where I found our nephew, James Delancy, who had halted because of the storm and darkness. This tavern is very well kept by a Dutchman named Vandeunter, and our food and lodgings were very comfortable. At a very early hour we started for the city, where I saw a terrible sight. It was the body of Sir Danvers Osborn, lately arrived, hanged by the neck to his garden stake! ” (see Oct. 6).

This letter is not to be found in the Colden papers in the N. Y. Hist. Soc. One written on Oct. 14 by Colden to his wife, however, refers to the same incident. This circumstance suggests that another hand than Colden’s penned the letter above quoted, and that Lossing, therefore, was mistaken in attributing it to him. Colden’s letter of Oct. 14 states: “I got in good health to this place the next day after I left you better than I could have expected; and passed Greenwhich Mr Nicholls called to me to come a shoar. When I was informed of the most surprising end of S T Danvers Osborn that morning.”

The Blue Bell was mentioned on several occasions during the Revolution. When the British frigates moved up the North River in July, 1776, one account states “that the most damage they received was in passing the batteries at Powle’s Hook and the Blue Bell.”—Connecticut Courant (Hartford), Aug. 9, 1776. On Oct. 4, 1776, a court-martial was held “at Mount Washington, at the Blue Bell.”—Am. Archives, 5th Ser., II: 85. Again, it is said that the American army, on its triumphal entrance into New York in 1783, was reviewed by Washington in front of the Blue Bell. The proprietor of the tavern in 1776 was probably Jacob Moore, who paid excise in this year, his house being described as “the property of King’s Bridge.”—Hist. of Cont., N. Y. Hist. Soc. Apparently, the tavern was closed for a time during the Revolution, for, on June 10, 1784 (p. 27), Stephen Dolbeer announced that he had “revised” the “Blue Bell Tavern, at Fort Washington.” In 1793, and until 1804, when the property was sold, David Wilson was the proprietor. It later came into the possession of Blain McManus to act.”—Daily Ady., Feb. 20, 1831; New Am. Hist. (1851), VII: 175-76.

The site of the early Blue Bell Tavern is fixed on the east side of the Post Road, according to a manuscript map of the “Attacks of Fort Washington . . . under . . . Sir William Home,” dated Nov. 16, 1776, and now in possession of the N. Y. Hist. Soc.

Kitchen's "Map of New York I." also shows the tavern on the east side of the Post Road in 1758. The old house is said to have been destroyed by fire about 1810 or 1820. In later years, there was another Blue Bell Tavern, on the west side of the Post Road. For an interesting discussion of the sites of these two old houses, see Mag. Am. Hist. (1881), VII: 299-300, 375.

This being the last day of the October term of the supreme court, the justices of this court, the attorney-general, and the consent of the attending members of the court, the city hall to the house of the lieutenant-governor, to present an address to him. "After which his Honour the Lieutenant Governor, attended by the whole Body of the Laws went in Procession to the House of Mr. Edward Willett, where an elegant, Entertainment was provided, where his Majesty's and all the other loyal Healths were drank, as usual on the like Occasions."—N. Lieu-Gov. De Lancey, in an address to the assembly, thus refers to the death of Sir Danvers Osborn: "As he was a Gentleman of birth, of liberal Education, and distinguished Character, we had well grounded Expectations of being a happy People under his Administration."

The instructions of the king to Sir Danvers Osborn are read (see Aug. 13)—Assem. Jour., II: 371-75. The house relied on Dec. 6.

Gov. Dundas of Virginia sends George Washington as bearer of letters to the French to protest against their occupation of lands on the Ohio River "known to be the property of the Crown of Great Britain," and making certain proposals.—Doc. Hist. N. Y., II: 298. The French rejected the proposals of the English, and both sides armed for the struggle.—Thwaites, France in America, 158-61. See also May 4, 1754. A clash occurred on May 28, 1754 (q.v.), marking the beginning of the French and Indian War.

De Lancey informs the legislature that "the Provision lately made for repairing his Majesty's Fort and Copey Battery [see July 4] will, from the great Damage done to the latter by the late Storm, fall very short of answering those Purposes. I must therefore, recommend to you, to make further Provision for this End."—Assem. Jour., II: 531; Jour. Leg. Cunn., 1117.

The house, in adopting an address to Lieu-Gov. De Lancey, compliments him on his administration of the government. Referring to the statements contained in the instructions of Sir Danvers Osborn (see Aug. 13), the members of the house declare that they have been "maliciously misrepresented." Former Gov. Clinton is charged with commissioning judges "of known ill Character and extreme Ignorance." They add that the existing method of raising money has been pursued for the past 15 years.—Assem. Jour., II: 533-54. On Nov. 8, De Lancey, on receiving the address "at his House in the Broadway," replied that he had "never observed any dissatisfaction on the part of the people towards his Majesty."—B. Hist. N. Y., II: 1117.

A letter from Lord Holderness to Sir Danvers Osborn, regarding the encroachments by foreign powers and the mutual assistance of the colonies, is referred by the council to the assembly.—Cal. Coun. Min., 390.

Hugh Gaine is ordered before the house for printing in his paper, The New-York Mercury, part of the proceedings of the house, including several articles of his majesty's instructions to Sir Danvers Osborn.—Oct. 12, Assem. Jour., II: 1752, and begged the pardon of the house. On the following day, he was reprimanded, and dismissed after paying costs.—Ibid., II: 359.

An essay on the "natural Advantages" of New York province contains the following: "Our Harbour, or rather Road, is as safe as others generally are, most of them being subject to important Objections, and of this its proceeding, and the expense Improvements of Art. The mooing Ground is good, free from Barrs, and not incommoded by Rocks, the Water of an equal and convenient Depth, and the Shore bold to the very Edges; and butt for floating Cakes of Ice in the Winter, our Shipping would be utterly exempted from Danger. Nor is it difficult perfectly to secure them from that Inconvenience. The Place called Rotten-Rows, has hitherto been their only Asylum, the unhappily of late, it annually becomes less and less fit for that Purpose.

The City of New-York consists of about Two Thousand Five Hundred Buildings, which is its Figure, its Center of Business, and the Situation of its Buildings, that the Cartage in Town from one Part to another, does not at a Medium, exceed one Quarter of a Mile. The prodigious Advantage of which, to a trading City, is more easily conceived than expressed. It facilitates and expedites the landing and unloading of Ships and Goods, saves Time and Labour, and is attended with unumerable Conveniences to its Inhabitants.

"Thro' we abound in no one Kind of Fish sufficient for a Staple, yet such is our Happiness in this Article, that not one of the Colonies affords a Fish-Market of such a plentiful Variety as ours. Boston has none but Sea Fish, and of these Philadelphia is entirely destitute, being only furnished with the Fish of a fresh Water River. New-York is sufficiently supplied with both Sorts. Nor ought our vast plenty of Oysters to pass without particular Observation; in their Quality they are exceeded by those of no Country whatsoever. They continue good Eight Months in the Year, and are, for two Months longer, the daily Food of our Poor. Their Beds are within View of the Town, and I am informed, that an Oysterman industriously employed, may clear Eight or Ten Shillings a Day."—Independent Reflector, Nov. 22, 1755.

The trustees of the funds of the proposed college (see Nov. 25, 1751), nine in number, of whom six are Episcopalians (see July 5, 1754), agree "that a Letter be written to Doctor [Samuel] Johnson, of Stratford [Conn.], proposing to call him [see the proposal of his name, Oct. 25, 1753] for the President, for the Seminary of New-York, and, that he be offered Two Hundred and Fifty Pounds, per Annum, for his Salary, to commence from the first Day of May next; and that another Letter be written to Mr. Chauncey Whittlesey, of New-Haven, offering him the Sum of, Two Hundred Pounds, per Annum, as second Master of the said Seminary, to commence as aforesaid; and that Mr. William Livingston, prepare the Draughts of the said Letters."

"As the Trustees are sensible that the salary proposed for Doctor Johnson, (though as much as they are enabled to offer) is inadequate to his Merit, and that the Vestry of Trinity Church will readily agree to make a sufficient Addition;" it is "Agreed, That the Gentlemen of the Vestry, who are Trustees, do recommend it to the Vestry to make such additional Proposals, as may induce him to accept the above Proposal.

On the 7th of January following [1754], the several Draughts of the Letters to Mr. Johnson, and Mr. Whittlesey, were read [at a meeting of the trustees], and approved of, and ordered to be copied, sent, and signed by William Livingston, in Behalf of the Trustees; which were accordingly copied, signed, and sent the Day after, each inclosing a Copy of the Act of Governor, Council, and General Assembly of the fourth of July then last past [1753] and containing the several Proposals before mentioned; as a further Inducement to Doctor Johnson to accept the said Proposals made to him, the Trustees in the said Letter, acquainted him, that as they were informed since the Draught of that Letter, by some of the Trustees, who were of the Vestry, that the Corporation of the Church had agreed to call him as an Assistant Minister, they made no doubt that the addition so wished would be made for him for that Service, might be a further Inducement to him to accept the above Offer, in Case he should think (as they themselves could not help imagining) that what was in their Power was insufficient."

The Rev. Dr. Johnson was a minister of the Church of England. Franklin had written Dr. Johnson, in 1750, expressing the wish that the latter might "happen to be at Philadelphia when that should become a college (see letters of Aug. 9 and Sept. 13, 1700, among Johnson Papers, MS., in Columbia Univ. Lib.)."

Mr. Whittlesly was "a Presbyterian Gentleman, late a Tutor of Reputation, in the College there" (New Haven). Benjamin Nicoll, preceptor of the Proprietary Board of Trustees of the Ancient Indian College of the Province of New York, 1725-34, Hist. of Columbia Univ. (1904), 14, citing Chancellor's Life of Johnson. For Dr. Johnson's reply, see Jan. 17, 1754; and for Mr. Whittlesly's, see Feb. 21, 1754.

"The Confusion in this City, occasioned by counterfeit Copper English Halfpence amongst us, is almost incredible—"for notwithstanding the large Quantities of good Pence we have long had, there is now hardly any Sum offered, but there are counterfeit Ones intermixed; and to such a Degree of Suspicion, is the common People raised, that many good Pence, which have passed current perhaps for about 20 Years past are now refused."—N. Y. Post-Bay, Dec. 3, 1753. The assembly passed the 1753-4 assembly appointed their next meeting-day (the first one after May 1 next) on which to consider a method of ascertaining the value of copper half-pence and farthings in the colonies.—Ibid., Dec. 17, 1753.

The assembly asks the lieutenant-governour to assign counsel for the assistance of Abraham Hardenbrook, keeper of the powder-house, in the suit against Archibald Kennedy for the latter's seizure of the colony's gunpowder.—Col. Hist. MSS., Eng. 611. This matter was still undecided, June 25, 1755 (q.v.).

The assembly orders the preparation and presentation of an address "to his Majesty, to express the just Indignation of this House, at those groundless Imputations of Disloyalty, which have been most falsely and maliciously thrown out against the People of this Colony, and their Representatives in General Assembly."—Assemb. Jour., II: 366. The draft of this address was approved by the assembly on Dec. 17;—Ibid., II: 367. In an address to the lords of trade, approved Dec. 12, the assembly threw the blame for all the troubles in the assembly upon Gov. Clinton's alleged mal-administration. Among other charges, Clinton was accused of having engaged, in the beginning of the French War, in private-teering voyages, hiring out the cannons for his own private advantage, and leaving the colony exposed; of applying to his own use a great part of the money raised by the colony for presents to the Indians; of having pretended to form two Indian companies and demanding provisions for them "when no such Companies, ever really existed," and of making extravagant grants of land in remote parts to be sold for the benefit of any party for having your policy."—Ibid., Dec. 17, 1753.

The first law is passed requiring the recording of mortgages in New York Province, "for preventing frauds by Mortgages which shall be made and Executed after the first day of June in the Year One thousand Seven Hundred and Fifty four." City and county clerks shall keep registers of mortgages, showing property descriptions, acknowledgment by mortgageors and mortgagees, discharge of mortgages, etc.—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 957. See also Register Dongan's Three Years' Report, 1918-1920, p. 6.

"An act is passed for raising £1,125 by public lottery "for this Colony for a further provision towards founding a College within the Same." Abraham van Wyck and Abraham Leyens are appointed managers, and regulations are prescribed with more than the usual details for operating it.—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 950. These were published in the N. Y. Post-Bay, Dec. 31, 1753.

The drawings, ordered by this law to be begin on June 1, were posted by act of May 1, 1754 (q.v.), and were held on July 25.

An act is passed to enable the Dutch Church of the city of New York to sell the Manor of Fordham, Westchester Co. The act defines the church's title to this property (granted to it by the will of Cornelius Steenwyck and his wife, Nov. 20, 1683, for the minister, and is the original and the other collection). It also recites the incorporation of the Dutch Church by William III on May 11, 1666.—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 983. The act was approved by royal order received on Dec. 6, 1755 (q.v.).—Col. Coun. Min., 359.

An act, "present Method of Collecting the duty of Excise on Strong Liquors retained in this Colony by letting the same to Farm is found Grievious to the Several Retailers by the Exercitand and Excessive Exactions of many of the Farmers," a new system is established in the province. The mayor, recorder, and aldermen of New York City are appointed commissioners for collecting the excise in the city.—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 351-57. The municipal officers lose this right by a provincial act of Dec. 7, 1754 (q.v.).

A provincial act is passed for enabling the city of New York to "raise a" Tax for Mending and keeping in Repair the Publick Wells and Pumps in the Said City to the South of Fresh Water." The statute recites "that keeping the Publick Wells and Pumps . . . in constant repair hath been greatly Serviceable to the inhabitants forced in cases of Accidents by Fire and hath furnished them with Constant Supply of Water whereby great Fires have been Extinguished and prevented from Spreading." The common council is annually to appoint in each ward, save the Out Ward, one inhabitant as overseer of pumps and wells. It is his duty to see that the pumps and wells are maintained in good order. From the proceeds of this tax, compensation is allowed to owners of fire-buckets which are burnt, destroyed, or lost. The same act inflicts a fine of 40 shillings upon any one found guilty of cutting the ropes of public wells, or breaking the handles of pumps.—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 950-57.

Seventy-two New York merchants sign the following announcement: "We the Subscribers, being sensible that the Importation of British Copper Half-Pence is prejudicial to the Interest of this Colony, and a great Means of depreciating our Currency, legally established, Do, for the Prevention thereof, on our Words of Honour, declare, That we will not, after this day, use or receive Half-Pence, other than Fourteen for a Shilling, and that we will pay them away at the same Rate."—N. Y. Post-Bay, Dec. 24, 1753. On Dec. 31, announcement was made that "several other Merchants and Shop-keepers . . . have . . . determined to take or pay Copper Half-Pence no other ways than Fourteen to the Shilling, particularly, the Majority of Coonie's-Club."—Ibid., Dec. 31, 1753; see Jan. 11, 1754.

It is unanimously resolved by Trinity vestry "That the Rev'd Doct" Samuel Johnson of Stratford be Called as an Assistant Minister of Trinity Church, and that he be allowed the same Sum of One Hundred and fifty pounds £ And And the Rector Church & Wardens are Desired to write to the Said Doct' Johnson and Acquaint him with the Resolution of this Board And that his Said Sallery Commence from the day of his leaving his Parish at Stratford."—Johnson Papers (M.S.), in Columbia Univ. Lib. This action appears to have been the outcome of correspondence between Dr. Johnson and Rector Barclay of Trinity. The former hesitates to accept the presidency of the college and the latter is earnest for him to do so, telling him that "The Trustees are all Strenuous Church men Save two, who are notwithstanding very resolute men, and who, having it in their power to prevent it, are all inviolate, and are all invited to dine with the lieutenant-governour, "that we may consult what may be done to give you Satisfaction."—Letter (without date) of Barclay to Johnson in Johnson Papers (M.S.). Mr. Murray, Mr. Robinson, and the rector wrote a joint letter to Dr. Johnson on the 24th (p. 26).

Another very early American play-bill (see also March 26, 1750, and Nov. 12, 1753) is one for the comedy "Love for Love," which was given on this date "At the New Theatre in Nassau-Street," for the benefit of the poor. A photograph of this play-bill was presented to the N. Y. Pub. Library by Mrs. H. R. Hoyt, June 5, 1904.

De Lancey, having been addressed by "the Ministers, Elders, and Deacons of the Dutch Church in New York," recommends them to the lords of trade and bespeaks for them the favour of the king. They "have some Pieces of Ground in this City, that are leased out on Ground Rents on which the buildings are mean, these they intend to purchase in and build good houses in their stead, which will Encrease their income, and enable them to maintain their Ministers in a better manner than they now do."—N. Y. Col. Doc., VI: 819.

Joseph Murray, John Robinson, and Rector Barclay of Trinity join in a letter to Dr. Johnson in which they express the hope that the salary as assistant minister (see Dec. 20) together with that as head of the college (see Nov. 22) will afford him a genteel subsistence."—Johnson Papers (M.S.). In a separate letter of the same date, the rector writes: "You will now be to the full equal to mine, and I doubt not but we shall enjoy much Happiness with each other." In the same letter the rector Dec. adds: "I should like [it] much we I not in hopes that the Morning and Evening Prayers according to the Common Prayer Book would be Established, and therefore I shall not yet offer It to any ones But Mr. M—-

It is apparent that Dr. Johnson had expressed himself to Dr. Barclay as averse to Whitby's appointment as sub-master, because the letter continues: "As to W—y we Shall do what we can to prevent his having any Offer made him & yet how to come of it I am with him having been resolved, but If he Should be called and Accept, I hope such a Subscription will be Thrown in his way as his present principles if he has any conscience will not permit him to swallow."—From original letter among Johnson Papers (MS.).

The festival of St. John the Evangelist is celebrated with elabo- rate ceremonies by the Masons.—N. Y. Merc., Dec. 31, 1753.

— In this year, Archibald Kennedy issued a pamphlet at New York ("Printed for the Author"), regarding the attitude of the English toward the French, and other political considerations of the time. It is entitled Serious Considerations on the Present State of the Affairs of the Northern Colonies.

— In this year, Hendrick Rutgers (son of Hermansz) — see Jan. 9, 1728— began the erection of his mansion, which was completed the following year.—See "The Rutgers Family," by H. E. Crosby, in N. T. Gen. and Biog. Rec., April, 1886. It stood in the middle of the block bounded by Clinton, Jefferson, Cherry, and Monroe Sts. (Monroe St. was earlier known as Rutgers Pl.) It was a noted landmark of the old Seventh Ward for a great many years. During the Revolution, it was occupied by the British as a hospital. — Ibid. The house was demolished in 1857. — Letter Deeds, MCCXIX: 80 (New York); Greatorex, Old New York, I: 104. For views of the house in 1850-5, see Pls. 109-a and b, and description, pp. 612-15, Vol. III. See also description of Pl. 76-a, 1: 2571; and Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 951: Pl. 175, Vol. III.

— In this year, Livingston's sugar-house, on the site of the present 28-36 Liberty St., was erected.—Letter Deeds, XLII: 14. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 963: Abstracts of Bills, VI: 145. It was five stories high, each story being very low, and divided into two by a small width of rooms, windowed by small windows. — Man. Com. Coun. (1852), 414; Thorburn, Reminiscences (1845), 166-78. It was used as a prison during the Civil War (see 1877), and stood until the week of June 3, 1890 (q.v.). An undated survey or sketch showing the sugar-house is in the Bancroft Coll., in N. Y. Pub. Library.

— "I saw in the Dutch Calvinist Ch. at New York a small Organ, which was the first there & has been there I doubt not many years."—The Literary Diary of Extra Stiles, I: 58.

Jan. William Livingston, in behalf of the trustees of the "intended Seminary," officially informs Dr. Johnson of his unanimous election as the head of the institution, at £150 per year (see Nov. 22, 1757). "Your Salary to commence from the first day of May next or as soon as you shall remove for that Service Mr. Whitelsey of New Haven was at the same time pitched upon as second Master and with you there to rent, and a 3d. Apartment, wortified by small windows." — Man. Com. Coun. (1852), 414; Thorburn, Reminiscences (1845), 166-78. It was used as a prison during the Civil War (see 1877), and stood until the week of June 3, 1890 (q.v.). An undated survey or sketch showing the sugar-house is in the Bancroft Coll., in N. Y. Pub. Library.

— "We are not insensible Sir that the above Stipend allotted You, is far inferior to your Merit, and heartily wish it were in our power to increase it suitable to your Accomplishments. But as you'll observe we restricted to a certain Sam, We doubt not Your generous Desire of diffusing amongst us that useful knowledge which the Art of Literature in the Propagation of which you have been so signally instrumental in Connecticut will render our offer less acceptable to you in the light of a Reward,—than as furnishing you with an Opportunity of doing such Extensive Service to Mankind."—Johnson Papers (MS.). For Dr. Johnson's reply, a rough draft of which he penned at the end of the letter above-mentioned, see Jan. 17.

Lieut.-Gov. De Lanecy issues the following proclamation:

"Whereas great Numbers of disorderly and evil-minded Persons, Jan. appeared this Morning in several Parts of this City, assembled together in a riotous and tumultuous Manner, and others have since appeared in the Streets, armed with Clubs and Staves, having a Drum beating before them, in open Breach and Violation of the Peace, and to the great Terror of his Majesty's good Subjects within this City: In order therefore to preserve and maintain the publick Peace, I have thought fit, by and with the Advice of his Majesty's Council of this Province, to issue this Proclamation, hereby in his Majesty's Name, strictly charging and commanding all and every Person or Persons so unlawfully assembled, immediately to disperse and separate, on Pain of being prosecuted with the utmost Rigour of the Law..."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 14, 1754; Cal. Coun. Min., 391; Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 612. The grand jury investigated the disorder, and reported that it was caused by "some deluded People, most of them Strangers," who thought they were defending the cause of the poor.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 21, 1754. See Sept. 8, 1750, and March 19, 1754. Hardship among the poor had been caused by the increase in the value of the half-penny.—See Dec. 3 and 18.

The common council agrees to lease the "Exchange Room" to Oliver de Lanecy, at £50 for one year, payable quarterly, beginning Feb. 1. — M. C. G., V: 435. This was the room built at the city's expense as the second story of the "Exchange." —See June 16, 1752.

Payment is made by the common council to "Defray the Ex- pense of Sinking a well Opposite to Spring Garden in the West Ward." — M. C. G., V: 435. This pump is probably the one shown on Pl. 68-b, Vol. I.

Col. Washington brings to Gov. Dinwiddie at Williamsburg a letter from the French commander refusing to vacate the territory held by the French west of the Alleghenies. For one result of this situation, see Feb. 19.

In reply to the letter of William Livingston informing him of his election as head of the "intended Seminary" (King's College), Dr. Johnson writes that his age and the fear "lest he disappoint anticipation" made it best to accept. He is also concerned regarding the expense of living in New York and the possibility that he might "take small pay."—Johnson Papers (MS.). See Feb. 11.

Lord Holdensme writes to Lieut.-Gov. De Lanecy, ordering the immediate equipment of the independent companies, and that two complete companies march to Virginia and put themselves under the command of Gov. Dinwiddie.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 612.

A Handsome Electrical Apparatus is offered for sale by the printer of the Post-Boy.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 4, 1754.

The trustees of the college read a letter from Rev. Dr. Johnson, dated "Jan. 7" (error for Jan. 17, 9. 9.), in answer to the letter from the trustees (see Nov. 22, 1753). It contains "neither a positive Acceptance nor Refusal of the said Offer and Proposal, but his Request of further Time to consider of the Matter."—Asbury Jour., II: 398. See April.

Keen and Lightfoot announce the opening on this day of the New Exchange as a "Coffee Room."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 4, 1754. The "New Exchange," on Broad and Water Sts, had just been completed by the city of New York to replace the old "Ex- change" on the same site. The upper room of the "Exchange" was used as the "coffee room," and seems to have acquired immedi- ate popularity. On April 30, subscribers to the "Publick-Library," to be established in New York, met at the Exchange Coffee Room.—Ibid., April 29, 1754. The room was used for concerts and balls during succeeding years. On Feb. 26, 1766, Keen and Lightfoot dissolved partnership, Lightfoot continuing in the business.—N. Y. Merc., March 8, 1756. The "Exchange" itself was often re- ferred to as the "Royal Exchange." The house was let by the year and seems to have had several different tenants. In 1766, it was run by a Mr. Jackson.—N. Y. Merc., Feb. 24, 1766. In 1766, this upper chamber became the meeting-place of the Chamber of Commerce. See Feb. 15, 1769. See, further, Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 914.

Andrew Gautier is paid £1.8 for a table for the use of the common chamber.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 668.

A proclamation is issued by Gov. Dinwiddie of Virginia, offering 200,000 acres of land, in addition to pay, to those who will volunteer to erect and support a fort on the Ohio River, at the

A letter from Mr. Whittelsey, dated Feb. 11, in answer to the letter of the college trustees (see Nov. 22, 1753), is read at a trustees' meeting. It explains, "in substance, that as the Constitution of the College, or the particular Service expected from him, could be but partially defined from the Letter he had received, or the Act of Assembly inclosed, he had proposed a Visit to Doctor Johnson, in hopes to obtain a more full Understanding of these Matters, but had hitherto been prevented by Indisposition; from which being in Part recovered he purposed, as soon as able, to pay the Doctor a Visit, and perhaps (if his health permitted) to do himself the Honour to wait on them in New-York, and learn (unless otherwise informed) what would be expected from him to the Trust assigned him.

It is agreed by the trustees that William Livingston shall prepare drafts of answers to Dr. Johnson (see Feb. 18) and Mr. Whittelsey, respectively. Such letters were written on March 13, stating: "...we [the trustee] should be glad to have a Conference with you in this City on the Subject of the College, and the Particulars contained in your Letter, as early in the Month of April next, as your Affairs will permit you, to do us that Favour." See also April 9, and May 9.

At the trustee's meeting to-day, it is also required of Mr. Livingston "That a Copy of the List of the Monies raised by the second and third Lottery, paid into the Treasury, for erecting a College within this Colony, drawn up by the Treasurer, be made for each of the Trustees."—Assemb. Jour., III: 598-99.

As "An Advertisement," preceding the title-page and preface in the bound volume of the Independent Reflector, bears this date, although the first number of the paper is dated Nov. 30, 1752 (q.v.). It reads: "Just Published, And to be sold by Robert Mr. Alpine, Bookbinder, in Hanover-Square, in New-York. Price Two Shillings; A Preface to the Independent Reflector, containing Observations on the Conduct of the Author's [William Livingston's] Adversaries, and the secret Springs of their Opposition—The flagitious and arbitrary Measures for the Suppression of his Writings—A Vindication of his Sentiments against the Clergy—A full Reply to every Thing of Consequence that hath appeared against him—Important Remarks on the intended College, with a Display of the various Devices to perpetrate that noble Design, to the contemptuous Purposes of a Faction.—A Refutation of the vile Calumnies thrown on several Members of the General Assembly, the Trustees of the New-Jersey College, and the Presbyterian in New-York—A Detection of the infamous Stratagems of some Episcopal Bigots, to disperse and ruin the Dutch Congregations; with a List of the Subjects he intended to have handled, had he not been molested by his Enemies. This appears the Frenchman's "Thirty-two Pages in Folly." A bound volume of the Independent Reflector, complete with the Preface, is in N.Y. Pub. Library.

The provincial council receives a letter from Gov. Dinwiddie stating that the Virginia assembly has granted $50,000 for operations against the French on the Ohio; also proclamations. A general plan of campaign, to be concerted, is decided upon, and the Virginia proclamation is sent to Connecticut.—Cal. Counc. Min., Mar. 22.

April 15 and 17.

William Walton and others (the same coterie, probably, who received from the city the grant of water lots in 1752—see M. C.C., V: 354-55), now petition the provincial government (see Cal. Counc. Min., Mar. 22) for letters patent for making their wharf a free wharf for the shipping and unloading of goods, wares, and merchandise. It is situated in Montgomery's Ward, facing the East River, from Robert Livingston's lot to the east end of James Desbrosses' lot (east of Beekman St.). On April 29, the council granted the petition.—Cal. Counc. Min., Mar. 31. On May 17, a warrant was issued for the attorney-general to prepare the patent.—Cal. Counc. Min., May 21.

Tickets for the new theatre in New-York (see April 18) were sold at "The Bigbeg's Opera" and "The Devil to Pay" to be performed, are on sale at Mr. Parker's and Mr. Gaine's printing- offices, the playhouse, "the Royal Exchange," "the Kings Arms," and "Scotch John."—N. Y. Merc., March 18, 1754.

A large quantity of counterfeit British half-pence (see Dec. 3, 1753) is seized by G. Harrison, the surveyor and searcher of customs, and lodged with the mayor. A hundred pounds reward is offered for information regarding the importer or anyone handling counterfeit coins which will lead to conviction.—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 25, 1754; Cal. Counc. Min., Mar. 31.

On April 2, Harrison made another seizure in a store of about 150 pounds of counterfeit pence, which were turned over from the Levant house, by Mr. Poulton.—Ibid, April 8, 1754. During the week between April 29 and May 6, 30 pounds more of counterfeit half-pence were seized.—Ibid, May 6, 1754. See April 24, 1754.

In this month, Dr. Samuel Johnson, of Stratford, Conn., assumed, on trial only, the duties as president of the proposed college, for which a charter had not yet been granted. He would not positively accept until after the passage of the charter, which would determine the conditions under which the college should proceed.—Hist. of Columbia Univ. (1903), 16. See, further, June 3. For the charter, see May 30, and Oct. 31.

Dr. Johnson came to New York on receipt of the trustees' letter of March 13 (see Feb. 21), and "began the Education of Youth, according to a Plan agreed upon by the Trustees, being further encouraged to that Undertaking, by the Offer of £150, by the Vestry of Trinity Church, to him, in Addition to what was given to him by them; without any other Provision equal to it, it could hardly be expected he would have been induced to have engaged in so arduous an Undertaking."—A Brief Vindicating the Proceedings of the Trustees . . ., By an Impartial Hand [Benjamin Nicoll], 1754.

"Notas a a Purse will be run for the fifth Day of April next, behind Mr. Kuyckis, in New York, by any Horse, Mare, or Gelding bred in America, each Horse, Mare or Gelding getting two Heats in three, and saving their Distance the Third Heat, is entitled to the Purse; etc.—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 11, 1754. This race-track was on the Church Farm, and Mr. Kuyckis (Kuyckis, Kinstick) was a tavern-keeper at what are now Nos. 253-254 Broadway, south of Warren St., the later Montague's tavern.

Kuyckis was still keeping tavern in 1753, but by June 2, 1760 (q.v.), Benjamin Keats had evidently rented the house and hung out the "Sign of the King of Prussia," formerly used by John Dowers on his tavern at Fulton St. and Broadway (see Feb. 6, 1758). Kuyckis appears to have removed to a house on upper Queen, or Pearl St., where he entered into the business of a "vintner" and grocer. Keats was still in occupation of the tavern on Broadway in December, 1762, when Kuyckis offered the house for sale (see Dec. 27, 1762), but had removed before May, 1761, when Richard Howard took over the house (see May 16, 1763). Howard was in turn succeeded before March 12, 1764 (q.v.), by "Edward Bairden," or Barden, who now hung out the sign of the King's Arms, a tavern kept by Borden's own uncle. This apparently continued as a tavern-keeper in New-York, and evidently was a successful one, for he remained here five years. In the spring of 1769, the house was again advertised to let, and by April 20 Abraham de la Montague had become proprietor of the tavern.

"Americans," writing in the N. Y. Mercury of June 14, 1770, explains, more or less truthfully, that de la Montague, having relied upon the assured support of Isaac Sears to secure for him the office of inspector of pot and pearl ashes, had "declined entering into any particular business," but was "cruelly disappointed and deceived" to learn that Sears had pocketed the office for himself; "luckily for D. L. M. no, a few days after he had received undoubted intelligence that S. — had deceived him, and procured the office for himself; Mr P — K —, who had some time before taken Barden's house in the Fields, was obliged (for reasons needless to be here mentioned) to quit the house, and by this accident D. L. M. — got it." de la Montague later received this coveted appointment. His tavern was at once popular. Like Hamden Hall, just north of it, it was a favourite headquarters of the Sons of Liberty, and, like Hamden Hall, it was attacked by British soldiers on several occasions preceding the Revolution. See Jan. 13 and Jan. 17, 1779.

Montague died the new year before this date (see Jan. 17, 1776, and Jan. 17, 1776, when his widow, Mary Montague, was paid in full of her account by the common council.—M. C. C., VIII: 125.

John Amory, a manufacturer of horse-whips, became the next proprietor.—See Sept. 19, 1778; Nov. 3, 1779. On March 16, 1780, Amory inquired a notice in Rivington's Royal Gin., that the "Gentlemen who supped at the late Widow de la Montaigne's on the 17th of September, 1776, (after taking down the Liberty Pole) are informed in this public manner that their bid for the supper and liquor still remains unpaid . . . ." Amory offered the house for rent in 1781 (see Sept. 17, 1781), and was succeeded in October of this year by John Kirk, who had been keeping the "Mitre Tavern, N. Y. Merc." Kirk retained the proprietorship of the house during the Revolution, and was succeeded in 1785 by Henry Kennedy. Kirk gave the name of "Prince Wm. Henry," to the house, but it was always referred to as "Montagnes." Kennedy hung up the "sign of the two friendly brothers" in St. Peter's Place, principal, and ten shillings per annum, for that purpose.

We make no doubt but a Scheme of this nature, so well calculated for promoting Literature, will meet with due encouragement from all who wish the Happiness of the Rising Generation."—N. Y. Merc., April 8, 1754. This was the beginning of the New York Society Library. See further, April 29, and Oct. 21, 1754; and Keep's Hist. of the N. Y. Soc. Lib., 115-116.

Nearly £3000 were thus raised "towards promoting a spirit of inquiry among the people by a loan of the books to non-subscribers."
The project was started "at an evening convention of a few private friends: Messrs. Philip Livingston, William Alexander (afterwards known by the title of the Earl of Stirling), Robert R. Livingston, William Livingston, John Morin Scott, and one other person.

The remote object of the projectors was an incorporation by royal charter, and the erection of an edifice, at some future day, for a "Museum and Observatory, as well as a Library."—From Smith's Continuation of the Hist. of N. Y., in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections (1830), V: 171.

Lient.-Gov. De Lancey informs the legislature that Copesy battery is in a "ruinous Condition," and he urges appropriations for its repair.—Assem. Jour., II: 374. The assembly, on April 17, allowed £144 for the repair of Copesy and Flat Rock batteries.—Ibid., II: 378.

The provincial council receives a letter from the lords of trade, approving resolutions to assist other colonies when invaded; it is read.—Gaz. of N. Y., April 19, 1755.

Edward Willett, who had been proprietor of the "Horse & Cart" on William St., announces that he has removed into the house of the honourable James de Lancey, Esq., in the Broadway near Oswego Market, and has opened a tavern "at the sign of the Province Arms."—N. Y. Merc., Apr. 15, 1754. The De Lancey manor was erected about 1700 (p. 13), and stood on the west side of Broadway in the block between the present Thames and Cedar Sts.—See June 18, 1753. The house was an unusually handsome one, and under the able management of Willett immediately sprung into great popularity, being patronised by the elite of New York society. It was referred to in the various newspaper references to happenings there as the "Province Arms," "York Arms," "New York Arms," and "City Arms." In the spring of 1762, John Crawley succeeded Willett (see Apr. 20, 1762), and a year later George Burns removed here from the King's Head Tavern at the same sign. (See N. T. Gen. [Huyman], May 16, 1765. The house, under various owners, continued until 1795, when it was demolished, and the N. Y. Tontine Hotel, or City Hotel, was erected on its site. For a list of its innkeepers, its various names, and reference to views, see Landmark Map Ref. Key, Vol. III: 977.

The road connecting the Virginia and Ohio-land, or Windmill-in-Windmill, with the forks of the Ohio River, on the site of the present city of Pittsburgh, later erecting a stronger fortress which they named Fort Duquesne.—Parkman, Montcalm and Wolfe, I: 142-43.

John and Samuel Burling, merchants of New York City, presented to the assembly a petition stating they propose to erect near New York City on the west side of the Hudson, a flour or meal mill. They have applied to the Corporation of the said City for a Piece of Ground convenient for that Purpose; That as the Mills proposed by them to be built, will be more perfect in their kind than any heretofore built within this Colony, they will consequently be more expensive . . .; that as there are no Wind-mills within, or near this City, the petitioners seek the monopoly of "grinding Corn and Grain, with a Mill in the Space of Time, 1751, to the honorable House shall seem meet."—Assem. Jour., II: 376. Neither the Assem. Jour. nor the M. C. C., nor any other known records, show a mill belonging to Burlington.
The confusion occasioned by counterfeit half-pence (see March 19) increases, people refusing good and bad alike. "At the lowering of Half-pence it was a popular Cry, that the Merchants did it, with a Design to ship them away;" a writer feels that the citizens of New York, by refusing all half-pence, are obliging merchants to do this very thing.—N. Y. Post-Boy, April 22, 1754.

James Wells gives notice that he will run a stage-boat from the Whitehall Slip to Amboy-Ferry every Monday and Thursday; thence by wagons to Borden's Town, and from Borden's Town by stage boat to Philadelphia; "And the same Method will be followed from the Crooked-Billet Wharf at Philadelphia," etc.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Apr. 22, 1754. For earlier Amboy ferries, see April 5, 1753; Sep. 17, 1753; and Aug. 17, 1753. Having a boat for hire, Wells announces that he "is to be spoken . . . at Capt. Lewis's at the Sign of the Devonshire Man of War opposite to Benjamin Nicholls Esq."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Apr. 21, 1754. Benjamin Nicholls' house was on Whitehall and Bridge St. It later became the King's Arms Tavern. See May 1, 1776.

"A Number of Gentlemen" stake considerable money on a 23 horse-race against time, the horse to start "from one of the Gates of the City," and cover the distance of 14 miles to Kingsbridge and back inside of two hours. The horse and riders performed this feat in one hour and 46 minutes.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Apr. 29, 1754.

The "Gates of the City" were those in the palisades, erected across the city above the present Chambers St. (c.f. Stevens, "The Physical Evolution of New York City . . . 1667-1907," in Am. Hist. Mag., 1907, II: 50, for the location of which see July 6, 1746, and "Palisades of 1746" in Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 945.

"The Gentlemen, who are Subscribers to the Public-Library, which is to be erected in this City [see April 8], are hereby Notified, that To-morrow, being the last Tuesday in April, is the Day appointed by the Subscription Articles for their Meeting; in order to elect Twelve Trustees, who are to have the immediate Care and Management of the said Library, for the Year ensuing. They are therefore desired to convene for that Purpose, To-morrow Morning at the Exchange Coffee-Room in Broad-Street. As it will be the first public Transaction of the Subscription, and demonstration of this excellent and useful Design, it is hoped, that Gentlemen will not fail to give a very general Attendance."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Apr. 29, 1754.

Hugh Gaine announces in his paper that he "is now moved next door to Mr. Robert G. Livingston, in Queen [Pear] Street, between the Fly and Meal Markets" (between Maiden Lane and Wall St.).—N. Y. Mec., April 29, 1754.

Alexander Golden announces: "The Post Office will be removed to the House wherein William Walton, Esq. lately lived, near the New-Exchange; where due Attendance will be given, and all Letters received and delivered out as usual."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Apr. 29, 1754.

At a meeting of the subscribers, the following are chosen trustees of the public library (see April 8): James de Lancey, James Alexander, Joseph Murray, John Chambers, John Watts, William Walton, H. B. Bancroft, Robert W. Lamington, William P. Smith and William Alexander.—N. Y. Mec., May 6, 1754. See May 12, 1755.

On the refusal of the general assembly to meet the council in May conference on the bill entitled "An Act to apply several sums of money for the use of the Virginia and Newfoundland Company," it was voted that it was in the money bill (see Assem. Jour., II: 381), the council makes a representation to Lient.-Gov. De Lancey that this is not a money bill, as no money is given by its provisions to the king, but only money applied which has already been granted. They add, "And were it even a Money Bill, we can produce many instances of Conferences desired by the House of Lords, on Money Bills before them, and those conferences agreed to by the House of Commons and
CHRONOLOGY: THE ENGLISH PERIOD: 1664-1703

1754 remember not of any instance before this, in this Province of a May refusal to confer on a Money Bill [see, however, Feb. 21, 1749/50].

1. "As we declined amending this Bill, so for the like reason we decline entering into any Content with the Assembly at this extraordinary Juncture, on this their refusal to confer. And the\' we cannot pass the Bill as it stands, so directly repugnant to his Majesty's Commission and Instructions to the Public Sir Danvers Osborn, yet we think it improper to reject it, least it should be from thence suggested that we did not think the services therein proposed to be provided for, to be necessary, which we are of opinion are highly so . . . ." They suggest that the assembly be prorogued. De Laney replies that on the council's rejecting the bill, he will prorogue the assembly, and at its next meeting will "recommend to them again to provide for those services in a manner not liable to the same objections." —Jour. Leg. Coun., II: 1153-54.

An act is passed, from June 1 to the first Tuesday in October, the time for drawing the lottery provided for by the act of Dec. 12, 1753 (p. 90), to raise $12,525 for the benefit of the college.—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 953. The full extension of time was found unnecessary, as all the tickets were sold by July 25; and the drawings therefore began then—see July 8.

2. The council agrees to the lieutenant-governor on this day at the house of Edward Willett.—Assemb. Jour., II: 382. This was the old De Lancy mansion at the present 115 Broadway (Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 977), which Willett had opened as a tavern on April 15 (q. 5).

3. The council appoints a committee to confer with Henry Cruger about widening his pier in the Dock Ward about four feet, at his own expense, "so as to Range the same with Pains Peer, in order to make the said Peer more Commodious for the passing and Repassing of Carts &c. on said Peer."—M. C. C., V: 449. On May 21, a proposal from him was accepted—that he make the pier four feet wider, "providing he has the right of one Sea Vessel Lying within the Peer to be Exempted from paying Any wharffe or Dockage to the Corporation."—Ibid., V: 453-54, 455, 456. Cruger's Wharf is shown on Pls. 34, 41, 42, 64, Vol. I.

4. Lieut.-Gov. De Laney, in a message to the house, expresses his disappointment at their failure to provide for the transporting and victualling of two companies for service in Virginia. The assembly, in reply, shifts the responsibility upon the council. De Laney answers that he will represent the whole matter to the king "that it may be judged who are truly chargeable with the Delay." He dismisses the assembly.—Assemb. Jour., II: 54-55. For De Laney's later address on this subject, see Aug. 20.

A provincial statute is enacted enabling the City of New York to prevent and remove particular nuisances south of the Fresh Water. This action was taken because certain unleased wharves, etc., had been thrown, upon them all kinds of Filth and Dirt as also for want of Paving the Streets fronting the same. In such cases, the city is empowered to "Surround with good and Sufficient Board Fence and to Remove all such Filth and Dirt wherein Such Lot or Lots of Ground are Covered or incumbered," and, further, to pave the streets fronting the same "with good and Sufficient Pebble Stones."—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 996-98. For application of this act to Little Queen St. in 1755, see M. C. C., VI: 13.

The committee appointed April 5 (M. C. C., V: 445) "to Regulate the Streets from the City hall to the New Exchange, and from Mt. Freeman's Court to Mr. Carpenters Corner the former of which Street is Called Broad Street and the latter is part of Smith and Queen Street in the Dock ward," makes its report. This modifies the plan for the grade in Broad St., which was submitted by the surveyors. The modification is approved. It calls for a regular descent for 250 feet from the city hall, and from there one regular descent "to the Common Shore [where?] Near the New Exchange."—Ibid., V: 450.

Hugh Gaine announces: "The Printer heretofore is now removed from the House he formerly lived in, at the Old Slip [see May, 1753], to that lately possessed by Mr. Anderson, Taylor, next Door to Mr. Robert G. Livingston's, in Queen Street, between the Fly and Meal-Markets."—N. Y. Merc., May 6, 1754. See Oct. 6, 1755.

6. Dr. Johnson writes to his son: "As to the College we have been very diligent in private Conversations in preparing Such a Charter as I would have, & the Gentlemen have no doubt of its passing; but we have had no meeting yet of the Trustees in a Body by reason of the public Affairs, for the Assembly did not break up as was expected the week before but sat all last week, to have some pretty warm Disputes between the Council & Assembly which I conclude you'll see in the papers . . . . It seems a plain Case that either I must stay here or the College must come to nothing, & all the Gentlemen with whom I have conversed, who are the chief Managers of the Public, do insist on my going & very probable as possible."—Letter of Dr. Johnson to his son, Johnson Papers (MS.).

The provincial council appoints commissioners to settle the boundaries with Massachusetts.—Col. Coun. Min., 157.

9. The trustees of the college write again to Mr. Whitleysee (see Nov. 22, 1753) Feb. 21, 1754, informing him that the Trustees hope "speedily to open the College," and would "be glad to know his Resolution in Relation to their Proposals."—Assemb. Jour., II: 399. The poor condition of Mr. Whitley's health is disclosed in correspondence now preserved with the Johnson Papers (MS.), for the year 1754.

A crude wood-cutter of a snake, broken into eight parts, each part representing one of the American colonies, and with the legend "Join, or Die," appears in the N. Y. Merc. and the N. Y. Post-Boy, beneath a message from Major Washington. Both device and paragraph are taken from the Penn Gaz. of May 9, and were probably inspired by Benjamin Franklin, one of the publishers of the Penn. General Advertiser.

Washington's message, which arrived by "Express" on May 6, was to the effect that a part of the English forces on the Monongahela under Capt. Trent had been compelled to abandon their positions to the French, and had joined Washington, who had advanced with three companies of Virginia forces as far as the "New Store near the Allegheny Mountains." English traders on the Ohio had been seized, and English settlers were terrified. The writer of the paragraph says that the confidence of the French "seems well-grounded on the present disunited State of the British Colonies, and the extreme Difficulty of bringing so many different Governments and Assemblies to agree in any speedy and effectual Measures for our common Defence and Security; while our Enemies have the very great Advantage of being under one Direction, with one Council, and one Purse . . . ."

The Boston Gazette and the Boston News-Letter reprinted the paragraph and the device in their issues of May 21 and May 22, and the paragraph was copied, in whole or part, in most American papers.

The device of the broken snake was employed later in times of great peril, when a union of the colonies seemed most imperative. In 1765, it appeared as the head-piece of a curious paper, The Consideration of the Natural Order (1765), and, in 1776, was used by John Holt as the head-piece of the N. Y. Jour. (June 21, 1774), the legend beneath reading "Unite or Die" (cf. Ibid., Dec. 15, 1774). See Albert Matthews, The Snake Devices, 1754-1776, reprinted from the publications of the Col. Soc. of Mass., Vol. XI.

It is unanimously agreed by Trinity vestry "that this Board will give for the use of the College Intended to be Erected A Certain Parcel of Land belonging to this Corporation to Erect & Build the Said College upon and for the use of the Same That is to Say a Street of Ninety feet from the Broadway to Church Street and from Church Street all the Lands between Barclays Street and Murray Street to the Water Side upon this Condition that the President of the Said College for Ever for the time being be a Member of and in Communion with the Church of England And that the Morning and Evening Service in Said College be the Liturgy of the Said Church or Such a Collection of Prayers out of the Said Liturgy as shall be Agree upon by the President and Trustees or Governors of the Said College."—Trin. Min. (MS.). See March 5, 1752; July 5 and 10, and Nov. 1, 1754; May 12, 1755.

At a meeting of the trustees of the college, "a Draft of a Charter for constituting the College, and erecting the Building on Lands, belonging to Trinity Church in this City, to read andWM Hamilton offering as present in writing and giving "twenty Reasons" (see May 20), and requesting that the protest may "be entered on the minutes of the Proceedings of the Trustees," which is refused. He then asks that it may be recorded that he has offered such protest, but the entry of this also is refused, "he was also opposed by the Rest of the Members, who at last agreed that the Entry be, that he offered such Protest, and that the Members agreed to take the said Protest into further Consideration before the same be entered on the Minutes. The Rest of the Members agreed to the Draught of the said Charter. See, further, May 20.

At this meeting, also, Mr. Chambers, the mayor, and Mr. Nicoll informed the trustees "that the Vestry of Trinity Church offered the Vestry Room in the New School House, to begin Tuition, for so long Time as they shall think proper;" this the trustees thankfully accepted; and it was agreed "that Dr. Johnson's Salary, should commence from the Time he left his Habitation on the Service of the Seminary, according to the former Proportional mode of the Trustees" (see Nov. 22, 1753; Feb. 11, and April, 1754). It was also agreed "that the Scholars that shall be entered into the Seminary, shall pay for Tuition, Five Shillings, a Quarter."—Assemb. Jour., III. 399.

For the steps leading to the trustees' decision to apply for a charter, see Benjamin Nicoll's A Brief Indication of the Proceedings of the Trustees (1755), 6, passim.

The following notice appears: "Whereas we have great Reason to believe, from a Variety of Circumstances, that there will very soon be a Bureaucracy with the French, and very probably, shall be attacked among the first. And whereas our greatest Security seems to depend, upon the Difficulty of the Navigation from the Hook upwards; all Masters of Vessels, or such as are thoroughly acquainted with that Navigation, are requested to concert among themselves, by what Means this Difficulty may be improved, by sinking of Vessels or otherwise; what Points of Land may be most proper for Batteries, to take up any Ships as they pass."—N. Y. Post-Bay, May 20, 1755.

At a meeting of the college trustees, Mr. Chambers and the mayor informed Mr. Lt.-Gov. De Laney has "given them Leave to present a Petition, in the Name of the Trustees, for a Charter for the College," and, the petition having been prepared, it is read. It recites the following provisions:

"That divers Sums of Money having been raised by several Acts of the Governor, Council, and General Assembly of this Province . . . for the establishing a College . . . your Petitioners by Acts afterwards made [see Nov. 25, 1751], were appointed Trustees, for putting the said Monies at Interest, and to receive Proposals, accept Donations, and procure Masters and Tutors, in order to make a Beginning of the said Seminary, . . . ." Petitioners, further show . . . . that in PURCHASE of the said Trust, they have endeavoured to get a proper Master, and Tutor, for the said intended Seminary, but find that as your Petitioners are enabled to give Salaries for seven Years only, that they are under great Difficulty to procure a fit and proper Person, to undertake the Charge of the said Institution, or the said Seminary; and therefore, that the Rector and Inhabitants of the City of New-York, in Communion of the Church of England, . . . have offered unto your Petitioners a very valuable Parcel of Ground, on the West Side of the Broad-Way, in the West Ward of the City of New-York, for the said Seminary, &c.; as also, that the Rector and Inhabitants, your Petitioners considering as the most proper Place for erecting the said Seminary or College upon. And that their obtaining his Majesty's Charter, to them or such others, as your Honours may think proper for the said Trust, will the better enable your Petitioners, in Conjunction with those your Honour shall appoint by his Majesty's Charter, to provide a proper Master or Head of the said Seminary, and Tutors for the Education of Youth, and thereby greatly tend to promote and further the Interest and Design of establishing a Seminary or College . . . ." Petitioners therefore humbly pray, that in order to promote so good a Design and the more effectual obtaining a Grant of the said Parcel of Land, for the Use and Benefit of the said Seminary or College; that your Honour would be pleased to grant your said Petitioners that such other Honours shall think proper, his Majesty's Charter of Incorporation, with such privileges as to your Honour shall seem meet, . . . ."

Although signed "William Livingston. In behalf of the Trustees," it is approved by all the trustees except Livingston himself, and is agreed to present it to the lieutenant-governor by Mr. Chambers and the mayor.—Assemb. Jour., III. 399-400.

This petition was presented on the same day to Lieut.-Gov. De Laney, in council.—Col. Hist. N. Y. Eng., 617; Col. Coun., Min., 393. For the result, see May 30.

At the trustees' meeting of May 20, it is also agreed "that the Protest offered at the last Meeting [see May 16] by William Livingston, he entered on the Minutes, and the said Livingston, did then protest against presenting the said Petition, for the Reasons contained in his Protest aforesaid, from the entry of which said Protest, Mr. Mayor disented, and prayed Time for assigning his Reasons in writing." The protest consists of twenty reasons offered to the trustees against applying the college funds as prescribed in the proposed charter. He contends:

I. That the Church of England is not established in this province, where all subjects are under a perfect equality; and the proposed establishment will be partial to that denomination, and an encroachment on the rights and privileges of the other.

II. That, even admitting (what is hereby absolutely denied) that the Church of England by Law established in South Britain, is also established in this Province; yet the Establishment of the Liturgy of that Church, in the said College by Charters, and without the Consent of the Representatives of the People, will be unjust, and at war with the principle of Separation of Church and State; seeing that if the Money raised by the said two Acts of Assembly, shall be applied to the Support of the said College, all the Inhabitants of the Province will be obliged to contribute to its Support, and a vast Majority of the Province are Protestant, distinguishing from the Church of England.

III. He asserts that Trinity's offer, made to the trustees on April 8, this year, was the unconditional grant adopted by the vestry on March 5, 1752 (p.63), not that of May 14, 1754, which contains the condition that the president of the college shall be a minister of the Church of England, and that the Liturgy of that church shall be used in the college; therefore, he contends that the acceptance should not include these conditions.

The deductions contained in the remaining "Reasons" include the assertion that a recent act (see July 4, 1753) enabled the treasurer of the province to pay the college trustees certain moneys to be by them applied "in Salaries for the chief Master or Head of the Seminary, and for such and so many other Masters and Officers, Uses and Purposes, concerning the Establishment of the said Seminary, as the said Trustees shall from Time to Time, in their Directions, think needful, being intended for the Masters and Officers of a Master, or the said Seminary." If, however, Livingston contends, the trustees take the oath prescribed by the proposed charter, they will "aid and abet the said Trinity Church, in defrauding the Province out of the Monies so, or, aforesaid, to be paid to the Trustees, for the Use of the College of New-York, and applying them to the Use of the College of Trinity Church, as established by the said Charter."

Such charter, therefore, he holds, is dangerous to liberty. It will "reduce Parents to the Necessity either of educating their Children at the said College of Trinity Church, contrary to their own Sentiments and Consciences, or of leaving them without an Academical Education in this Province." This will be the means of carrying large sums of money out of the province into neighbouring colonies for the education of our youth. It will obstruct charitable contributions "by those to whom the College of Trinity Church will be disagreeable, who are a vast Majority of the Province, and who would be hurtful to the Interest of their undoubted Rights and Privileges."

It will "tend to raise publick Disorder and Ananymity, at a Time when his Majesty's Interest, by Reason of the Encroachments of the French, requires the greatest Concord and Unanimity."

The proposed College of History, contends, would create a conflict of authority in the control of funds by the appointment of persons not mentioned in the act of Nov. 25, 1751 (p.63). He conceives that, because "the College of Trinity Church will consist of other trustees, and be otherwise incorporated, and enjoy other powers than the said College," there will be two separate colleges, and "that the said Trinity Church College, is set up in Opposition to the College of New-York," etc.

He believes “that the several Branches of the Legislature of this Province, reserve solely to themselves the Establishment of the Plan of Government to be exercised in the New-York College, as they have the Disposition of its Situation, and the Monies raised for it by the several Lottery Acts.”—Assem. Jour., II: 483.

This protest of William Livingston formed part of his individual report to the assembly on Nov. 1 (g.v.), the day after the granting of the charter by the lieutenant-governor. Benjamin Nicol, published an anonymous answer to it near the end of the year, entitled A Brief Vindication of the Proceedings of the Trustees, Aug. 9–12 (see Nov. 4).

William Walton and others, proprietors, “of Sundry Houses and Lots of Ground on Hunter’s Key” (see Feb. 9, 1751), which lay along the East River front from Old Ship to Wall St. (see Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 960), petition the common council for a grant of 200 feet into East River, “or as many feet as will make the same on a straight or direct Line With the Keys on both sides.” The petition is referred to a committee, which is to meet the petitioners and receive proposals.—M. C. C., V: 453.

Another communication, in the Gazette of June 10, 1754, reviewed at length the subject of grants of water lots in this locality, stating that “the Corporation have not in their Power to make or pass a grant or grants to either the present or late Petitioners” (see April 26, 1750). The writer explained that the corporation had formerly granted to the petitioners or their ancestor “from High to Low-Water Mark,” on condition that they should make “a good and sufficient Wharf and Street, of Thirty Foot in Breadth,” and keep them in repair as a “common and public Wharf, Street and High-Way for ever;” and that, as the water became shallower later, the proprietors petitioned for an additional grant of 25 ft. into the river from the wharves, and this was approved upon the same conditions as the first. This latter grant took place “several Years before the Corporation procured their last, or new Charter, whereby they have the Grant of the Soil, from a Place upon the North-River, called Bestaver’s Killijte, to the Fort, comprehending 400 Feet below Low-Water Mark; as also the Soil of the East-River, from Corlaser’s Hook to the White-Hall, also comprehending 400 Feet from Low-Water Mark; and with an express Proviso, not to wharf out before those who have prior Grants of Keys or Wharfs below Low-Water Mark, without the actual Agreement or Consent of the Owners of such Keys or Wharfs.” From this the writer argued, that “in strict Propriety the Owners and Proprietors of the above Water Lots are not Inhabitants of this City; and . . . all and every Stranger that now is, or shall hereafter come into the same,” no grant could be made without everybody’s consent. He added also that the present petitioners had forfeited any right they might have, because they had not fulfilled the conditions, and that, if it were necessary to fill up the place, the lots should be sold at “publick Vendue to the highest Bidder.”

A third communication appeared in the Gazette of July 29, declaring that the committee of the common council appointed “to pitch on Methods to prevent its being a publick nuisance, . . . soon found the Petitioners Ami; and it was worth petitioning for, being 375 Feet in Length, and 200 in Depth, that is, as far out as the New, or Cruger’s Dock. At £500, each lot, which I am sure it would sell for, 25 Feet to a Lot, amounts to £4500,—well worth asking for.”

No further action on the petition of William Walton and others was recorded at this time in the Minutes. It was revived in 1761 (g.v., May 22) by William Brownjohn and others, but the water lots in this locality were not granted until seven years later.

Announcement was made on May 6 of a public vendue to begin on the new block, of the fort, of “sundry goods & Effects belonging to the Estate of the late Sir Danvers Osborn, Bart.”—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 6, 1754.

Dr. Johnson writes to his son that the trustees of the college have “waited on the Govt with a petition for a Charter & he promised to call the Council as soon as he could, but was engaged in writing Letters to England by a man of war now going, (by whom poor St Danvers’s Body goes home,) & said he was ready to grant the Charter they desired would some time. It is not doubted they will . . . All that is wanted of the Assembly is to vest the Lottery Money in the Corporation to be made by Charter . . . they do not doubt it will pass, but this they say is not at all necessary for my Security with regard to the Salary which is already vested in the Trustees by Assembly for 7 years.” He says, further, that it is “extremely probable” that he will remain in New-York, where he is “universally treated with great Kindness & Respect,” and where he “may do a great Deal, more Good” than anywhere else.—Johnson Papers (M.S.).

To be sold, The Corner House and Lot of Ground on the Great-Dock, wherein John Dowson now lives, at the Queen’s Head, opposite to the House of the late Col. Moore, and near the New-Exchange; said Lot is 29 Feet 6 Inches both Front and Rear, and 16 Feet 4 Inches Deep, with the Liberty of Wharfing out a considerable Way; the House thereon is two Story high. Whoever inclines to purchase the above Premises, may apply to the said John Dowson, who will agree on reasonable Terms, and give an indispensible Title to the same.”—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 27, 1754. The “New Exchange” was at the foot of Broad St. The “Queen’s Head” was an ever popular tavern sign in colonial New York. In 1731, a tavern on William St. bore this sign. In 1762, Samuel Francis opened, at the south-east corner of Broad and Pearl Sts., his well-known house with the Sign of Queen Charlotte, later shortened to the “Queen’s Head.” In 1778, Smith had a tavern on Cherry St. which bore the sign of the Queen’s Head; and in 1790 James Hearn conducted an inn on Brooklyn’s Wharf, which was known as the Queen’s Head Tavern and Indian Chop House.

This is to inform all gentlemen & ladies, who have honoured Mr. David Cox, with their custom, that the same business is now carried on at the same shop, next door to the King’s Arms tavern, and opposite the Royal-Exchange, by Timothy Powell, haincuter and peri-maker from London . . .—N. Y. Merc., May 27, 1754. David Cox had combined the business of tavern-keeper and hair-dresser during his brief proprietorship of the King’s Arms Tavern. See Oct. 3, 1748.

Washington, with a force of Virginians, defeats the French at Great Meadows in the Ohio Valley.—Thwaites, France in America, 161–62. This engagement marks the outbreak of the so-called “French and Indian War,” the last of the intercolonial conflicts between England and France in North America. Washington’s force on July 3 was captured at Fort Necessity.—Channing, Hist. of the U. S., III: 562.

Caullawlder Colden, writing from “Coldengham,” apparently to Peter Collinson of London, says in part: “The bad Opinion which it seems is entertained of Mr. Clinton’s administration may in some measure affairs among us, it has been laid to his credit by my advice. What are cried out against as arbitrary acts are strongly exaggerated. It is not proper to enter on particulars Many things were done without my knowledge & others contrary to my advice but I have a full justification of my conduct in a Letter which the Earl of Halifax did me the honour to write me dated the 17th of May last year. He had before him all that was said on both sides & was well informed from the minutes of the Council of the part which I acted I have no interest with him either by personal knowledge or by any friend. He therefor formed his judgement freed from any prejudice of that kind. I wrote to him a few days since by a Sloop of War which carries St Danvers Osborn’s corps” (see May 27).—From the original draft of the letter, with Colden Papers, in N. Y. Hist. Soc.

William Smith writes to Messrs. Miller and Cornwall, representatives to the assembly from Suffolk and Queens counties, respectively, of “the Design of some Publick cheaper and more Noble undertaking of the Legislature of this Province for founding a College, to the little mean End, of Topping the Church of England, above all the other protestant Denominations in the Province.” He calls their attention to the fact that “by several Lottery Acts a Very Considerable sum of money, has been raised for a College—that Trustees have been nominated to farm the money so raised, & that £500 per Annum is payable to them, out of the Excise to begin a Seminary. What is meant by the word Seminary has been, and still is matter of considerable Dispute—some insist that the Legislature intended by the Act, only to enable the Trustees to set up a good Grammar School, to prepare youths for their Entrance into the future College, & one of the members of the May 29 House told me, he understood the Term Seminarly, as synonymous with Grammar School, & that the great & Important Affair of of the founding of the College, was to be with Solemnity & Caution plan'd and established by a future Law. If this was the General Sense, it is very certain that the Act was not, as truly drawn," Smith further, says he suspects there may have been some "Artifice in the drawing of the Act," traceable to churchmen on the board of trustees, who are resolved "to found the College according to their Wishes by Charter and not by Act of Assembly." Such a charter has been drawn "in such a manner, as throughout to cast the Balanced Power on the side of the Church of England," and "the Dissenters here whether English or Dutch, are extremely jealous of the Designs of a few Bigots, & esteem a Charter an uncurate method of Establishing so important and costly an Undertaking."—From original draft among Fm. Smith MSSs, in N. Y. Pub. Library, folio 189. See Sept. 20. Regarding the Smith Diary and MSSs, see Aug. 26, 1758, and Bibliography.

June 3 Rev. Samuel Johnson, president-elect of the college (see Nov. 22, 1753; and April, 1754), which beginning its work, makes the first public announcement of the requirements for admission, the general scheme of education, and other feature of the teaching plan. In an "Advertisement," dated May 31, addressed "To such Parents as have now (or expect to have) Children prepared to be educated in the College of New-York," he states:

"I . . . that it is proposed to begin Tuition upon the first Day of July next, at the Vestry Room in the new School-House, adjoining to Trinity Church in New York, which the Gentlemen of the Vestry are so good as to favour them with the Use of in the Interim, till a convenient Place may be built.

"II. The lowest Qualifications they have judged requisite, in order to Admission into the said College, are, as follows, viz. That they be able to read well, and write a good legible Hand; and that they be well versed in the Five first rules in Arithmetic, i.e. as far as Division and Reduction; and as to Latin and Greek, That they have a distinct knowledge of the Grammars, and be able to make grammatical Latin, and both in construing and parsing, to give a good Account of two or three of the first select Orations of Tully, and of the first Books of Virgil's Aeneid, and some of the first Chapters of the Gospel of St. John, in Greek. In these Books therefore, so far as they are to be examined, but higher Qualifications must hereafter be expected and if there be any of the higher Classes in any College, or under private Instruction, that Incline to come hither, they may expect Admission to proportionably higher Classes here.

"III. And that People may be the better satisfied in sending their Children for Education to this College, it is to be understood, that as to Religion, there is no Intention to impose on the Schollar, the peculiar Tenets of any particular Sect of Christians; but to inculcate upon their tender Minds, the great Principles of Christianity and Morality, in which true Christians of each Denomination are agreed of. The daily Worship in the College Morning and Evening (see observations of William Livingston in the Independent Reflector, 83-85), it is proposed that it should, ordinarily, consist of such a Collection of Lessons, Prayers and Psalms of the Liturgy of the Church, as are, for the most Part, taken out of the Holy Scriptures, and such as are agreed on by the Trustees, to be in the best Manner expressive of our common Christianity; and, as to any peculiar Tenets, every one is left to judge freely for himself, and to be required only to attend constantly at such Places of Worship, on the Lord's Day, as their Parents think fit for them to attend.

"IV. The chief Thing that is aimed at in this College is, to teach and engage the Children to know God in Jesus Christ, and to love and serve him, in all Sobriety, Godliness and Righteousness of Life, with a perfect Heart, and a willing Mind; and to train them up in all virtuous Habits, and all such useful Knowledge as may render them creditable to their Families and Friends, Ornaments to their Country, and useful to the public Weal in their Governments. To this Purpose, it is earnestly desired, that their Parents, Guardians and Masters, would train them up from their Cradles, under strict Government, and in all Seriousness, Virtue and Industry, that they may be qualified to make orderly and tractable Members of this Society . . . and above all that in order hereunto, they be very careful themselves, to set them good Examples of true Piety and Virtue in their own Conduct. For as Examples have a very powerful Influence over young Minds, and especially those of their Parents, in vain are they solicitous for a good Education for their Children, if they themselves set before them Examples of Impiety and Profaneness, or of any sort of Vice whatsoever.

"V. And, lastly, a serious, virtuous, and industrious Course of Life, being first provided for, it is further the Design of this College, to instruct and perfet the Youth in the learned Languages, and in the Arts of reasoning exactly, of writing correctly, and speaking eloquently; and in the Arts of numbering and measuring: of Surveying and Navigation, of Geography and History, of Husbandry, Commerce and Government, and in the Knowledge of all Nature in the Heavens above us, and in the Air, Water and Earth around us, and the various kinds of Meteors, Stones, Mines and Minerals, Plants and Animals, and every Thing useful for the Comfort, the Convenience and Elegance of Life, in the chief Manufactures relating to any of these Things: And, finally, to lead them from the Study of Nature to the Knowledge of themselves, and of the God of Nature, and their Duty to him, themselves, and one another, and every Thing that can contribute to their true Happiness, both here and hereafter.

"Thus much, Gentlemen, it was thought proper to advert you of, concerning the Nature and Design of this College: And I pray God, it may be attended with all the Success you can wish, for the best Good of the Rising Generation; to which, (while I continue here) I shall willingly contribute my Endeavours to the Utmost of my Powers,

"Who am, Gentlemen, Your true Friend,

"And most humble Servant,

"Samuel Johnson.

18 A colonial congress convenes at Albany, the primary object of which is to re-establish the "Convenant Chain" (see June 12, 1755) with the Six Nations. It evokes, however, the larger plan of a union of the colonies of Massachusetts Bay, New Hampshire, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, and South Carolina, with mutual defense and security, and for extending the British settlements in North America. — N. Y. Col. Docs., VI: 853-97; 901-6; 916-20; 930-33; Proceedings of the Commission on Indian Affairs (extra-illustrated), in Emette collection, N. Y. Pub. Library.

19 The most important congresses convened at Albany (see 1684; Aug. 15, 1694; 1722; July 23, 1743), based on the principle of colonial representation. Among the commissioners from the several colonies were Benjamin Franklin, Thomas Hutchinson, William Johnson, and James de Lancey. The congress lasted until July 11. For brief digest of the transactions see Col. Coun. Min., 194-95. New York City's interest in this congress appears in the following statement made by Franklin in his autobiography:

"In our way thither, I projected and drew a plan for the union of all the colonies under one government, so far as might be necessary for defence, and for other important general purposes. As we pass'd thro' New York, I had there shown my project to Mr. James Alexander and Mr. Kennedy, two gentlemen of great knowledge in public affairs and, being fortified by their approbation I ventured to lay it before the Congress. It then appeared that several of the commissioners had form'd plans of the same kind. A previous question was put whether a union should be established, which passed in the affirmative unanimously. A committee was then appointed, one member from each colony, to consider the several plans and report. Mine happen'd to be prefer'd, and, with a few amendments, was accordingly reported." — Works of Benj. Franklin (ed. by W. Seely), III: 421.

A communication, dated Oct. 28, 1788, printed by Matthew Carey in The Am. Museum (1789), V: 190-96, 257-58, 362-68, contains the first publication of the text of Franklin's plan for a union, presented under the following heads: I. Reasons and motives on which the plan of union for the colonies was formed; — II. Reasons against partial unions; — III. The plan drawn by Dr. Franklin, and unanimously agreed to by the commissioners . . . . " This is copiously annotated, either by Carey or Franklin, and at the end (p. 368), apparently part of the text (but not printed in either the Sparks or Bigelow editions of Franklin's writings) there appears the following pertinent conclusion: "On reflection it now [April, 1789] seems probable that if the foregoing plan, or something like it, had been adopted and carried into execution, the subsequent separation of the colonies from the mother country might not so soon have been occasioned; as the war had suffered on both sides have occurred, perhaps, during another century. For the colonies, if so united, would have really been, as they then thought themselves, sufficient for their own defence; and, being trusted with it, as the plan, an army from Britain, for that purpose, would have been unnecessary. The pretences for transatlantic War were then in fact abandoned, which the printers in both districts have endeavored to propagate, as it is alleged, by the printing of that plan. . . ."

"The present collection is published by the City of New York, from the typesetting of the original manuscript and other projects for drawing a revenue from America to Britain by acts of parliament, which were the cause of the breach, and attended with such terrible expense of blood and treasure; so that the different parts of the empire might still have remained in peace and union. The crown disapproved it, as having placed too much weight in the democratic part of the constitution; and every assembly as having allowed too much to prerogative: so it was totally rejected."

See Nar. & Crit. Hist. of Am., V: 611-15, where is given an historical digest of references (not including the above) to the subject of intercolonial congresses and plans of union. An original manuscript, full of spirit and humor, of the Albany congress is noted in the Catalogue of the Carter-Brown Library, Brooklyn, Pennsylvania (VIII: item No. 49). See Aug. 9, and Dec. 17. The "Members of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons" are requested to meet on this day "at the House of Mr. Edward Willet in the Broadway." — N. Y. Post-Boy, June 16, 1754.

During the July term of the supreme court, which ended on July 2, a man named Patrick Cramer was tried for killing a Mr. Cregier, and found guilty of manslaughter; he was "burnt in the Hand accordingly." — N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 5, 1754.

Subscribing himself "Your quondam Pupil at Purl," William Smith writes to Rev. Silas Leonard, of Goshen, that it is now "become apparent that the Church of England aims at monopolising the Establishment of the government of the College" (see May 29). The steps that have been taken "relating to the College" he portrays to him thus: "Our Assembly have since the year 1748 at several times raised large sums of money by public Lotteries for a College to be Established here [see Dec. 6, 1748; April 9, 1748; July 4, Dec. 12, 1753]—so good a Design met with Universal Encouragement: The Church soon began to work privily in Order to engross the Government of it.—The first thing was the appointing Trustees to put that money out at Interest for the College whenever it should be constituted [see Nov. 25, 1753]. Altho' 7/10ths of the Province are Dissenters yet they got among these Trustees who were Nine in Number six European Plans—Last year £1000 per Annum out of the Excise Fund [see July 4, 1753] which brings in about £4000 a year was enacted to be paid for seven years successively to these Trustees to begin a Seminary by which some of the Assemblymen understood was meant a Latin or Grammar School to prepare Lads for the future College but so artfully is it drawn that by the Equivoication of the Term Seminary they are determined to open a College—The Trustees in next place called Dr. Johnson of Stratford to be President of the College [see Nov. 22, 1753] for now its plans they so construe the Word Seminary [see Nov. 22, 1753]—But how to get the Possession of the public Monies raised is the question for it cannot be any other way our Trustees having a power to receive Gifts and proposals relating to the plans to be offered for erecting the College the Church in New York offered them a part of their Lands [see April 8, 1754]—Then the Trustees drew up a Petition to the Governor for a Charter [see May 14] . . . the Govt. has not granted the Charter but will it is supposed wait till he can be sure of the approbation of the Assembly [see Oct. 51]. Endeavours will undoubtedly be pushed in all manner of Ways by some to gain the Monies raised, from the Hands of the Assembly into the Possession of the Trustees—And here lies all the Security which the Friends of Liberty have all Our Dependence is on the House—The utmost Care therefore must be taken to impress the Members with Right sentiments of the Importance of the Affair." — From an original draft among Wm. Smith MSS, folio 189. See Aug. 26.

Osgood van Wyck and Abram Layton, managers of the lottery for the benefit of the college (called "the New-York Lottery," because confined to this province—see Dec. 12, 1753), publish a notice fixing July 25, at 9 a.m., at the city hall, as the time and place "to put the Lottery Tickets into the Boxes," and July 25, at the same hour and place, for the commencement of "the Drawing." A few days after, there are other projects for drawing a revenue from America to Britain by acts of parliament, which were the cause of the breach, and attended with such terrible expense of blood and treasure; so that the different parts of the empire might still have remained in peace and union.

The crown disapproved it, as having placed too much weight in the democratic part of the constitution; and every assembly as having allowed too much to prerogative: so it was totally rejected.
signifying him self a Lover of Liberty, and enclosing the draft of a petition to be circulated in Queen's County to gain legislative support for the proposed college on the lines which he outlines. He says this method "is a practice common in England when matters of general & great importance are on the Carpet and I believe you will think the Establishment of a College of as much or perhaps greater weight to the Country than any thing that has fallen under the Consideration of our Legislature. Too your members [of the legislature] should be well affected to a Free College yet the Petition will be proper since it will free them from the Troublesome solicitations of those who may be more obdurate in their Conten- tion for the so called Scheme, on which the other part of the letter of the annexed 2. Smith MSS, folio 188. N. Y. Pub. Library. The draft of the petition is not with these MSS, but is proba- bly similar to that sent to the representatives in the assembly for the county of Ulster, which is with it. In this he makes the plea, for the freeholders to sign, that the proposed college may be "established upon a Catholic Bottom," instead of having its "plan & Government savour of Civil or Religious party;" and he suggests some particulars which "ought to be attended to in the Constitution of the College." These include: "1. That the . . . Trustees be not all of the same particular Religious Denomination, that their Number be not less than Twenty four. "2. That they be incorporated by an Act of Governor Council & General Assembly and all future Vacancies among the Trustees supplied no otherwise than by Legislative Acts and that no protest-ants be included in the amount of his Religious Opinions disqualified from holding any Office in the College. "3. That no Religious Profession in particular be Established in the College but that all the officers and students be at perfect Liberty to attend any protestant Church at their pleasure respec- tively and that the Corporation be absolutely prohibited the Making of any By Laws relating to Religion except such and only such as Compel the Students to attend at some one protestant Church or other every Sabbath Day. "4. That Morning and Evening Worship be maintained in the College and that to this End the Trustees draw up and report to the Legislature with all convenient speed a few general Forms of Prayer to be approved and established for the Daily Worship of the Seminary. "5. That all the Officers of the College besides taking the State Oaths be sworn to preserve the Rights of the Scholars secured by this Act and that an Action be given at Law to every Scholar for any Violation of his Rights & Privileges Granted by the Law." The petition further asks that the proposed act be printed and published in the form of a bill, "that it may be more critically examined".

An advertisement of this date reads: "Lawrence Kilburn, Limner, Just arrived from London . . . hereby acquaints all Gentlemen and Ladies inclined to favour him in having their Pictures drawn, that he don't doubt of pleasing them in taking a true Likeness, and finishing the Drapery in a proper Manner, as also in the Choice of Attitudes, suitable to each Person's Age and Sex and giving agreeable Satisfaction, as he has heretofore done to Gentlemen and Ladies in London. He may at present be apply'd to, at his Lodging, at Mr. Bogart's, near the New Prunting- Office in Beaver-Street."—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 8, 1754. For further information concerning Kilburn, see Dunlap, Hist. of Art of Design, I: 191.

At the conference in Albany (see June 19), a report of the Massachusetts boundary commissioners is read, and additional instructions are given.—Col. Coun. Min., 1744-95.

Rev. Samuel Johnson, the recently appointed president of college (see Nov. 22, 1755), for the first time meets his first class, consisting of ten students. In the vestibule belonging to the corporation of Trinity Church.—Beardsley, Life and Correspondence of Samuel Johnson, 194-95. This college or "seminary" was soon given by charter the name of King's College (see Oct. 31), and eventually became Columbia University.

Minutes of the proceedings at Albany (see June 19) are laid before the provincial council at the fort in New York.—Cal. Coun. Min., 1792. See Aug. 9.

Rev. George Whitefield arrives in New York from South Caro- lina. He preached every day to very large audiences, and started for Philadelphia on July 30.—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 29, 1754. See Sept. 1.

Trinity vestry orders "That Messr. Livingston & Lefferts have 50 Liberty to take in Sixteen feet of the Churches Ground at the Rear of their lot. . . ." This Billhouse is Erected on Condition that they Build a Stone Wall Six feet high at least at the Extent of the Said Sixteen feet the whole Breadth of the Four Lots they have Leased from this Corporation being one hundred feet. That they Enjoy the Same during the Continuance of their Lease of the Said four Lots and that they leave the Said Stone Wall for the use of this Corporation at the End of the Said Term."—Trin. Min. (MS.). For location of the still-house, see description of A. Pl. 358, III: 863. The nature of this still-house is possibly revealed in an advertisement of the following year for the sale of tune-squirrel therefrom. [Dec. 20, 1755].

Peter Collinson, writing from London to Cadwallader Colden, says he determined to wait on Lord Halifax and "hear from his own Mouth" about Colden's status: "He received Mee in a Very Affable Manner & after He had Heard Mee revive his request for [the place of] leut. of gov. of N.Y. and salary as such, and has since genet. of the Province & to his Memory. He had receivd Mee very friendly & told Me he had received ye Letter was no Stranger to you or your Merch & that He had a high Esteem & Value for you Indeed like a Polite Courtier He said so many Handsome things of you I will not discomposse you by reciting them. He said it was a Little to be regretted that you Embarked with the Late Governor—but Said He, it might be well for the Governor else he had gone longer Lengths."—From the original letter, with Colden Papers, in N. Y. Hist. Soc.

The plan for a union of the colonies, which was proposed at the Albany conference (see June 19), is referred by the provincial council to a committee for consideration.—Cal. Coun. Min., 1755.

On the back of a letter of this date which Dr. Johnson received from his son, the first president of King's College made a rough sketch of what he had in mind for the college seal. In this are seen suggestions for the seal finally adopted (see June 3, 1755) the Latin Motto VIDERIMUS LUMINUM IN LUMINE Tuo appears, also the Greek and Hebrew characters. The central female figure is standing rather than sitting, and the sun is a full luminary instead of a partial orb. The Biblical verses suggested by the inscription which now appears at the base of the entire monument and not to the Pres. Johnson's mind at that time—Johnson Papers (MS.). For reproduction, see Addenda. Cf. "The Device of the College Seal" in Hist. of Columbia Univ. (1904), 19-20, also cuts of seals in ibid., 444.

Hugh Gaine begins the publication of a political weekly, enti- tled The Plebeian, edited under the pseudonym of "Noah Mean- well." The date of the first issue is known from Gaine's announce- ment of it in the N. Y. Merc., Aug. 12, 1754. Although both Hilde- burn and Ford were unable to locate a copy, the N. Y. Society Lib- owns No. 5, which is dated Wednesday, Sept. 11, 1754.—Early Newspapers, II, 427.

Lieut.-Gov. De Lancey addresses the council and general assem- bly in the council chamber in the city hall, urging a union of the colonies for defence. He desires particularly that this province aid the Virginians against the French and Indians, who have "lately attacked and defeated the British Troops under the Com- mand of Col. Washington, on this Side of the Ohio" (see May 28). He says that "we cannot with any Decency, should this Province be attacked, call upon the other Governments on the Continent, or with Reason expect Assistance from them, unless we now cheer- fully throw in our Contributions to the Seals of the other Colonies and aid the French, and drive them out of the Limits of his Majesty's Dominions . . ." He calls attention to the defenceless state of the province:—"View the Fortifications of this City, and let your own Eyes inform you what Repairs are necessary, and what other Places wanting to strengthen and defend it." Albany also is exposed and described to the schoolmen. Among the plans, he advises revising the Militia Act, with a provision added for forming companies of those exempted by law who are able to bear arms; and to provide arms, etc., to be kept in New York and Albany ready for emergencies.—Assemb. Jour., II: 385. The assembly answered the address on Aug. 22 (q.v.). See, further, Nov. 28.

In a long and detailed account of the attempts made by the Episcopalians to secure a charter for the college, Smith writes: "...above the 20 August the Assembly were convened.—But their Expectations were most surprizingly disappointed.—Such had been our unwearied Endeavours in the several Counties by Letters and Agents where the Episcopalians have but a slender Influence that no sooner were the County Members in come in the Design of the Church respecting the College were universally exploded and condemned.—A party College was the most unpopular Thing in the World—All the Town was alive with that subject.—From an original (without date) among the Wm. Smith MSS., in N. Y. Pub. Library, folio 189. See Aug. 21.

22. The general assembly presents an engraven address to Lieut.-Gov. Smith, to his honor and protection. See 20 (q.v.). It begins: "We are of Opinion with your Honour, that nothing is more natural and salutary than a Union of the Colonies for their own Defence, and that it is a reciprocal Duty to be aiding and assisting to each other in Case of an Invasion, but these Principles your Honour will not extend to an unlimited Submission. They point out that the province of New York is now itself most in need of protection. Nevertheless, they assert their readiness to "make such a Provision for the Assistance of our fellow Subjects of Virginia and Pennsylvania, as the Circumstances of the College will admit of."—Assemb. Jour., II: 387-88. See March 26, 1755.

William Livingston writes to Chauncey Whittelsey of New Haven concerning the college. He says: "It was opened last June [see June 5, and July 27] in the vestry-room of the school-house belonging to Trinity Church. It consists of seventy students, or the majority of whom were admitted, though utterly unqualified, in order to make a flourish. They meet for morning prayers in the church, and are like to make as great a progress in the literature as in the sciences. The doctor's [Samuel Johnson, president of the college] advertisement [see June 7] promises stupendous matters. He is even to teach the knowledge of all nature in the heavens above us. Whether he intends to descend as low as he soars on high, and conduct his disciples to the bottom of Tartarus, he doth not inform the public"—Life of William Livingston, by Theodore Sedgwick, Jr. (N. Y., 1853) p. 91.

23. In a letter to the Rev. Simon Satterthwaite, in his will of this date, bequeaths to his wife severel buildings, including a house and lot fronting on "Huddlestone Street." Referring to this property, Pettetreau notes that in 1695 William Huddleston, schoolmaster, and William Greene, bought "two lots on the north side of 'Nassau Street,'... with the condition that each was to give a certain number of feet for a 'new street'; this new street is now Gold Street, north of Fulton Street. 'Nassau Street' was afterwards called 'Fair Street,' and now Fulton."—Abstract of Willii, VII: 54, in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections.

24. A number of Episcopalians, finding that there is great hostility in the assembly to their petition for a college charter, call on Lieut.-Gov. De Lancy, and urge him "to pass the Charter without Delay." Smith writes of this: But he [the governor] thought it best to defer the Matter till the Heat of the people was a little abated, They then pressed that it might pass the Seals, with so much impomortancy that he refused it with some warmth saying, What will you force it upon me?—The News of this Interview affected People very differently. The Bulk of the People were well pleased—pleased beyond Expectation for the Hopes of the Episcopalians were strong & very few Persons knew the pains we had taken, to procure the popular and the success we had reason to promise ourselves. The Story of the hand raised and, turned on their Fury on the Gover?—They charged him with Trimming and Insincerity—and said openly that he had at first projected the Design but to preserve his popularity now dismantled them.—There was by this Means a strong party ag' him and I believe he met now with a great Blow and made more Enemies than he had at any time since Cosby's Administration—The prime Conductors of the Petition were dreigously Charged & as is common their Under Agents expressed the Sentiments of their Leaders—They declared in the open streets they would never ask the Gover' again for a Charter but would go to the King his Master and acquaint the Bishops also of his Conduct especially his Expostior to God in his Errors only Patron in England—After a few Days the House ad-journed till the 5th Tuesday in Oct."—From an original manuscript (without date), entitled "Df Acco of the College," among the Wm. Smith MSS., folio 189. See Sept. 11.

The provincial council is informed by a letter from Gov. Die- widdle that Col. Washington has been defeated.—Col. Coun. Min., 185. See July 4.

Spring Garden, lying south of Ann St., between Broadway and Nassau St., is partitioned by deed, to which is annexed a plan of the lots. A copy of this plan, made May 12, 1806, is in the Bancroft Collection (box B4, folder 71), in N. Y. Pub. Library. See also Jan., 1758. For a historical and topographical account of Spring Garden, see Nov. 1, 1712.

The legislature passes an act for paying £5,000 "towards Assisting the Colony's of Virginia and Pennsylvania to disposes the French and Indians who have rebelled and exerted their arms against Majesty's Lands on the River Ohio and parts Adjacent there-to."—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 998. The contribution was toward the Braddock expedition.—Man. Com. Coun. (1859), 510.

During each succeeding year, the province was heavily taxed to contribute towards the expense incurred in the conquest of Canada. The British government reimbursed a portion of the moneys contributed by the colonies; but, however glorious the result, the people of America felt that the great burden fell upon their shoulders. These causes contributed materially in producing the revolution which resulted in the independence of the United States. For a brief summary of such taxation in this province, see ibid. (1859), 510. For a contemporaneous and connected history of the period, see Smith's Continuation of the Hist. of N. Y., in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections (1859), Vol. V.

The reverend Mr. Whitefield, having returned from Philadelphia on Aug. 31, preaches in the "Presbyterian Meeting" at 5 o'clock before an audience of "near 2000 Persons." He is "extremely pathetick with regard, to the Disturbances, not only on the Frontier of this Province, but likewise on those of our Neighbours."

29. Other clergymen in the city speak on the same subject.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 2, 1754. On Sept. 5, Whitefield preached a farewell sermon in New York, intending to start the next day for Boston (ibid., Sept. 9), but on account of bad weather proceeded to Philadelpia instead, "preaching in divers Places as he pass'd along, to large Assemblies."—Ibid., Sept. 16, 1754.

In a letter to the Rev. Dr. Jonathan Carllam, at Fish Killy, Dutchess Co., William Smith repeats his account of the efforts of the Episcopalians to get control of the college (see July 5). He adds: "The Eyes of the Dutch begin to be opened and could they be brought Acquainted with the History of that Lust o Domination for which the Church of England has long been remarkable and their Abuse of the Dissenters in England we might hope they would exert themselves in Conjunction with the English Presby- terians to oppose the most distant appearances of an Episcopal Establishment which is aimed at and will in a few Years be the Consequence of their Monopoly of the Grand source of Educa- tion."—From original draft among Wm. Smith MSS., folio 189.

32. Hon. Robert Hunter Morris, lieutenant-governor of Pennsyl- vania, arriving from England, comes on shore near the Flat-Rock Battery. He is conducted to the house of James Alexander in Broad Street. Gov. Morris's nephew, captain of the Independent Company (who was formerly Governor on this garrison), arrives with him.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 16, 1754.

Writing to Mr. Miller, member of the provincial assembly from Suffolk, William Smith expresses confidence that the bill creating a free college in New York will pass the legislature because of the popularity of the idea "both in City and Country." He apprehends that the council will pass it. He says his father had "perused the draft of incorporation, which he is now sending to the assemblyman for his examination.—From original draft among Wm. Smith MSS., folio 189.

38. The provincial council issues a warrant to pay Henry Brander for going express to Virginia.—Col. Coun. Min., 596.
A petition of "the Ministers, Elders and Deacons of the Reformed Protestant Dutch Church in the City of New-York" is presented to the assembly, setting forth: "That as the establishing a College within this Colony for the Instruction of Youth in the liberal Arts and Sciences, &c., and the Rise to various Education is of the utmost Importance to their civil, but more especially to their religious Liberties, they conceive it highly necessary, that they as Guardians of the Ecclesiastical Interest of the Dutch Congregations of this City in particular, and the other Dutch Churches in this Province in general, should by all proper Means endeavour to add to the Privileges and Liberties they have heretofore enjoyed under the auspicious Smiles of the British Government; that a College for the Instruction of Youth, in sound Literature, will be very advantageous in general, but unless Provision be made for a Professor of Divinity for the Benefit of the Dutch Churches in this Country, they will lose a main Advantage thereby (and which they prefer to every other Benefit expected from a publick Seminary of Learning) as the Youth intended for the Ministry, will, without that Privilege, at a vast Expense to the Parents, be obliged to reside several Years in Holland or other foreign Protestant Countries; that the Institution of such a Professor would make the Intended College more numerous and flourishing, as their Youths would thereby be encouraged to the Study of Divinity; that as the Dutch are the greatest Number of any single Denomination of Christians in this Province, it may reasonably be expected, that in all Probability, they will be the principal Benefactors of the Intended College; and therefore humbly praying, that the honourable House will be favourably pleased, whenever the Matter of the said College comes under Consideration, they may by the Act for incorporating and establishing the same, be entitled to a Divinity Professor with a reasonable Salary, to be nominated by the Ministers, Elders and Deacons of the Dutch Reformed Protestant Church in this City, and that the said Professor may freely and without control, teach the Doctrines of Faith maintained by their Churches, as established and approved of by the national Synod of Dort, in the Years 1619 and 1628.

"Ordered, That the said Petition be taken into Consideration, when the House proceeds on the Consideration of establishing a College for the Education of Youth within this Colony."—Assemb. Jour., II. 392-93.

The provincial council, William Smith dissenting, approves the draft of a patent to the governors of the college of the province of New York (King's College).—Cal. Coun. Min., 396.

The "Charter of the College of New-York" (King's College) bears this date. For reproduction of the original, engrossed on vellum, and which is still preserved in the archives of Columbia University, see below, Volume IV. The following extractions are from the first printed issue, 1754 (see Nov. 14). It is granted in the name of the king, beginning: "George the Second, by the Grace of God, of Great-Britain, France and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, &c. To All to whom these Presents shall come, Greeting,"

The preamble refers to "divers Sums" which have been raised by lotteries under the provisions of several provincial acts [see Dec. 6, 1746; April 9, 1748; July 4, and Dec. 12, 1753], and appropriated "for the founding, erecting and establishing a College in Our said Government." It recites that Trinity corporation has "set a Part of a Parcel of Ground for that Purpose, of upwards of Three Thousand Pounds Value, belonging to the said Corporation, on the West Side of the Broad-Way, in the West-Ward of Our City of New-York; founding Easterly to Church-Street, between Barclay-Street and Murray-Street, Four Hundred and Forty Foot; and from thence, running Westerly, between and along the said Barclay-Street and Murray-Street, to the North River: And also a Street from the Middle of the said Land, Easterly, to the Broad-Way, of Ninety Foot, to be called Robinson-Street;" and that that corporation has declared it is "ready and desirous, in order to convey the publick Goods, and in pursuance of the Act, intended and proposed to be erected and established in our said Province, upon the Terms of their said Declaration mentioned." The preamble also recites that the trustees, appointed by the act of Nov. 25, 1753 (q.v.), "extending the said Lands offered and set a Part of a Parcel of Ground for the said Purposes, and the said Corporation have given Rise to various Encroachments and Occupations of a College, intended and proposed to be erected and established in our said Province, upon the Terms of their said Declaration mentioned."

The assembly orders that the trustees of the college, on or before Friday next, set and mark off the site of what has been done by them, in pursuance of the Powers and Authorities given them by the said Act" (of Nov. 25, 1751, p. 1).—Assemb. Jour., II. 392. See Nov. 1.
establishing, erecting and building a College on the said Lands, and the more effectual governing, carrying on, and promoting the same, and instructing of Youth in the Liberal Arts and Sciences."

The terms of the grant, in two paragraphs, follow thus:

"Wherefore, We being willing to grant the reasonable Request and Desire of Our said loving Subjects; and to encourage the said good Dr. Samuel Johnson, D.D., in promoting a liberal Education among the Inhabitants of the said Province, and to make the same as beneficial as may be, not only to the Inhabitants of Our said America, Know Ye, That We, considering the Premises, do, of our especial Grace, certain Knowledge, and more Motion, by these Presents, will, grant, constitute and ordain, That when, and as soon as the said Rector and Inhabitants of the City of New-York, in Communion of the Church of England as by Law established, shall legally convey and assure the said herein before-mentioned Lands, to the Corporation, or Body Politick, erected and made by these Our Letters Patent, that there be erected and made on the said Lands, a College, and other Buildings, and Improvements, for the Use and Conveniency of the same; which shall be called and known by the Name of King's College, for the Instruction and Education of Youth, in the learned Languages, and liberal Arts and Sciences: And that in Consideration of such Grant, to be made by the Rector and Inhabitants of the City of New-York, in Communion of the Church of England, as by Law established, the President of the said College for the Time being, Shall, forever, hereafter, be a Member of, and in Communion with the Church of England, as by Law established: And that the Governors of the said College and their Successors, for the Time being, and the Body Corporate and Politick, in Deed, Fact and Name; and shall be called, named and distinguished, by the Name of The Governors of the College of the Province of New-York, in the City of New-York, in America: And them, and their Successors, by the Name of, The Governors of the College of the Province of New-York, in the City of New-York, in America, one Body Corporate and Politick, in Deed, Fact and Name, really and fully, We do, for Us, Our Heirs, and Successors, erect, ordain, make, constitute, declare and create, by these Presents; and that, by that Name, they shall and may have perpetual Succession. And We do, for Us, Our Heirs and Successors, for the Continuance and better Establishment of the said College, will, give, grant, ordain, constitute and appoint, that, in the said College to be erected and built upon the Lands aforesaid, there shall from henceforth, for ever, be a Body Corporate and Politick, consisting of the Governors of the College of the Province of New-York, in the City of New-York, in America."

The following persons are appointed "Governors:"

"The most Reverend Father in God, Our Trusty and Well-beloved Thomas Lord Archbishop of Canterbury, and the most Reverend the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury for the Time being; The Right Honourable the Earl of Lincoln, and the Earl of Oxford, in the Province of New-York; The Governor of New-York, in the City of New-York, in America, one Body Corporate and Politick, in Deed, Fact and Name, really and fully, We do, for Us, Our Heirs, and Successors, erect, ordain, make, constitute, declare and create, by these Presents; and that, by that Name, they shall and may have perpetual Succession. And We do, for Us, Our Heirs and Successors, for the Continuance and better Establishment of the said College, will, give, grant, ordain, constitute and appoint, that, in the said College to be erected and built upon the Lands aforesaid, there shall from henceforth, for ever, be a Body Corporate and Politick, consisting of the Governors of the College of the Province of New-York, in the City of New-York, in America."

The governors shall meet yearly, on the second Tuesday of May, in New York City. Fifteen or more, being met, shall constitute a quorum. A major part of them shall have power to adjourn "from Day to Day, as the Business of the said College may require." The Archbishop of Canterbury and the "First Lord Commissioner for Trade and Plantations" shall, at their first meeting, take the oaths appointed by the act of parliament of Geo. I, Chap. 13 (the text of which is found in Pickering, Statutes at Large, XIII: 187; see also Aug. 20, 1715); shall subscribe to the declaration required by the first Act, 25 Chas. II, 26 Geo. I, (Pickering, op. cit., VIII: 393; see also March 20, 1671); and so to an oath to execute their trust faithfully. The justices of the supreme court are authorized to administer these oaths to those who become members of the college corporation.
concerning the Premises, or any of them, before the Escheating Oct. the President, or not Receipt or of or any other reason, the place of a governor (not holding the office by 31 reason of some other station or office) becomes vacant, the gov- ernors are to elect another in his stead. In case of misdeemeanor in the office of president, fellow, professor, or tutor, the governors are given power and authority to suspend or discharge such the officers, or redress. Misrecitation, or to suspend such officers, or discharge such persons, upon complaint in writing, examination, and due proof.

The major part of any of the governors may and shall appoint, from time to time, a treasurer, clerk, and steward for the college, and determine "their respective Business and Trusts."

They shall "direct and appoint what Books shall be publicly kept and taught in the said College, by the President, Fellows, Professors and Tutors."

They shall, "under their Common Seal," make laws for the government of the "College and Students, and Ministers thereof;" but these shall not be repugnant to the laws of England or this province, and shall "not extend to exclude any Person of any religious Denomination whatever, from equal Liberty and Ad- vantage of Education, or from any the Degrees, Liberties, Privi- leges, Benefits, or Immunities of the said College, on Account of his particular Tenets in Matters of Religion." (This section of the charter was published in the "Patent" and Nov. 4.) Such the Professor's Ordinances and Orders are, "by these Presents, for Us, Our Heirs and Successors," ratified, confirmed and allowed "as good and effectual, to bind and oblige, all and every the Students and Officers, and Ministers of the said College."

"The governors, or the major part of any fifteen or more of them, at any of their meetings, shall put forth such laws, etc., as inflect upon the students "the greater Punishments of Expulsion, Suspension, Degradation and publick Confession;" while the president, fellows, and professors, or any of them, shall put forth such laws, etc., as effect the lesser Punishments."

The charter next ordains "That these shall be forever hereafter, publick Morning and Evening Service, constantly performed in the said College, Morning and Evening, for ever, by the President, Fellows, Professors or Tutors of the said College, or one of them, accordance on the Duty of the Church as established; or such a Collection of Prayers out of the said Liturgy, with a Collect peculiar for the said College, as shall be approved of, from Time to Time, by the Governors of the said College, or the major Part of any Fifteen or more of them, convened as aforesaid."

The governors are given power and authority to visit, punish, place, or displace officers or students, and "to order, reform and redress, All, and any the Disorders, Misdemeanors and Abuses in the Persons aforesaid, or any of them," as directed and declared in the charter. Also, to "encourage the Students of the said College, to Diligence and Industry in their Studies," the governors are empowered, "by the President of the said College, or any other Person or Persons by them authorized and appointed," to give "any such Degree or Degrees, to any the Students of the said College, or any other Person or Persons by them thought worthy thereof, as are usually granted by any or either of Our Universities or Colleges, in that Part of Our Kingdom of Great Britain, called England." The president, or other person appointed for the purpose, is authorized to "sign and seal Diplomas or Certificates of such Degree or Degrees, to be kept by the Graduates, as a Testimonial thereof."

The college corporation is given a common seal by the charter, under which the governors "shall and may pass, all Grants, Diplomas, etc., and which shall be engraved "in such Form, and with such Devices and Inscription, as shall be agreed upon by the said Governors . . .;" and it is made lawful for them, "as they shall see Cause, to break, change, alter and new make the same . . ."

The governors shall appoint "all other Inferior Officers or Ministers, which they shall think convenient and necessary for the Use of the College, not herein particularly named; who shall hold their positions during the will and pleasure of fifteen or more of the governors," convened as aforesaid.

Lastly, the charter, on being entered of record or enrolled, shall be effectual in law, "notwithstanding the not Reciting or Miserere, or not Naming or Misnaming of the aforesaid Officers, Franchises, Privileges, Immunities, etc.;" and "notwithstanding a Writ ad quod Damnum, hath not issued forth, to enquire of or

Because "the clamour was so great," the charter was not deliv- ered to the governors of the college until May 7, 1755 (p. 4).—See Hist. of Columbia Univ. (1904), 10, citing Chandler's Life of Johnson.

The conveyance of Trinity's lands to the college was made on May 13, 1755 (p. 5).

In a letter to the governors of King's College, Dr. Johnson accepts the appointment to the presidency, on condition that he shall "be at liberty to retire to some place of safety in the country whenever the small-poxx should begin to rage in London, or to reside in the city."—Chandler, Life of Samuel Johnson (1805), 92.

No copy of the original letter is found with the Johnson Papers at Columbia Univ. The conditional character of Johnson's acceptance of the appointment appears, further, from Barclay's letter to him of Nov. 4 (p. 7).

Estimates and drafts of the charters proposed for New York City and adjacent places, are brought from the governour to the assembly.—Assem. Jour., II: 403.

In response to the order of Oct. 25 (p. 4), William Livingston, one of the trustees of the college for N.Y., delivers his report (signed by him alone) to the assembly. Soon after, Benjamin Nicoll and James Livingston, two of the other trustees under the same act of appointment (see Nov. 25, 1751), present a report signed by John Chambers, Daniel Hornsmanden, Edward Holland, James Livingston, Benjamin Nicoll, and Abraham de Peyster,—all the other trustees. It is ordered that the two reports be entered at large "on the Journal of this House."

The latter report, which is entered first, shows that they adver- tised "that the said Monies $5,443:18 were to be let to Interest, and have accordingly put out the same, and also the Monies raised by the Third Lottery, as shown by a schedule annexed. They further show, that an Offer or Proposal, hath been made to them by the Rector and Inhabitants of the City of New-York, in Com- munion with the Church of England, as by Law established, to give any reasonable Quantity of the Church Farm (which was not let out) for erecting and Use of a College [see May 14]. And the said Trustees further show, that no Proposal hath been made to them by any other Person, nor any Donation given, to their Knowledge. They further show, that they have agreed, and ordered, that an Advertisement be published again [see Oct. 8, 1753] in the News Papers, to notify all Persons in arrears for Interest on their Securities, to them, to discharge the same without Delay, or they may expect to have their Bonds put in Suit. And that the Trustees have more Money to let, on the Terms in their former Advertisement mentioned, being great Part of the Money raised by the last Lottery, very lately paid in by the Man- ages of said Lottery. They have further agreed, and ordered, that particular Letters be wrote to those Persons whose Securities appear in the least dubious, to discharge the same, or give better Security, or that they must expect Suits for the Recovery of what is due from them respectively." The schedule annexed, it is stated, shows "the Amount lent in several Lotteries hereinafter mentioned, directed to be paid unto the Trustees for erecting a College . . . It shows, first, a list of bonds, and one mortgage (and bond), 11 securities in all, ranging in value from $143:18 to $500, and total $1,443:18, to which are added two bonds and one mortgage (and bond), making a total of $494:12.

This is followed by a statement of returns from the several lotteries, thus:
William Livingston’s report covers about six folio pages of the printed Assembly Journal. He announces that, at a trustees’ meeting on Oct. 30, he protested against the incompleteness of the majority report, because it did not contain the whole of the Proceedings of the said Trustees, in pursuance of the Act of 1564, and particularly a certain Petition [see May 20, 1747] preferred by the said Trustees to his Honour the Lieutenant Governor, for a Charter of the said College, and the said William Livingston’s Protest against the said Charter and Petition.” He prefaced his report with a logical exposition of his reasons for making it. The report itself is a review of the transactions of the trustees. He mentions the advertisement ordered by the trustees on Jan. 12 and published in the Post-Boy of Jan. 20, 1753 (p. v.). For the financial results of their efforts, he refers to the schedule attached to the Nov. 1 report of the other trustees (side 926). He then refers to the offer of land made by Rev. Henry Barclay for the use of Trinity Church to the trustees on April 8, 1751 (p. v.). He next makes reference to the letters written to Rev. Dr. Johnson and Mr. Whitelaw, and their replies (see Nov. 22, 1755; Feb. 11, and May 9, 1754), inviting them to come as “President” and “second Master,” respectively. Finally, he reviews the proceedings of the trustees of May 16 and 20, 1754 (p. v.), concerning the presenting to the lieutenant-governor, for his approval, the draft of a charter; and he concludes his report with his extended protest of “twenty Reasons,” dated May 16, and considered by the trustees in their meeting of May 20, 1754 (p. v.).—Assemb. Journ., II: 396-402.

The assembly ordered that the reports be taken into consideration on Nov. 6—ibid., II: 402. On that day, it was “Resolved, Nomine Contradictoris, That this House will not consent to any act to be done by the Monies raised by Way of Lay Rates, for erecting and establishing a College within this College for the Education of Youth or any Part thereof, in any other Manner whatsoever, than by Act or Acts of the Legislature of this Colony, hereafter to be passed for that Purpose.”

At the same session of the assembly (Nov. 6), Capt. Robert Livingston, a member of the assembly from Livingston Manor, moved “for Leave to bring in a Bill, further to establish and to incorporate a College within this Colony [see De Lanecy’s charter grant of Oct. 31], for the Education and Instruction of Young in the liberal Arts and Sciences.” It was ordered “That Leave be given accordingly.”—Ibid., II: 484. See Nov. 6, for Livingston’s bill.

For the Rev. Henry Barclay’s and Mr. Benjamin Nicoll’s views of the proceedings of Nov. 1, see Nov. 4.

David Provoost and others petition the common council for a contribution toward buying a house and lot adjoining the passage from Bayard (now Stone) St. to Mill St., as they desire to widen this passage into a street. They explain “That at present the only passage thro’ Mill Street Commonly Called the Jews Alley is a Narrow Alley of about four feet wide from the upper end of the said Street to Duke Street and that for want of a more convenient Passage and [...], to the said Mill Street of a sufficient Breadth to admit the passing of Carts and other Carriages the Inhabitants of ye Said Street Labour under many and Great Inconveniences Nor would The Petitioners only reap the Convenience of a Passage Through the said Street but should as they Conceive be of General Utility and more especially to the Carmens as furnishing them with a much shorter and better way for Carrying many Goods which they are [sic] present obliged to carry round either through the High Street or Princes Street.” The petition further recites “That the Inhabitants and proprietors of the Houses and Lots in the said Mill Street have now an Opportunity of purchasing at a very reasonable price a House and Lot of Ground adjoining to the Said Small Alley which they conceive to be the most proper place for opening a good Passage into the said Street as it adjoins to the Head thereof.” They add “that the removal of the said House would be a great and Singular Advantage in Case of a Fire at the upper end of the said Mill Street of which this City has of late had a recent Proof in the Danger and Extremity to which the Neighbourhood was reduced for want of a free Passage, and the like Melancholy Occasion.” The petitioners, only six in number, have contributed £205 for the purpose and need £774 11 for the deficiency. This they ask the common council to grant. It is ordered that £50 be allowed and paid to the said petitioners this Day three years provided they will Convey to this Corporation . . . the Ground mentioned in the said petition to be and Remain a free and publick Street to and for the Inhabitants of the City of New-York for ever.”—M. G. C., VI: 475-76.

On April 9, 1755, the mayor “produced to the said Board the Releasement of David Provost, Cornelius Clapson, Mr. Earnest, and Elias Delesbroes” and others “of the House Joining the alley Leading from Bayards Street to Mill Street, for the use of a Publick way or Street for Ever, for the Consideration of Fifty Pounds to be paid to them, the first of November 1755,” and it was ordered that the releases be recorded in the books, and that the mayor execute a bond for the payment of the £50.—Ibid., VI: 8-9. On June 20, 1759, the city paid the amount to the bondsmen.—Ibid., VI: 176. The passage, widened according to these provisions, is now Mill Lane.—See Landmarks Map Ref. Key, III: 1006.

The common council repeals the fifth clause of the “Law for paving & Cleansing the Streets Lanes and Alleys . . . and for preventing Nuisances.” This clause relates to encumbrances. Instead, it is now provided that “if any person or persons whatsoever shall take up or apply the name of any street, or part of a street, in the City or Liberties thereof, to the use or benefit of any person or persons, or for the benefit of any person or persons by whom or by whomsoever it shall be taken up or applied, then the mayor shall order the said street or part of the street, to be named by the mayor and aldermen of the ward where such street or part of a street is situated, to be called by some other name wherever it shall be thought fit by the mayor and aldermen of the said ward.”—M. G. C., VI: 476-77. For summary of earlier provisions relating to encumbrances, etc., see Dec. 11, 1656.

An amendment is passed by the common council to the first clause of the “Law to prevent Strangers from being a Charge to this Corporation” (see April 24, 1751), the new provision requiring that the master of a vessel shall, within two hours after arriving, report to the mayor, recorder, or the alderman of the ward where the names of all passengers and strangers whom he brings into port.—M. G. C., VI: 476. For an early ordinance of this character, see Jan. 20, 1676.

Rev. Henry Barclay writes to Rev. Dr. Samuel Johnson, the president of the college, reviewing the assembly transactions of Nov. 1 (p. v.), including William Livingston’s submission of a separate report, “containing his famous Protest, etc.” He continues: “This occasioned a great ferment in the House, and issued for that day in a resolve that Livingston’s Report should be printed at large, and the affair postponed to further consideration on Wednesday next [Nov. 6, p. 6]. They had a majority of fourteen to eight, but three of our friends were absent, and it was with much difficulty that they were prevented from censuring the conduct of the Trustees and returning thanks to Livingston. We were all afraid that this would have retarded the Sealing of the Charter, and some well wishers to the thing would have consented to the retaining of it, had it not the Governor had recorded the book of City Deeds, and that for town on Saturday [Nov. 2] and fixed the Seal to it [see also Post-Boy, Nov. 4, to same effect]; and to do him justice, he has given us a good majority of Churchmen, no less than eleven of the Vestry being of the number. There are but eight of the Dutch Church, most of them good men and true, and two High Scots. We are, however, puzzled what to advise you as to resigning your mission [at Stratford, presumably]. I have been with Mr. Chambers this morning, and though it be the opinion of most of the gentlemen that you ought to resign and trust to Providence for the issue of things and that you should not be immediately, yet we would rather choose, if possible, that you should just get off the resignation. for a fortnight or three weeks, and come down immediately, because some are not so clear with regard to the £500 support [see July 4, 1753], though others think we cannot be deprived of it. But now this conversation with Mr. Chambers we have had some glittering light. I went from Mr. Chambers’ to Mr. Watts’ house, and there met several of his members coming out of his house, whom, as he told me, came to make proposals for an accommodation, and all they desired was a Dutch Professor of Divinity, which, if granted, they would all join us, and give the money. This I doubt not will be done unless the Governor should oppose it, who is much attached to this Dutch for purposes of state, head, but I make no doubt but he may be pacified. . . . The whole number [of governors] is forty-one seventeen ex officio and twenty-four private gentlemen, in which number there are at present but eight of the Dutch Church, the French, Lutheran, Presbyterian Ministers, and William Livingston—so that we have a majority of twenty-nine to twelve; and in these twelve are included Mr. Richards, John Cruger, Leonard Lispenard, and the Treasurer, all our good friends.”—Hist. of Columbia Univ., 7,8, citing Beardshill’s Life of Johnson.

Another explanation of the proceedings which determined what the charter provisions should be is contained in an anonymous pamphlet, the title-page of which reads: A Brief Indication of the Proceedings of the Trustees relating to The College. Containing A Sufficient Answer To The Late Famous Protest, with its Twenty Unanswerable Pleas by an Important Hand. New-York: Printed and Sold by H. Gaine, at the Printing-Office in Queen-Street, between the Fly and Meat-Markets, 1754. The author was Benjamin Nicoll, a lawyer of distinction in New York, one of the trustees named in the act of Nov. 25, 1734, and one of the governors named in the charter (Oct. 31); he was a vestryman of Trinity Church and stepson of the Rev. Dr. Johnson.—Hist. of Columbia Univ., (1902), 12. Referring to William Livingston’s papers in the Independent Reflector (see March 22, 1753), he says: “. . . The Drift and End of those Papers, I clearly perceived by this Time, was, to set the different Sects of Christians, at Variance with the Church of England, and to embarrass and obstruct the Affair of the College, as much as was possible; that in the Interim, the favourite College of New-Jersey, founded on a Scheme, agreeable to his own Sentiments, and vigorously prosecuted at Home and Abroad, might take such Root, as not easily to be hurt by any Thing that could afterwards be done in this Government, even though we all should join in erecting a College here. . . . The Members of the Vestry of Trinity-Church, (who, as several of them assured me, at first, thought of no such Thing) finding with what Warmth and unbeseeming Zeal, they were attacked, and that this Writer was not only stupid, but they enter into every Sect of Christians, and also was endeavouring entirely to banish Religion from the College, as much as in him lay: They then thought it their Duty, as Christians, and in Justice to their Constituents, to take at least some Care, that they did not part with the Lands they were intitled to. I say, I think wisely, came to this Resolution, viz. That they [Trinity corporation] would not part with their Lands, but upon the Conditions since mentioned in the Charter. The Vestry of that Church (as one of the Trustees [of the college], whose Veracity I can depend on, assures me) acquainted the Trustees with this Resolution. Thus I have stated the Fact, as to this Transaction of the Members of the Vestry of Trinity-Church, as the same truly happened; and are the only Steps that I have heard, or is pretended, have been taken by them, in order to obtain a Charter; and thus much I thought necessary to relate, that it might clearly appear to all, that there was no blame to be found in their Reason to sound the Trumpet against the Church, whatever there may be against a few particular Members of it. [p. 5] . . .

I must beg Leave to observe, the extreme Favour of his Wm. Liv. to the Proceedings, in wisely setting up a Man of Straw, a mere Chimera and Imagination of his own over-heated Brain, which he has pleased to call, Trinity-Church-College [see May 29], which Thing, or Being, is, I am certain, no where to be found, on the Face of the Earth: A Notion which, I think, it is impossible that it can be. It was proposed for any other End, than to raise a Calumny and Noise against the Members of that Church, as though they were ingrossing, and had actually taken into their Hands, the sole Government of a College, that then did not, nor ever will, I believe, exist; whether this was acting the Part of a Man of Candour and Honour, I shall leave others to judge.” (p. 8.) Nicoll then answers Livingston’s twenty “unanswerable Reason” (see May 20). (pp. 9-12). Presumably, his Indication made the agitation about the College, “Mr. Livingston” (Capt. Robert Livingston of the Manor of Livingston) introduces a bill in the assembly, as permitted on Nov. 1 (p.v.), entitled “An Act, further to establish and to incorporate a College within this Colony, for the Education and Instruction of Youth in the liberal Arts and Sciences.” It had its second reading the same day, and was recommitted the same year of the whole House.”—Assemb. Jour., II: 404. On Nov. 26, when the bill was “to be the Subject of this Day’s Deliberations,” further consideration of it was postponed to the next meeting, on motion of Capt. Walton, who said the bill was “of the utmost Consequence to the People we have the Honour to represent, with Respect both to their religious and civil Liberties, and the Season of the Year being so far advanced, as not to admit of so much Time, as will be necessary to consider all the Parts of it, with that Attention its vast Importance requires.” The House ordered that, in the meantime, it be printed by the public printer, James Parker.—Hist. IV: 419. It is printed in the Journal of the assembly of the same date.

This, bill, of which William Livingston was the author, is an extended amplification and modification of the terms of the college charter (see Oct. 31), and embodies the points raised by Livingston in his pamphlet, and agreed to in the Independent Reflector the year before (see March 22, 1753). Nothing further appears to have been done with the bill; it being evidently supplied by further measures to raise money for the college by lottery (see Dec. 7, 1754), and by The Additional Charter of 1755 (see May 20, 1755 Trinity Church, Dec. 1754). It is worthy of note, also, in this connection, that the names of the dignitaries, officials, and gentlemen, appointed by the charter as governors (see Oct. 31) were placed on record in a document of this date, endorsed “Names for Gov’t of Kings College,” which is now preserved in the State Library, Albany (Col. MSS., LXXIX: 9).

The provincial council at New York considers letters relating to the campaign against the French on the Ohio and the Kennebeck, and refers them to the assembly; also one from the lords of trade relating to a general union of the colonies (June 19 and Aug. 9, 1753), which is likewise referred.—Col. Jour., III, 508-509.

The provincial council orders that the charter for King’s College be printed.—Col. Coun. Min., 397. Four days later, its publication was announced by the following advertisement: “Just published and to be sold at the New-Printing-Office in Beaver Street, and against the Green, and three pence covered with Marble-Paper; and one Shilling in blue Paper.”

“The Charter of the College of New-York in America: Printed by Order of his Honour the Lieutenant Governor, in Council. Also, to be sold at the same Place, Price Nine Coppers, The three and therefore the Vexes of the General Assembly, wherein is contained the Reports of the Trustees appointed to receive the Monies raised for the College in this Colony.”—N. Y. Post-Rev., Nov. 18, 1754.

The provincial council grants a patent to Rodman and Woolley for a ferry between New Rochelle and Sands Point, L. I.—Col. Coun. Min., 397.

De Lancey, in a written message to the assembly, states that he has lately received a letter from the lords commissioners for trade and plantations, “In which,” he says, “after observing the Unreasonableness of the Assembly’s meddling in the executive Part of Government, desires that the Vexes of the General Assembly be drawn out of the Treasury by Warrant of the Governor and Council only, agreeable to his Majesty’s Instructions; their Lordships take Notice, that as it is a Point insisted on by you, that the Revenue, even for Services of a permanent Nature, should be granted only for that purpose, during the middle of November; the desire of granting the Revenue only annually, may, from Time to Time, revive the Pretensions of the Assembly to a Share in the executive Part of the Government, since such annual Grants may be annually
The provisions of the Act to frame a Bill for the better regulating the conduct of the Government as may be necessary, even to the very Existence of the Colony.“ De Lanecy presents an argument in support of this position of the British government.—\emph{Assemb. Jour., II:} 409.

On Nov. 25, the assembly replied to the message by saying they had "no intendment to proceed on any of his Majesty's just and rightful Prerogatives, or to endeavour to wrest out of his royal Hands, any Part of the executive Powers of Government, by the Nomination and Appointment of Officers, or in any other Respect whatsoever." They added: "But as we humbly conceive, the Magna Charta of allMajesties Support is no Law of Prerogatives, and is a Method, which not only we, but our neighbouring Colonies have, and do enjoy; we humbly beg Leave, to declare to your Honour, that in Faithfulness to the People of this his Majesty's loyal Colony, we can by no Means recede from it."—\emph{Ibid., II:} 410-11. These and other statements in the assembly's reply evince the determined resistance, already grown strong, to Great Britain's efforts to divest the colonies of these powers of local self-government. See April 15, 1741. See also Becker, "Hist. of Political Parties in the Prov. of N. Y., 1760-1776," in \emph{Bulletin of Univ. of Wisconsin, N. S.,} 246, History Series, Vol. II, No. 1.

A joint committee from the two houses is appointed to consider the model of a floating battery, invented and exhibited by Capt. Morke, report that they consider it "an ingenious Invention," but more calculated to be employed against fortresses on land, where it can be anchored in shallow water, than in deep waters.—\emph{Jour., Jan. 5, 1741.}

Dr. Johnson writes to his son that the assembly has not yet appropriated the money for the college, but that hopes are entertained that a bill "which gives us the money & at the same time provides for a Dutch professor" will secure enough votes of the Dutch members to ensure passage. If not, they will raise money by subscription to "answer the End for the present." It is said by the mayor, Johnson states: "that I am to have £255 paid me this week—I believe I must send my final Resolution next post to resign.—But the Reflectors [see Mar. 22, 1753] you see have got Gainjet to print for them & are got to scribbling again." He expresses a desire to have his "Desk & Book Case & Books in it" and a few other things sent to him.—\emph{Johnson Papers (M.S.).}

Hugh Gaine begins publishing, in \emph{The New-York Mercury,} a numbered series of weekly political essays entitled "The Watch-Tower." These continued through Nov. 17, 1755 (No. 52). The N. Y. Hist. Soc. has Nos. 1 to 6. Hildebrandt says that the series was issued also separately; but Ford found none in separate form, excepting No. 53 (Jan. 16, 1756), which appeared as a broadside.—\emph{Early Newspapers, II:} 419. Reference is made to "The Watch-Tower" in the first issue of \emph{John Englishman} (see April 9, 1755).

In a message to the assembly, Lieut.-Gov. De Lanecy, answering the objections of the dissenters and inhabitants of the Fortifications, the Necessity of repairing them, and of erecting others. He also states: "The Paper Money in this Province hath fallen very little in its Value, and held its Reputation, so that Twenty Shillings, passes now equal to Eight or Nine Pounds, of the Bills of some other Provinces, owing in a good Measure to the solid Funds upon which the Bills of this Colony were emitted." He therefore recommends passing a bill "with a suspending Clause," for emitting £40,000, "to be sunk by a Tax of Five Thousand Pounds a Year, on Estates real and personal, to commence in the Year 1757, when the present Taxes will cease. The Bills to be declared not legal Tender for Debts contracted in Great-Britain. As this Fund would sink the Bills in eight Years, which is no long Period, I am persuaded they would keep up their Credit, and be readily received in all Payments."—\emph{Assemb. Jour., II:} 417.

"The Mail being frequently delay'd in passing the New-York-Bay," notice is given that only two trips a week will be made hereafter.—\emph{N. Y., Post-Bay, Nov. 28, 1754.}

Dec.

A manuscript without date among the Wm. Smith papers has the inoration: "Df of Protest intended to have been made by Mr. of the second" and "court"—[see May 25] and Smith's "The view of the Times in Dec. 1754 came up from the House and was rejected by the Council." It reads: "Being Deeply moved of the Importance of the Trust reposed in us by his Majesty for the maintenance of the Just Rights and prerogatives of his Crown—the Rights and Liberties of his Subjects both civil and religious and the General Good and prosperity of the Province We have thought fit for the Justification of our Conduct to Declare the Necessity we are under to Dissent to the major Voat of this house in rejecting this Bill for the reasons following to wit: "Because it appears to us. "1. That there are more than two ways of Establishing a publick College or Seminary for the Instruction of our Youth in the Liberal Arts & Sciences One by Charter the other by Act of Legislation. That a Charter College tho in its first Establishment formed to advance the Publick Good Yet in the very nature of it's Constitution cannot be so stable but that by additional Clauses in future Charters or by surrender or forfeiture it may be Subject to frequent Modulation in New Grants and by the Interest of a few made in future times a publick Grievance and prove Greatly Injurious to the Civil Rights and Liberties of the greatest part of the people.

2. That the Charter Lately Granted is not only LIABLE to this in Convenience but by it's excluding every Denomination of Protestants (Who are not in Communion with the Church of England) from the President Ship of the said College and the Imposing a Liturgy for Divine Service without the Consent of the Legislature of this Province and the Power and Honour of his Majesty's Government Invasion of the Civil & Religious Rights and Liberties of his people and Inconsistent with the present Quiet and ease of his Majestys Subjects and the pleasures [omission] and Prosperity of this Province and pregnant with all those Mischiefs and Inconveniences and many more than are Contain [sic] in our Protestation and Descent to the Grant of the prayer of the Petition for that Charter enter'd in the minutes of Council of the Thirteenth of May Last."

2. Upon perusal of the said Charter since it was printed and published That in the Constitution of it's powers Rights and Remedies for Injuries it is extremely Deceptive and in Divers respects Contradictions Inconsistent & Inadequat to the proposal and is Calculated to serve the particular times and Designs of Scarce one Eighth part of the people of this province with [omission] Injustice & Oppression to the use.

3. That according to the maxims of sound Policy founded on the General Good of the Whole Community no College can be erected within this province that is not agreeable to the sense and mind of the People and the Rejection of this Bill will probably tend to Defeat this Design and prevent the Erection and support of a Provincial College at this time by any act of Parliament.

4. That the Publick money already raised by acts of Legislature for the maintenance and Support of a College within this Province Cannot be applied to that purpose without the Consent of all the Branches of the Legislature and the rejection of this Bill tends to Lead the House of Representatives to the application of the money from the Consolidation of this Province to public use in some other way to the utter Ruin of this Design—"5. That the Design of the Bill brought up by the House of Representatives is entirely free from all the Objections aforesaid and is formed to establish a free College for the Education and Instruction of our Youth in the Liberal Arts and Sciences without any Exclusive Clauses or religious tests or Imposition or the least Violation of the Rights of Conscience and private Judgment in matters that Concern the Worship of God and is calculated to secure an equal Right to all Protestants of every Denomination to Collegiate officers and Preferment provided they are found in other respects sufficiently Qualified for the Discharge of those offices which is a Temperament well suited to the present State and Condition of this province and so well adapted to the Known Equity and Justice of his Majesties most Gracious Disposition and the Wisdom and Policy of the present Government in Great Britain and the Common Good of all the people of this Province of whom at Least Seven Eighths will not be pleased with any other form of Constitution.

5. That the passing of the Said Bill into the Law will remove the Jealousies of the people already raised preserve the Union [that] is at present happily subsists among the Several Branches of the Legislature tend to Lead the House of Representatives [omission] they said their Civil and religious Liberties safe [omission] to think of ways and means to fortify this province against the Common Enemy and be an inducement to them Cherfully to Dec. Support his Majesties Government and to pass good and wholesome laws for his majesty's Service & the promotion of the General Good of the Whole Community and Establish a Lasting peace Tranquility harmony and Good Agreement amongst his majesty's Subjects in the present Ways under which the whole province Whereas the rejecting of this Bill in Order to make way for the Establishment of a College by the Charter lately Granted and an attempt to Draw the Public money raised by the several acts of this province to the erecting and Support of that Charter College in opposition to the wishes of the People as Declared by the present Bill will probably be attended with quite Contrary Effects wherefore We dissent to the vote for the Erecting [rejecting] of this Bill.—From the original among the Wm. Smith MSS., folio 180.

Dr. Johnson writes to his son "that the Reflectors [see Nov. 25] have made such a Stir among the Dutch that it was not tho' advisable to try for a vote of the Assembly this Session, so that that is postponed till the next. . . Mean time it is resolved to have a Subscription to begin with & doubtful money enough will be got twice told to build a presidents house which will begin early in Spring [see July 21, 1755]. And as to my Securities, the Trustees resolve to meet this week & confirm what they did before, nothing doubting but the 500 p. 20d. is in their power & unalterably at their Disposal for my Support."—Johnson Papers (MS.).

Wm. Wood, "The Albany Post," advertises that he has come out of York to Albany "from his House on Thurman's-Dock."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 5, 1754. The "post," as used in these early records, was synonymous with mail-carrier, and not with post-office or mailing system. See also April 6, 1753, and "Thurman's Slip Market-Place" in De Voe's Market-Book, 200-63.

An act is passed for raising 53,125 by public lottery "for a further Provision towards founding a College for the advancement of Learning within this Colony." Abraham van Wyck and Abra- ham Leynen are appointed managers of this lottery; and the methods for conducting it appear to be the same as those pre- vailing at this time for other objects (see Dec. 6, 1746, April 9, 1748, July 4, and Dec. 12 1753). These provide that, if all the 5,000 tickets are not sold by the first Tuesday in June, 1755, the money received for the tickets sold shall be returned, and the lottery shall be void.—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 1027. See June 30, and Aug. 14, 1755.

The legislature appoints Francis Maerschalk and Cornelius Clopper, Jr., commissioners for collecting the excise duty from retailers of liquor in New York City.—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 1000-8. This act amended a previous statute appointing the mayor, recorder, and aldermen as commissioners of this excise. —See Dec. 12, 1755.

The Militia Act of Feb. 27, 1746 (ch. 10) is continued by an act of the legislature, which makes this slight alteration: The former act required "that the Dress of the Troopers of the City of New York when they appear in Arms Shall be Red," but it is now enacted that their dress when under arms "Shall be Blue."—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 1016. The next complete act for regulating the militia was passed Feb. 19, 1755 (ch. 60).

Gov. Shirley, having laid before Benjamin Franklin a new plan of colonial union (cf. June 19), which provided for a colonial congress and British taxation, Franklin sends letters to Shirley, on Dec. 17, 18, and 22, giving his reasons for disapproving of the plan.—Works of Ben. Franklin (Sparks ed.), III: 56-68.

Joseph Murray, chairman of the committee of the council, appointed by Lieut-Gov. De Lancey on Jan. 31 to consider the controverted boundary line between New York and New Jersey, makes an extended report to him. This was printed and sold by Parker, by order of the lieutenant-governor, 1755.—See copy in N. Y. Pub. Library.

Orders are issued by the governor and council that the ship "Neptune," recently arrived from Rotterdam with Palatines, which had been removed from Rotterdam to Turtle Bay for quarantine.—Col. Mun. Min., 397.

The council also orders that French subjects are to leave the city.—Ibid.

Fire breaks out in the city hall, but is overcome without doing any serious damage.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 12, 1754.

The council orders that cannon be lent to Gov. Shirley on his demand.—Col. Mun. Min., 397.

Some time prior to this year, the Friends' meeting-house was erected on Liberty St., 40 ft. west of Liberty Pl.; the congregation coming to this site from its first location, on Liberty Pl. commenced in or about 1802.—Greenleef, Hist. of the Churches, 116-17; cf. Liber Deeds, LXXXV: 431 (New York). See 1802; Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 928; Pl. 174, Vol. III.

Some time prior to this year, the sugar-house of John van Colstrand and George Patterson was erected, at the north-west corner of Trinity churchyard, on the line of the present Church St., south of Thames St.—See Pl. 34, Vol. I. The partnership was dissolved on or about Jan. 17, 1755.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 17, 1755 (in archives of the Hist. Soc. of Penn., Phila.). The building was gutted by fire Nov. 3, 1769 (ch. 53). An advertisement of 1764 showed it to be opposite No. 49 Thames St.—N. Y. Gaz., Feb. 19, 1802. It is said to have been demolished in 1852.—Wilson, Mem. Hist. of N. Y., III: 301. The same authority states that it was used as a prison during the Revolution but it has not been possible to substantiate this statement. The only sugar-house used as a prison seems to have been Livingston's, no Liberty St.—See 1765; 1777; Oct. 11 and 12, 1777.

Some time prior to this date, Nicholas Bayard erected a wind- mill on his land, the present location of which would be on the west side of the present bed of the Gowanus Stream, north of Canal St. It appears first on the Maerschalk Map of 1755 (Pl. 34, Vol. I). It was still standing in July, 1756.—N. Y. Gaz., July 29, 1756; cf. Liber Mar- pages, III: 97 (New York). See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 981. Before this year, Redmond's or Burling's Slip was again called—Lyons Slip. See Pl. 34, Vol. I; see also Aug. 9, 1662; 1755; May 5, 1756; Aug. 15, 1761; Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 988; Pl. 174, Vol. III.

In this year, New York Province was described as "the principal frontier against Canada," and said to be "provided with no very strong fort in the capital, and wants some to secure the entrance of its trade," and to be "in a very advantageous situation of the city of New York, ... marks it for the capital of the English governments on the American continent. The number of inhabi- tants in this colony, in 1732, was taken by the constables of every town, parish, or district; and they were found to be near 65,000. At the same time the houses in the city were counted by the alder- man of each respective ward, and they were found to be something under 1500. Since that time the town has increased in wealth and inhabitants. Many families removed to it from Albany, and the fortresses, in the late French war; yet, by losses from the Indians and French in the exposed back settlements; by the Carthagena expedition, enlistments, presses, and privation, the natural increase of the colony was in some measure retarded by that war. It has received little foreign increase since; and the redundance on Long Island, forced out by the barrenness of its inland parts, mostly removed to New Jersey. So that allowing to the city of New York as many inhabitants as are allowed to Boston, and sup- posing the whole colony at present to be 100,000, that number will be fully adequate." The writer goes on to say that Philadelphia is New York's only rival for superiority, but the fact that the former's harbour is frozen up "nigh three months" of the year must give New York the preference. In 1749, the houses in every ward of Philadelphia "were counted exactly by a set of curious gentlemen, the united sum was 2076 private ones, and 11 houses of worship [see Oct. 14, 1750]. In the description written under a very hand- some prospect of it, taken in 1755 [the Nicholas Scull View], the number of houses are said to be eight, 2100. It is therefore certain that it can't far exceed Boston or New York in people."—State of the British and French Colonies in No. Am. (London, 1755), 19, 31-35.

In this year, G. Duyckinck published "A Plan of the City of New York from an actual Survey made by G. V. Duyckinck, late Engineer on the Part of Gen. William C. Maerschalk, City Surveyor." This plan, which shows the fortifications built in 1745, during the war with France, was printed from the original copper-plate of the Bradford Map, extended and very much altered. Among other features, it shows the part of the Trinity Church farm, which lay north of Fourth Ave., opposite the west side of Broadway, already laid out. Cf. Man. Com. Coun. (1865), 336. It is reproduced and described in Vol. I, Pl. 34.

1755 north-east section of New York drawn during the period 1755–7—showing the Rutgers house, the Bayard and De Lancey estates, and many interesting topographical and other features. This drawing is reproduced and described in Vol. I, Pl. 36a. Plate 36b reproduces an original survey of approximately the same territory, dated Sept. 17, 1757, belonging to the N. Y. State Library.

The negroes' burial-ground, east-north of the present Chambers St., and extending to an indefinite eastern limit near the Fresh Water Pond, is first shown and named on the Maeschkaik Map of 1755 (Vol. I, Pl. 14). Undoubtedly, however, negroes executed near Fresh Water, in connection with the Negro Plot of 1741 (p. 4), were buried here. Later, this burial-place became a general potterfield. See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 927. The negroes' quarters in 1759 were on the East River opposite Blackwell's Island.—See the Manatus Map, Pl. 42 (F), and II: 207.

About this year, a block-house was erected at the southern extremity of the island, within the present limits of Battery Park, as shown on Pl. 34, Vol. I.

On the laying out of Bancker Street (now Madison Street) in 1755, the rear of the Jews' burial-ground was extended to it. When, after the Revolution, Fayette Street (now Oliver Street) was opened, that part of the burial-ground which extended across this street was enclosed, and when, at the beginning of the nineteenth century, Chatham Square was regulated and paved, a part of the front of the burial-ground was taken. There is no absolute proof that this was the original burial-ground which was first granted to the Jews in 1656 (p. 9.), but there is a likelihood that the Jews continued to own it in this locality. There is presumptive evidence of a purchase here in 1682 (p. q.v.). The burial-place was enlarged in 1729 (see Dec. 17, 1729), and thus gradually was altered in size and shape. It remained, with few material alterations, until 1823, "when the Congregation Shearith Israel, the Mill Street Synagogue, applied to Chancellor Kent for liberty to sell the part fronting on Chatham Square, 45 feet to the depth of 88 feet,"—which, being granted, it was accordingly sold to the Tradesmen's Bank for $15,000. Mr. Daly says: "How or in what way this congregation obtained or could convey any title to it, does not appear."—Daly's Settlement of the Jews in No. Am. (1892), 431; see, however, on this point, Mr. Oppenheim's letter, under Dec. 17, 1729. Referring to its later history, Daly says: "Finally, a few years ago, the Bowery was extended through what remained of it, and all that is now left is the small enclosure fronting the New Bowery, before referred to." See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, II: 927.

In this year, according to Edmund Burke, the export of flaxseed from New York Province to Ireland amounted to 12,528 boughheads. He wrote that the inhabitants numbered between 80,000 and 100,000. The condition of the lower class was easy; the better class was rich and hospitable. The entrance of foreigners was then a question by a general toleration of all religious persuasions.—An Account of the Provinces of New England, 1852.

A report states that there have been no census returns for the province of New York since 1718, but according to the best accounts the white population numbers 55,000, of whom 12,000 are capable of bearing arms. The total white population of the British Colonies in America is 1,062,000.—N. Y. Col. Hist., VI: 923. This statement is erroneous, as census figures exist for 1716 and 1719.—See June 4, 1746; May 10, 1749.

Walter Rutherford, in 1800, recorded that in 1755 the number of houses in New York was 2,000.—Rutherford, Family Records and Events, 188. See also the Bancker N.B. in N. Y. Pub. Library.

In this year, Hugh Gaine printed A Catalogue of Books in History, Divinity, Law, Arts and Sciences: . . . To be Sold by Garrett Noel. It was an 8vo pamphlet of 14 pages. So far as discovered by Evans (see No. 7359), it was the earliest known bookseller's catalogue printed in New York. Several earlier ones are known to have been printed in Boston and Philadelphia, the first being one of 1691 (p. 5 in Addenda).

When the second class in King's College was admitted, in this year, an assistant to its president, Dr. Johnson, was appointed as a fellow or tutor. This was his son, William Johnson, M. A. (Yale). Together, they conducted all the exercises of the college: Hist. of Columbia Unive. (1906), 18. The results of their labours passed under the observation of the trustees.—See Sept. 1.

The provincial council issues a proclamation calling an assembly to make provisions for driving the French from the Ohio.—Col. Hist., Min. 398.

Jan. 14th, for putting cannon and stores on board Capt. Barnes' sloop, for Boston, bears this date.—Col. Hist., MSS., Engy, 669.

The common council orders "that one Thousand Muckets fixed with a Bayonet, one Cartridge Box and a Belt for each Cartridge Box be immediately Sent for, each Muskett with its accoutrements not to exceed Twenty-five Shillings." Alderman Oliver de Lassay's offer to lend the money for the purchase is rejected by the council.—M. C. C., VI: 2–3. See also Aug. 7, regarding a lottery to discharge the debt.

A new Staten Island ferry was established this year. In 1748, Sumson, Commines had been granted the right of making his ferry a public one, with an established scale of fees. In 1757, perhaps his ferry did not succeed, or the city desired to secure similar advantages for itself; for, now, on Jan. 16, 1755, the common council appoints a committee to "Enquire into the proper Method for the Erecting and Establishing a ferry to and from this City to Staten Island or to any other Place."—M. C. C., VI: 4. On March 7, they reported their opinion that "the best and properest method to Let and Establish said ferry" was "to treat with those persons Living on Staten Island, who have a Grant from the Crown to Ferry from S9 Island to this City, or any other persons who Incline to the same, in reducing the scale of fees." The committee was ordered to treat with such persons as they might think proper "for the Letting of the ferry to be Erected & Established to and from this City to Staten Island, or to any other place for a Term of Years Not Exceeding five."—Ibid., VI: 7.

On Sept. 22 (p. q.v.), the following notice was published: "This is to give Notice, to all Gentlemen Travellers, and others, that may have occasion of having themselves, Horses, Chaises, or any other Goods, transported to or from New York, to Staten-Island, that the Ferry is now continued to be kept by Orso Van Tyle, at Staten-Island, and Abraham Bockee, at the Whitehall Ship, in New York, in Company, they having three Boats, well fitted for the Purpose, for the Dispatch of Business: Any Gentleman in the City of New-York, having Occasion, may (by giving Notice to Abraham Bockee) have Boats at the Times appointed to attend."—N. Y. Post-Boss, Sept. 22, 1755. See also March 11, 1756; and "Staten Island Ferry" (from foot of Whitehall St.), in Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 925. A ferry between New York and Staten Island was first established in 1715 (p. q.v.).

The common council orders that the new "Exchange" be let to Keen & Lightfoot, at £50 for one year, commencing Feb. 11—M. C. C., VI: 7. This firm advertised to open it on that day as a "coffee-room."—N. Y. Merc., Feb. 4, 1755. This was the room over the "Exchange" proper.—See June 10, 1752; Jan. 15, 1754.
The lease was renewed to Alexander Lightfoot, on Jan. 29, 1756, at £40 a year, commencing Feb. 11.—M. C. C., VI: 47. On Jan. 25, 1757, it was renewed to Mr. Sarah Lightfoot, at the same rate, from Feb. 11 to May 1, 1757, and again from May 1, 1757, to May 17, 1758.—Ibid., VI: 78. For the next occupancy, see Feb. 18, 1758.

Sir Peter Warren having petitioned the common council for water lots opposite his property on the North River (M. C. C., VI: 205), it is ordered "that the water Lotts fronting the Up Lotts belonging to the Heirs of St Peter Warren Deceased in the west ward of this City Lying in the North River be granted to them pursuant to ye agreement formerly made with this Corporation by Mr Richard Nicolls for and in Behalf of ye Mr Warren."—M. C. C., VI: 2. The heirs paid the city "four pence 0' foot."—Ibid., VI: 11.

Parker and Weyman publish an editorial reviewing the reasons for the needed defence against the French (see May 20, 1754), and the ways and means for accomplishing it. They begin with the hypothesis: "If Prudence, watchful Prudence, be our Guide, Then every other Point in the Raw. . . . While they are in general to the state of the entire province, they make the following specific reference to New York City:

"If we view the Inhabitants of this City, shall we find them fully instructed in the Art of War, and able to defend to the utmost what they have purchased with infinite Labour and Expense? Here in both, whatever may be our Captivity, we shall doubtless fall short of that Perfection which the Rules of good Discipline strictly requires. And yet unprepared as we are, against the dreadful Day, we are lottering away our Time, regardless of those Means that are necessary to put us in a Posture of Defence. Perhaps we confide in our Numbers. Vain Confidence indeed!

An order on Lieut.-Gen. De Lancey, to John Waldron, for £12, for putting cannon and stores on board Capt. Barnes' sloop, for Boston, bears this date.—Col. Hist., MSS., Engy, 669.

"Postmaster Alexander Cohen makes the following announce-mint: "It being found very inconvenient, to persons concerned in trade, that the Post from New-New to New-Eng, has heretofore set out but once a fortnight, during the winter season; the stages are now altered . . . and the New-Eng Post is henceforth, to go on once a week the year round; whereby correspondence may be carried on, and answers obtained to letters between New-York and Boston, in two weeks, which used, in the winter, to require four and between Philadelphia, as thera and Boston, in three weeks, which used to require six weeks. To but obtain this good end, it is necessary, on account of the badness of the ways and weather, in winter, to dispatch the Post some hours sooner from New-York. Notice is therefore here given, that he begins this weekly stage on Monday next, being the 10th instant, and will be dispatched percy at 9 o'clock in the morning, on that day, and every Monday following."—N. Y. Merc., Feb. 5, 1755.

De Lancy reminds the legislature that the fortifications of New York City are in need "to be repaired, altered, or other works made." He has already applied to Gen. Braddock for an engineer.
He adds that "every House in New-York" was "advised of the bombs, which are constantly going off for some time, and altered, as fast as they shall be shewn to be requisite."—Sir Charles Hardy is named governor of New York.—N. Y. Col.

The assembly resolves itself into a committee of the whole house to consider the lieutenant-governor's message of Feb. 4 on the subject of defence, in which he said, among other things: "In the First Place then, the Fortifications of this City ought to be repaired, altered, and other Works made, where the Commander in Chief, and the Council, have been obligd to the Assistance of the best Engineers that can be had, shall think more of the Publick Common Safety; with this View, and in full Dependence that you will not neglect your own Security, I have already applied to General Braddock, to send an able Engineer to this Place, if one can be spared. Nothing can be more evident to a considering Man, than that the Value every Estate in the Province, depends on the Trade, and of Course on the Safety of this City, so that there is the highest Reason it should be effectually secured." The house passes a resolution expressing the opinion "that for putting the Colony into a proper Posture of Defence, and furthering his Majesty's Defence and Safety in North-America, it becomes absolutely necessary that there be allowed the Sum of Forty Five Thousand Pounds," for which a tax be laid on all estates, real and personal, within the colony for five years; and that bills of credit be emitted on the credit of the tax to that amount. Such a bill is therefore presented for its first reading.—Cal. Coun. Mss., 398; see also the petition of Pl.

A Certificate of the Wealthy, are free: I am of Opinion, that this Method is oppressing the Poor; and must be of the Mind, that it is necessary that the Fort should have Guard kept in it, that it will be a more equitable Method to have Persons hired for that Purpose, to be paid by a Tax, laid on the Inhabitants; as likewise for the City Watch:

May 29. The Governor leaves the City, and goes to Flushing, and better arranged than previous ones, contains most of the old provisions, with additions. For the more recent military laws, see Oct. 3, 1739; Nov. 27, 1741; Dec. 17, 1743; Sept. 21, 1744; Feb. 27, 1746; Dec. 7, 1754. New provisions of this act require that the act of 1743 be printed by the public printer.

A large gun or beacon (of Nov. 27, 1741) is posted on "Mr. Kennedy's Island" (Belleau's Island). Each new beacon "shall be made of twelve or a greater Number of poles set in the Ground at proper Distances aunder, and a pitch Barrel on each pole: and the respective persons living nearest to the same, shall upon seeing the Beacon which may be erected near Sandy Hook, or other place, on Fire, or upon the appearance of six or a greater Number of large Ships, which from proper Glasses they may judge to be ships of War, set fire to a like number of such pitch Barrels; and at every of the said places where Beacons are appointed to be erected, there shall be placed a great Gun, large quantity of Gun powder, and immediately after the said Beacons shall be so set on fire, such Gun shall be discharged from each Beacon, once for every large Ship that appears in sight." A guard or watch shall be kept at each beacon when the governor or commander-in-chief shall so order, in which case the colonels of regiments in the counties where the beacons are shall see that the order is executed by detachments of men from their regiments. These beacons are intended to spread the alarm to New Jersey and Connecticut as well as New York. In case of alarm, every soldier, on notice thereof, is "immediately to Repair Armed to his Colours or parade," or to "set fire to Great Guns, and mount the Habitation of his Captain, unless it be otherwise directed." Special provision is made in this act for the defence of the county of Suffolk, which is so exposed that "a Descent may be made on the Eastern part thereof by Water."

The master or mistress of every slave over 14 years of age is required, within two months after publication of this act, to deliver to the captain of the company, in the respective districts where they reside, a list of their slaves, both male and female. The captain shall list all of these slaves, indicating by name the sex and the number belonging to each owner, and shall transmit the list to the governor. In case of illness, each captain shall appoint a detachment of his company to guard against an insurrection of the negroes. If one or more slaves, over 14 years of age, at the time of alarm or invasion, "be found at the distance of one mile or more from the Habitation or Plantation of their respective owners, without a Certificate from their respective Owners signifying the Errand or Business they are sent upon, it shall be adjudged a Felony without Benefit of Clergy in such Slave or Slaves, and it shall and may be lawful for the person or Persons finding such Slave or Slaves, at or beyond the said distance or Limits, to shoot on or strike down the Slave or Slaves, without being impeached censured or prosecuted for the same."

In case of an alarm or invasion, "every Person, able to bear Arms, that shall leave the City or County invaded, or apparently in danger of being Invaded, without the order of the Commanding officer . . . or shall refuse to obey the just and legal Orders of his proper officer shall suffer the pains of death, by being shot at the head of the Company to which he belongs; and if he be an officer he shall be shot at the head of the Regiment, being first duly convicted by a Court Martial."

Regulations are provided at some length for keeping "Military Watch and Ward" in certain emergencies. This act is the first of the militia acts of the province to contain provisions relating to Quakers, "who from Religious or conscientious scruples are averse to the bearing of Arms."

They are not liable to greater fine than 20s for not enlisting, or for refusing or neglecting to do duty in the militia. Refusing to serve on military watch, or to send a substitute, subjects the Quaker to a fine of 10s. Provisions are enacted also to apply to the members of the church or congregation known as "Unitas Fratrum, or United Brethren," for whose encouragement an act was passed by the parliament of Great Britain, whereby they are exempted from bearing arms or doing military service in any of the colonies, but shall make money payments in lieu of such service. This act provides the same amount of levy and penalty for them as for Quakers. Like the Quakers, also, who refuse to bear arms, they shall, in the time of alarm or invasion, "severally appear provided with one good spade, Iron shod shovel, and pick ax, and six Empty Bags, each Bag sufficient to contain two Bushells, and shall serve as Pioneers, to open any other than military service in such manner as shall be directed by the Governor or Commander in Chief . . ."

The rates, penalties, fines, and forfeitures collected from the Quakers and United Brethren shall be applied toward purchasing arms and ammunition for the use of the respective cities and counties of the province. The act is to be in force for one year — Col. Law N.Y., III. 623.

The enrollment of the Quakers of N. Y. City was made on May 19 (g.t. — Dec. Hist. N.Y. (40 ed.), III. 623. Nevertheless, an additional act, Feb. 19, 1756, was required to effect the collecting of sums levied upon the Quakers and United Brethren. The same act provided for the employment of "Outsiders or Rangers" by the military organization of Albany County — Col. Laws N.Y., IV: 16-18. The enrollment of the Moravians took place on May 5 and 4, 1756 — Dec. Hist. N.Y., III: 623.

There was another amendment on Feb. 26, 1757, requiring (as "more safe") that the beacons should be "Constantly Watched by fit Persons particularly Appointed for that purpose," instead of by detachments from the militia of the several counties where the beacons are. This amendment also extended the provision for the enforcement of payments by the Quakers and United Brethren. It provided that a court-martial should consist of 13 of the eldest of those who should attend to form the court-martial — Ibid., IV: 178-80. For the passage of this next Militia Act, see Oct. 20, 1764.

The levying of a direct tax of £25,000 is ordered by the provincial legislature, for defences, cancellation of bills of credit, and other purposes. The same act provided for the employment of "Outcouns or Rangers" by the military organization of New York City and erecting such other works as the lieutenant-governor or commander-in-chief shall direct (see March 10). — Col. Laws N.Y., III: 1035-50. See Feb. 4 and 21. See also description of Pl. 46-C, I: 366; and Man Com. Coun. (1839), 570.

Commissioners, appointed to purchase materials for fortifications, and the repair of Cossypery battery, are given instructions by the provincial council — Col. Cen Min., 598. See Feb. 19.

Gen. Braddock arrives at Williamsburg, Va., from Ireland, and takes command of the British forces — N. Y. Post-Boy, March 17, 1755.

An order of council requires that entries in the records shall be separately kept for government affairs and those concerning private persons — Col. Cen Min., 399. It will be observed that, beginning on this date, this has been done — Gf. ibid., 414.

G. Dauycinnck advertises for sale "The Plan of the City of New-York, shewing the several Ward Streets, Streets, Lanes, and Allies, Churches, Meeting Houses, Markets, Sugar and Distilling Houses, Water Lots, with the additional New Lots . . . to this present Year. Done from an actual Survey," — N. Y. Post-Boy, March 17, 1755. This plan is reproduced as Pl. 34, Vol. I. See also Winsor, N. & Cen. Hist. of Am. & Brit, 151.

The ferry at the Narrows, commonly called Stillwell's Ferry [see April 3, 1740; June 18, 1751], together with the Dwelling House, Barn, Out Houses, Orchard, and Land thereunto belonging, is to be let for five years, application to be made to Denys Denye (Van Tyle) at the Lower Ferry, N. Y. Post-Boy, March 3, 1755.

Parker and Weyman advertised on March 10: "Last Thursday Mar. [March 6] was published in this City, A Small new Paper, entitled, 6 The Instructor, to be continued Weekly if suitable Encourage- ment, at the reasonable Price of Two Copper each; and with the Provisions who shall purchase it, shall have a Cable to the End of the Year, and then return them to the Printers, they shall have One Copper a-piece back again . . . The Design of that Paper is to communicate to the Publick Select Pieces on the Social Duties, and such Historical or Speculative Remarks as may be thought proper, to be collected from the best English Writers; which if read either in a Morning at Tea, or after Dinner, by the younger Sort, cannot fail of leaving a good Effect upon the Mind, as well as improving them in their Reading and Morals. If any Gentlemen [sic] of Taste will please to recommend any particular Pieces, all due Reward shall be paid to them in their Turn. They are printed in such a Manner, as that they may be bound up in One or more Volumes, and if kept together, may be worth pres- serving, especially to those who cannot readily come at the Originals . . . Occasionally News will sometimes be added likewise. N.B. No Controversy of any Kind will have Admittance. Printed and sold by the Printers or [sic] of this Paper." —N. Y. Post-Boy, March 10, 1755. The advertisement is repeated in ibid., March 24, showing it as "now publishing," and with the added statement: "Any Gentlemen who chuse to take this Paper yearly, on sending in their Names, shall be waited on with them at their Houses." No copy of this paper has been found. —Early Newspapers, II: 421; Brigham, "Bibliog. of Am. Newspapers," in Am. Antq. Soc. Proc. (1917), 444.

The city buys 4,000 shingles for £1. —M. C. G., VI: 5.

The messenger and door-keeper of the common council receives a quarter year's salary of £215. The public whiper's quarterly salary is £215. —M. C. G., VI: 7.

"Payment is made by order of the common council for "Building a fire Engine House on a vacant Lot Commonly Called Rutgers Walk in the East ward." —M. C. G., VI: 6. Rutgers' rowepaw extended along the present Division St. from Chatham St. east to Eldridge St. —See Pl. 36-3a and 42, Vol. I.

A blacksmith and a carpenter are appointed city "Engineers." —M. C. G., VI: 8. Their duties are not defined. They probably were employed in connection with the fire-engines.

Christopher Bancroft and John Dies, having been appointed managers for purchasing materials for fortifications (see Feb. 19), advertised for the sale of iron, timber, plank, iron trucks for carriages, and cannon ball. They will purchase ready money, but will purchase only the best material and at the cheapest rate. Applications are to be made Tuesday and Thursday mornings at the King's Arms Tavern near the New Exchange. —N. Y. Post-Boy, March 10, 1755.

Thomas Pownall, commissioner from Massachusetts, confers with the council, and orders Major General Edward Braddock to New York regarding defensive measures. It is ordered that the assembly be called to meet him in joint committee session. Announcement had been received on March 3 from Gov. Shirley regarding this proposed meeting. —Cal. Coun. Min., 414. At this meeting, which was held at the house of Edward Willard, innkeeper, on the evening of March 26, the council was represented by John Chambers, Edward Holland, and William Smith, and the assembly by Mr. Verplank, Capt. Livingston, Mr. Nicoll, Mr. Cruger, Capt. Walton, and Mr. Thomas. Lieut.-Gov. De Lancey's message to the assembly, on the morning of the 26th, has passed out of the need of considering the subject of raising, equipping, and quartering troops, etc., "until such Time as a Plan of general Union of his Majesty's Northern Colonies for their common Defence, can be perfected, according to his Majesty's Pleasure signified to me by a Letter of the 26th of October last, from His Right Honorable Sir Thomas Oldendorp, Lord High Admiral, and will be ready before you." The results of the committee conference are shown in the records the next day, when they were adopted. These end-orse a scheme of defence proposed by Gov. Shirley, and contain a resolution "That this Colony join therein if the General appointed by his Majesty to command the Forces in North-America, approves of the said Scheme." —Assem. Jour., III: 412.

Thomas Pownall's rise in official life in America is reviewed in Wilson's Mem. Hist. of N. T., II: 294 (with portrait, 295); see also Oct. 29, 1753; Jan. 5, 1758.

Scarroyady, a Delaware sackem or half-kling of the Indians on the Ohio, while in attendance at the provincial council in New York City, reports on his visit to the Six Nations, and Gov. De Lancey makes reply. On May 13, the council issued a warrant to pay Adam vacal, clean, and masterly and his companions at his tavern.—Cal. Coun. Min., 414, 416.

A proclamation is issued offering a reward for the discovery of the persons who plundered the house of James Alexander, in New York. —Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 628. The published proclamation reveals a bounty of more than £200 of gold, silver, and paper money. It offers "his Majesty's most gracious Pardon" to any accomplice who shall "discover" the person or persons guilty. In a newspaper notice, Alexander offers a reward of £50 on conviction, "out of the Money recovered." —N. Y. Post-Boy, March 14, 1755.

"Trinity vestry agrees "with Christian Stover That he have a Lease of the Ground formerly Leased to Arthur Wilkinson being to the Northward of Elias De Gruchys Rope Walk [see May 25, 1752] & between that & the Stockadges and to contain Fifty feet in Breadth & Six hundred feet in Length along the Said Rope Walk for the Term of Twenty one Years from the 25th Instant he paying Twelve pounds £12 Annum with a Covenant that if this Board within the Term Shall think fit to Open Church Street through the Said Land that then for that time he shall only hold the Land from the Broadway to Church Street & pay only Eight pounds £8 Annum Neaslabber to the Board." —Cal. Coun. Min., 414.

Trinity vestry appoints "a Committee to have Lamps put up before the Church in such Manner as they shall think proper not Exceeding the Number of three." —Trin. Min. (MS.).

"To be Lett, For a term of years, in lots of 25 feet each, with half the depth of the land behind each front, from street to street, for yard room, and a garde. The person who builds, to build a house pursuant to the articles allowed by Trinity-Church, to the tenants on said church farm. Any person inclining to hire any lot or lots on the premises, commonly called the Vineyard, adja- cent to Spring Garden, may apply to Col. Thomas Dongan, on Staten-Island; or Mr. John Charleto, at Dr. Farquhar's, in New-York." —N. Y. Merc., March 24, 1755. Regarding the location of, and title to, the Vineyard, see Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 946.

The assembly adopts a resolution "that the Barracks in Fort-George, in the City of New York, be repaired, and such others erected, as may be necessary for accommodating such of his Majesty's Troops as may be posted in this Colony;" also that an address be presented to the lieutenant-governour, "that he will be pleased to give Directions" for this purpose, the expenses to be paid out of the £5,000 "judged in the Treasury for such Serv- ices . . ." —Assem. Jour., III: 419. The law of Sept. 21, 1744 (p. 69), provided for the rebuilding of the barracks in the north-west part of the fort. Maeshalck's Map (1755) shows no other barracks than those in the fort (see Pl. 34, Vol. I), and Smith, in his Hist. Prominent of N. T., refers only to barracks in the fort. In 1757, however, new ones were erected on the Commons.—See Oct. 19 and 31, 1757.

Dr. Johnson that "since, at this time, the number of the College" are "too small enough," through the "good-for-nothing man-agem[ent of our chairman [sic]: reading at this point is doubtful, as everybody is too well known, and we are only used to having our work done by a different person, and the work has not been done by us." —Col. Coll. so that nothing has been done yet, more than was meant. —He has indeed been infinitely to blame, and has made himself thoroughly disagreeable to everybody, and the work has not been done while it might with ease, notwithstanding the Opposition. But as things have been of late, & are, & like to continue, on t he of our Danger & the Affairs in view, we cannot blame him as to

The news of Sir Charles Hardy’s appointment as governor reaches New York by letter from London.— N. Y. Post-Boy, April 14, 1755. The official notification from John Pownall, secretary of the board of trade, apparently, did not reach the governor and council, until May 29.— Cal. Com. Min., 416.

Two Dwelling Houses, a Kitchen and a Stable, on the Church Farm, adjoining Mr. Kuykuck’s, are offered for sale, on a lease from Trinity Church of which 18 years still remain.— N. Y. Post-Boy, April 25, 1755. From other advertisements, it appears that Kuykuck’s house was on Broadway south of Warren St. (see Apr. 5, 1754), and the two houses advertised were probably on Broadway and Robinson St. In 1762, these same houses, which had been acquired by John Dower, were again advertised for sale. One of them was at this time a tavern, having the Sign of King George III.— See Jan. 25, 1762.

Gov. De Lancey returns from Annapolis (see April 6).— N. Y. Post-Boy, April 14, 28, 1755. The council of war, composed of colonial governors, which was held at Alexandria, Va., having April 22, required that the garrison at Oswego be re-enforced, an order to that effect is given by the provincial council of New York.— Cal. Com. Min., 415. See also April 29. A warrant was issued on July 10 to reimburse De Lancey for his expenses on his journey to Virginia.— Ibid., 418.

In this council, three expeditions were planned against the French against Fort Duquesne; against Fort Niagara; and against the fort at Crown Point.

Gov. William Shirley, of Massachusetts Bay, and Lieut.-Gov. Robert Hunter Morris, of Pennsylvania, arrive soon after from the "British American" (Annapolis, Alexandria, and Philadelphia.)— See April 23. "They landed at Whitehall . . . under the Discharge of the Cannon in Fort-George; and were welcomed ashore by his Honour Governor De Lancey, the Members of his Majesty’s Council, and other of the principal Gentlemen of this City. The City Militia was ordered to muster . . . and the Streets were in’ with the Men on their Rest, while his Excellency and the Gentlemen pass’d on into the Fort, where his Majesty’s, and all the loyal Healths, with Success to the English American Enterprise, being first drank, they proceeded, through the Linet still formed by the Militia, to the New-York Arms in the Broadway, where an handsome Entertainment was provided . . . and where the aforesaid Healths were repeated, and went round with great Cheerfulness and Alacrity. The Militia was discharged between two and Three in the Afternoon . . . the Doors, Windows, Balconies, and the Tops of the Houses, being particularly decorated with Red-Clouds, &c. added no small Beauty to the same, and Diversion of the Time." Gov. Shirley left for Boston on May 3.— N. T. Post-Boy, May 5, 1755. The "New-York Arms" was the Province Arms, at the present No. 115 Broadway, kept by Edward Willet.— Landmark Map Ref. The initial steps are taken to establish a quarantine at Bedloe's Island. It is enacted by the general assembly that "all Vessels having the small Pox Yellow Fever or any Contagious Distemper on Board and all Persons Goods and Merchandizes Whatsoever coming or imported in Such Vessels and all Vessels coming from any place infested with such Distempers Shall not come into any the Ports or Harbours of this City or Neer the Same City than the Island Commonly called Bedelloe Island [see June 28, 1755]. And shall be obliged to make their Quarantine there."—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 1091-73. This act was to remain in force for one year only. For its revival, see March 24, 1758, when the administration of the quarantine was transferred from city to province. See also
June 28, 1758.

On May 6, a proclamation was issued ordering that quarantine regulations be observed.—Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 653. On May 25, John Baird, a surgeon of New York, was appointed to examine all vessels suspected of having any contagious diseases on board.
—Ibid., 654. An explanatory act was passed on Sept. 11 (9 o'clock).
Bedloe's Island was later purchased as a site for a pest-house.—

Corporation, would always merit the Contenance of his Honour's Prerogative,avour and Countenance; and convince the World, they had nothing more at Heart than to promote the Glory of God, the true Protestant Religion, and the generous Education of our Youth in the Liberal Arts, and Sciences; and that they doubted not but it would please God to bless and prosper their Undertakings

At this meeting of the governors, there is unanimously adopted a proposal of the Rev. Joannes Ritzema, senior minister of the Reformed Protestant Dutch Church, and one of the governers named in the college charter, asking for an additional May charter.—Hist. of Columbia Univ. (1904), 1; See, further, May

A contributor to the Mercury writes: "About fourteen Months ago [see April 6, 1754], a Number of Gentlemen in this City, sensible that the good People of the Province, thro' an invertebrate Habit, of suffering others to think for them, had often been duped by the perfidious Arts of designing Politicians, set on foot a Subscription for a public Library: Well judging that an Acquaintance with Books, would tend to unshackle the Minds of the People from Subjects. A Design so disinterested, one would think could never have umbrage, to the most flaming Partisans; unless to one, whose partial Prospects terminate, in the total Extinction of human Knowledge. Such however, was the Case. No sooner were the Subscriptions compleat, and a Day appointed for the Election of Trustees, than a dirty Scheme was concerted, for excluding as many English Presbyterians as possible, from the Trusteeship: considered, not by Trinity Church in this City; but by some of her unworthy Members . . . This Scheme a certain Gentleman in this Province, undertook to execute; and by his Emisaries dispersed among the Subscribers, a Number of Copies of such a List of Trustees, as best suited his known Humour and Inclination, and advised many of them, carefully to avoid electing any Presbyterians to the Trusteeship. Strongly prepossessed in favour of his own judicious Choice, the good Man, doubtless expected it would be submitted to, by many of the Subscribers, with a most obsequious Deference. How well his Expectations were answered, the Event of that Election, will best determine. Thus much however is certain, that in spite of his utmost Efforts, the Subscribers were so obstinately impartial, as to choose Persons who, from their own Selections, they imagined could make a proper Collection of Books."—N. Y. Merc., May 12, 1755.

This being the second Tuesday in May, the day appointed in 13 the charter of King's College for the annual meeting of its governors, they meet again at "the New-York Arms" (see May 7).
It was proposed, as the New York Gazette of May 17, 1755, that those who were nominated governors, and were not qualified at the last meeting (see May 7), might be qualified if they were pleased to attend on this day.—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 12, 1755.

At this meeting, the corporation of Trinity Church (see May 12) conveys to the college governors, in fee, "for & in consideration of the sum of ten shillings, . . . all that certain piece or parcel of ground situate, lying & being on the West side of the Broadway in the West ward of the City of New York fronting easterly to Waller Street between Wall Street and Murray street four hundred and forty foot and from thence running westerly between and along the said Barclay street and Murray street to the North River." These streets were only projected at this time; they were laid out several years later.—See Landmark Map Ref. Key, Vol. III, under "Streets." The value of the land is placed at "$6400."—Aehmb. Juris., II, 447. The "express condition" of the grant is that "the President of the said College forever for the time being shall be Member of and in communion with the Church of England as by law established & that the Morning and Evening Service in the said College be the Liturgy of the said Church, or such a College peculiar for the said College, as shall be agreed upon & approved of by the President and Gov-erors of the said College."—Hist. of Columbia Univ. (1904), 11;

The draft of an additional charter for King's College, enabling its governors to appoint a Dutch professor of divinity, is submitted to the provincial council (probably by the attorney-general), and approved.—*Cal. Coun. Min., 399. As appears by the printed copy of this charter (see June 5), it bears this date, at which time it was signed and sealed.

It is given, as was the first charter (see Oct. 31, 1754), in the name of the king. It's preamble outlines the petition to Lieut.-Gov. De Lancey from the governors (see May 7 and 19), which sets forth "That although by Our Letters Patent of Incorporation, bearing Date the Thirty Third Day of October last past [p. 19], the sole Power of electing Professors in said College, is vested in the said Governors: Yet the said Petitioners humbly conceived, that it would tend to the Prosperity of the College, and the Increase of the Number of Students, if Provision could be made for establishing a Professorship in Divinity in the same, for the Instruction of such Youth as may intend to devote themselves to the sacred Ministry, in those Churches in this Province that are in Communion with, and conform to the Doctrine, Discipline and Worship established in the United Provinces, by the National Synod of Dort, on which occasion they have endeavored to send and his Lectures." The petitioners asked that an additional charter be granted for this purpose, and that "the Nomination of such Professor, from Time to Time, be in the Minister, Elders and Deacons of the Reformed Protestant Dutch Church in the City of New York."

In making the grant of this additional charter, is cited the 8th article of the Articles of Surrender of 1664, whereby the Dutch were permitted to enjoy "the Liberty of their Consciences in Divine Worship and Church Discipline;" and mention is made of the king's desire that the members of the Dutch churches, "who are very numerous in Our Government of New-York," shall continue to enjoy such liberty and that they "may always have learned Pastors and Teachers to instruct and assist them thereby," and also his wish "to promote the Prosperity of the aforesaid College, and the Increase of the Number of Students therein."

The charter briefly grants the petition, with the stated requirement that the professor of divinity, before entering upon the duties of the office, shall take the oaths and subscribe to the declaration as provided in the first charter; that he shall hold office "during his good Behaviour, or during Will and Pleasure, according to such Agreement as shall be made between him and the said Minister, Elders and Deacons of the Reformed Protestant Dutch Church, . . . at the Time of his Nomination and Appointment."

He is to be entitled to powers and privileges like those granted to other professors in the college; shall conform to such rules as they are obliged to conform to, and be suspended or discharged in the same manner as they.

This charter is sealed with the great seal of the province, and entered of record for the "Books of Patents" in the secretary's office. Granted by De Lancey, at the fort, 1, the first charter, bears the signature of "Clarke, junior."

It was delivered to the governors on June 3 (p. 5). The provincial council issues a warrant to Bancker and Dice, commissioners (see Feb. 19), for expenses in building fortifications. Later warrants were issued on June 14, July 7 and 25, and Sept. 10 and 15.—*Cal. Coun. Min., 417, 418, 421. See, further, Feb. 19, 1756.

A committee of the common council is appointed "to Lay out the Rioh or high Way from the House of Mr. Benjamin Peck Contingus and adjoining to the House he now lives in near the Fresh Water, and Likewise the Rioh or high Way from the Spring Garden to the said fresh Water."—*M. G. C., VI, 12. The latter road was the present Park Row.—Landmark Map Ref. Key, III, 906. The Peck residence near the Fresh Water has not been located.

Ten members, comprising the major part of the city, were present in a petition to the common council that the keeper of the almshouse, Robert Provost (see March 21, 1750), does not discharge the duties of his office. It is voted that he be removed from office or on before June 14, and Capt. Jacobus Kierstead is appointed in his place.—*M. G. C., VII, 12-13.

Two accounts bear this date: that of John G. Lanning, for painting and glazing at the barracks in New York; and that of Frederick Simonson, for carrying down the day two great guns, and landing one at Staten Island and the other on Long Island, in various barbets and pats.—*Cal. Coun. Min., 417.

The additional charter of King's College (see May 30) is delivered to the governors at their meeting on this day.—*See Hist. of Columbia Univ. (1904), 10, where it is also observed that "The Ministers, Elders and Deacons' seem to have been satisfied with the grant of an authority which they never exercised." See, further, July 26.

At this meeting, the governors adopt a device, prepared by President Johnson (see May 11), for the college seal. The same device, with only a necessary alteration in the name, continues to this day that of Columbia University. For detailed description and explanation of this device, see ibid., 19-20, where is found the added statement that "In a list of the 'Benefactors to King's College' it is stated that 'Mr. George Harison presented us with the Engraving of the Seal which cost 10 Guineas.'"

At this meeting, the "Laws and Orders of the College of New York" are adopted. They relate to admission to graduation, public worship, moral behaviour, behaviour towards authority and superiors, college exercises, and due attendance. These are printed in full in ibid., Appendix B. They were superseded by a "Plan of Education," adopted by the board of governors on March 1, 1763, which is also printed in ibid., Appendix B.

The provincial council records its opinion concerning an application from the engineer of the Crown Point expedition, Capt. William Eyre, for more artillery.—*Cal. Coun. Min., 417.

William Wamsley is paid £276.0.0 for repairing the barracks and magazine in Fort George; and Benjamin Haldreets is paid £315.19. for fuel for Sir Wm. Pepperrell's regiment, encamped on
June 28

The provincial council orders that the additional charter for King's College (see May 30) be printed.—Cal. Conv. Min., 399, 417. As consists of only two pages and a title-page, doubtless it was promptly produced. It's title-page reads: The Additional Charter Granted to the Governors of the College of New-York, in America. Published by Order of His Honour the Lieutenant Governor, in Council. New-York: Printed and Sold by J. Park and W. Weyman, at New-Printing-Office in Beaver-Street, MDCCLX. For its contents, see May 30.

Cannon are returned from Boston.—Cal. Conv. Min., 417.

The provincial council refers to the proper authorities an account of charges for repairing the barracks in Fort George; and, on June 12, an account for erecting beacons.—Cal. Conv. Min., 417.

"Sir William Pepperrell, Baronet, who commanded the Forces at the Reduction of Louisbourg," receives "a Commission as Major General in His Majesty's Army." The news report adds: "and we doubt not will again distinguish himself in the intended Attack upon the French Encroachments on our Frontiers; his Regiment being about 700 strong, all pick Men, great Part of them already on Duty."—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 9, 1755.

Benjamin Watson is paid for carrying ten empty tar barrels (for beacons) to Col. Stillwell at Gravesend.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 416.

In a petition to the assembly, "sundry of the Governors" of King's College ask that a bill be passed "in order to vest in the Petitioners for the Uses aforesaid [as stated in the college charters], the several Sums of Money, so as aforesaid raised, by publick Lottery and the Duty on Excise, with the Increase or Fruits arising thereby, and also granted unto them, such further and other Assistance and Encouragement, the better to enable them to carry on the useful Work aforesaid, as to the honourable House shall seem reasonable and consistent with the publick Good." Consideration of the petition is postponed until after September first.—Assem. Jour., II, 446-47. The subject awakened opposition, and was not presented again in the assembly until Dec. 18 (q.v.). See also comments under June 28, July 5 and 16.

"Phillis Schuyler and John De Peyster are appointed commissary and paymaster of the New-York troops, in place of Philip Verplanck, whose health does not serve."—Cal. Conv. Min., 417.

The provincial council receives an address from the Moravians, relative to their exemption from military service, and charging that this has not been observed by the local authorities; it is referred to the latter.—Cal. Conv. Min., 417.

T. J. Verplanck is to be erected at Albany, Schenectady, and Kinderhook, together with Philip Verplanck's account for making these plans, are referred to the assembly by the council (sitting at New-York).—Cal. Conv. Min., 417-18. Verplanck had received orders on March 3 to view the grounds and make the plans.—Ibid., 414. A warrant was issued on July 10 to pay him for his services.—Ibid., 418.

Two hundred of the soldiers belonging to Major-Gen. Pepperrell's regiment, who were encamped on Governor's Island, embark on a ship for Albany.—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 26, 1755.

Several transports, having Boston, Rhode-Island, and other forces on board, have arrived at New-York during the last week, and sailed for Albany.—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 23, 1755. On this day, 20 transports arrive from Providence. On June 24, two others arrived, having on board Gov. Shirley's regiment, and the Rhode Island forces, and all "were'd Anchor for Albany."—Ibid., June 25, 1755. See also July 1.

Writing to the Rev. Chauncey Graham at Fish Kill, William Smith corrects his account of the happenings relative to the college. He says that "on the 12th Instant [q.v.] the Governors appointed by the late Charter presented a Petition to the Assembly, to pass a Bill for continuing their Establishment, and vesting them, with the public Monies that have been raised for a free College—The Dissenting Interest was now in eminent Danger, for (1) There was but a thin House, and several of the Members who were absent, would have been with us (2) Some of the Members had been appointed Governors by the Charter, and (3) as the Church Party knew that the strength of the House, and of the Opposition, consisted in the Dissatisfaction of the Dutch, it was given out that a New Charter, had been passed for Granting a Divinity Professor, in order to pull them asleep. Under these melancholy prospects, we judged, that the present Expedition we could take, would be to postpone the Consideration of the Church Petition, imagining that some of the Members, who would have been a threat upon a Decisive Vote, out of fear of their Constituents, would be glad of an Opportunity to put off the Matter. . . . Cornel carried a Motion for postponing the consideration of the Church Petition, till after Sep't next . . . . Universal Joy possessed every Breast upon this Occasion, for the Dutch, after having with great Difficulty got a sight of the Charter, found it an idle Business, that gave with One Hand, & took away with the other . . . But what most conducted to the satisfaction of the People, upon this Dis- appointment of the Church Project, arose from their Prospects (1) That Gov't Hardy will probably arrive in a few Days, and according to Custom, Dissolve the Assembly, and give thereby the People a new Election, which it is hoped, they will carefully improve by a proper Choice of Representatives, for their perpetual security against any further Designs to abridge their Privileges or (2) If there should not be a Dissolution, every County, 'tis hoped, will petition the Assembly, and thereby intimidate them from ever granting the Prayer of the Petition."—From an original draft among the H. Smith MSS., folio 180. On July 26, Smith sent the same information to "Dr. Van Bright at Tappan."—Ibid.

"Whereas the late Lottery Act [see Dec. 7, 1754], for raising a certain Sum towards founding a College, being expired by its own Limitation of Time, and no further Provision made for continuing the same; This is to give Notice to all Persons that have purchased Tickets of the Managers, Abraham Van Wyck and Abraham Lyon山寨, that on the Return of said Tickets, they shall be repaid the Monies by them paid for the same."—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 30, 1755. The act of Dec. 7 was, however, revived by another act on Aug. 14 (q.v.), which, while cancelling and repaying the old tickets, diverted to a new and different object the money then to be raised.

Choice Newernbertturpentine is offered for sale by Thomas Vatar "at the Still-House behind the Old English Church, or at his Dwelling House near Alderman Cortlandts."—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 30, 1755. The ground on which this still-house stood appears on P. 52, Vol. VI, for 1755.

Gen. Shirley returns from Boston, in "the Province Sloop of the Massachusetts-Bay." See also April 29. He embarked for Albany on this sloop on July 3, "being conducted to the Water Side, by his Honour Governor Delancy, most of the Members of his Majesty's Great Council, and young gentlemen of this City; and was saluted on his going off, with fifteen of the Cannon belonging to Fort-George, and a general Hurra of great Numbers of the Inhabitants . . . ."—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 7.

The remainder of Gen. Pepperrell's regiment (see June 22) leaves Governor's Is. for Albany.—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 7, 1755.

The feeling of opposition and resentment over the passage of the King's College charter is reflected in the following published declaration: "Whereas it has been reported to the Reproach and Prejudice of David Jenius, Esq Speaker of the General Assembly, That be used his Endeavours towards the obtaining the Charter for establishing the College, with the Exclusion of all Professions (but those of the Church of England) from being President; These may serve to show, that we have had great Opportunities to know his Sentiments in this Affair, and never have observed or discovered, in any one Instance, his Application by the Charter, and (3) as the Church in the Form and Manner it now is, touching the Limitation aforesaid; but, on the Contrary, have often seen him shew his dislike thereto, and heard him declare his Opinion against it."
The provincial council prohibits the exportation of provisions. The next day an exception was made in the case of vessels laden with provisions and bound for Halifax, Annapolis, or Chignecto, in Nova Scotia.—Col. Coun. Min., 418, 419. See also May 24, 1756.

Writing to "Dom. Van Bright" of Tappan, William Smith says, in part: "The Charter for the college I suppose you have seen, its Partiality and the Designs of it doubtless you detest, . . ." As the Dutch Church of New York petitioned the General Assembly for a Professor the Advocates for a party College fearing the powerful Opposition of the Dutch might render their Scheme abortive it was thought proper a Month or two ago to pass a New Additional Charter to grant a Professor . . ." He says that a copy of this additional charter could not be obtained "at the public office" until June 12 (q.v.), when the college governors "petitioned the Assembly to confirm the Charter by a Law to deliver over into their Hands the Monies which had been raised for a free College. A copy of the second Charter was then procured, and the Reason for Concealing it [is] now evident to all for (1) It appointed No Salary for the Dutch Professor. (2) It subjected him to attend upon the service of the Liturgy of the Church of England. (3) He was subordinate to the Governors of the College A vast Majority of whom were and always would be Episcopalians and (4) They had the absolute Power of expelling him at their Pleasure. . ." From the original draft with Smith MSS., folio 189.

The provincial council receives a letter from Robert Orme, Gen. Braddock's aide, announcing the general's death in the action on the banks of the Monongahela on July 9.—Col. Coun. Min., 419. An account of this disaster to British arms was published in the N. Y. Post-Boy of Aug. 4, 1755. Sir Thomas Robinson informs the provincial council that Admiral Boscawen or Commodore Keppel may be called upon if necessary for naval assistance. Admiral Boscawen writes about the movements of his fleet.—Col. Coun. Min., 419.

The council issues a warrant to pay James Parker for printing bills of credit.—Col. Coun. Min., 419.

A letter, received by the provincial council from Gen. William Johnson, expresses fears of the bad effect upon the Indians due to Braddock's defeat.—Col. Coun. Min., 419.

The provincial council orders that the wall from the east line of the battery along the east side of Whitehall Slip be continued.—Col. Coun. Min., 419.

A proclamation is issued for a day of fasting, on account of Gen. Braddock's defeat.—Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 4641; N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 11, 1755.

A proclamation is issued offering a reward of £50 for the discovery of the person or persons who broke open the consistory room of the Reformed Protestant Dutch Church, and stole "about Sixty Pounds in Silver, Paper, and Copper Money."—Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 4641; N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 6, 1755.

A petition to the general assembly is drafted by order of the common council, reciting that the corporation is very much in debt, but, "being apprehensive of a Wrack with france," they have sent to England (see Jan. 16) for a thousand stand of arms, "in order to furnish Those who have not Arms of Their own in case of an Attack from the Enemy," and that these arms will cost the city more than £2,000, a sum which "the Corporation Cannot Raise without the utmost Difficulty and Indangering the Interest of the Corporation." They therefore ask that, "as the late Act for a Lottery [for a further provision towards founding a college] is now Expired by its own Limitations," the assembly will pass a bill in favour of the lottery for a Lottery on the same Terms and According to the provisions in the said Late Act," for raising a sum to pay for the arms recently ordered.—M. C. C., VI: 19-20, 21.

This was done on Aug. 14 (q.v.).

On Aug. 18, bonds were executed by the mayor to Oliver de Lancy and John Warts for £57,175, to pay the aforesaid 4th of June following, with interest at 7% from the 4th of last June.

One Richard Aldridge, sentenced for horse stealing, is pardoned on condition of his enlisting as a soldier.—Col. Coun. Min., 418.

In a list of unclaimed letters remaining in the post-office at New York, occur the following names: "Thomas Barton, Care of John Marshall, at the Sign of the Sun and Pine-Apple;" "Alexander McDougall, to the care of Nathaniel Hazard;" "Lewis Morris, Esq., to Andrew Solvay, at King Street." The statement adds: "N. B. Whereas David Prevoost, and some few other Persons, refuse to take up Letters directed for them, remaining in the post-office at New York: Notice is hereby given that no Letters directed to those Gentlemen for the future will be forwarded from any of the post-offices in America, or deliver'd out of the Office at New York, until all the Letters remaining in the Office at New York for those Gentlemen be taken up."—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 7, 1755.

Near Fort Duquesne (Pittsburg—see April 17, 1754), Gen. Braddock is surprised by a party of French and Indians; his 1,200 choice troops are routed, and he is mortally wounded. Col. Washington tries to rally the remnant of the army; he has two horses shot under him, and, though his coat is shot through, he escapes unscathed. The news of the defeat filled the colonies with consternation.—Parkman, Montcalm and Wolfe, 1: 204, 33, and authorities there cited; Winsor, Nar. & Crit. Hist. of Am., VI: 458 passim.

"A committee is appointed by the common council "for the regulating of the pavement from the Pump in Wall Street down to the Meal Market."—M. C. C., VI: 14. On July 11, they reported the regulations agreed upon.—Ibid., VI: 13.

The common council orders that Little Queen Street (later Cedar Street) and Thames Street be regulated and paved.—M. C. C., VI: 15. Payment was made for part of this labour Oct. 4, 1757. —Ibid., VI: 103.

The common council appoints a committee "to view, dig, regulate, lay out and pave all the Streets in Montgomerie ward."—M. C. C., VI: 14. On July 11, they reported that they had "viewed and measured Queen Street," and they recommended a certain regulation, but a substitute regulation was adopted instead.—Ibid., VI: 16. On July 18, they reported they had "Regulated and Laid out the Street that Leads down from Beekman Street Called [name not given, but evidently Gold] Street to Ferry Street," and they found a certain grade.—Ibid., VI: 18, 26. On Sept. 8, they reported having "Regulated and Laid out the Street Called George Street" [see Post, Old Streets, 263; also William Street between Beekman and Franklin Streets.—Ibid., VI: 25-26. On Sept. 14, they reported that they had "Laid out and Regulated for paving Ferry Street," from the lower end of "Cliffe [Cliff] Street" to Queen Street; also Peps Slip from Queen Street to high-water mark.—Ibid., VI: 31, 23. On July 30, 1756, they reported that they had "Regulated and Laid out and Regulated for paving Cherry Street," and levelled part of Queen Street from "the Westmost part of the Widhow Montanye's Gate" to the middle of Rutgers' Street. The surveyor for all of this work was Francis Maerschalck.—Ibid., VI: 60-61. Another committee was appointed in 1757 to regulate the streets of this ward—ibid., VI: 97. For the locations of these streets on the modern map of the city, see "Streets" in the Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 924 et seq.

Robert Livingston, Jr., writes from Clinkenbeck to Lieut.-Gov. De Lancey in regard to casting cannon balls at his furnace.—Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 460.

The common council appoints a committee "to View Dig Regulate Lay out and pave all the Streets in the North ward."—M. C. C., VI: 17. On July 18, they reported that, with the assistance of Francis Maerschalck, city surveyor, they had "Regulated and Laid out the Street in the Rear of Spring Garden," grading it to Beekman St.—Ibid., VI: 17-18. That is Beek St., the present Nassau St.

A letter from the corporation of Fort George, bears this date.—Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 668.

Dr. Johnson writes to his son that "a Subscription was begun which had last Wednesday been subscribed only by 77 persons who had made it above 15000£ so that it is hoped we shall gain 3000 sufficient to build a president's house & hall.—you will see I suppose a Letter giving an Acc2 of Gen' Braddock's Defeat.—This put us yesterday in a great panic, but we hope there may be no great matter in it, if anything. I suspect however that there must at least be something bad."—Johnson Papers (M.S.).
On the same day the common council appointed a committee "to receive forty Cents Two Cases and three Casks of sundry Arms &c. Imported in the Ship Irene Nicholas Garrison Commander from England, being the thousand Stand Arms sent for, by Messrs' Watts and De Lancey for this Corporation, and that the said Committee will put it forth on the said灯笼a put to the Common Council Chamber and Such other parts of the City Hall as the said Committee shall think proper."—Ibid., VII: 21-22, 54. On Sept. 24, Capt. Garrison was paid £55 for the freight on these arms.—Ibid., VII: 50. See further, Jan. 5, 1757.

The amount paid by the common council for "Digdleg, Regulating, Levelling and paving the Street in the Broad Way, from the Lott Lately fenced in a Little beyond the Oswego Market on the West Side of the said Street in the West & North Wards."—M. C. Co., VII: 21. This was Cortland Street, which had been given to the city May 25, 1733 (p. 2).

The snow "Irene," from London, with small-pox on board, is quarantined at Bedloe's Island.—Cal. Coun. Min., 419. On Sept. 15, it was allowed to come up to the city and unload.—Ibid., 421.

An act is passed "to revive" the lottery act of Dec. 7, 1754 (p. 2), which expired of its own limitation on the first Tuesday in June (see June 30), and which was intended to raise £4,125 "for a further provision towards founding a College."—This reviving act, however, contains the following important alterations: Whereas the Mayor Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of New York by their humble Petition of the 5th day of June last, have prayed that the same be left subject to the raising of a publick Lottery a Sum of Money to be Appropriated and Applied towards Payment of the Debts due and owing to them by Occasion of the opening for one Thousand Stand of Arms to furnish their Poor Inhabitants with in case of invasion Insurrection or other Exigencies," the old act is continued, to remain in full force until the last Tuesday in November, and the 15 cent, to be deducted "upon the whole Number of Fortunate Tickets" is ordered paid by the lottery managers to the mayor, etc. of the city, instead of to the trustees of the college, to be applied by the mayor, etc., towards paying "The Debt by them Contracted," by levying stated sums to pay the necessary expenses of the lottery.—Cal. Laws N. Y., III: 1117. The details of this lottery are more fully explained in an advertisement in N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 18, 1755; see also editorial reference to it in ibid., Nov. 23, 1755, and the results of the drawing in ibid., Dec. 19, 1755.

The Rhode Island committee of war applies to the New York council for permission to export flour from New York, which had been prohibited on July 20.—Cal. Coun. Min., 419. Such permission was given on Aug. 28 and Oct. 10, on application by Gov. Hopkins, the Rhode Island ambassador, but a similar application by Gov. Nichols of that colony, on Aug. 29, was refused.—Ibid., 420, 423.

Massachusetts, the council is informed, will raise 800 men for the Crown Point expedition.—Cal. Coun. Min., 419.

Lewis Evans advertises: "Just published, A General Map of the Middle British Colonies, in America, New-Jersey, New-York, Connecticut, and Rhode-Island, the Country of the Condefrate Indians, &c." He states that "This map includes all the Country depending on the English and French Passages to Ohio, Niagara, Oswego, and Crown-Point. With the colour'd edges will be given a Pamphlet of four large Sheets and a Hall, containing, an Analysis of the Map, and Description of the Face of the Country. The Price of the plain Maps, on Printing Paper, is One Piece of Eight. And the colour'd edges, on superfine Writing Paper, and Pamphlet, Two Pieces of Eight. To be sold in Philadelphia by the Author in Arch Street, and in New-York at the Post-Office, and by Gasper Johnson at Debeck Street, near the Market."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 25, 1755. Cfr. March 6, and 13, 1759.

The trustees of the "New-York College" (King's College) visit and examine the pupils who are "under the Care of the Revd. Dr. Johnson," and are "mighty well pleased with the Proficiency" they have made both in Latin and Greek.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 1, 1755.

Mrs. Van der Bilt, a nurse on Bedloe's Island, is granted permission by the provincial council to return to Staten Island.—Cal. Coun. Min., 419.

Sir Charles Hardy, the new governor, arrives, on board H. M. S. "Sphinx," nine weeks from Portsmouth. He remains on board over night.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 8, 1755. See Sept. 5.

Gov. Hardy lands at Whitehall from the barge of the "Sphinx," under "the Discharge of her Cannon," and is received by the lieutenant-governor, De Lancey, the members of the council and general assembly, the mayor and common council, the clergy, and "all the Gentlemen of the Town." A royal salute from Fort George is fired, and the governor is conducted there through line militia.

After the usual ceremonies, he was conducted to the city hall, where his commission was published (Ass. Jour., II: 427) "with the Acclamations of the People." He returned to the fort, and received the compliments of the officers and officers, then proceeded to the City Arms, where he dined, on invitation of the lieutenant-governor, with these gentlemen. At night, the Windows in the City were ornamented with Lights, and two large Bunting erected on the Common, where several Hampers of good old Madera (which prov'd brisker than bottled Ale) were given to the Populace, and where Sir Charles's Presence, about Eight o'Clock in the Evening, clos'd the joyful and merry Proceedings...—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 8, 1755; N. Y. Col. Doc., VI: 999; Cal. Coun. Min., 420. The "City Arms" was the Province Arms or New York Arms Tavern, kept by Edward Willett, at the present 115 Broadway.—Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 977.

Gov. Hardy writes a circular letter to the several governors, notifying them of his arrival at New York, and his appointment as governor, etc.—Cal. Hist. MSS, Eng., 643.

Gov. Hardy finds that smuggling is practised, and takes action to prevent it.—V. Jour., 1755-1757.

The common council appoints a committee "to prepare the Draft of an Address to his Excellency Sir Charles Hardy Knight &c. on his Safe Arrival to This his Government."—M. C. Co., VII: 24. The draft of it was read at the next meeting (Sept. 8) and approved; and "the Draft of a Freedom" was also agreed upon. The engraved copies were presented to the new governor on Sept. 10, the seal of the freedom being as usual enclosed in a gold box, and he expressed his appreciation.—Ibid., VII: 28-30.

Eighteen hundred British troops, having sailed from Boston in the spring to subdue the French in Acadia, Nova Scotia, and having succeeded in the least, after a month with very small losses to themselves, now wondartly bish about 4,000 of the inhabitants to the British colonies, and burn their property. The Acadians were Catholics, and refused to take the British Oath of Supremacy.—Wmsor, Nat. & Crit. Hist. of Am., V: 415-417.

Christopher Bancker's account for materials, etc. furnished the new battery, bears this date.—Cal. Hist. MSS, Eng., 646. See Feb. 19, 1755.

Col. Ephraim Williams, with 1,000 men, leaves Lake George, and marches for the defence of Fort Edward, on the Hudson; but is driven back by a similar force under Baron Dieskau, and driven back. Williams is killed in the encounter. Dieskau and his men marched on to Lake George, where they attacked the English under Johnson. The French were completely routed, and Dieskau is taken prisoner.—Parkman, Montcalm and Wolfe, I: 285-287, and authorities there cited.

A committee of the common council reports that it has carefully regulated and laid out George Street.—M. C. Co., VII: 25-26. This was the present Spruce Street.—See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 1000.

Mayor Holland turns over to the common council "Thomas Mitchell Map of Hudson Bay &c. which his Excellency Sir Charles Hardy Knight Desired him to present to the Corporation."—M. C. Co., VII: 50.

To explain the statute establishing quarantine regulations (see May 3), the provincial legislature passes another act, authorizing the use of force of a convoy on vessels from infected vessels to return on board. Quarantine is also extended to cover all persons with contagious diseases.—Cal. Laws N. Y., III: 1141-42.
George the Second, by the Grace of God, of Great Britain, France and Ireland King, Defender of the Faith, &c., to whom the Government of New York do now send the following Petition:

And whereas the said City and County of New York have, by the consent of the Legislature of the State, presented to the Government of the United States of America, a Letter of Credit for the sum of six thousand pounds sterling, to be applied towards the support of erecting a College for the support of Useful Arts in the said State of New York, and whereas the said Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy of New York, in Council, have ordered a number of persons to be instructed in the art of building, and whereas the said Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy have, by the consent of the Legislature of the State of New York, by a Public Proclamation, given notice to the inhabitants of the said State of New York, that they are requested to subscribe towards the support of the said College, and whereas the said Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy, and the said Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Navy, have, by the consent of the Legislature of the State of New York, given notice to the inhabitants of the said State of New York, that they are requested to subscribe towards the support of the said College, supply of provisions, ammunitions, and war supplies shipped to the scene of action by Albany sloops, and, with some members of the council, including Lieut.-Gov. De Lancey, embarks for Albany.

Gen. Baron de Dieskau, the French general, and his aide-de-camp,
M. Bernier, captured by the English in the engagement at Long George; other orders regarding de Dieskau were issued on Oct.
14. On Oct. 15, the general's (proposed?) quarters at Mrs. De Joncourt's, near the harbour (see Nov. 11, 1751), were ordered changed to Charles Arding's, near the Commons, as more convenient. Capt. La Coste was lodged at Mrs. Dimmold's on Broadway; other French prisoners were more closely confined.

On Oct. 20, Baron de Dieskau, having been brought down from Albany, was landed at "about nine o'Clock at Night, to avoid a Crowd of People assembled to see him," and was "carried to Lodge-bread" prepared for him in Nuestra, where he now lies [Oct. 25] dangerously ill of his Wounds." His aide-de-camp accompanied him.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 27, 1755. On Oct. 23, M. Bernier was ordered to keep within his limits; and again, on Oct. 25, he was forbidden to send letters without leave.—Cal. Coun. Min., 422.

The king's coronation day is observed "with the usual Rejoinings." A salute of 21 guns each is fired from H. M. S. "Sphinx" and "Garland," lying in the North River. At night, "Illuminations, firing, &c. concluded our Loyalty for that Twenty Four Hours." Two persons were badly wounded by the Discharge of a Petteran, which suddenly went off as they were, with an Iron Rod, ramming the Chamber of it."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 27, 1755.

The governour and the gentlemen with him continue at Albany.

The great loafen earthwork is now kept by Otto van Tyle, at Staten Island, and Abraham Bocket, at Whitehall Slip. Three boats are regularly maintained.—See Jan. 16. Denaye van Tyle was drowned, with ten other men and three horses, in a ferry-boat wreck near Oyster Island on March 11, 1756 (q.v.). Regarding Van Tyle's death, see also May 15, 1757; March 3, 1759.

The ferry-house at Staten Island, lately kept by John Watson, is now run by Martin Bucket, "where the best of Entertainment may be met with, both for Man and Horse, and the utmost Expedition in transporting to and from New York."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 22, 1755. A week later, Bucket advertised his partnership with "Scotch Johnny," a tavern-keeper near a Whitehall Slip.

James Murray, apothecary, having received orders to send fifty pounds of old linen for bandages for wounded soldiers, appeals to the patriotism and zeal of the women in New York in aid in filling the order, citing the example of "a neighbouring Province."—
N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 29, 1755.

The making of garments for the soldiers at the frontiers, such as waistcoats, socks, and mittens, is being considered or undertaken.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 29, Nov. 3, 1755; Jan. 19, 1756.

It is whispered about Town, as if a certain Set of People [Quakers, particularly One to the Westward] designed to follow the Example of their Brethren in England, in the late Rebellion, by generously giving a sufficient Number of Woolen Waistcoats to the Soldiers on our Frontiers, the better to keep their Bodies warm during the ensuing cold Season, and to enable them to perform their Duty with the greater Comfort and Satisfaction. . . . This we presume, should it be accomplished, will largely compensate for their religious Backwardness, in not encouraging the Exercise of the Musket.

Even the Ladies in this City, we are told, seem to be anxious how to demonstrate their Loyalty in a particular Manner, on the present Occasion; some purpose the making of the aforesaid Waistcoats themselves, whilst others wait for the Stuff."—N. Y.

Gen. Johnson acknowledges "sundry Presents from the Inhabitants" of New York, forwarded through Oliver de Lancey. He has ordered an equitable distribution of the presents, and says that neither he himself, nor his family, officers, or servants, will share any of them, as he apprehends "the Rest of the Army stand in more need than ourselves."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 27, 1755.

The provincial council at New York issues orders relating to
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1755 Cotton Veloons for Waistcoats, black and scarlet Lastings, Amens, Nov. 10 Quality Bindings, Gartenerings, Worsted Caps, Hosery, black and buff Breeches Pieces, Hats, Whips and Thonges, Twist and Hair Buttons, Hatbands, and looping Ribbons, Paper, Buttons of all Sorts, Buckles, Sleeve Buttons, Snuff Boxes, Amber Beads, Spec- tacles, Coral or Colored, the Old English Fuchsia, Jewellery, Sewing and Darning Needles, Leather and Brass Ink Pots, Split Bone Knives and CuttoTe Knives; with a Variety of other Sorts of Cutlery, and Goods suitable for the Season."—Ibid.

James Lawrence, living opposite to the Province Arms in this street, removed to the Old English Market, at the Sign of the Riding Chair, mends and makes all Sorts of Coaches, Chaises, Chairs, Kittereens, Wagons, Carts, etc. etc. after the best and neatest Manner, with the greatest Dis- patch."—Ibid. Lawrence was the second coach-maker to do busi- ness in New York.—See Jan. 25, 1750.

In a petition to the common council, Joseph Simon describes the fire risk arising from storing in near-by cellars or store-houses, or leaving on the swarves, such inflammable articles as pitch, tar, turpentine, etc., large quantities of which are annually imported and held for exportation. He offers to build a warehouse for such goods in a safe remote place on condition that he be allowed to charge reasonable storage. The petition is rejected.—M. C. Cii, VI: 41-42. An act for the prevention of fires was passed on Dec. 31, 1761 (p. 5).

"A Concussion of the Earth was very sensibly felt here on Tuesday Morning last [Nov. 17] about Four o'Clock. The Morning was calm, not a Breath of Wind stirring, and the Hemi- sphere appeared somewhat dusky."—N. Y. Post-Bay, Nov. 23, 1755. Cadwallder Colden described it in a letter to Peter Collison, F. R. S., of London, Dec. 9, 1755: "... I felt the bed under me and the house shaking... I plainly heard the noise like that of carts on pavements, going to the eastward, with now and then a noise like the explosion of a great gun at a distance. It was felt about four o'clock at Philadelphia, and half after four at Boston, and was more violent to the eastward than the westward; and there was an eruption at a place called Seinuate, about twenty or thirty miles to the southward of Boston.

"We have had the driest summer and autumn that ever was known: for some days before the earthquake, though the sky was perfectly clear and serene, the air was so light, that the smoke of the town by falling down was offensive to our eyes, as we walked the streets; and my watch, for some time before it, went unusually slow."

"In the last remarkable earthquake, which happened about fourteen years ago, and nearly at the same time of year, the weather was much the same, and accordingly the falling of the smoke in the town."—Philosophical Transactions, Royal Society of London (1755-6), 445.

William Smith, the historian, thus described it: "The moon was on the full, the sky bright and perfectly calm. About two minutes after four in the morning, a rumbling noise was succeeded by jarring vibrations for four or five minutes. The shocks appeared to be not undulatory, but horizontal. The house the author was in was cracked, and the windows rattled, but no fissure was made in the walls, nor did a brick fall from the chimney."—Continuation of the Hist. of N. Y., in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections (1876), v. 241.

The first entry in the "Diary" of John Adams is a mention of this earthquake, which he felt at his home in Braintree, Mass.—See Life and Works of John Adams, ed. by his grandson, Chas. Francis Adams, II: 1. Lisbon, Portugal, had been the scene of an earthquake on Nov. 1, a description of which, by eyewitnesses, was published in the N. Y. Merc., Jan. 5, 1756.

Gov. Hopkins of Rhode Island informs the governor and council of New York that he and Daniel Upikhe have been appointed commissioners to consult with Gen. Shirley and com- missioners from other colonies.—Col. Gm. Min., 442.

The next year, the post master publishes the following notice: "William Wool, the Albany Post-Rider, sets out for New York, on Sunday the 26th Instant November, at Ten of the Clock in the Forenoon; and from Albany for New York the Wednesday following. All Persons who have any Letters to publish in the New York paper, desired to leave them at the said Post-Office the Day he sets out from hence; and those who have Letters to send by him from Albany, to leave them at Mr. Edward Williams's, Tavern-Keeper in Albany, the Day before said Post sets out from thence."—N. Y. Post-Bay, Nov. 24, 1755. Cf. ibid., July 31, 1756.

An advertisement informs the public that "Henry Dawkins, engraver, who lately lived with Mr. Anthony Lamb [see Dec. 1, 1756], has now the sole and exclusive business of making copper-plates opposite the Merchants' Coffee-House, in New York, where he engraves in all sorts of metals."—N. Y. Merc., Nov. 17, 1755. Dawkins was in New York as early as 1754, when he engraved a book-plate for John Burnet, an attorney in the city. He was in Philadelphia from 1758 to 1774, but in the latter year returned to New York. He was made a Freeman in 1758, and in 1788 was chosen as a counterfitter of Massachusetts and Connecticut money. As an engraver, Daw-kins occupied himself chiefly with book-plates, bill heads, and map ornamentation. This work is executed in line, and is fairly good."—Stalfer, Am. Engravers on Copper and Steel, I: 60-62; II: 78-86. See also Dunlap, Hist. of Arts of Design, I: 185 and footnote.

Dawkins was prominent in early American Masonic circles, and engraved a number of Masonic notices, summons, and other devices.—Fielding, Am. Engravers on Copper and Steel, 12, 89-91.

Gov. Hardy having received instructions from the lords Jus- tices to ask for the granting of a permanent revenue, his proposed speech to the council and assembly is first read to the council meeting, and is approved.—N. Y. Col. Docs., VI: 1020-21.

Gov. Milnor, Jr., advertises a stage-boat commanded by John Thompson (Scotch Johnny?), as attending "at the White-Hall Slip," and sailing every Monday and Thursday for Amboy. There passengers will be met by Joseph Borden, and proceed by stage to Bordentown, where boats will carry them to Philadelphia.—N. Y. Post-Bay, Dec. 1, 1755. For the earlier Bordentown route, see Oct. 30, 1752.

Gov. Hardy, in a message to the assembly, states that he is commanded by the king to recommend without delay the passage of a law providing for a permanent revenue to support government.—Assemb. Jour., II: 461. The assembly, on Dec. 9, replied that it could not provide indefinite support.—Ibid., II: 464. This controversy between governor and assembly continued for a long time.—See July 3, 1756.

John Dies' account for making 666 bateaux bears this date:—Col. Hist. MSS, Eng., 648. Dies is one of the commissioners of fortifications, with Christopher Bancker.—See also their account of Feb. 19, 1756, p. 347.

Gov. William Shirley, of Massachusetts, writes from New York to Sir William Johnson, at Fort Johnson, advising him that he (Shirley) has been appointed commander-in-chief in North America, and giving instructions in regard to dealing with the Delawares and other Indians.—Correspondence of William Shirley, ed. by Charles H. Lincoln (1912), v. 338-341; N. Y. Col. Docs., IX: 1024-27.

The common council passes "A Law to Restrain and Prohibit the Giving or Selling of Strong Liquors to any of the Private Centra- lins of His Majesties Garrison in the City of New York." The occasion for this law was the debauches and disorderly conduct result- ing from the use of intoxicating liquor by soldiers in garrison and quarters.—M. C. C., VI: 44-45.

Robert Livingston, James Desbrosses, and the other owners of a wharf extending from Beekman's slip to "the End of the Lot of Ground of the aforesaid James Desbrosses," submit a petition to the assembly, stating that they obtained this grant (of water lots between Peak's Slip and Beekman's Slip) from the common council (M. C. C., V: 249, 330), "with Liberty, at their own Expense, to dock out and fill up two hundred Feet, into the said East River at New York," publishes a notice to the public to make it more convenient for Vessels of large Burthen to lie at, in order to load. They have also received from the king a patent making their wharf "a free Key." The petitioners now seek a law establishing the rates for "wharfage and cargo."—Assemb. Jour., II: 465.

For the action in the legislature, see Feb. 19, 1756.

In accordance with the king's instructions, the council of war composed of governors and field officers is held in New York City & to decide upon the operations of the next campaign.—

of Md, 31, 91. A contemporary manuscript copy of these minutes of the meeting, was sold with the Rodney Papers (Item No. 391)

13 by Alexander, secretary of the meeting, to the Library. It is endorsed: "Entered in Minute of Council of 4th February 1756." It is evidently the officially attested copy which Lieut-Gov. Morris, of Pennsylvania, sent with other papers to the... to the book in Philadelphia, Feb. 4, 1756, and which was engrossed in the minutes of the provincial council—See Min. Prov. Coun. of Penn., VII: 1756-58 (Harrisburg, 1851), Proceedings for Feb. 4, 1756, pp. 18-19, 23-29.

The newspapers of the fortnight prior to the conference had recorded the arrival in New York of Gov. Hardy, Lieut-Gov. De Laney, Lieut-Gov. Thomas Pownall (of the Jerseys), Daniel Haramondan and John Rutherford (members of the N. Y. council), Col. Duobar, Sir John Sinclair, Gen. Shirley, Chief-Justice Jonathan Beckler (of Nova Scotia), Gov. Thomas Fitch (of Connecticut), Gov. Morris (of Pennsylvania), the money raised by Lord Hillsborough for Richard Ponte (secretary of that province)—N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 1, 8, 15, and 29, 1755. The minutes of the meeting (vide supra) show that the following participated in the conference:

"His Excellency William Shirley Esq General &c.

The Hoo Horatio Sharpie, Lieut Gov. & Commander in Chief in the Province of Maryland:

The Hon Robert Hunter Morris Lieut Gov. & Commander in Chief in the Province of Pennsylvania.

The Hon Thomas Fitch Governor & Commander in Chief of the Colony of Connecticut

Colonel Thomas Dunbar

Major Charles Creave

Sir John St Clair Deputy Quarter Master General

Major James Kinney

Major John Rutherford.

"Cut and taken from a saddle on a horse standing at the door of Mr. George Brewerton, at the sign of the Bull's Head, in the out-ward... a knapsack containing the following articles, viz.:

A red jacket trim'd with gold, a pair of breeches with velv buttons and gold garters, three fine holland shirts with M. T. one speckled shirt, a pair of shoes and a one quire book."

A reward of three hundred pounds was returned for return of these articles to the "Bible and Crown, in Queen-Street."—N. Y. Merc., Dec. 15, 1755. The Bull's Head Tavern stood at the present Nos. 46 and 48 Bowery, and seems to have derived a large share of its popularity from its proximity to the slaughter-house, being a convenient place of meeting for countrymen. Caleb Hyatt became the proprietor some time prior to June 23, 1761 (q. v.), when he was succeeded by Thomas Bayeux. By 1771, Cornelius Vandeborgh was in possession and offering entertainment to all "gentlemen travelers," as well as pasturing for horses, "at 16 per night."—N. Y. Merc., May 6, 1771. Richard Varian, who had been appointed "Keeper of the Publick Pond," on June 16, 1773 (q. v.), seems to have become the next proprietor, but, before June 8, 1782 (q. v.), had been succeeded by Nathan Wetherel. Mrs Varian had apparently returned to the house before Nov. 25, 1785, the day of the British evacuation and the triumphant entry of the American army, when citizens of Philadelphia, Washington and Gov. Clinton at the "Bull's Head Tavern, now kept by Mrs. Verien."—See Nov. 20, 1785. The Bull's Head was sold to Henry Ashborne (or Asborne) in 1785 (Liver Deeds, XIII: 361), and by him to the N. Y. Association in 1816 (bid, CCXV: 116-27). It was quickly demolished and rebuilt (by the new proprietors), and was erected on its site.—See Ps. 102 and 175, and their descriptions, pp. 605-64, Vol. III; Landmark Map, Ref. Key, Ill: 977, 981.

15 Dr. Johnson writes to his son: "Our Gov't proves a good friend to the Arts & to the College." He explains that Gov. Hardy asked to see the subscription paper (see July 21), and to their surprise presented them with £200 pounds, which gives new life to our proceedings & great mortification to our Enemies, & we are 16 it is explained by Chandler, in his Life of Johnson, that advantage was taken of the arrival of Gov. Hardy to present to him an inflammatory address, in the hope of securing his influence against the College. "But Sir Charles Hardy, according to the instructions he received by the Embassy, took it as it deserved. On the other hand, he received the address of the Governors of the College, presented by the President, with the greatest respect and politeness. He signified that he was desirous of seeing their subscription paper; and the next day, when it was brought to him, he generously subscribed, without any solicitations, 5£00 for the College. This was such a disappointment and mortification to its opponents, that from that time they were silent, and gave no further molestation. Not long after, the Board of Governors, who had an equitable and just right to the whole of the subscription, wrote to the President informing him that the Assembly that it should be equally divided between the College and the public."—Hist. of Columbia Univ. (1904), 9-10. The agreement referred to is embodied in the act of Dec. 1, 1756 (q. v.).

William Livingston, John Morin Scott, and William Smith, Jr. demand petitioners to the assembly "from a great Number of the Freemen and Freeholders of severall Counties in this Colony, against a supposed Petition of the Governors of the College of New-York, in the City of New-York in America, established by Charter." These state that the petitioners have informed that the Governors have preferred or are about to prefer a petition for passing a bill "to confirm the said Charter or Charters, and to invest the said Governors, with the Monies lately vested by sundry Acts in certain Trustees" (appointed by the act of Nov. 25, 1751, q. v.) that they conceive the subject matter of such petition to "be of the utmost Moment, and nearly affecting their civil and religious Liberties," and have "divers weighty and important Objections, against the granting of the Prayer thereof." They ask for a copy of the alleged petition, and permission to be heard by council "at the Bar of the House" on the subject before a resolution is made thereon. It is ordered that their petition be returned to them with the information that there is no such Application made to this House by the Governors of the New York College, as is suggested in the said Petitions; and that if such Application be made, this house will then be ready to receive the said Petitions."—Assem. Jour., II: 468; cf. Jour. 12. For the passage see May 17, 1756.

Gov. Hardy, in a letter to the lords of trade, says: "I have this week [see Dec. 12 & 13] attended General Shirley at a Council of War for determining the operations to be carried on next year, for the removing the French from their incursions, and securing His Majestys Rights on this Continent, which I presume General Shirley will transmit to your Lordships."—N. Y. Col. Docs., VI: 1025.

A ball for the "Benefit of Jacob Leonard" is to be held on this day at the new exchange. Tickets may be had at Leonard's house, near the city hall, and of Mr. Hewlet, at the "King's Arms."—N. Y. Merc. Dec. 15, 1755. The "New Exchange" was in the centre of the street at Broad and Water Sts, and the King's Arms Tavern was on the east side of Broad St between Pearl and Water Sts.

Gen. Shirley writes from New York to Sir Thomas Robinson, 19 secretary of state in London, that he arrived in this city from Alasney "the second Instant." He transmits a copy of the minutes of the "Council of War which I held here the 12th and 13th Instant" (q. v.), and gives in detail his plans for a campaign against the French and Indians at Lake Ontario, Niagara, Lake Champlain, and other points to the north.

In another letter, written to Sir Thomas Robinson on the next day, Dec. 20, he gave an account of his conferences with the Indians in the Mohawk Country. He also reported on the opposition to him on the part of Sir William Johnson, and added: "I have the further Mortification to find that I have caused more remarks to be made by the Governor of New York in the wrong Notices he hath entertain'd of the Effect of his Indian Commission from General Braddock, with respect to its excluding me from any Superintendency of Indian Affairs by Dec. 19, Virtue of my Commission." He encloses copies of his correspondence with Gov. Hardy.

These letters, with several of preceding and following dates, reveal the interest that confronted Shirley by reason of the jealousy existing between New York and Massachusetts, and Sir William Johnson's determination to continue his supremacy over the Indians of the Six Nations. In the end the opposition to Shirley was successful. His commission as colonial commander-in-chief was revoked, and he was recalled to England.—Correspondence of William Shirley, ed. by C. H. Lincoln (1812), II: 147-61. See July 4, 1756.

20 The provincial council issues a warrant to Goldsbrow Banyar for carpenter work done in the secretary's office by Thomas Brookman.—Ed. Coun. Min., 424.

21 Included among houses and lots advertised for sale is a portion of "the Church-Land in Division Street."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 21, 1755. Division St., also called Parition St., was the same as the present Fulton St., west of Broadway. Through the middle of it passed the line of Trinity Church property, the south line of the Andews Jan farm. The lots to be sold extended to Trinity.

Examples of the business signs mentioned in advertisements of the period are as follows: 1755, Dec. 22,—"the Sign of the Unicorn and Mortar in Hanover Square," the "Sign of the Gilt Dish in Dock Street, between the Old-Slip and Commer's Market" (which is within) sold; 1756, Jan. 22,—"the Sign of the Indian King and Cross-Guns," in the Fly; June 28,—"the Hand and Shears, near the Coffee-House" (where tailoring is done); July 5,—"the Sign of the Stocking-Weaver's Loom, opposite the Great-Dock;" Aug. 2,—"the Dial" (a watchmaker's shop); Aug. 15,—"the Sign of the Golden Key in Hanover Square;" 1757, Jan. 3,—"the Sign of the Golden Lock, in Dock Street."—See N. Y. Post-Boy of these dates.

29 A concert of vocal and instrumental music is advertised to take place on this day at the new "Exchange" (see Feb. 11, 1754; and III: 924), for the benefit of Messrs. Cobbam and Tuckey. Tickets are to be obtained of them, and also at the "New-York Arms," the "King's Arm," and the "new Printing-Office in Beaver-Street." An "Ode on Masonry" will be sung.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 22, 1755.

Richard Breckell, clock maker, exhibits a musical machine at the house of Adam Vandenbergh in the Broadway. A piece of the tragedy "Paradise Lost," by figures performed by clockwork, Admission is one shilling, "and for boys, six pence."—N. Y. Merc., Dec. 29, 1755.

Major-Gen. Johnson, who defeated the French and Indians at Lake George, arrives in New York from Albany. A number of gentlemen went some miles out of town to meet him, and he was welcomed "by a general Huzza of Multitudes of the Inhabitants, by the firing of Cannon, displaying of Colours, &c. and by the Houses being ornamented with Lights in the Evening."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 5, 1756. He remained in town until Jan. 18.—Ibid., Jan. 26, 1776.

Gov. Shirley writes from New York to Horatio Sharp: "I enclose 1 send you honour a Copy of the Minutes of a Council of War composed of Governors and Field officers according to his Majestys Instructions held at this Place the 12th and 13th Instant in 5; 1, 1 upon the operations of the next years Campaign, at which your Honour assisted. I doubt not but you will recommend to the Assembly within your Government in the Strongest Terms to contribute their Just Quota of Men and Money towards carrying so Salutary a Plan into Execution."—Correspondence of II. Shirley (ed. by Lincoln), II: 371.

William Smith, the historian, writing in this year, gives the following description of New York: "The City of New-York... consists of about two thousand five hundred Buildings... The Streets are irregular, but being paved with round Pebbles are clean, and lined with well built Brick Houses, many of which covered with tiled Roofs.

"No Part of America is supplied with Markeets abounding with greater Plenty and Variety. We have Beef, Pork, Mutton, Poultry, Butter, wild Fowl, Venison, Fish, Roots, and Herbs of all Kinds in their Season. Our Oysters are a considerable Article in Support of Trade... Their Beaver is of four hundred small Craft, are often seen there, at a Time, when the Weather is mild in Winter; and this single Article is computed to be worth annually 10 or 12,000 l..." Upon the South-West Point of the City stands the Fort, which is a Square with four Bastions. Within the Walls is the Old House in which our Governors usually reside, and opposite to it Brick Baracks, built formerly, for the Independent Companies. The Governor's House is in Height three Stories, and fronts to the West; having, from the second Story, a fine Prospect of the Bay and the Jersey Shores. At the South End there was formerly a Chapel, but this was burnt down in the Negro Conspiracy of the Spring 1742. According to Governor Burnet's Observations, this Fort stands in the Latitude of 40° 42' N. "Below the Walls of the Garrison, near the Water, we have lately raised a Line of Fortifications, which commands the Entrance into the Eastern Road, and the Mouth of Hudson's River. This Battery is built of Stone, and the Merlons consist of Cedar Joints, filled in with Earth. It mounts 92 Cannon, and these are all the Works we have to defend us. About six Furlongs, South-east of the Fort, lies Notten Island, containing about 100 or 120 Acres, reserved by an Act of Assembly as a Port of Commerce for the Governors, upon which it is proposed to erect a strong Castle, because an Enemy might from thence easily bombard the City, without being annoyed either by our Battery, or the Fort. During the late War a Line of Palisades was run from Hudson's to the East River, at the other End of the City, with Block-houses at small Distances, The greater Part of these still remain as a Monument of our Folly, which cost the Province about 8000 l. The Inhabitants of New-York are a mixed People, but mostly descended from the original Dutch Planters. There are still two Churches, in which religious Worship is performed in that Language. The Old Building is ornamented and ill-ornamented within by a small Organ Loft and Brass Branches. The new Church is a high, heavy, Edifice, has a very extensive Area, and was completed in 1759. It has no Galleries, and yet will perhaps contain a thousand or twelve hundred Auditors. The Steeple of this Church affords a most beautiful Prospect, both of the City beneath and the surrounding Country. The Dutch Congregation is more numerous than any other... Their Church was incorporated on the 11th of May, 1666..." There are, besides the Dutch, two Episcopal Churches in the City. Trinity Church was built in 1668, and has been much enlarged in 1757. It mounts very pleasantly upon the Banks of Hudson's River, and has a large Cemetery, on each Side, inclosed in the Front by a painted paled Fence. Before it a long Walk is railed off from the Broad-way, the pleasantest Street of any in the whole Town. This Building is about 148 Feet long, including the Tower and Chancel, and 72 Feet in Breadth. The Steeple is 175 Feet in Height, and over the Door facing the River is the following Inscription [quoted at length in Latin]. "The church is, within, ornamented beyond any other Place of publiek Worship amongst us. The Head of the Chancel is adorned with an Altar-piece, and opposite to it, at the other End of the Building, is the Organ. The Tops of the Pillars, which support the Galleries, are deck'd with the gilt Busts of Angels winged. From the Ciding are suspended two Glass Branches, and on the Walls hang the Arms of some of its principal Benefactors. The Altar is covered with a rich Tapestry." "This Congregation... is become so numerous, that the old Building will contain 2000 Hearers yet, a new one was erected in 1752. This, called St. George's Chapel, [Footnote: "The Length, exclusive of the Chancel, 92 Feet, and its Breadth at 20 Feet less", is a very neat Edifice, faced with brown Stone and tiled. The Steeple is lofty [Footnote: "One hundred and seventy-five Feet"], but irregular; and its Situation in a new, crowded, and ill-built, Part of the Town..." The Presbyterians increasing after Lord Cornbury Returns to England, purchased a Place of Ground, and founded a Church in 1741. The Latest and finest Edifice, within the Town, is the Presbyterian Church, at 1758. It is built of Stone, railed off from the Street, is 80 Feet long and in Breadth 60. The Steeple, raised on the Southwest End, is in Height 145 Feet. In the Front to the Street, — between two long Windows, is the following Inscription gilt and cut in a black Slate six Feet in Length [printed by Smith in the original Latin].

"The French Church . . . is of Stone nearly a Square [Footnote: The Area is seventy Feet long and in Breath fifty], plain both before and without. It is faced from the Street, has a Steeple and a Bell, the latter of which was the Gift of Sir Henry Ashurf of London. On the Front of the Church is the following Inscription [in Latin, which states that the church was founded in 1704, and repaired within in 1714].

"The German Lutheran Churches are two. Both their Places of Worship are small: one of them has a Capula and Bell. The Quakers have a Meeting-house, and the Moravians . . . a Church . . ."

"The Anabaptists assemble at a small Meeting-house, but have as yet no regular settled Congregation. The Jews, who are not inconsiderable for their Numbers, worship in a Synagogue erected in a very private Part of the Town, plain without, but very neat within. [See also Oct. 11, 1748, and Oct. 12, 1750.]

"The City Hall [cf. Grim’s Plan, Pl. 52-b, Vol. I] is a strong Brick Building, two Stories in Height, in the Shape of an Octagon, window on each side, at the right of each door. The Floor below is an open Walk, except two Jails and the Jailer’s Apartments. The Cellar underneath is a Dungeon, and the Garret above a common Prison. This Edifice is erected in a Place where four Streets meet, and fronts, to the Southwest, one of the most spacious Streets in Town. The Eastern wing, in the second Story, consists of the Assembly Chamber, a Lobby, and a small Room for the Speaker of the House. The West Wing, on the same Floor, forms the Council Room and a Library; and in the Space between the Ends, the Supreme Court is ordinarily held.

"The Library consists of 1000 Volumes, which were bequeathed to The Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in foreign Parts. [See June 27, 1729.]

"In 1754 [Oct.], a Set of Gentlemen undertook to carry about a Subscription towards raising a publick Library, and in a few Days collected £1000, which were laid out in purchasing, about 700 Volumes of new, well chosen, Books. Every Subscriber, upon Payment of £1. Principal, and the annual Sum of 10s. is entitled to the Use of these Books . . ."

"Besides the City Hall, there belong to the Corporation, a large Alms-house or Place of Correction, and the Exchange, in the latter of which there is a large Room raised upon Brick Arches, generally used for publick Entertainments, Concerts of Music, Balls, and Assemblies. . . ."

"The standing Militia of the Island consists of about 2000 Men, [Footnote: The whole Number of the Inhabitants, exclusive of Servants, according to a List returned to the Government, in the Spring 1756, amounted to 16,868 Whites, and 2275 Negroes; but that Account is erroneous. It is most probable that there are in the City 15,000 Souls.] and the City has in Reserve, a thousand Stand of Arms for Seamen, the Poor and others, in Case of an Invasion.

"The North Eastern Part of New-York Island is inhabited principally, by Dutch Farmers, who have a small Village there called Harlem, pleasantly Situated on a Flat cultivated for the City Markets."—Smith, The Hist. of Province of N. Y. from the First Discovery in the Year MDCCLXXII (London, 1757), 187-96. See 1757.

— Walter Rutherford, writing in 1800, recorded that, in 1756, there were but "two houses of three stories" in New York; see, however, the Buryll View, of 1717, Pl. 25, Vol. I. Rutherford added: "A house rented for £40 where the Governors, Generals, Admirals, and principal strangers were entertained. Many houses in that street now [1800] rent for from £200 to £500 per annum."—Rutherford, Family Records and Events, 198. Compare with the list of private houses in New York in 1795—Man. Com. Counc. (1853), 561.

Because of a dispute on the question of psalmody, a part of the Wall Street Presbyterian Church withdrew in this year, and formed the Scotch Presbyterian or Associate Reformed Church. The congregation worshipped in a small wooden building on Little Queen (Cedar) St., between Broadway and Nassau St.—Wylie, Our Judges, A Sketch of the Dutch Presbyterian Church, New York 1756-1906, 113-141; Diswaye, Early Churches in N. Y., 125-26. On the Rutter Map (Pl. 41, Vol. I), which depicts the city as it was in 1766-7, it is called the "Seducers' Meeting."—See also Pl. 42, Vol. I. It was occupied until 1764; and was replaced in 1768 (q.v.) by a more substantial structure of stone, 55 by 65 feet. This was occupied by Hessian troops during the Revolution, and, on Nov. 10, 1783, an appeal was made for funds to repair it. This church contained a pew for the Governor, and "gallery for persons of color." The edifice was still standing in 1818, at which time another Presbyterian church stood on the north side of the same street between Nassau and William Sts.—Picture of N. Y. (1815), 216, 220. The ground was sold on Oct. 13, 1795, and, in 1806, it was owned by the Equitable Life Assurance Society.

The second site of this congregation was on the north-east corner of Grand and Crosby Sts., where their church was erected in 1876 (q.v.). For its church history, see Our Jubilee, by Wylie (1906); Greenleaf, Hist. of the Churches of N. Y., 205-41; Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 932.

Thomas Hamersly, silversmith, worked in New York in this year. Some specimens of his work are described in Met. Museum of Art. Cat. of Exhibitions of Silver used in N. Y., N. J. and the South (1913), 30-31.

— Gen. William Shirley writes from New York to the lords of trade in London, presenting the sketch of a plan that he proposes for the management of Indian affairs in North America under a single director-general. His plan comprises protection against the French; regulation of trade among them; regulation of the sale of their lands and protection of their hunting grounds; establishing French missionaries, and introducing English Protestant ministers; convening general councils among them; establishing interviews between them and the English governors, and commissioners—Correspondence of William Shirley, ed. by C. H. Lincoln (1913), II, 77-77.

— Gen. Shirley proposes a winter campaign against Ticonderoga.

— Gen. Hardy reports to the lords of trade the amount of "Warlike Stores in the Magazine of this Fort." The list is not with the letter, but he observes "Small arms we have none in the publick Magazine but six chests that belong to the four independent companies; this city has a stand of 1000 muskets, they provided last year; and what is in the possession of private People are chiefly for Indian Trade. The Militia are by law to furnish themselves each man one good musket, with a due proportion of Ammunition, some of them are so indigent that they cannot purchase their proper arms. The Militia Law in Force in this Province, which I believe is not only the best, but the only one on the Continent that can effectually answer the good purposes of such a Law, will fully inform your Lordships of their mustorings and training."—N. Y. Col. Docs., VII: 13. See Feb. 19, 1755.

— Gen. William Shirley, commander-in-chief of the English forces in America, cautions a notice to be published calling for the enlistment of "Battomen" for the following spring and summer. The notice contains detailed information concerning the pay, work, opportunity for advancement, etc.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 26, 1756.

For furnishing materials and building a kitchen in Fort George, the assembly allows £500 to Charles Jaudine; and for work on the governor's house, £127:8 is granted to Thomas Jacobs.—Assemb. Jour., IV: 376-77. For further payment on house, see May 17, 1771.

— The provincial council receives from Gen. Shirley his plan of operations, including the quota of the several colonies; the assembly is to be asked for an appropriation to raise 1,000 men.—Cal. Com. Min., 425. See Jan. 29.

— The council receives the votes of the assembly for subsidising 1,000 men by new emission of bills of credit. The council advises the governor to consent to the continuance of the bills outstanding.—Cal. Com. Min., 425.

— The council issues a warrant to impress Johannes Quaakenbos, Fy
A remarkable piece of mechanism, called the "Microcosm, or, The World in Miniature," which has been on exhibition in Philadelphia, is brought to New York. It was made by the late Henry Bridges of London. It is a highly ornamental music-box, in the form of a Roman temple, with moving figures, astronomical representations, etc., which the late Prince of Wales "off' the Author Three Thousand Guineas for, and Two Hundred Pounds per Annum during Life." It was placed on view in the assembly-room of the New Exchange on Broad St. until Feb. 23—N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 2, 9, 16, & 27, 1756. On Feb. 16, a full column newspaper advertisement gave the following information about the mechanism:

- Its outward Structure is a most beautiful composition of Architecture, Sculpture and Painting. The inward Contents are as judiciously adapted to gratify the Ear, the Eye, and the Understanding; for it plays with great Exactness several fine Pieces of Music, and exhibits, by an amazing Variety of moving Figures, Scenes diversified with natural Beauties, Operations of Art, of human Employments and Diversions, all passing as in real Life, &c.
- "I. Shews all the celestial Phenomena, with just regard to the proportional Magnitudes of their Bodies, the figures of their Orbits, and the Periods of their Revolutions . . . In particular will be seen the Trajectory and Type of a Satellite, predicted by Sir Isaac Newton recently, as likewise a Transit of Venus over the Sun's Disk . . . also a large and visible Eclipse of the Sun . . .
- "2. Are the nine Muses playing in Concert on divers musical Instruments, as the Harp, Hautboy, Bass Viol, &c.
- "3. Is Orpheus in the Forest, playing on his Lyre, and beating exact Time to each Tune . . .
- "4. Is a Carpenter's Yard, wherein the various Branches of that Trade are most naturally represented, &c.
- "5. Is a delightful Grove, wherein are Birds flying . . .
- "6. Is a fine Landskip, with a Prospect of the Sea, where Ships are sailing . . . On the Land are Coaches, Carts and Chaises passing along, with their Wheels turning round as if on a Road . . . and nearer, on a River, is a Compounder Mill at Work . . .
- "7. And, lastly, is shown the whole Machine in Motion, when upwards of twelve Hundred Wheels and Pinnions are in Motion at once . . . "—N. Y. Merc., Feb. 16, 1756.

A full column poem: "On that Matchless Piece of Art, called The Microcosm," written "By an unknown Hand," appeared in the paper two weeks later.—Ibid., March 1, 1756. On two different occasions when Washington was in the city, he visited the exhibit, "treat'g Ladies to ye Microcosm" (see Feb. 15 and March 9).

"Col. Washington, of and from Virginia, but last from Philadelphia," arrives in New York. He left on Feb. 20 for Boston, "there, 'tis thought to consult with General Shirley, Measures proper to be taken with the Native Tribes of Indians to the Southward, and particularly the Cherokee, some hundreds of whom, from the back Part of the two Carolinas, it is reported, have assured the Western Governments of their coming in, and firmly adhering to the Interest of the English, in Opposition to the French."—N. Y. Merc., Feb. 16, 1756. Post-Boy, Feb. 23, 1756.

A letter of Washington to Gov. Dinwiddie of Virginia, written just prior to his departure, gives further evidence that he was on official business. On the other hand, there is evidence that this first visit to New York of the young military officer of 24 had its social side as well. "Notes on his Journey to Boston," in the form of a table of expenditures, survive, and much may be read between the lines. Just before leaving Philadelphia, he notes:

- [February] 15. By Cash to the Banker 21. 90
- to the Hatter 2.14
- to the Jeweller 1. 15
- to the Saddler 1. 9.7
- to the washer-woman 16.11

Pensa. Money $27.17.0. is in Virga. Curry. Feb. 15. 5. 73. I, 8. 1. 5.

While in New York, he notes, under "15 to 18" (February), the following expenses:

- "By Cash for my Club at Tavern 5.4 for treat'g Ladies to ye Min. Microcosm—See Feb. 9. 1. 8. New York My traveller.

Cury. 4. 14. 4. More expenses, from the 18th to the 25th, also in "New York My." include:

- By cash, to a pl. of slips 16. treating Ladies to ye Microcosm 1. 4. hiring a person to get horses 8. Mr. Robinson's Servts. 1. 6.6 lost at cards 8 "—Writings of George Washington (ed. by Ford), I: 220-32. Washington returned to New York from Boston on March 9 (p.v.).

The population of the province of New York, taken from the returns of the sheriffs of the several counties of the province, in pursuance of warrants to them of this date, shows a total of 96,785, of whom 81,233 are whites. Of these, there are 13,040 in the city (and county) of New York, of whom 10,768 are whites.—Dec. Hist. N. Y. (4th ed.), I: 473; and the Miller Papers, Vol. II, in archives of the N. Y. Hist. Soc.

Nine negroes were recently "whipt at the Whipping Post" for illegally assembling on Sunday, Feb. 8. Their offense was a violation of the provincial act aimed to prevent "the Conspiracy and Insurrection of Negro and other Slaves" (see Oct. 29, 1750); and also of the city ordinance which required that not more than three negroes should be seen together at one time, except in their own service, under penalty of being whipped.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 16, 1756.

A "Magazine to be erected in N. Y." is referred to in a letter from one William Elphistone to William Alexander, asking for a clerkship there.—See Letter in the "Soil and Shipping Papers" at N. Y. Hist. Soc. There appears to be no reference in the public records of the time to any proposed new magazine or powder-house, or to the writer of this letter; yet the letter indicates that a rumour of such proposed construction had spread abroad. (Nov. 12, 1755.)

John Winslow is commissioned by Gov. Shirley to be general and commander-in-chief over the forces to be raised in Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, New Hampshire, New Jersey, and Rhode Island.—Col. Hist. Mass., Engr., 649. Another warrant is issued to Bancker and Dies, commissioners, for expenses in building New York fortifications.—Col. Coun. Min., 425. These commissions were issued on April 23, May 22, July 5 and 16.—Ibid., 426, 428, 429. See also May 30, 1755, and June 8, 1757.

The council orders the building of barracks near Whitehall Slip.—Col. Coun. Min., 425. See also March 3.

A provincial statute establishes the rates for wharfage and cranieg in New York City. The act recites that the "Several Wharfs called Burnets Key the wharf between the Smiths Fly Slip and Burling's Slip all fronting to the East River or Harbour" have proved very serviceable, but the laws fixing rates of wharfage have not secured full profits for the owners of these wharfs. The proprietors of Rodman's Slip, of Burling's Slip, and of a wharf "extending in length from the Lot of Robert Livingston Esquire to the East end of the Lot of James Dibbroses" (see March 14, 1754), all three slips being in the "Montgomery Ward," also seek the benefit of the rates for wharfage and cranieg. The rates to be charged on all these wharves are therefore fixed. However, that act does not "lay down the Right which the Mayor Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of New York have to the Dock and the Several Slips herein before mentioned."—Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 23-27. The province had previously passed an act fixing the rates for "Burnets Key."—See June 22, 1734.

A long letter, published, defending New York against the 23 slanders of New England newspapers. It is principally a defence of Gen. Johnson's conduct at the battle of Lake George. It contains the following: "They constantly speak of us in their public News Papers, as a Province whose whole Politicks consists in forming Schemes to enrich ourselves, at the Expense of everything that ought to be held sacred amongst Men, united together in civil society; one need go no further back, than the last Boston Gazette, of February 2d. for Proof of this vile Asperion, 'about another Expedition be form'd' (says a Writer in that Paper) and manag'd just as the last war, it would bring Money into their Notice is given by Daniel O'Brien, "who some Years ago [see Sept. 24, 1753] first began, and ever since, with great Success, car- ried on the Post-Boat from this City to Ambon & Day, Beverley (for the greater Expedition of Passengers and Goods.) first proposed Stage-Waggons from thence to Burlington, where Boats constantly attend the Carriage of Things to Philadelphia; Has, from a Multipi- city of Business, been obliged to set up two Boats (extraordinary well fitted for Gentlemen, Ladies and others, as Passengers) to ply between Burlington and Philadelphia:-one of them being Consider'd That the Said Fifteen foot of Ground will not be sufficient for half a Street It is Therefore Agreed Between the Said Parties That the Said Rector & Inhabitants Shall leave out of their Farm Twenty five feet of Ground in breadth from the said Broadway to the North-Side of the Street, and that the Said foot of Ground so left by the Said Dick Dey So as to leave a Street there of Forty foot wide And the Said Dick Dey in Consideration thereof Doth Com- mit and Agree with the Said Rector & Inhabitants to pay to them or their Successors the Sum of Sixty Pounds Current Money of New-York on or before the First Day of May next." The street referred to was Partition Street (now Fulton Street, west of Broad- way).—N. Y. Hist. Soc. Bulletin (Jan., 1912).

Samuel Francis, or Fracunc, famous in later years as the founder of the noted Fracunc Tavern, and as the steward of Washington's household, on this day dissolves partnership with James Taggart.—N. Y. Merc., March 1, 1756. See also 26, 1747.

The council learns that Massachusetts will raise 7,500 men, and decides to recommend to the assembly that New York increase its quota.—Col. Coun. Min., 245. See March 15 and 18.

Connecticut agrees to raise 2,500 men conditionally (but see April 12). New York will raise forces for service against the Indians. The council issues orders regarding the building and altering of barracks (see Feb. 19).—Col. Coun. Min., 245.

Old lining being "extremely much wanted for the Use of the Hospital in this City," James Murray, apothecary, advises that he will pay "full Value" for it. The women of the city are urged also to donate old or new linen for hospital use.—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 8, 1756. See also Sept. 29, 1755.

Col. Washington returns "hither from Boston . . . in his Way home to Virginia."—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 15, 1756. Referring again (see Feb. 13) to his "Notes on his Journey to Boston," we find the Colonel describing the vagaries of the East Coast, and Cond. Eltz, of Beverly, who had the good luck to marry Susannah Philipse, a daughter of Frederick Philipse, one of the largest landed pro- prietors of the colony of New York. Here he met the sister, Mary Philipse, then a girl of twenty-five, and, short as was the time, it was sufficient to engage his heart. To this interest no doubt are to be added "the Countess of St. George," to treat Ladies for the large tailors' bills then incurred. —Ford, The True George Washington, 90.

One of the ferry-boats of Otto van Tyle and Abraham Boecke (see Jan. 16, Sept. 22, 1755) from Staten Island is sunk near Oyster Island by high seas, and Denys van Tyle with ten other men and three horses are drowned.—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 15, 1756. For the location of Oyster Island, see and compare Pls. 40 and 45, Vol. IV.

The king has appointed the Earl of Loudoun commander-in-chief of all his forces in America, and expects the "governors in North America" to co-operate with him in every way possible.—N. Y. Col. Doc., VII. 75. See, further, March 25.

River Indians come to New York with complaints to the provincial council regarding the treatment of the white people. While here they boarded at the tavern of Adam van den Bergh (see Oct. 11, 1742), whom the council paid on April 23 for their expenses.—Col. Coun. Min., 426.

Rhode Island has voted to raise 500 men. Massachusetts will increase her contingent to 3,500.—Col. Coun. Min., 426.

An advertisement reads: "Engraving in gold, silver, copper, and other metals, by John Lamb, at Sir Isaac Newton's head, on Hunter's Key, New York."—N. Y. Merc., March 15, 1756. Lamb was also a silversmith.—Stauffer, Am. Engravers on Copper and Silver, 1: 115.

St. Patrick's Day is observed by Irishmen in the city with a grand Entertainment at the Crown and Thistle near Whitehall: at which were present His Excellency our Governor, who wore a Cross in Honour of the Day; sundry Members of his Majesty's Council, and others of the City and Assembly of this Province."—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 22, 1756.

New Jersey has voted to raise 200 men. New York assembly increases the quota to 1,715. The council issues a proclamation calling for volunteers.—Col. Coun. Min., 426.

For the benefit of a poor man, a concert of Vocal and Instrumental Music" is announced to be held on this day at the city hall where "a New Organ, made by Gilbert Ash," will be used. Tickets may be had "at Mr. Cobbain's in Hanover-Square, at the Gentleman's Coffee-House, at the Bible & Crown in Queen-street, and at Mr. Asb., joining Mr. Willet's in Wall-street."—N. Y. Merc., March 9, 1756.

Luke Clarke, who "lately lived with Mr. John Thompson [Scotch Johnny], Tavern-keeper, near the White-Hall Slip," announces that he is now keeping the "noted Tavern formerly kept by Mr. Benjamin Kiersteck, behind the Work-House."—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 22, 1756.

"To be sold by Thomas White, at his store in the house of Mrs. Farara, in Queen-street, within two doors of the sign of the Bible & Crown, a parcel of choice Bristol short pipes, by the box."—N. Y. Merc., March 22, 1756. Mrs. Ferrara had removed her tavern to Maiden Lane before May 1, 1756, when she mortgaged the house and lot to Charles Arding.—Lever Mortgages, 1: 171. She was still in Maiden Lane on July 31, 1766 (q. v.), when she advertised that she was removing into the new coffee-house on the opposite cross-corner.

A London letter of this date states that Lord Loudoun (see May 23) is to leave Great Britain the beginning of April, for America, with the several Regiments under this Command, and a proper Convoy; there to dispute his Majesty's Right by Sword; . . .”—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 24, 1756.

An attempt to burn Fort George is discovered. Three men, "Deserters from the King's Forces, had been taken and confined in a Place under the Ramps, which had formerly been a Magazine, and is now supposed they see Fire, and many Combustibles left in it, which burnt the Door open; but by the timely Help of the Inhabitants, it was extinguished, with little other Damage than the three Men's Death, who were found supficated at the Bottom of the Steps."—N. The governor and council order the issuing of a proclamation for a day of fasting.—Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 651.

On proving cannon in the fields this month, a 32-pounder belonging to the battery burst, and destroyed an 18-pounder nearby.

The next day a 14-pounder broke, and later three others.—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 10, 1756.

A proclamation is issued for a day of fasting and humiliation, on account of the earthquake, which was very severe in both this and the neighbouring colonies.—Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 652.

A committee is appointed by the common council "to Remove the Gallows lately set up in the new Stand [City Hall Pl. between Pearl and Duane Sts.] to the place where the Negroes were Burnt some five years ago, at the foot of the Hill Called Catecimant Hill Near the fresh water" (intersection of Pearl and Centre Sts.).—M. C. C., IV, 51. See also May 10, 1756. For an early use of the new gallows see Feb. 4, 1755. For locations of the gallows on the modern plan of the city, see Landmark Map. Reel Key, III, 972.

The council issues a warrant to James Parker for the expense of printing bills of credit.—Col. Hist. MSS., 427.

The subject of strengthening the fortifications, and particularly of providing musket-proof "maestets," is also considered by the council.—Ibid., 425.

A counterfeiter, described as "the forty thousand Pound Money-maker," is hanged, his execution having been deferred from the 7th for want of a hangman, and because of the cutting down of the gallows by persons unknown.—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 10, 1756.

Before dying, he asked to have his hands cut off, and his remains "thrown into the Rhine River money; about the same amount of New Hampshire money; £5,000 of Connecticut money, and of New York money to have "printed large sums of four different Emissions." When asked the denomination of these bills, he refused to say, leaving it, he said, to their learning to find out, and "so died obstinate."—Ibid., May 17, 1756.

Elizabeth Wragg advertises a school "to teach young Masters and Misses the first Rudiments of Learning viz. A Genteel Behaviour, Spelling, Reading, and Needle work etc."—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 10, 1756.

Louis Joseph, Marquis de Montcalm, informs Gov. Vaudreuil that he has arrived at Quebec to assume command of the French forces in place of Baron Dieskau.—Journal du Marquis de Montcalm durant ses Campagnes en Canada, de 1756 à 1759, 641; Parkman, Montcalm and Wolfe, I, 366-68.

After fighting the French for two years, Great Britain makes an open declaration of war by act of parliament. France formally declared war against Great Britain on June 9.—Thwaites, France in America, 108. On June 22, hostilities were formally proclaimed at Albany, the declaration having been brought by express to Gov. Hardy, the documents show an agreement between Great Britain and Spain that all prizes made after Aug. 9, 1748, should be restored; under which agreement, the claim was made that certain Spanish prisoners in New York (in 1752 and later) should be restored to their vessels. Courts of vice-admiralty were held in New York to hear some of these cases, to determine whether certain negroes were free or slave.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 660-61. See Sept. 24.

The "New Exchange" is designated as the place for the election of 12 trustees for the New York Society Library, on the last Tuesday in April.—N. Y. Merc., April 19, 1756.

The provincial council is informed that Oswego is besieged by French and Indians; and that Sir Wm. Johnson intends to march for its relief, and has ordered militia to reinforce Forts William Henry, and Edward. Lieut-Gov. De Lancy is to go to Albany.—Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 651.

Oliver de Lancy, Beverley Robinson, and John Cruger, paymasters of the forces, receive warrants for paying the troops.—Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 426.

On this day a census return is made of the inhabitants of New York City, among census returns from the several counties bearing from April 1 to Nov. 21.—Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 651. The figures are not printed in the Calendar.

The provincial council, on being informed that people are being sent to New York from Nova Scotia (Acadians or French neutrals) by order of Gov. Lawrence, gives directions as to how to place them. On the 22nd the council recorded that several families of Acadians were distributed to various points on Long Island, Staten Island, and in Westchester Co.—Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 426. lives,” was advertised for sale.—Ibid., Jan. 10, 1757.

After a passage of nine weeks and three days out of Plymouth, the “Grafton,” of 74 guns, and the “Nothingham,” of 60 guns, with four transports under their convoy, arrive at Sandy Hook, two other transports having become separated from the others in a storm. In the “Grafton” come Major-Gen. Abercrombie, commander-in-chief of the British forces in North America (second in command under Loudoun), Capt. James Abercrombie, of the Highlanders, as aide-de-camp, and Lieut. William Abercrombie, of the Royal American Dragoons. The “Grafton,” being “too large to come into the Hook, they came up to the city on the following morning in one of the Transports, and were saluted by the Cannon on the Battery.”—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 21, 1756. On the 22d they left for Albany.—Ibid., June 18, 1756.

By order of Gov. Hardy, Capt. Hout, in the “Olive Branch,” sails down to the “Grafton” and “Nothingham,” men-of-war, which lie at anchor outside the Hook, with a present of “two large fat Oxen, upwards of forty Sheep, most kind of Roots and Greens, Cherries, &c.”—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 21, 1756.

A letter from Henry Fox, secretary of state, informs the provcvincial council that the Earl of Loudoun has been appointed commander-in-chief in America. The council also considers the subject of recruiting; a parliamentary grant, for the war, to New York, New Jersey, and New England; indentured servants, and trade

Abercrombie, at Albany, billets his soldiers upon private houses,

Imported arms and ammunition are advertised for sale by local tradesmen of New York. For example, on June 28, muskets and lances (1012), 386 pairs of pistols; on Aug. 9, cannon-shot and hand-grenade shells and on Dec. 26, 1657, cannon powder, French prize muskets, bayonets, and bullets.—
N. Y. Post-Boy, of the dates mentioned.

Gov. Hardy informs the assembly that the Earl of Loudoun has been selected to act as the commander-in-chief of all the British forces in North America (see July 26, 1756) and that it is the king’s pleasure that the regiments in America shall “be recruited as soon as possible to their full Compliment” of 1,000 men each. Parliament has given £115,000 to be distributed in the provinces of New England,

From this month until Jan., 1757, 128 privates belonging to this port were fitted out for service in the war. For their names, with the number of their guns, and names of their command-ers, see May 22. See also Aug. 24.

Mayor Holland shows the common council “the Modell of a Hay Machine, for the weighing of Hay for Sale in this City.” It is resolved that three of these machines be erected: “one at or near the White Hill Slip, in the South ward, one other at or near the Oswego Market in the wear ward, and the other near the Widow Van Curen’s in Montgomerie ward.”—M. C. C., VI: 68-9.

The assembly, resolving itself into a committee of the whole house on the subjects contained in the governor’s message of June 29, reviews various measures of defence for the province, undertaken at the expense of the province, and records, among other things, the observation that “the Provision of Twenty Thousand Pounds, made to erect Fortifications for the Defence of the City of New-York; which, though no trifling Sum, is an Expendence that most of the other Colonies have been Strangers to, since the late Encroachments and violent Proceedings of the Americans.”—Ist committee.—Ibid.

Assenting “That this Colony has already greatly exerted itself, in raising Men and Money for recovering his Majesty’s just Rights in America, more particularly the last Year . . . ,” the committee of the whole house records the opinion “that when a command Fund shall be established for the general Uses of American Affairs, by his Majesty’s Council on the Continent, this Colony ought then to continue to contribute its just Share towards such Fund (having already begun a Contribution of that Kind, by granting Five Thousand Pounds, to the Colony of Virginia, and Five Thousand Pounds more, chiefly disposed of by General Braddock’s Directions) and that the sum be issued and applied to the general Service, in such Manner as the Captain General shall direct.”—Assem. Jour., II: 496. See

Gov. William Shirley, in a letter to Henry Fox, secretary of state, reports the “considerable sums paid towards the employment of the 1,300 soldiers which, by his Majesty’s order of May 13, he was in receipt of orders (see March 31) to return to England, the Earl of Loudoun having been appointed to succeed him as commander-in-chief. In this and in several letters immediately following, he reported upon the military situation as he left it.
In a letter to Secretary Fox, of July 26, he announced: “Tomorrow
I purpose to embark for Boston, and upon the Arrival of the Frigate there which is appointed to carry me to England, I shall lose no time for going on board it.”—Correspondence of William

According to a notice of July 5, signed "Lamb. Moore, Cl.," a meeting of the governors of the "College of the Province of New York" (King's College) was scheduled to be held on this day "at the House of Edward Willet, at the Sign of the New-York Arms."—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 5, 1756. This tavern was again selected the meeting-place of Gov. Hardy and other persons of note, when they participated in laying the cornerstone of King's College.—See Aug. 21. In 1762, when John Crawley was proprietor, meetings of the governors of the college were still held here.—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), May 3, 1762.

23 The Earl of Loudoun, "General and Commander in Chief of all his Majesties Forces in North America, Colonel of the Royal American Regiments, and Governor of Virginia" (see June 29), arrives on the "Nightingale," man-of-war, and comes up to the city from Sandy Hook in a pilot boat, between three and four o'clock in the morning. "His Lordship thus taking the Advantage of the City in coming up so privately, prevented the Inhabitants giving that publick Testimony of Joy and Respect on his Arrival as was intended, by their appearing under Arms: And when at Sunrise it was noticed to him their Intention still to muster, he recommended it as needless. However, when he was conducted to his House in Whitehall, the Guns on the Battery fired, being about Six o'Clock in the Morning." At about 11 o'clock, some members of the council and the general assembly as were then in town waited upon him with congratulations on his safe arrival, and with thanks for engaging in so important a service. "As did likewise at the same Time the Mayor and Corporation, the Clergy, and all the Gentlemen in Town: And at Night the City was handsomely illuminated."—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 26, 1756.

Benjamin Franklin, in his autobiography (written in 1771), probably referred to the events of July 25 when he describes the house he first "inhabited at the back of the city of New York to Lord Loudoun on his taking upon him the command," in place of Gen. Shirley.—Works of Benj. Franklin (ed. by Bigelow), I: 289.

Gov. Hardy being still in Albany on the arrival of the Earl of Loudoun with the king's declaration of war against France, expenses are immediately dispatched to him.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 2, 1756. See, further, July 31.

The Earl of Loudoun was accompanied on the voyage to New York by Mr. Pownall, the secretary of the British board of trade. Gen. Shirley, who had returned to New York on July 4, awaited Loudoun's arrival, and, on Aug. 1, sailed for Providence for Boston, and thence to England, and was followed a fortnight afterward by Mr. Pownall.—Smith's Continuation in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections (1870), 235; Dickerson, Am. Colonial Government (1912), 74, 77. See Aug. 3.

A false price, the "Centaur," is brought into port by the "Nightingale" man-of-war. It is a vessel of 350 tons, loaded with sugar, cotton, and coffee; has a crew of 36 men, and is pierced for 20 guns, six having been thrown overboard before she was captured. The price is valued at $20,000.—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 26, 1756.

Oliver de Lancey, by letter to Gov. Hardy, asks for a commission for the ship "Hardy" as a privateer, of which he and Messrs. Cruger, Watts, and Henry Cuyler, Jr., are owners.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 657.

The Earl of Loudoun (see June 29) receives an address from the speaker and several members of the general assembly (see Assem. Jour., II: 499), expressing the determination that "every Measure calculated for His Majesty's Service and the Security of Happiness and Prosperity of his American Subjects, will be executed with the utmost vigour."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 2, 1756.

Gov. Hardy writes from Albany to Archibald Kennedy, the presiding councillor, evidently, under Hardy's instructions of July 16, to take measures to prevent the introduction into New York of the small-pox, which is raging in Philadelphia.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 657.

Gov. Hardy writes to Mr. Kennedy that he has published the declaration of war in Albany, and orders that it be published in New York City and throughout the province.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 657.

A report is made to the common council on the laying out and regulating for the paving of Cherry Street.—M. C. C., VI: 60-61. Cherry Street was originally laid out prior to 1750, and was first shown on the Carysfort Plan, Pl. 27, Vol. I. It was ordered continued to Baygert's Slip, May 28, 1790.—M. C. C. (MS.), IX: 390.

An order is received by the council in New York from Gov. Hardy, at Albany, to publish at the city hall the king's declaration of war against France, which he sends.—Cal. Coun. Min., 479. At four in the afternoon, the proclamation is read at Fort George before all the members of the council and assembly who are in town, the civil and military officers, and the magistrates of the city. After the usual drinking of healths, the company proceed to the city hall, where the proclamation is again published, "After which the Company proceeded to the City-Arms, where His Majesty's immortal Memory, and numberless other loyal Healths were presented, and every Thing concluded with great Order and Decency."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 5, 1756.

"We now have in this Harbour, fitted out, and fitting for Privates, one Snow, two Brigs, one Schooner, and five Sloops; and we are told there are several large Vessels to be immediately put on the Stocks, and finished with all Expedition, in order to cruise against his Majesty's Enemies" (the French).—N. Y. Merc., Aug. 2, 1756. See also description of Pl. 35: I: 276.

Ten transports from Plymouth arrive at Sandy Hook. They carry "about 900 Men, including a Number of Officers, and some Privates for the Royal American Regiment, and a very compleat Train of Artillery, besides the Tents and Arms belonging to Lord John Murray's Highland Regiment, and a vast Quantity of all Kinds of Warlike Stores." On Aug. 16 and 17 (5: 0.), the transports came up to King's Bay, N. Y., and Aug. 22, all was cut off by Indian wars or diseases; the laborious people in general are Guinea negroes, who lie under particular restrictions from the attempts they have made to massacre the inhabitants for their liberty, which is ever desired by those (you find) who never knew the enjoyment of it. —N. Y. Policeman, Mem. Hist. N. Y., 314.

The following advertisements are published: "Lately come to this City from Philadelphia, John Elliott, who hangs House and Cabin Bells, in the nearest and most convenient Manner, as done at London, with Cranks and Wires, which are not liable to be put out of Order, as those do with Pulleys. He also gives ready Money for broken Lookout Glasses; and may be heard of at John Haydock's, in the Fly, opposite Bealeman's Slip."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 16, 1756.

25 May 1756. The Provincial council receives a letter from Mr. West, secretary of the treasury in England, regarding the quota of money granted by parliament (see June 24, New York’s share being transmitted with a letter from Messrs. Tomlinson and Haushoff. On Aug. 21, the provincial treasurer stated to the subject of this fund.—Cal. Coun. Min., 430. See also Aug. 15 to 18.

22 Mayor Holland makes a report concerning French neutrals sent back from Georgia.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng. 578. The provincial council gave orders accordingly on Aug. 24 for their distribution.—Cal. Coun. Min., 430. For their names and destination, see ibid., 427, 430, under dates of May 6 and Aug. 25. These evidently were Acadians, as appears by the record of April 30 (p. 4). They were under strict surveillance.—See ibid., 434 (July 11).

The First Stone of King’s College is laid, by Gov. Hardy. The news report of the event states that the Honourable James De Lancey, Esq.; our Lieutenant Governor, with the Governors of the College, and Mr. Cutting, the Tutor [vide infra], with the Students, met at Mr. Willett’s, and thence proceeded to the House of Mr. Van Derberg, at the Common, where his Excellency came in his Chariot, and proceeded with them about one o’clock to the College Ground, near the River on the north-west side of the City, where a Stone was prepared, with the usual Inscription; ... This was inaccurately quoted in the newspaper; it was printed as follows in Hist. of Columbia Univ., 21, from the original stone, which is still preserved by the university:...

The newspaper account gives the English translation thus: "This first Stone of this College, called King’s, established by Royal Charter, for the Honour of Almighty God, and the Advancement of the public Good, both in Church and State, was laid by his Excellency Sir Charles Hardy, Knight, the very Worthy Governor of this Province, August 23d, An. Dom. 1756." The account continues: "And after the Stone was laid, a Health was drank to his Majesty, and Success to his Arms, and to Sir Charles, and Prosperity to the College, and to the Advancement of true Religion, Loyalty, and Learning, under his Administration; Upon which the Reverend, Dr. Johnson, President of the College, made the following short congratulatory Speech in Latin. ..." The Latin address is printed in full and is quoted in the English translation, thus: "Gentlemen, the worthy Governors of this College, established by Royal Charter, ["Addressing the Governors of the College"] "I do most heartily Congratulate you on this happy Occasion of laying the first Stone of this Edifice; and that his Excellency Sir Charles Hardy, Knight, the very Worthy Governor of this Province, August 23d, An. Dom. 1756." The account continues: "And to the Governor] Most honoured Sir, I gladly take this Opportunity, in The provincial council receives intelligence that the east port of Oswego has been taken by the French, Lord Loudoun calling for assistance. The council needs more particular information from him. On Sept. 6, a repeated call for assistance came from Loudoun.—Cal. Coun. Min., 450.

The mayor informs the common council that Colonel Young (speaking for Colonel Stanwick) requests that the city furnish straw and wood to "his Majesty's forces to be Encamped on Nottin Island," during their stay there. The board agrees to advance, "on the Credit of the Government," a sum not exceeding £50.—M. G. C., VII 62–63. On Oct. 19 payment of £32 was made to Christopher Bancker for this object.—Ibid., VII 71. For further action, see Nov. 9.

The committee appointed by the common council "to dig Reeds, and an old Street Called Cortlandts Street in the west ward" reports the grade agreed upon.—M.G.C., VII 61. See other references to this street in Landmark Map Ref. Key, III 997.

Edward Willett, "at the Yorks Arms Tavern" (see City Tavern —Landmark Map Ref. Key, III 977), advertises that "Any Gentleman going to Boston in a Day or two, may have the Use of a Carrick and a Pair of Horses."—M. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 30, 1756.

One Stephen Callow advertises as an upholsterer and tentmaker at the "Crown and Custhin" (one of those symbolic signboards of the period, indicative of the tradesman's business), in Smith St. near Dusch & Church.

Another advertisement notes that "Water casks, from the Transports" are to be sold at auction "by the Bowling-Green, near the Fort."—M. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 30, 1756.

James Mackenzie, master of the ship "Fortress" (12 guns), petitions, in behalf of himself and a firm of London merchants (owners), for a "commission of marque," which, in case of his death, shall go to his first lieutenant, and, in case of the latter's death, to his second lieutenant.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 659. On this day, also, John Harker, Second Lieutenant, being for the first time in British service, was commissioned as "Squire" and "Pony" and the snow "Ciceror," petition for commissions for their commanders, with the same succession of command.

From this time on, throughout the war, such commissions were sought each month for commanders of privateers about to embark on their venturous projects. When the "commission of marque" and "letters of marque" are distinctly specified in the Calendar, these have been so noted in the Chronology, as a distinction is evidently intended to be made between such cases, having power and authority to make reprisals, and those cases of privateers whose commanders seek power merely to make seizures and annoy the commerce of the enemy. See Nov. 13, and April 28, 1757.

In this month, other commissions are petitioned for, for the commanders of the following privateers: the ships "Longville" and "Hercules," the schooner "Peggy," the brigantine "King George," Capt. Atkinson, and privateers "Dreadnought," and "Charming Sally."—Ibid., 659, 661.

The assembly orders that the treasurer of the colony, before Oct. 11, deliver to the house various accounts under oath, including "A reckoning of the payments of the L12,000 to the Hanse, towards fortifying the City of New-York, by Virtue of an Act, entitled, An Act, for raising a Supply of £45,000 . . ." (see Feb. 19, 1755).—Assemb. Jour., II: 5011 Cal. Laws N. Y., III: 1043. See also description of Fl. 360, c, 1760.

In October, a proclamation ordering the arrest and imprisonment of all subjects of the French King, wherever they may be found.—M. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 11, 1756.

In October, petitions are made, beginning on this day, for commissions for the commanders of the following privateers: the "Harlequin," the sloops "Squirrel" and "Weasel," the brigantine "Prince George," and the ship "Eagle of Halifax."—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 664.

James Parker protests against a provincial act prescribing a stamp duty on newspapers. He describes the hardships of operating a newspaper in New York. "The late Mr. Bradford printed a News-paper in this City about 20 years; he was a sober diligent man and in all that time had the same price, and the same salary from the paper, and, as is given now, and is intrinsically worth more than it is now; yet he could acquire but a bare livelihood, and died poor. Another News-paper [the Journal] was printed many years in this city by an ingenious man [Zenger] but under those disadvantages that Few ever thrive by, and the issue according. This weekly paper has been printed here now upwards of 14 years, and the proprietor thereof, amidst a constant series of diligence and sobriety, join'd to the strictest parsimony, was many years tempted to leave the place as unable to hold out. And even yet is far from catching the fore-horse by the mane . . ."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 4, 1756. The "Stamp Act" was passed Dec. 1, 1756 (p. c).

About this time, the first British packet-boats commenced running between Falmouth and New York. Edmund Atkin, superintendent of Indian affairs for the southern colonies, writing to the lords of trade from New York on Dec. 27, says: "By the Earl of Loudon I sent you Lords a packet from ye Custom-House, on the 6th Oct by the General Wall Packet being the first that sail'd from Falmouth after I received my Despatches . . ."—N. Y. Col. Desq., VIII 208.

The lords of trade, in a letter to Gov. Hardy, direct that an embargo be laid on vessels clearing with provisions, except to other British colonies.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 664.

A case of small-pox is reported in New Street; measures are taken by the provincial council to prevent the disease from spreading. A -loop from St. Croix is ordered into quarantine at Bedloe Island; it was discharged on the 19th.—Cal. Coun. Min., 431. For Dr. John Bard's report on quarantine inspection of this (the "Dolphin"), see the original MS. in the "Collection of autograph letters, etc., 1674 to 1782," in Columbia Univ. Library.

The common council appoints a committee "to confer and treat with the City Members of the General Assembly, for this Province, Concerning the Building of a Pest house [see Feb. 15], and of Erecting proper and Convenient Goals on Some Grounds to the Southward of Fresh Water."—M. G. C., VII 71. See Nov. 2.

The common council orders payment of £921552 to Peter Clopper for his advances "for Repairing the Meal and fly mark-er."—M. G. C., VII 70.

The common council orders payment of £23176 to Philip Livingston for his advances "for two Iron Backs for the ferry house and for Some &c: for the meal Market."—M. G. C., VI 71.

The form of a warrant for privateers, directed to Lewis Morris, commissary and judge of the court of admiralty, although undated, is entered of record after an item of this date.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 664.

Paul Richard, former mayor of New York, and representative in the present general assembly, dies. On Oct. 24, his body was interred in Trinity Church.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 25, 1756. He left a legagy of £400 to King's College, "now erecting in this City."—Ibid., Nov. 8, 1756. On Nov. 8, Oliver de Lancey was elected to his place as representative.—Ibid., Nov. 15, 1756.

Hardly informs the lords of trade that "Fort George has gone through great repairs and is now completed—Two side & three Bastions Command the Rivers leading to the City, and should properly have heavy Cannon mounted, for the defence of the Harbour; . . . in the spring other works are to be constructed in the east River for the defence of the Harbour, that will require twenty or twenty four, twenty four Pounds." He also advises that "some barracks in his District should be mounted in the Narrows, and upon Nottin Island."—N. Y. Col. Desq., VIII 164; Wilson, Mem. Hist. of N. Y., III 310.

The provincial council registers its objections to the following acts: An act for the salaries of the several officers of the government, an act for erecting and establishing a stock office of this province; and an act for laying an excise upon all tea of foreign growth within the province.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 665.
In November, petitions were made, beginning on this day, for commissions for the commanders of the following privates: the

A minute of council bearing this date answers the assembly regarding the application of the funds for the college to the building of the college, or possibly subsistence. (see Oct., 16), and the assembly's proposal to take half the funds, etc.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 665.

8 Oliver de Lancey is unanimously elected to represent the city and county of New York in the assembly in the place of Paul Richard, deceased (see Oct. 22).—N. Y. Hist., Nov. 15, 1766. He had been elected alderman of the Out Ward on Sept. 29, but now refused to be qualified.—M. C. C., VI, 66, 73-74. Henry Ryker succeeded him as alderman for one meeting only, and was in turn succeeded immediately by John Morin Scott.—Ibid., VI, 75, 76 (footnote).

The common council orders payment of £14 to Jacob Brevoingt for straw sent "to the Governors Island for the Royal Americans."—M. C. C., VII, 73.

It is also ordered that "the Kings Troops" which lately arrived from Albany, and the others that are daily expected, be furnished with wood and straw. The period not exceeding 30 days, to be paid for "out of the Monies belonging to this province, on account of the Excise now Remaining in the Hands of this Corporation."—M. C. C., VII, 74. This was in response to an order issued to the governor by Lord Loundoun (see Gov. Hardy's report, in Nov. 16, 1756). An assembly act for billeting soldiers was passed Dec. 1, 1756 (M. C. C., VII, 73). A bill is introduced in the assembly for raising £1,125 by a lottery, "towards erecting a new Goal, in the City of New-York, in Lieu of that which is now in the City-Hall."—Assemb. Jour., II: 513. For the formal bill of the act as enacted into law, see Dec. 11.

Mayor Edward Holland dies. The next day the governor appointed John Cruger, Jr., a merchant, to be mayor, water bailiff, clerk of the market, and justice of the peace.—M. C. C., VII, 74. Mayor Cruger was continued in office ten years.—Ibid., VII, 101.

Gov. Hardy receives an order of the king, dated June 30, for issuing letters of marque in the colonies, with forms of warrants and commissions, and instructions for privates.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 654.

A message from Gov. Hardy to the assembly states: "His Excellency the Earl of Loundoun, having demanded Quarters in this City for a Battalion of the Royal American Regiment; and his Lordship having informed me they were soon to embark from Albany, and Part of them are already arrived, and are now encamped, I have ordered the Barracks to be prepared, and the Block-Houses to be fitted up, for the Reception of as many Men as can be quartered therein; but as the whole Number cannot be thus disposed of, it is necessary that Provision be made for the Remainder. The Troops in the Barracks and Block-Houses, must be provided with Fire, Candle Light, and Bed: Articles of Ex pense included in that of Quar ters."—Assemb. Jour., II: 514. Regarding the action of the assembly on this message, see Nov. 26, 1756.

A list of privates belonging to New York is printed, of which 19 are on cruise, five in the harbour, one expected from London, and three in the stocks, "which when fitted out will make a Fleet of Twenty-Eight Sail from New-York."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 22, 1756. See also July 1.

The governor's council having requested a conference with the assembly on the bills for establishing a stamp office, and for laying an excise on tea of foreign growth, the assembly replies that as these are money bills they cannot consent to a conference.—Assemb. Jour., II: 518. See Dec. 1.

The council of the city of New York, in the city of New York, on Dec. 15 (p. v), with respect to "quarterming one Battalion of the Royal American Regiment, in the City of New York," agrees in the opinion that, notwithstanding the distressed State of his Majesty's Colony, by its being the principal Seat of the present War, it would be an advantage, if a sufficient number of Prisons it lies under, by keeping 800 Men in continual Pay, to be ready on all Emergencies, to support and assist his Majesty's regular Troops, by providing Pay for the Militia so frequently called out on Alarms, by providing for great Numbers of French Prisoners, and People called neutral French, brought into this Colony, by paying for Horses and Carriages, impressed and lost in his Majesty's Service, and Numbers of other Articles of the like Kind; yet as the Troops cannot be expected from the rigorous Season of the Year, and it be found necessary, the desire that his Excellency will be pleased to give Directions to the Commissaries of New-York, to furnish the Troops . . . with Beds . . ., Firewood and Candles, sufficient for them for the Time they are to continue in Winter Quarters; and to assure his Excellency that this House will provide for the Expense attending the same.—Assemb. Jour., II: 520.

An act is passed to repeal the fourteenth clause or section of each of the first four lottery acts, to raise £2,125, £1,800, £1,125, and £1,125, respectively, for King's College (see Dec. 6, 1748 Apr. 9, 1756, July 4, and Dec. 7, 1753). The clause referred to is that which required that a deduction of 15 per cent. "upon the whole Number of Fortunate Tickets" should be paid into the hands of the Trustees, to be by them "put out at Interest . . . until the Same shall be employed by some future Act for and towards founding a College . . . ;" and which provided for salaries and other expenses in conducting the lottery.—Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 104. The fifth lottery act, that of Dec. 7, 1754 (p. v), is omitted from this repealing act for reasons explained in the act of Aug. 14 (p. v). Final disposition of the moneys raised by the four college lotteries is provided for by the new act of Dec. 1 (p. v). Because "the Present Exigency of Affairs" requires the raising of large sums of money "to promote the services of the Colony, and as taxes upon "all Kinds of Luxury" are of "Publick Utility," the legislature passes an act "laying an Excise upon all Tea of foreign Growth retained within this Colony. Retailers of tea in quantities less than 120 pounds must be licensed, and pay sixpence for every pound retained.—Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 105. On Dec. 20, 1756, Abraham Lymens, collector of the excise for New York City, notified all retailers to apply to him for licenses.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 3, 1757. The act expired, Jan. 1, 1760.—Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 354.

It is conceived by the provincial legislature that revenue may also be raised "by a Stamp Duty without being over burdensome to the Inhabitants of this Colony." An act is therefore passed "for Erecting and Establishing a Stamp Office in this Colony for Stamp ing all Vellum Parchment and Paper. That is, a stamp of some kind or denominations, of five denominations to be affixed to every skin or piece of vellum or parchment, and every sheet or piece of paper, whether written or printed upon. The law presents a detailed schedule of the various legal documents and papers requiring the stamps of different denominations. (See Dec. 27.) Abraham Lott, Jr., and Isaac Low are appointed by the governor to be managers of the stamps for the province, and to keep an office in the city of New York. They shall provide the stamps after Jan. 1, 1757.—Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 110. The act expired Jan. 1, 1760.—Ibid., IV: 200.

The province does not possess enough barracks to quarter the forces raised or sent here by the king. An act of the general assembly is therefore passed "for Billeting and Quartering His Majesty's Forces within this Colony."—Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 113. It was continued by later acts until it expired Jan. 1, 1762.—Ibid., IV: 176.

The Earl of Loudon, after the loss of Oswego, sent a thousand of his troops to New York. The magistrates of the capital crowded the privates into the barracks, and left the officers (about 50) to find lodgings for themselves. When the earl came down in December, he sent for Mayor Cruger and insisted that the officers be expected from expense, saying that this was everywhere the custom; and that he had, in consideration of New York's efforts, put the army to inconvenience by so wide a dispersion, but that, if Cruger made difficulties, he would convene all his troops here and billet them himself.—Smith, Hist. of the Late Province of N. Y. (1856), II: 192.

An act is passed for raising, "by a Publick Lottery for this 1756 Colony," the sum of £1,125 "towards Erecting a New Goal in the Dec. City of New York." It is intended for "the Reception of such Prisoners of War as shall be brought in this Colony." Ebenezer Grant and Theodorus van Wyck are made managers of the lottery, the particular of which are described in the act.-Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 126-34. The advertisement of the lottery in the Post-Boy, Dec. 6, 1756, and Jan. 3, 1757 (p. 2), states, it is to raise money "towards building a commodious New-Goal ... in Lieu of that now in the City-Hall of the said City," for details of the building of the jail, see March 1, 1755. For the lottery drawings, see Act of Dec. 1 (infra), relating to the college lotteries, containing a provision for the benefit of the new jail.

"A legislative act for the payment of several provincial debts allows £515 "For Building a watch House Near the Beacon at Rockaway." and £304 for building one near "the Beacon at the Narrows on Staten Island."—Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 145.

By another act, Robert Charles, the agent of the province in Great Britain, is allowed £200 as a reward for his services from Sept. 1, 1755 to Sept. 1, 1756. Other provincial officials, including the governor, are allowed various salaries.—Ibid., IV: 171.

"An act is passed "for appropriating the Moneys Raised by diverse lotteries for Erecting or founding a College in this Colony," This provides that the sums of money raised by lotteries for this object, and "now vested in the Trustees" appointed by the act of Nov. 25, 1753 (p. 2), and which have been "put out at Interest from time to time and not Yet disposed of by any Act for that purpose Made," shall be thus disposed of: One "Moity" or half part, with interest, etc. is vested in the governors of King's College, "and may be disposed of by them in such manner as to them shall seem proper for the advancement of Learning in the said College." The receipt of the governors or their treasurer, gives to the treasurer of the province for this moiety, "shall be good and sufficient discharge to him for the same." The other "full and equal Moity," with interest, etc. or such part of it as shall be needed for the purpose, "shall be applied for and towards the Purchasing (if need be) a sufficient and suitable Quantity of Land in or Nigh the City of New York and for Building and Erecting there on a proper Pest House for the Reception of Such Persons as may be infected with any Contagious Distempers." All "the Residue of the said Money shall be employed in and for the Erecting a New Publick Goal in the City of New York in Lieu of that which is now in the City Hall." The treasurer of the province is required "to pay the same" to the mayor, etc., and the receipt of the mayor, etc., given to the provincial treasurer, for this moiety, shall be "sufficient discharge to him.

The act also provides that the annual sum of £500, directed to be paid to the treasurer of the province by the act of July 4, 1753 (p. 3), for seven years, beginning Jan. 1, 1754, shall yearly hereafter be paid by the treasurer of the province "to the said Governors of the College of the Province of New York in the City of New York, and all their successors," together with "all the Moneys received or that is become due for the Tuition of the Scholars in the seminary," as well as any part of the above-mentioned sum of £500 received by the treasurer of the province, and not expended by the trustees (with specified exception). The governors are made chargeable with all contracts entered into by the trustees with the "Chief Master" (Dr. Johnson) or any other masters, as provided in the act of July 4, 1753. The trustees are discharged from such contracts, and the receipt of the governors of the college or their treasurer shall be sufficient discharge to the treasurer of the college for the same.

The treasurer of the province is required to apply the sum of £500 ("part of the Said annual Sum now in his Hands or that Shall first come into his Hands in pursuance of the said Act") towards cancelling the bills of credit emitted on the credit of "the Duty of Excise on Strong Spirits" and "rataled in this Colony" (see July 4, 1753). The trustees of the college funds are discharged from any further trust powers and authorities given to them by either the act of Nov. 25, 1753 (p. 2), or that of July 4, 1753 (p. 2).—Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 160. For an explanation of this act, see Dec. 25, 1755. The common council took action on Jan. 25, 1757 (p. 3). The town council grants to the college by this act.

The governor's council directs that "Inoculation for small- pox may continue."—Col. Coun. Min., 431. See June 9, 1747.

This date is found on "AN EXACT DRAUGHT OF THE BATTERIES, and FORGE GEORGE IN THE CITY OF NEW YORK, FOR THE HONORABLE THOMAS POWELL, ESQ., LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR OF NEW JERSEY N.B: THE ABOVE IS LAID DOWN BY A SCALE OF 16 FATHOMS OR 96 FEET TO THE INCH BY JOHN DIES." This drawing, which is in ink, on paper measuring 14½ in. by 20½ in., belongs to a splendid collection of 88 manuscript maps, charts, surveys, plans, and views, delineating the many points of interest along the eastern seaboard of North America, from New England to Pennsylvania, the majority of which were made for the purposes of military operations during the Seven Years War, by William Alexander, William Bonein, Cadwallader Colden, Matthew Dixon, Richard Gridley, P. Mackellar, Lieut. Elias Meyer, Capt. James Gabriel Montresor, Capt. Bernard Ratzer, Charles Rivez, Capt. C. G. Wetterstrom, John Williams, and several other British engineers, officers of the 60th Royal American Regiment. They cover a period from 1714 to 1760. This very important collection was formed by an English collector, probably in the third quarter of the eighteenth century, and is contained in a large folio volume bound in morocco, and elaborately tooled. The collection is at the present time (Dec., 1819) in the possession of Mr. L. M. Thompson, of New York.

The following references on the above-mentioned plan give a clear idea of its character and importance:

"y" above Batteries mounts 92 Guns Flank included.

1. the Breadth of the Platforms

Of the above references, Nos. 16, 17, 18, 19, 24, and 25 are within Fort George itself. This is the earliest known plan of Fort George drawn in such detail. The same collection contains other important drawings of New York interest, as follows:

1.—"Plan, and Sections of Fort George. Built upon Hudson's River: A. D. 1757." By J. Montresor. Scale 50 ft. to an inch. This is drawn in ink, on paper 16½ in. by 11 in. There are five references—

A.—Barracks for 140 Men.
B.—Store-house, which will contain 2500 Flower-barrels
C.—Necessary-house
D.—Pladford [platform] for one Gun
E.—Gate of the Fort

2.—"Plan, Elevation, & Section of the Store-house built at Fort George, which contains 2500 Barrels of Flower." Scale 50 ft. to an inch. Drawn in ink, tinted, on paper 14½ in. by 4¾ in.

3.—"Plan, Elevation, & Section of the Barracks at Fort George which contains 140 Men." Scale 50 ft. to an inch. Drawn in ink, tinted, on paper 11½ in. by 6 in.

4.—"Plan of the Narrows. Shewing the several Batteries proposed to prevent ships coming up to New York." Signed by James Montresor, chart's master. Scale 1,000 ft. to an inch. Drawn in ink and water-colour, on paper 13½ in. by 10 in. A beautifully finished drawing, showing six batteries, three on Staten Island and three on Long Island.
In accordance with the provincial act of Dec. 1 (q.v.), laying a tax on paper, vellum, etc., and which is to go into effect Jan. 1, 1757, the governor issues a proclamation prescribing the design of the stamps to be used as follows: On each is to be engraved a "Crown, and under it so much of the Arms of the City of New-York, as appears within the Escutcheon; also the Words, New-York, in an Escroll under the Escutcheon; and in another Escroll, beneath the former, is engraved upon the Stamps respectively, the respective Sums to be paid for the Vellum, Parchment or Paper, stamped or marked therewith, as may be seen by their Impressions in the Margin." These respective sums are fourpence, three- pence, two-pence, and one-half penny. The half-penny impurt appeared on New-York newspaper in 1757.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 27, 1756.

"Robberies, which, till of late, was scarce heard of amongst us, is now become so common, that not a Night passes, but some or other of the Inhabitants of this City are either stopped in the Streets, by loose vagrant Fellows, or surprised by finding such in their Yards, Out-houses, &c. and notwithstanding some of them have lately been whipped by pilloring Clouths, &c. and others exulted on Carts, and carted round the Town, they continue to pillor as much as ever. It makes the inhabitants of this Place to be more vigilant than they heretofore have been, lest some of them by Experience may know what it is to shut the Stable Door, after the Steed is stolen."—N. Y. Merc. Dec. 31, 1756.

6. By order of the provincial council, an embargo is laid on pro- visions except to the British Colonies, by order from the lords of trade.—Col. Coun. Min., 431. See May 24.

In this year, William Smith (24), A. Ma., who, like his father, was later (see Nov. 4, 1767) a member of a provincial council, published in London a history of this province. It bears the title The History Of the Province Of New-York, from the First Discovery to the Year M.DCC.XXXII. To which is annexed, A Description of the Country, with a short Account of the Inhabitants, their Trade, Religious and Political State, and the Constitution of the Courts of Justice in that Colony. 10

By William Smith, A. M. London: Printed for Thomas Wilson, Bookeller at Vrgil's Head, opposite the New Church in the Strand. M. DCC. LXII.

It is dedicated (June 15, 1756) "To the Right Honourable George, Earl of Halifax, Viscount Sunbury, First Lord Commissioner of Trade and Plantations, &c. &c." under whose direction the affairs of the British colonies have been for several years. Although most of the facts presented by Smith have been covered by the Chronology, his estimate of the character and efficacy of the several governors, and his references to governmental establishments are worthy of special notice. His opinions in some important particulars were not shared by Lieut.-Gov. Cadwallader Colden, who expressed his views at length in a letter to him on July 5, 1759 (q.v.). For the author's reply to a critic, see July 7, 1759. See also Bibliography, Vol. V. For Smith's description of New York, contained in his History, see 1756. For his continuation of his history of the province from 1753 to 1762, see Hist. of the late Province of N. Y., from its Discover to the Appointment of Governor Colden in 1762 (pub. in 1821), Vol. II. For reproduction of the title-page of the original edition, and of a page of the manuscript of the Continuation, see Pl. 35, Vol. IV.

In January, petitions were made, on this day and on the 31st, for commissions for the commanders of the sloops "Harlequin" and "George," respectively.—Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 660.

The "Scheme of the New-York Lottery" is published (see Dec. 1, 1756), for raising the sum of £1,125 "towards building a commodious New-Goal in the City of New-York, in lieu of that now in the City-Hall."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 3, 1757. See further, March 1, 1757.

25 The common council appoints a committee "to meet with a Committee of the Governors of the Corporation, to make a Dividation of the Lottery Money Given them" by the act of Dec. 1, 1756 (g.v.).—M. C. C., VI: 80. On Feb. 11, an agreement was entered into between committees representing the college governors and the common council, respectively, whereby certain bonds and more than a million were sold to the state of this Corporation (representing, apparently, part of the investments made of lottery funds by the college trustees).—Ibid., VI: 92-95. On July 4, it was resolved that the treasurer or chamberlain of the city "Receive from Messrs. Grant and Theodoras Van Wyck Maganagers of the Late Lottery the monies Raised by the said Lottery," amounting to £1,000,000 86; and that the treasurer or chamberlain "Retain therout three Quarters of the Tenge in Receiving and paying out the Same."—Ibid., VI: 93-94. On July 22, it was necessary for the common council to empower John Morin Scott as attorney to sue certain ones of the "Obligers" on the bonds and mortgages.—Ibid., VI: 94-95. The next and last entry of record in the Minutes in this transaction was one of a year later, July 12, 1758, at which time the managers of the "Late Lottery" (see Aug. 14, 1757), exhibited their accounts "of the said Lottery" to the common council, showing that "There is due thereto" the sum of £960,105, and the common council ordered that they pay this balance to the city treasurer.—Ibid., VI: 159.

Payment is made for " sundry Necessaries " which have been provided for various persons "who were sent from this City to Mr. Kennedys Island [Bedloe's Island—see May 3, 1755] with the Small Fox."—M. C. C., VI: 80. Another payment was made on April 14 (g.v.). Kennedy sold the island to the city Feb. 18, 1758 (g.v.).

A petition of New York merchants, with 41 signatures, is addressed to Gov. Hardy, setting forth the need of a pilot for Hell Gate, and recommending Richard Lawrence for the place. The petition recites that "the Passage through Hell Gate is known to be exceeding Difficult and Dangerous and in which many Vessels have been lost, as well as of able Pilots."—Emmet Collection, item No. 10818, in N.Y. Pub. Library.

Three more of the transports (see Jan. 20) come into port and land troops.—Jour. Hugh Gaine, II: 4. (In a footnote Mr. Ford, the editor, gives a résumé of the various regiments that came to America prior to 1757, but is unable to identify the exact troops arriving in this convey.)

Two young men, aged 18 and 25, are hanged "at Fresh-Water" Feb. 7, 1757. For the erection of a gallows in this neighbourhood, see May 5, 1756.

In February, petitions are made, beginning on this day, for commissions for the commanders of the following privates: the surveyor "Bevenue" and "Vantile's, and Catharine," the dogger "Decoy" (Isaac Sears, commander), and the ship "King of Prussia."—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 670.

A contribution to the Post-Boy proposes a plan for "erecting and maintaining of a Light-House on Sandy-Hook, and a Residence for the Pilots at that Station," and to "pay a due proportion of a Battery. He states that such a proposal has been "hitherto omitted" among the various schemes advanced "to cultivate the Trade and Commerce of this Colony; and for the Safety of our Navigation."—N.Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 7, 1757. The light house was first petitioned for on March 15, 1764 (g.v.).

The common council orders payment made of £579,111 to William Coventry "for Several Coalds of fire wood sent to the Camp for the Soldiers there."—M. C. C., VI: 81. The location of the camp was not mentioned, but was probably Nutter (Governor's) Island, now Roosevelt Island, and not St. Augustine or any other post. Again, on March 14, payment of 31s. was made for straw "for the use of the Kings Tropu."

Ibid., VI: 82.

DOMINIONS IN NORTH AMERICA, 1755. SEE P. 664.
The jail was already in full operation on the last named date, for this payment was "for Victualling Sundry Criminals and for Sweeping 26 Chimneys and Emptying 213 Tubs in the New Goal from the 18th Feby 1765, To the 28th of October fo'l inclusive," etc. (ibid., VI: 356).

In 1770, the jail yard was paved (ibid., VIII: 228); and in 1772 a new cistern of stone (VII: 361, 376); and a stone stoup in front of the building (VII: 373, 393) were built.

On Oct. 14, 1767 (p.v.), it was ordered by the common council that two rooms "in the New Goal House" be fitted up for a "Bridewell" (ibid., VII: 87); and from that time the building served the double purpose until the construction of a separate house for a bridewell, the plans for which were adopted in 1775 (p.v.) (ibid., VIII: 82), but were not fully executed when the British forces occupied the city in 1776 (ibid., VIII: 174). For an account of the building of the bridewell, and of the purpose for which it was established, see Nov. 21, 1765.

For the later history of the "New Goal," known after the Revolution as the "Provoast Jail," see Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 972; where references to views in this work are given; also Chronology, 1869; Man. Com. Corp. (1853) 475; ibid. (1866), 670-71, 693-94; III, Mem. Hist. 1824, 167.

The embargo (see May 24, 1765) was extended to apply to all vessels at the request of Lord Loudoun—Cal. Com. Min., 432; Jour. of Hugh Gaine, II: 5 (where March 3 is given as the date). The embargo was partially lifted on June 25—N. T. Merc., June 27, 1757. An act of parliament was reported on July 9 (p.v.) for building exportation vessels for the colonies, except to England and Ireland.—Cal. Com. Min., 434.

Gov. Hardy issues an order to three master shipbuilders (Joseph Totten, Stephen Crossfield, and Thomas Cheeseman) and four mariners (John Griffith, Richard Jeffery, John Long, and Thomas Browne) to survey the transports.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 678. Five of these made report on March 21 (p.v.).

Lord Loudoun, writing from New York, informs Pitt that "This Port, has already produced, above the half of the Ships wanted [for transports]; but our Distress lies, in providing Sailors and Water Casks; but I hope we shall get the best of those difficulties.—This has obliged me, to apply to Captain Falkingham of the Sutherland, to remain here, in order to assist, both in fitting the Transports, and securing the hands, which he has agreed to do."—Correspondence of Wm. Pitt with Colonial Governors, I: 19.

Gov. Hardy issues a warrant to John Roberts, sheriff of New York, to impress water casks, and also materials and workmen for making what may be deficient.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 679. He issued a warrant on March 14 to Nicholas Gouverneur and Leonard Lippencott to appraise the casks impressed.—Ibid.

The meeting of the common council is held at "the Work House," apparently finding a need of more space, to form a committee "for Repairing the work House, House of Correction and alms House in such Manner as they shall Judge Necessary and Convenient," and to "Cause a small piece of Ground to the Eastward of and adjoining to the fence of the said Work House, of the Length of two Boards, to be inclosed and fenced in, for a Buriall place for the poor belonging to the said work House."—M. C., C., VIII.

The shipbuilders and mariners appointed on March 8 (p.v.) to survey the transports make their report. A list of the vessels appointed as transports bears this date.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 678, 679. On March 22, a warrant was issued to the same inspectors to appraise all vessels chartered for the public service.—Ibid., 671.

"About the beginning of this" month, Benjamin Franklin came to New York, expecting to sail immediately for Europe, but was detained until near the end of June by Lord Loudoun's indifferency and inefficiency.—Works of Benj. Franklin (ed. by Bigelow), I: 287. The packet on which Franklin sailed accompanied the fleet on its expedition to Louisbourg (see June 20) for five days and then proceeded to England.—Ibid., I: 287. See May 25; June 3 and 26.

The object of Franklin's visit to England is stated thus in his autobiography: The Assembly [of Penn.] finally finding the proprietary owners of that province obstinately persisted in manning their deputies with instructions inconsistent not only with the privileges of the people but with the service the said...
In April, petitions were made, beginning on this day, for commissions for the commanders of the following privateers: the ships "Richard and Ann" and "Essex," and the brigantine "Achilles."—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 671. See May 16.

A list of vessels already commissioned to act as privateers, with the names of their owners and the dates of their warrants, is recorded under date of April, 1757.—Ibid.

The sloop-of-war "Ferris" having brought over a commission May appointing Gov. Hardy rear admiral of the Blue Squadron, his 5 Bag is housed to the man-of-war "Nightingale," lying in the North River, and salutes are fired by the other man-of-war "and by near 100 sail of vessels at anchor in the harbour."—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 9, 1757. The Mercury of May 9 recorded the event as happening on May 4, and the Jour. of Hugh Gaine as on the 6th. See also "The Chronological Diary," p. 19, in New Am. Mag. (Woodbridge, N. J., Jan., 1758).

Gov. Hardy writes to Pitt: "I am now preparing to leave this Province, and expect by the Packet to receive his Majesty's Permission to resign this Government."—Corresp. of Wm. Pitt with Colonial Governors, I: 59.

The provincial council receives a letter from Secretary William Pitt regarding the operations of the campaign. The militia are under standing orders to march when occasion requires.—Cal. Coun. Min., 433.

Robert Charles, agent of the province of New York in London, writes to Davis, the speaker of the New York assembly, that there is a report in London "that Lord Louden is gone from New York for Halifax with 500 Regulars & Irregulars, with a View it is thought of Meeting the Armament with Adm'l Holbourn's Squadron. In that Case it is hoped your Province is left in full Security from any hostile Attempt."—From a copy of the letter among the original Smith Papers (MSS.) in N. Y. Pub. Libr. Louden did not actually sail until June 20 (q.v.).

"The Public is desired to take Notice, That, this Day, the Printing-Office formerly kept in Queen Street [see Oct. 6, 1755] will be removed to the House next Door to Doctor William Brown john's in Hanover Square, near the Meat-Market."—N. Y. Merc., May 12, 1757; Jour. of Hugh Gaine, 1: 8 (editorial note). Gaine had an advertisement in the Post-Boy, Nov. 17, 1756, showing that his printing-office (the "Bible and Crown") was "but two Doors from the Meat-Market." On April 30, 1759, Gaine bought this property. For deed of purchase, see Later Deeds, XLIV: 293 (register's office). For Gaine's removal from this place, see April 18, 1756.

The owners of the ship "Scott" petition for a commission for her commander.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 672.

Gov. Hardy one of the officers of the Trinity Church, on whom Murray St. was named, leaves, by his will of this date, to the governors of King's College, "by whatever name they are called," the residue of his estate (after making various bequests), to be applied in building and promoting the interests of the college. XX: 133, pub. in Abstracts of Wills, V: 165. Murray died the same month.—N. Y. Merc., May 2, 1757. The Hist. of Columbia Univ. (1904), 48, must therefore be in error in stating that the earliest list of benefactors of King's College, "prepared in 1756," shows the Murray bequest.

The information is also conveyed that he bequeathed his estate and library, about £6000; that "The Rev. Dr. Bristow, of London, bequeathed his library, about 1500 volumes; that "Mr. Noel, book-seller, gave Roman's Ed. of M. Calajo's Hebr. concordance, 4 vols. fol.;" and that "Sundry gentlemen at Oxford gave books, whose names are in them." Correctly speaking, this authori- ty is that first with an Officer to Court Lord, out of his Majesty's Ship Sutherland, she being very foul and but a dull Sailor. The Sloop is now at Sea, and I hope it will not Protect the Trade bound here, but be able to get hold of the Privateer . . . —Corresp. of Wm. Pitt with Colonial Governors, I: 31-32.

Philip M. S. "Vulture" arrives in seven days from Halifax, on secret business. It is supposed that the captain "brought account" of the arrival of a large fleet from England.—Jour. of Hugh Gaine, II: 7.

Out of all the money received by the city treasurer, to be paid out "for Building a publick Goal and pest House" (see Dec. 1, 1756; April 9, 1757), he shall retain in his hands three-quarters of one percent.—M. C. C., VI: 87.

The common counsel pays John Brown "for the use of Mr. Kennedys [Bleddow's] Island for sundry persons who were sent there (see Jan. 25) with the small pox by order of this Board."—M. C. C., VI: 87. For purchase of the island, see Feb. 18, 1758.

Transports from Boston, under convoy, arrive at Sandy Hook.—Jour. of Hugh Gaine, III: 7. On the following day, they came up the harbour.—Ibid., III: 7.

Joseph Murray, the New York lawyer, a member of the provincial council, died May 7, 1757, the judge of the admiralty court, to issue letters of marque to the commanders of the ships "Grand Duke" (see March 26), "Richard and Ann," and "Essex" (see April 28).—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 672.

Several merchants of New York meet to debate the subject of the importance of trade with Great Britain. They agree to wait a few weeks longer in hopes of hearing that the duty on tea (see Dec. 1, 1756) has been repealed. In the meanwhile, no orders for goods are to be sent over until further information arrives.—Upcott Coll., I: 289, in N. Y. Hist. Soc.

The Earl of Loudoun reviews the Highland Regiment, together with Abercrombie's and Webb's.—Jour. of Hugh Gaine, II: 8.

"At two o'clock this morning, about 3,000 soldiers were passed round this City, whilst many different parties patrolled the Streets, searched the Taverns, and other houses, where sailors usually resorted and impressed about 400, taking all kinds of Tradesmen and Negroes, near 300 were impressed on the whole, but not above 400 retained in the Service. This Night or the next Day about twenty soldiers, a Sergeant and a Subaltern, were sent on board every Transport in order to keep the men from getting on shore, and to prevent all kinds of Disturbance. The whole Number of Forces were sent out in a few days after [see May 25], and sailed for the Hook, with as much speed as the Nature of the Case re- quired, and without running foul of each other on their way down."—Jour. of Hugh Gaine, II: 8-9. See May 25 and June 20.

Gov. Hardy orders "that no Boatman or Marketman, coming 25 to or going from this City, or bringing Provisions or other necessaries to the King's Ships; or any of the Transports in His Majesty's Service, shall be impressed or detained on any account whatsoever."—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 30, 1757.

The fleet, bound for Louisbourg, drops down to Sandy Hook.—May 26, 27

Five French prizes are brought into port by three privateers, being taken out of a fleet bound from Cape Francoys to Bordeaux. “The Ships are 14 Carrage Guns each, are Letters of Marque, stop’d & armed with the engagement of some Hours, and our Vessels were obliged to board them before they struck.” They are “deep loaded with Sugar, Coffee, Cotton, &c. And, we hear, one of the Ships has between 80 and 100,000 rt. of Indigo on board. The Whole, at the lowest Computation, is valued at about 70 Thousand Pounds Currency.”—Y. Post-Boy, May 30, 1757. See description of Pl. 33, II: 276.

June
Lord Loudoun writes from New York to Pitt concerning the preparations made for the expedition against the French. He says: “Sir Charles Hardy, to whom ... I had, on his offering to take the trouble, given the entire management of the Transports, having Complained that Sailors, both from the Men of War, and Transports, had deserted, in order to get on board the Privateers, from the great profit they make there ... and that those Sailors were harbour’d in Town, and that he could not retake them, without my Authority. I immediately ordered three with Battalions, to prevent their making their Escape, whilst he Employed the Sailors in taking up the Deserters, who finding themselves overpower’d, made no resistance, and the whole was finished by six in the morning, without any disturbance.”

“Our Situation here, is, the Troops are all Embarked; and the last of the Ships, will probably get to the Hook, tomorrow or next day; for Convoy, we have one 50. Gun Ship, the Sutherland; We have two of 20. Guns, the Nightengale and Kennington; two Sloops, the Ferret and Vulture ...”—Corresp. of Wm. Pitt with Colonial Governors, I: 69-71.

Gov. Hardy, having been made rear-admiral by the king (see May 5, and Assemble, Jour., II: 538), receives orders from England to join the fleet of Rear Admiral Hollbourne at Halifax.—Cal. Coun. Min., IV: 433. See also Man. Com. Coun. (1864), 583.

In the eve of his departure, the council offers a complimentary address to Sir Charles Hardy on his promotion in the navy, to which he replies appropriately.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 673.

The oaths are administered to Lieut.-Gov. De Lancy, after the reading of his commission, and he presides at the council meeting.—Cal. Coun. Min., IV: 433; Jour. Leg. Coun., II: 1701.

Isaac Sears, commander of the slop-of-war “Catharine,” is ordered by the provincial council to cruise off Block Island and the east end of Long Island, to intercept illegal traders between Rhode Island and Hispaniola.—Cal. Coun. Min., IV: 434.

The council issues another warrant to the commissioners of fortifications to order the purchase and disassembling of ships (see Feb. 19, 1756) for expenses.—Cal. Coun. Min., IV: 434. Another was issued Oct. 22.—Ibid., 436.

See, further, Sept. 27, 1758.

The council orders that the fortifications be completed.—Cal. Coun. Min., IV: 435.

The provincial council orders the issuing of a proclamation for a day of fasting.—Cal. Coun. Min., IV: 434.

Lord Loudoun sails with the fleet from Sandy Hook for Halifax.—Jour. of Hugh Gaine, II: 10. In the fall of 1756, Loudoun had proposed to the English ministry the reduction of Cape Breton Island as an important step in the contemplated campaign for the ensuing year. Upon receipt of their sanction and promise of cooperation in actions Alderman.—See April 21 and 27, 1757. By May 5, this was accomplished, and Rear-Admiral Hardy took command the following day (see May 5). As no news was received of the whereabouts of the English fleet which was to assist them, sailing was delayed until June 20, when they were ordered to proceed to Juno. On June 26 the English fleet came in detached groups, and it was not until July 9 that all the forces were assembled.—Am. Mag. (Phil., 1758), June 90-91. See Aug. 30 for result of the expedition.

A proclamation is issued appointing July 13 as a day of fasting, etc., on account of the war.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 675.

After eleven weeks’ duty without a ministry, George II is forced to accept the one formed by the union of the Pitt and Newcastle parties. The new ministers “kissed hands” on June 25. As “Secretary of State for the Southern Department,” Pitt had practically complete control of the administration. His great power and important work properly dates from this period.—Williams, Life of Wm. Pitt, II: 377-76; Thackeray, Hist. of Wm. Pitt, I: 258-94.

The privateers and merchant vessels in New York harbour number 172.—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 27, 1757.

The ship “King William the Third,” built by the Messrs. Cornwalls as a privateer, is launched. She is “esteemed by the most Judicious, as fine a Ship for the Purpose as has been built in America for a long Time. She is to carry 20 Nine Pounders, and 18 Men.”—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 4, 1757.

July
On this day, beginning on this day, are made for July commissions for commanders of the doggers “Devy,” the sloops “Charming Polly,” “Squirrel,” and “Wheel of Fortune,” the ships “Neptune,” “Revenge,” and the ship “Sturdy Beggars.”—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 675.

The ship “Sturdy Beggars” comes into the harbour from East Jersey where she was building, the keel having been laid the preceding summer.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 30, 1756. The vessel is a double-decker, designed for a privateer, and mounts 26 guns. She is “esteemed the best Ship of War belonging to the Port, and is to be commanded by the experienced Robert Troup, who particularly signalized himself the last War in the Command of the Hester Privater Brig.”—Ibid., July 11, 1757.

The provincial council receives an order from the Earl of Holderness to remove the embargo on vessels bound to England or Ireland with provisions. They receive from Secretary John Pownall an act of parliament forbidding exportation of provisions from the colonies except to England and Ireland. The council orders that the act be published in the New York Gazette.—Cal. Coun. Min., IV: 434. See March 2.

Gov. Hardy, on his departure from New York, advises the lords of trade of certain evasions of the navigation laws, whereby importation of dutiable goods from England is discouraged, and royal revenues consequently diminished. Vessels bring tea, canvas, arms, etc. from Holland, stop at Sandy Hook, smuggle in cargo, and go up to New York empty; others load at Holland and stop at some “out post in Britain,” where they report and pay duty on only their cargo.—N. Y. Gazette, Oct., VII: 371-72.

The council, having received royal orders with instructions for commanders of privateers, conveys them to the commanders and the admiralty judge. On July 16, the council ordered the publication of these orders by proclamation.—Cal. Coun. Min., IV: 434.

This day is proclaimed one of prayer, fasting, and humiliation throughout the province.—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 11, 1757.

The provincial council orders the arrest and trial of Richard Hadden, commander of the privateer “Peggy,” of New York, on charges of piratical behaviour made by Vice Admiral Townsend, just received by the council in a letter from the Earl of Holderness.—Cal. Coun. Min., IV: 434.

The proclamation is issued (see July 11), publishing the royal instructions to privateers relating to Spanish vessels, dated Oct. 5, 1756.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 675.

The common council orders that the mayor issue his warrant to the treasurer to pay Israel Dusseyway £50 for making “an addition to the ferry Bridge on Long Island,” 20 feet farther into the river, and “at the End of that a Dock or pier,” 21 feet broad extending to feet into the river; also 4 ft. for additional work on this pier.—M.C. VI: 96. Cf. Bakewell View, Pl. 33, Vol. I.

The common council of New York votes £5631.11. for sums expended on the “Guard Room.”—M.C. VI, VII: 97.

News is published in New York of the loss, on July 21, of 280 Aug. men of the New York and New Jersey regiments, who were ambushed by the enemy near Ticonderoga. Col. John Parker and Capt. Jonathan Ogden, of the New York regiment, are the only officers who escaped.—Supp. to the N. Y. Merc., Aug. 1, 1757.
1757. "Petitions were entered in this month, beginning on this day, for commissions for the commanders of the ships "Grace," and "Defiance," and the Schooner "Hardy." —Cal. Hist. MSS, Eng., 677.

3 Letters are sent from Fort Edward and Albany to Lieut.-Gov. De Lancey that Fort William Henry is invested by 11,000 French. —Cal. Hist. MSS, Eng., 676. These were in the hands of the provincial council at New York on Aug. 6.—Cal. Colon. Min., 435.

4 The provincial council takes official cognizance of the defeat of Col. Paoli and 500 men by the French (see Aug. 1); and of the announcement that Gen. Webb will march to Fort William Henry. The news is sent to Gov. Belcher.—Cal. Colon. Min., 435.

5 On being informed that a large French fleet and a garrison of 6,000 men awaits him at Louisbourg, Gen. Loudon abandons the expedition against it.—Parkman, Montcalm and Wolfe, I: 480-71.

7 Gov. De Lancey embarks for Albany to aid in the defence of Fort William Henry, which was attacked on the 3d by the French and Indians. He arrived in Albany on Aug. 8, and on the 10th received word of the surrender of Fort William Henry on the preceding day. Fearing that the enemy would penetrate farther into the country, De Lancey ordered a detachment of 500 men from New York, 600 from Queen's County, and the entire militia of Westchester to march at once to Albany; —Jour. Leg. Coun., II: 474-75; Cal. Hist. MSS, Eng., Aug. 8, and Aug. 22, 1757.

8 The provincial council (Archibald Kennedy presiding) receives word from Capt. Christie and others that Fort William Henry is invested by 11,000 French, and orders the militia of Queens and Westchester Counties to go to Albany. The news is sent to New Jersey and Pennsylvania. Orders are issued for impressing provisions, and an embargo is laid on all vessels.—Cal. Colon. Min., 435.

9 A warrant is issued to Mayor Cruger, and to William Coventry, Henry Cuyler, Jr., and Anthony Ten Eyck, merchants, to impress horses, men, sloops, pilots, provisions, etc., for the use of the troops.—Cal. Hist. MSS, Eng., 676.

12 Lieut.-Gov. De Lancey writes again from Albany to the council at New York, reporting the terms of surrender of Fort William Henry, and a report of the number of French Indians in the garrison, and urging that assistance be sent to Gen. Webb.—Cal. Hist. MSS, Eng., 676.

13 The provincial council in New York writes to Lord Loudoun, at Halifax, enclosing copies of De Lancey's letters of Aug. 10 and 11 (p. 6), and asking for reinforcements.

14 A warrant is issued to impress sloops and boats to carry reinforcements to Albany.

15 The council also writes to De Lancey regarding letters sent to Governor Belcher, Denny, Floyd, and Fitch.—Cal. Hist. MSS, Eng., 676.

16 The council writes to Col. Wm. Willet, of Westchester Co., to detach 600 men and send them to Albany. Letters are sent to the colonels commanding the militia of Queens Co. and Suffolk Co. asking that one-half of the militia ordered to Albany be posted in towns near New York. Colonel Hicks, Stillwell, Dougan, and Willet are to have their regiments in readiness to march to Albany; and are to observe orders with regard to beacons. Capt. William Collins, of the privy-tents "Wheel of Fortune," is ordered to proceed with troops to Albany. The council writes to De Lancey that Col. Paoli has ordered back to New York to command the French forces; and writes to the sheriffs of the several counties to secure the French prisoners and neutrals in their local jails.—Cal. Hist. MSS, Eng., 677. For the reply, on Aug. 16, of the sheriff of Richmond Co., see ibid., 678.

17 The council issues an order on the military store-keeper, Francis Aug. Stevens, for powder and ordinance to detachments going to Albany (see Aug. 6)—Cal. Colon. Min., 435.

18 The provincial council is cognizant of the report that Fort William Henry has surrendered to the French, and that the capitulation has been broken by them (see Aug. 5). Gen. Daniel Webb needs reinforcements.—Cal. Colon. Min., 435.

19 The council writes to De Lancey that 600 men under Maj. Courtright have been sent to Albany and that troops are to be sent from Queens and New Jersey, 500 men having already gone from New Jersey. Gov. Belcher has written to De Lancey from Elizabethtown that 1,000 troops have been ordered for Albany, and 5,000 more are to be raised.—Cal. Hist. MSS, Eng., 677.

20 A court-martial is held at New York to determine why certain troopers have not accompanied the troops to Albany.

21 David Jones writes from Fort Neck, L. I., to Archibald Kennedy, the presiding councillor, of the great intimacy between negro slaves and the neutral French.

22 Richard Floyd writes from Brookhaven to the council, advising them of the sailing of one-half the militia of Suffolk Co.

23 A signed opinion of several masters of vessels presents what they believe is the best mode of fortifying the city.—Cal. Hist. MSS, Eng., 675.

24 French prisoners are transferred from the New York jail to the care of Col. Richard Stillwell and Sheriff Maurice Lott of Kings County, who were called before the council the day before.—Cal. Colon. Min., 435. This is in accordance with a decision of the council on July 22.—Ibid., 435. On Aug. 18, such prisoners were ordered sent to Suffolk County by water.—Ibid., 435.

25 The council orders Francis Stevens, the king's store-keeper, and Christopher Blundell, store-keeper at Fort George, to deliver to John Brant, a pilot, material for the Neversink beacon fortifications.—Cal. Colon. Min., 435.

26 Jacob Goelet, reporting on the proper places to mount cannon for the defence of New York City, recommends Dominie's Hook on the North River, Des Brosses battery, and Albany pier on the East River, and it is so ordered.—Cal. Colon. Min., 435.

27 The embargo against the exportation of provisions is removed.—Ibid., 435.

28 The council hears from Lieut.-Gov. De Lancey (who is at Albany) that troops from Fort William Henry were returning in distressing condition; the militia of Suffolk and Queens Counties are to return home.—Ibid., 436.

29 The provincial council orders Christopher Blundell, store-keeper at Fort George, to deliver the key of the magazine under the north-west bastion of Fort George to Francis Stevens, king's store-keeper.

30 The council advises the lieutenant-governor to call the assembly to meet either on Long Island or in Westchester County (see Aug. 22)—Cal. Colon. Min., 435, and report of the number of cannon and the amount of stores wanted for the battery and fort at New York nears this date; also a list of vessels, giving their names and the names of their captains, appointed for transport service, with appraisements.—Cal. Hist. MSS, Eng., 678.

31 Lieut.-Gov. De Lancey returns from Albany. The assembly is directed to meet at Harlen (see Aug. 31) —Cal. Colon. Min., 436.

32 The common council reimburses Mayor Cruger for advances, amounting to $264,280, paid by him "for officers Billots the last winter." —M. C. C., VI: 98. For later officers' billots, see July 15, 1757, May 24, 1759.

33 On account of James Brewerton for provisions and houses for French neutrals, numbering 78 persons, at the Brooklyn ferry, bears this date.—Cal. Hist. MSS, Eng., 678.

34 A warrant is issued to impress sloops, boats, and other vessels of small draft, for want of labour.—Ibid.

35 The provincial council issues a warrant to Lieut. Duncan to impress vessels for transporting the Earl of Loudoun and his troops from Halifax to New York.—Cal. Colon. Min., 436.

36 Christopher Kibby, one of the contractors for victualing the forces, presents a memorial seeking a warrant to impress provisions for 8,000 men to be sent to Albany.—Cal. Hist. MSS, Eng., 678.

37 The council orders pilots to look out at Sandy Hook for Lord Loudoun's transports.—Cal. Colon. Min., 436.

38 The return of Lord Loudoun with his fleet from Halifax marks

Since the beginning of the war, 39 privates have been fitted out at New York. For an enumeration of them, showing number of guns and men, see Man. Com. Coun., (1787), 872.

During September, petitions are made, beginning on this day, for commissions for the commanders of the following privates: the sloops "St. George," "Little David," and "Harlequin;" and the ship "Hunter."---Col. Hist. MSS., Eng, 679.

The following advertisement shows the operation of the early post-office: "A Letter is now at the New-Printing-Office in Beaver-street, belonging to Mr. Henry Ketley, Agent for New-England, or Long-Island, with the greatest Dispatch: And as it is thought to be of great consequence, this Method is taken to inform him of it."---N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 5, 1757.

The privater "Harlequin" enters port and her captain reports that with the aid of a Rhode Island privater he captured three French vessels bound from the West Indies to Bordeaux with cargoes of sugar, coffee, and cotton. One prize he brought into harbour with him; the other two were taken into a Rhode Island port.---N. Y. Merc., Sept. 12, 1757.

The council receives a request from the lords of trade for an account of iron made in the colonies.---Col. Coun. Min., 476.

Samuel Holland draws a plan of that portion of the city which extends about two miles north from the present Chambers Street, from river to river. It is entitled "A Plan of the North East Environs, of the City of New-York, Performed by Order of his Excellency the Earl of Loudoun &c.*---Ibid., is evidently intended to show the front of New York, July 6, 1754. This principal object is to enable various parts of this region. One of these localities is "Bayards Hill commanding over all the high Grounds." Another, just north of the Hendrick Rutgers estate at Corlear's Hook, is described as "High Ground commanding all the Hills except Bayards." The plan shows, very clearly outlined, the Nicholas Bayard estate, with an avenue of trees leading to it from the "High Road" (Bowery Road); also the estate of Lieut-Gov. "Somedricks," to the north of Bayard's, but on the opposite (east) side of the High Road. It also shows the Willow Rutgers estate, west of the Fresh Water Pond; the slaughter-house, powder magazine, pot baker's, rope walk (extending in a northeasterly direction from the present Chatham Square), and the Jews burying-ground. The plan is reproduced and described in Vol. I, Pt. 36-b (from the original in the state library); see also Man. Com. Coun., (1783), opp. pg. 208. Writing in 1775, William Smith said that the palisade had "block-houses at small distances;" also "The greater part of them still stand as a monument of our folly, which cost the province about $5,000."---Smith, Hist. of the Prov. of N. Y., (1757), 158. See also April, 1754, and May 8, 1764; and Palisades of 1746, in Landmark Map Ref. Key, III. 945.

26 Another advertisement in the newspapers, "Immaculate Concepcion and St. Ignatio de Loiola," sailing under a pass from the Pope, having been taken by two privaters, and set free, petitions that his agents, Lewis Morris, Jr., and Robt. I. Livingston, may land (presumably at New York) and sell articles of his to pay for refitting. Many of the articles, as fish, butter, and flour, are attached to a libel of the commanders of the privaters "Revenge" and "Hornet."---Col. Hist. MSS., Eng, 679. Four certificates as to the repairs and stores needed bear date of Oct. 19. One of these asserts that a new suit of sails will cost $454.---Ibid., 680.

"His Excellency Earl Loudoun, has removed his Dwelling from Whitehall to Fort-George, in this City."---N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 26, 1757.

The privater "Royal Hester" arrives with two prizes, esteemed the richest brought into America during this war, "being valued at upwards of $30,000."---N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 3, 1757.

During October, petitions are made, beginning on this day, for commissions for the commanders of the following privaters: the ships "Lovely Martha," the ships "Spaldy;" and "Duke of Cumberland," and the brigantines "Earl of Loudoun," "Johnson," and "Betsey."---Col. Hist. MSS., Eng, 679-80.

William Walton marries Miss Polly de Lancey, daughter of Gov. De Lancey, "at his Honour's House in the Bowery."---N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 10, 1757. The alliance of these two families bad more than passing interest in the history of the city. Both names figured prominently for many years in the official, commercial, and land-title, records of early New York.

A List of Privates fitted and fitted out of New York, since the commencement of the present War, to the 18th of October, 1757," was printed in The American Country Almanack for the Year of Christian Accounts, 1758 (pub. by Parker & Weyman). This was reprinted in the Hist. Mag, 2nd ser., VI. 230.

In an advertisement of this date, mention is made of Benjamin Penn's "Corset House," entitled the Gold Shop Market, where he sells "Rum, Wine, Arrack, Sugar, and Molasses, Wholesale and Retail; Also sundry shop Goods; Beef and Pork by the Barrel; And, Indian Corn."---N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 17. The general store of this kind is frequently mentioned in advertisements of the colonial period.

Ebenzer Grant, in Hanover Square, sells at wholesale or retail "Best Madeira, and other Wines, old Jamaica Rum and Brandy by the Five Gallons, or less Quantity; best Florence Oil by the Bette, Spices of all Sorts; Black Pepper, pounded Rhubarb; best Derham Mustard by the Barrel, Muscovado and loaf Sugar, Coffee, Tea, and Chocolate. Currents, and Raisins; best French Indigo; and Scotch Snuff in Bladders."---N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 17, 1757.

As appears from an advertisement of this date, Gaine's printing-office in Queen Street is now the house of Garden Proctor, a watchmaker, where William Proctor tells Peruvian Cortex (Jesuits Bark).---N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 17, 1757.

There are advertised for sale "The two corner houses and ground, belonging to the estate of the late Cornelius Depeyster, deceased, near the New-Exchange; the one fronting the Great-Doek, now in the tenure of Mr. Peter Godet; the other fronting the street wherein they now live; both pleasantly situated, and convenient for a merchant or a shopkeeper."---N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 17, 1757.

"Lawrence Kilbrunn[,] Limner, from London, Continues as usual, to draw to the Life. Ladies and Gentlemen that have not as yet seen many of his Performances may now have an Opportunity of viewing sundry Pieces together, which he hath drawn to the entire Satisfaction of the Persons for whom they were designed. He may be applied to at his Lodgings, at the House of Mr. Peter Roosevelt, in Bayard's Street."---N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 17, 1757.

Proceedings are commenced to build barracks on the Commons. These are for the use of the king's troops.---Assemb. Jour., II. 519.

The common council appoints a committee to consult with the principal carpenters of the city to determine what material can be taken for immediately providing materials for "the Staying and Completing Barracks" to contain 800 men, and whether a sufficient number of carpenters can be had to complete the barracks in a fortnight.---M. C. C., VI. 108. The committee reported on Oct. 21 that it had consulted with "the most principal Carpenters of this City," and that they were of the opinion that it would be possible to obtain the required materials for the work. The common council resolved that the building be carried on forthwith under the direction and inspection of this committee, with power to treat with such persons and purchase such materials as they might judge proper. It was further ordered that the building should be of the feet long by 21 feet wide, and contain 20 rooms, two stories high, each 21 x 21 feet square; also that the building should be built "on some of the Common Lands of this Corporation,"
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1757 to the southward of freshwater Between the New Goal House and Oct. the house of Catemuts.

19 At the same meeting a committee was named "to wait on the Governor and Council, and Request of them to draw a warrant on the Treasurer of the Colony, in favor of this Corporation, for sufficient sum to build and Complete said Barracks out of the monies in his hands Raised for fortifications," and that this committee shall have power to agree "that the monies so to be drawn for shall be Replaced by this Corporation in Case the General assembly shall not allow and approve of such Draught."—Ibid., VI: 111-12. On Oct. 22, the governor and council permitted the loan.—Cal. Coun. Min., 436.

21 At a meeting of the common council held at the work house, Oct. 25, a committee was appointed to receive of Christopher Bannier and John Dire the £2,000 which "they Received of the Treasurer of the Colony out of the fortification money, by Virtue of a warrant to them from the Governor and Council the said sum to be applied towards Building of Barracks in or near this City, pursuant to a Resolution of this Board," on Oct. 21.—Ibid., VI: 113. The work of actual construction of the barracks was soon under way.—See Oct. 31, 1757.

22 A minute of the common council relative to building barracks for 800 men bears this date.—Cal. His. MSS., Eng., 660.

27 The remainder of the household furniture of Sir Charles Hardy is advertised to be sold on this day; "Also the Chariot, Horns, etc. and a small piece."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 24, 1757.

31 A range of barracks (see Oct. 19) is being built "on the Common, near Fresh-Water," 422 feet long, to accommodate 1,000 soldiers. It is to be finished "at the Expense of the Corporation," and as soon as possible.—N. Y. Merc., Oct. 31, 1757. The first record of payment for equipment and operation of the new barracks is dated Nov. 29, 1757,—namely, £200 for firewood. Another payment was made the same day for firewood for the barracks at the Battery.—M. C. G., VI, 117-18. Presumably the building was then finished. John Dempsey was paid by the city, Sept. 26, 1758, a balance of £321, 18s. 8d. in full pay for what he had advanced and expended on "the New Barracks."—Ibid., VI: 145. For the arrangement perfected to repay the sum borrowed of the provincial treasury (see Oct. 19) to build these barracks, see Dec. 24, 1757.

38 For later references, see "Upper Barracks," in Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 924.

42 The council orders that a warrant be issued for impressing 1 boats for military transportation.—Cal. Coun. Min., 457.

53 The brig "De Lanecy" arrives in port with one of two "French-Dutch" ships captured on Oct. 22. The other prize arrived Nov. 15.—N. Y. Merc., Nov. 14 and 21, 1757.

54 The entries from Cadwalader Colden a map of the western frontier, and his recommendation for a line of blockhouses; this is adopted.—Cal. Coun. Min., 457.

55 An addition to the law "for the better preventing of fire" is passed by the common council. It prohibits the placing or keeping of "any hay in Barracks or in his hear or the Kitchen, nor in Yards or Garden or Gardens, or in any other place or places, to the Southward of Freshwater;" the keeping or putting of hay or straw "in any House Stable or other Building to the Southward of the Freshwater that is or shall be within Ten feet of any Chimney Hearth or fire place, or place for keeping ashes," etc.—M. C. G., VI: 116.

58 President Johnson of King's College having retired with his family to Westchester, on account of the small-pox in the city, to remain there a year, leaves in the college about thirty pupils, in the three classes; and to the tutor, Mr. Outing, being unable to do justice to them all, the board of government appoints, as professor of mathematics and natural history, Daniel Treadwell, "a young gentleman of a very excellent character, educated at Harvard College, and recommended by Professor Winthrop as eminently qualified for that station." This was the first professorship established in the college. Mr. Treadwell had begun his duties on Nov. 4; his annual stipend was to be £100. Soon after this, mathematical and philosophical instruments were purchased, and Rev. Dr. Brinton (see 1756) bequeathed to the college his library of about 1,300 books.—Hist. of Columbia Univ. (1904), 22, citing Chandler's Life of Johnson.

72 At the meeting of the governors on Nov. 8, the vestry-room was assigned to Prof. Treadwell; and Mr. Cutting, the tutor, was obliged to take his classes in his private lodgings, for which he was allowed £50 per annum, and his salary was raised from £30 to Nov. £100.—Ibid., 22-23. President Johnson returned in March, 1758. 8—Ibid., 25.

76 The provincial council (Lieut.-Gov. De Lancey presiding) receive a royal order approving the act disposing of part of the Philip van Cortlandt estate.—Cal. Coun. Min., 400.

15 In December, petitions were made, beginning on this day, for commissions for the commanders of the snow "Heather," the sloops "Keithah" and "Harlequin," and the brigantine "De Lancey."—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 681.

17 Col. Peter Schuyler, who had been taken prisoner at Oswego on Aug. 14, 1755, and carried to Quebec, arrives in New York by way of Albany. "At Night, several publick Buildings, in this City, were handomely illuminated, on the Colonel's happy Return; and an elegant Entertainment made on the Occasion, at the King's Arms Tavern. ..."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 21, 1757.

113 The council orders that warrants be issued to impress sloops 22 for military transportation to Albany.—Cal. Coun. Min., 457.

117 Firewood is paid for by the common council "for the Gard House and Hospital."—M. C. G., VI: 117. A guard-house at the Battery is mentioned in Ibid., VIII: 116. Montonar calls the barracks at the Battery the "Military Hospital" (Pl. 40, Vol. II).

129 The St. Andrew's Society holds its first annual meeting, at "Scotch Johny's," after which the members, with a number of Scotch army men who are in the city, "were so well entertained, in a most elegant and sociable Manner. Many loyal and patriot Healths were drank on the Occasion, heartily, yet soberly. In the Evening, the same Company gave a Ball and Entertainment, at the Exchange-Room and King's Arms Tavern, to the Town; at which a large and polite Company of both Sexes assembled. The Ladies in particular, made a most brilliant Appearance; and it is thought there scarcely ever was before so great a Number of elegantly dress'd fine Women seen together at one Place in North-America. As there were a great many of his Majesty's Officers present, several too of the first Rank, who had never before seen a public Company of Ladies in this Part of the World, they were most agreeably surpriz'd and struck with the charming Sight. ..."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 5, 1757. For organization of this society, see Nov. 19, 1756.

131 A large French prize ship of about 400 tons, loaded with sugar, is now "coming up."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 5, 1757.

146 H. M. S. "Norwich," arrives from Cork with "16 sail of trans- port," having on board "2000 men for the army in these parts," "The Chronological Diary," 44, in New Am. Mag. (Jan. 1758). "After adjournment from time to time since Sept. 3, the "House" (of representatives) meets, by direction of the lieutenant-governor, "in the Assembly Chamber, at the House of Mr. Tenus Somerndyck, in the Bowery Division of the Out-ward."—Assem. Jour., II: 539. This is on account of the small-pox in the city. See Feb. 15 and Aug. 31, 1757. Meetings continued here until Dec. 24.—Ibid., II: 558. A new assembly again met here from Jan. 24 to Feb. 4, 1758 (Ibid., 547); and again from March 7 to 24 (Ibid., 548, 555), and from May 2 to June 3, 1758 (Ibid., 555, 566).

152 Meetings were resumed in the city hall on Nov. 14, 1758.—Ibid., II: 566.

175 For location of the Somerndyck house, see Pl. 16-b, Vol. I; and cf. Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 926. On Dec. 18, 1756, the assembly allowed Somerndyck £50 for the use of his house by that body.—Assem. Jour., II: 684. The foregoing official record of the meeting of the assembly of Dec. 6 is oddly different from the account of the lieutenant-governor, "in a most out-house occupied by the overseer of his own farm upon the skirts of the town."—Smith's Continuation of the Hist. of N. Y., in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections (1876), V, 258. Four certificates of this date, by the master and wardens of the port of New York, attest that four shipmasters are each qualified for the office of branch pilot.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 681.

15 The west range of barracks in the fort, with its stores, is destroyed by fire, caused by tailors working in one of the rooms, who had concealed their fire from their master, and living in the governor's house in the fort, and Gov. Hardy lived in his own house half a mile out of town. The loss by this fire was £350.—N. Y. Col. Docs., VII: 341–42. The N. Y. Post-Boy (Dec. 19) stated that the fire broke out on the 18th; but the N. Y. Merc. (Dec. 19) and the Penn. Gen. (Dec. 29) reported it as occurring on the 19th, which is probably in the night.

19 The provincial council refers to the assembly the following accounts, with others: that of Sir Charles Hardy and John Dies for repairs of a house in Fort George; of Margaret Stelles for boarding French prisoners; and of John van Reuselaer for express services.—Col. Coun. Min., 43.

24 It is stated in a legislative act that "the free quartering of soldiers in the City of New York has by experience been found too unequal as well as too heavy a burthen for the inhabitants to bear." To relieve them, "the corporation have erected proper and convenient barracks at Stone-street from the corner of Wall-street, for the accommodation of the necessary and contingent charges of the army, and have so much exhausted their treasury that they are at present unable to pay and discharge the debts accrued in building barracks and furnishing them with necessities without the aid . . . of the Legislature." It is therefore enacted that the common council may allow a sum not exceeding £5,000 by a tax upon the real and personal estates of all the "freeholders free-men inhabitants and sojourners within the City of New York." The city is allowed to retain title to the soil on which barracks are built or to be built, as these barracks are "for the relief of the inhabitants . . . from bidding of soldiers in time of war," and may be rented at other times at the common council sees fit.—Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 211–14.

On Dec. 29, the common council took steps to put the act into effect. Receipts were filed by J. de Peyster, Jr., showing that he had received, for use on the barracks, sums aggregating £2,000, from Aldermen Livingston and Lispenard.—M. C. C., VI: 119–20. On March 30, 1758, John de Peyster, Jr, was reimbursed in the sum of £200, advanced by him for firewood and candles for the barracks, and £500 additional on April 1.—Ibid., VI: 128, 129.

On April 1, the day appointed in the act above cited, the collectors of the various wards turned over to the common council sums aggregating £3,158:13s.9d., out of which Aldermen Lispenard and Livingston paid to the treasurer of the colony £2,000 which they had borrowed (see Oct. 19, 1757).—Ibid., VI: 128–29. Later items of expense and payment for the barracks were as follows: On May 18, 1758, Abraham de Peyster, the colonial treasurer, was paid by the city £241:11s., "being what this Board paid short on the two thousand pounds by them Borrowed of the Government for Building of the Barracks the Last fall."—Ibid., VI: 134. On Oct. 17, 1758, the common council resolved to "provide fire wood, Candles and Straw for the New Barracks the ensuing winter for the Quartering of Such of his Majesties Troops as shall be order'd to this City."—Ibid., VI: 135. On Nov. 23, 40 "pot Hooks & Chains" were provided.—Ibid., VI: 139. On Dec. 18, the mayor reported that "General Amherst Requests of this Corporation a Blake-Fire & a Contingent Charges have so much, burnt their Treasury that they are at present unable to pay and discharge the Debts Accrued in Building Barracks and furnishing them with Necessities without the Aid of the Legislature." It is therefore enacted that the Common Council may allow a sum not exceeding £5,000 by a tax upon the real and personal estates of all the "Freeholders Free-Men Inhabitants and Sojourners within the City of New York." The city is allowed to retain title to the soil on which barracks are built or to be built, as these barracks are "for the relief of the inhabitants . . . from bidding of soldiers in time of war," and may be rented at other times at the common council sees fit.—Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 211–14.

At some time prior to this year, and after 1754 when he opened a house at Trenton Ferry for travellers between New York and Philadelphia (N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 1761), George Burn's had returned to New York and become proprietor of a tavern on Wall St, opposite the First Presbyterian Church, where he hung out the sign of Admiral Warren (see Feb. 20, 1749, and May 29, 1753). In the spring of 1755, Burns replaced "Scotty Johnny" as innkeeper of the noted Club Tavern, at Whitehall, but the sign of Admiral Warren continued to be maintained at the Wall St. site.

William Brock was proprietor in 1761 (N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 17, 1765), and his house, generally called "Brock's Tavern," was often used as a meeting-place for committees of the common council, because of its proximity to the city hill. Brock died before Jan. 19, 1771, when the house, then in possession of his widow, was offered for sale. It was described as 3 storied high, 7 rooms, and "completely finished."—N. Y. Merc., Jan. 7, 1771.

On May 20, 1773, Mrs. Brock announced that she had moved to Whitehall, to "that elegant and pleasant situated house . . . the sign of the Fry'd Oysters."—N. Y. Gen. Adv., May 30, 1773.

By 1774, the old tavern on Wall St had become a hair-dressing establishment, but during the Revolution it was temporarily revived under the name of "Burrow's Tavern," and was a headquarters for Loyalists.—Rivington's N. Y. Loyal Gaz., Oct. 18, 1779, p. 475. In 1825, the house was occupied by John Kibble, and described as "a large corner house at upper end of Wall-street, opposite the Old Presbyterian Meeting, for many years past a noted tavern."—N. Y. Merc., Feb. 16, 1778.

The German Reformed Church, writing to the clasis of Amster-

Dun on Feb. 5, 1766, stated that, about 1758, it bought, for 1,250 dollars, the theatre building on Stone St, and fitted it up for public worship, thereby incurring a debt of 2,000 dollars.—Eccles. Rec.
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1798. The location was 62 and 66 Nassau St., on the east side of the street, between John St. and Maiden Lane. There is no deed of record, however, in either New York or Albany, showing a transfer from the estate of Rip van Dam to the German Reformed Church of the property. It was recorded in Albany (secretary of state's office), which, in form, appears to be a mortgage in trust, for church purposes, from one board of trustees to another, covering lots 5 and 6 on a map made by Francis Maesaehle of the Rip van Dam property bought by this church, on part of which the old theatre stood—Solen, XIX. 567–68. See also, March 8, 1755, and "First German Reformed Church (first site)," in Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 935.

January

A map is made of "the Lots commonly called Spring Garden lots" (see Aug. 28, 1752), as divided in this month. This is preserved in the Banker Collection (see B. F., folder 73), N. Y. Pub. Library.

During January, petitions were made, beginning on this day, for commissions for the commanders of the ships "Thorton," "Phaeton," and "George," the brigantine "New York," and the packet "Curacoa."—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 682.

Fifty-nine prices have been brought into New York from the beginning of the war to this day. Twenty-six others have been sent into other ports by New York privaters. For the list of these, see N. Y. Merc. Jan. 9, 1758.

Joseph Hancock advertises that he still continues to carry on the stage business, attending in New York at Whitehall Ship, and in Philadelphia at the Crooked-Billet Wharf. He conducts his stages in conjunction with Daniel O'Brien (see Feb. 23, 1756). This notice is given for the reason that there is another Stage set up from the same Places, which may impose on the Public.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 9, 1758.

Another stage-line between New York and Philadelphia, requiring the shortest "water carriage," is advertised: Reuben Fitzrandolph attends with a good Boat at the Whitehall Ship in New-York, every Tuesday and Friday, to carry Goods or Passengers to the Blazing-Star where a good Wagon kept by Isaac Fitzrandolph, will set out every Wednesday and Saturday for New-Brunswick, where another Wagon kept by Francis Holland, will set out every Monday and Thursday for Trenton Ferry, and then the Wagon kept by Buckingham and Estes, will set out every Monday and Friday, directly into Philadelphia. The said Mount sets out from the Sign of the George in Second-Street Philadelphia, every Monday and Thursday for Trenton; and weather permitting, the Wagons will be regular in meeting and exchanging that Places and Walls. And carrying as much as the least Water-Carriage of any yet attempted between New-York and Philadelphia and is through the thickest inhabited Part of the Country, and the best Entertainment, it is hoped this Undertaking will meet with all due Encouragement, whilst the most careful Means shall be used to give Satisfaction to the Public . . . —N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 9, 1758.

The council directs that the list of French prisoners brought in by privaters be delivered to the mayor.—Cal. Coun. Min., 438.

The account of Christopher Bancier for monies expended between 1755 and 1758 for a battery, blockhouses, etc., in New York, is submitted.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 681. See Feb. 19, 1755.

A committee of the common council is appointed "to saih the assembly Chamber in the City Hall and make such other necessary ornamental Reparation to the said Chamber as they shall Judge proper."—M. G. C., VI: 123.

The plan and model of the King's instructions against capture of Spanish vessels by privaters sailing out of New York bears this date.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 683.

John Philipse, "Teacher of the French Tongue," gives public notice to his scholars "that he is removed from Mr. Wragg's to Doctor Pownall's Garden, 23rd St., between 25th and 26th, Bake-House, in New Dutch Church-street; where he will attend them every Evening, from the Hour of Five, till Eight." He adds: "Any Person willing to learn, may depend upon being taught in the Most Modern and Expedition Method; and according to Mr. Pailleret's System; who had the Honour of Teaching the Royal Family."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 30, 1758. For more particulars about the teaching of French, see Jan. 16, 1761.

The council orders that a warrant be issued to Capt. John Bradstreet for issue out of the warehouses, horses, carriages, etc. for military use.—Cal. Coun. Min., 438.

John Dowers, tavern-keeper, near Spring Garde, advertises Feb. 6 that a "single sleigh" has been left at his door, which the owner may have upon proof of his right.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 6, 1758.

The tavern of John Dowers evidently stood at this time on the west side of Broadway at the south-east corner of the rectangular block between Ann and Fulton Sts., being a part of Spring Garden. As no building appears here on Maesaehle's map of the city, made in 1754–5 (Pl. 34, Vol. I), the house was probably erected between 1755 and 1758. On March 4, 1758, John Dowers, "Vintner," and Deborah, his wife, mortgaged this property to John Beckman.—Liber Mortgages, I: 75. On April 37 of the same year, a second mortgage was given to Simon Johnson (ibid., 1: 85–85), and on May 28, 1759, it was again mortgaged by Dowers, to Richard Biddere.—Ibid., I: 123. It is to be noted that the first two mortgages do not mention a house, while the last recites one. Dowers offered the property for sale in October, 1759. He described it as a "Tavern, having the Sign of the King of Prussia, and next Door to Dr. Johnson."—See Oct. 8, 1759. The lot was on lease from Trinity Church, and Dr. Johnson was the first president of King's College. On January 9, 1760, (p. 6), Dowers was trying to dispose of the house. This he succeeded in doing, for by June 2, 1760 (p. 7), John Keats was conducting a tavern in the Fields, where he hung out the sign of the "King of Prussia," which he had evidently acquired from Dowers. The latter now removed to another site, on Broadway and Robinson St., where he opened another tavern, this time at the "Sign of King George III."—See Jan. 15, 1761. Dowers mortgaged this property on May 2, 1761, to John Morin Scott.—Liber Mortgages, I: 250–51. He was still keeping tavern in the West Ward in 1773 when his wife "Jane" was witness at an inquest over the body of a young woman who had been burned out in the kitchen, and was expelled from the 17th of April till the 1st of May, and then died, and so came by her Death in Manner and Form as aforesaid, and not otherwise."—N. Y. Jour., May 13, 1773. The old tavern of Dowers in Spring Garden had passed into the bands of John Kerby by Feb. 24, 1766 (p. 7).

The owners of the ship "St. George" petition for a commission for her commander.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 683.

Lord Loudoun sets out for Hartford, accompanied by Gov. De Laney, to meet Gov. Thomas Pownall of Massachusetts, the commissioners of New Hampshire, etc.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 20, 1758.
May 18, it was ordered that the sum of £500 be paid to the Clerk of this Board by one or both of the managers of the Late Lottery, and the said sum to be by him paid into the hands of Archibald Kennedy Esq on his Executing a Release to this Corporation of the Island Commonly Called Bellows, etc.—Ibid., VII: 113. In 1759, the city built a pest-house there. See Jan. 30, 1759.

The St. Andrew's Society meets "at the House of Mr. Keen, (commonly called Vaux-Hall)."—T. Post-Boy, Feb. 23, 1758. The site of this earliest Vauxhall is unknown. In 1761, however, Mr. Keen's house was between the new market and the Blue Market, evidently on Crown (Liberty) St.—See June 10, 1754.

Keen was a partner of Lightfoot for two years, when they conducted the "Coffee Room over the New Exchange."—See Feb. 11, 1754.

The king's ship "Squiered," of 20 guns, arrives from England, with orders to Gen. Abercrombie to take command of all the forces in America. Lord Loudoun is called home.—Jour. of Hugh Gaine, II: 13. See also March 13 and 24, and April 17.

During March, petitions were made, beginning on this day, for commissions for the commanders of the briganties "Columbine" and "Hawk," and the sloop "Mary and Ann."—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 624.

De Lancey returns from Hartford. The council makes record of the fact that Lord Loudoun is ordered to England, and that Abercrombie is appointed commander-in-chief (see March 4). A letter is received from Secretary William Pitt with a plan for the entire defence of the province.—Ibid., VII: 450.

The council receives from the lords of trade a letter regarding the New-York Massachusetts boundary line.—Ibid., 458.

De Lancey addresses a joint session of the legislature regarding a request of the British government to raise regiments in this province, to act under orders from Major-General Abercrombie, in conjunction with "a Body of the King's British Forces," in attempting "to make an Invasion into Canada." He adds: "We have no Time to lose; ... in case a sufficient Number do not offer voluntarily, you will forthwith enable me by an effectual Law, to complete the Levies in due Time. I see no other Method of doing this than by a Draught of such part of your Inhabitants as the Service will require."—Assemb. Jour., II: 549. When this speech was published (Post-Boy, March 15), it "intimidated many Young People, in-so-much that many of them abandoned, lest they should be detained and obliged to serve contrary to their inclinations."—Jour. of Hugh Gaine, II: 14.

On March 14, the assembly adopted an address to De Lancey, in reply to his message, expressing their readiness to comply with his urgent request. It stated that "The great Number of private Ships of War fitted out from the Port of New-York, against his Majesty's Enemies, evidence the Ardor of the People of this Colony." The assembly promised to make "effectual Provision for levying, clothing, and equipping a Body of Troops, to be raised among our Inhabitants in these Circumstances will allow."—Ibid., II: 550.

A legislative act was accordingly passed on March 24, 1758 (p. v.).

Seven transports of Highlanders arrive in New York, by ship from Cork, to fill up the regiments.—Jour. of Hugh Gaine, II: 15.

Major-Gen. James Abercrombie, in New York, from Albany. He is "looked upon and revered as Commander-in-Chief of all his Majesty's Troops in North America."—Jour. of Hugh Gaine, II: 15. See March 4.

The "Law for appointing Establishing and Regulating a Good and sufficient night watch." (see Dec. 21, 1742) is amended by requiring every inhabitant residing in the six wards south of Fresh Water Pond who is able and fit to watch or to find a substitute to do duty successively as follows: The inhabitants of the West Ward are to keep watch nine nights, then those of the South Ward five nights, those of the Dock Ward five nights, those of the East Ward ten nights, those of the North Ward eight nights, and those of the Montgomery Ward eleven nights; after which they are to repeat in the same order.—M. C. VI: 126-27. For criticism of the night watch, see Feb. 21, 1757.

The city grants to Oliver de Lancey, in trust for the heirs of Sir Philip de Lancey, 206 feet to be measured from the springing from the rear of the Warren estate at Cortlandt Street to a line 200 feet beyond low-water mark in the Hudson River, with the requirement that a wharf 40 feet in width shall be made across the inward end, another of equal width across the outward end, and also one 15 feet in width extending the whole length of the lot and fronting the street, to be made on a point to be determined by survey near the river.—City Grants, Liber C: 227; M. C. VI: 127. The grant was between the present Liberty and Cortlandt Sts.

An embargo is laid on all outward-bound vessels of more than 50 tons, a count having been made ten days before those in the harbour.—Jour. of Hugh Gaine, II: 15, 14; Cal. Colon. Min., 438.

The general assembly votes ten pounds bounty to each able-bodied man who voluntarily enlists in the king's service for the province of New York.—Assemb. Jour., II: 521.

De Lancey, writing to Secretary Pitt, says: "... the country is drained of many able bodied men, by almost a kind of madness to be a privateright owned man in the Bag, and the small-pox are necessarily impressed for waggoners to carry up provisions etc., so that the Assembly have voted more Men [2680], than I bad encouragement to expect from them."

"... My Brother Oliver De Lancey having undertaken the Command, his example will I believe have a good effect on other Gentlemen, and facilitate the raising men ..."—N. Y. Col. Docs., VII: 345.

Major-Gen. Abercrombie issues orders for the recruiting officers and the absent officers of various battalions of the "Royal Americans," and of Montgomery's and Fraser's "Highlanders," to join their regiments; and for those of the 17th and 21st Regiments "to repair to New-York." He offers pardon to deserters who shall return and join their regiments on or before May 1.—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 20, 1758.

The embargo is extended to vessels above 25 tons.—Cal. Colon. Min., 458.

A warrant is issued to the deputy quartermaster-general, to impress carpenters, etc., for fitting out transports, etc.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 624.

An act is passed to prevent bringing small-pox, yellow fever, and other diseases, into the colony. It provides that all vessels having persons with such diseases on board or clearing from infected ports shall quarantine at Bellows' Island until released.—Cal. Laws N. Y., IV: 237-39. For earlier act, see May 3, 1755. On April 17, printed copies of this act were ordered distributed among the people.—Cal. Colon. Min., 459. Despite all precautions, the city was visited by a serious outbreak of small-pox the next year.—See June 2, 1759.

The assembly passes the act desired by De Lancey (see March 10), for raising, paying, and clothing 2680 soldiers, to join the forces of the neighbouring colonies (amounting in all to 20,000 men), to invade Canada "in conjunction with a Body of His Majesty's Regular Troops." The sum of £100,000 is to be raised for this purpose by a levy on the real and personal estates of all "the Freeholders Inhabitants and Residents within this Colony." The quota of the city and county of New York is £2000, payable in the next two years. Bills of credit are to be printed by James Prince, having on the back side "The Arms of the City of New York and under the Arms in the different Characters these words it's DEATH TO COUNTERFEIT THIS BILL." If volunteers are insufficient before April 15, the lieutenant-governour is empowered to supply the deficiency by detachments from the militia. New York City and Country are required to furnish 320 effective men.—Cal. Laws N. Y., IV: 415-35. See March 25.

De Lancey publishes a proclamation announcing the government act of March 24 (p. v.). He states that, as an encouragement to persons to enlist voluntarily, certain specified payments are allowed; also certain specified clothing for each man (which includes "a Fair of Buckskin Breecies"), as well as tents and other necessaries for the campaign.—N. Y. Post-Boy, April 3, 1758.

An auction is advertised to be held on April 12, at Fort George, of "all the Horses, Coaches, Plate, and Furniture belonging to the Right Honourable the Earl of Loudoun. Inventories of which may be seen at Mayor Robinson's."—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 27, 1758. See March 4, April 17.

Capt. John Montresor arrives in New York from his cantonment, by Abercrombie's orders, and is appointed "an Engineer on the Establishment," and ordered to proceed to Louisburg. The Hand, "Scarborough," and "Scarsborough" are in the harbour.—Montresor's Jour., in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections (1811), 152. Montresor was engaged for nearly two years, beginning Nov. 23, 1756, in important work as a military engineer and about New York City.

Part of the 6th Regiment (500 men) arrive from Livingston's Manor, to join their regiment "at their Cantonments in the Jerseys."—Montresor's Jour. (op. cit.), 152. The movements of other troops and of transports are also recorded in this Journal.
The Ordnance ships loading as fast as possible with stores for the Expedition. Seven provided for that purpose. At the Ordnance wharf on that part of the town fronting the North River.

—Colonel John Barry to Lord Loudoun, April 12, 1758, op. cit. 152.

De Lancey issues a proclamation asking all men who enlist, who possess arms of their own, to bring them “to the Rendezvous” (Halifax), believing they will prefer their own to those furnished “by the Crown;” being lighter, and the owners being accustomed to them. If not lost or damaged in service, the commander-in-chief will make good the loss in money. And as a Powder-Horn, Shot-Bag, with a Case for the Lock of their Gun, to preserve it from the Weather, are thought more proper for the present Service than the common Accoutrements, for these are much too light. De Lancey further requires that all justices of the peace and sheriffs shall cause diligent search to be made for arms concealed by deserters, to seize and send them to New York, to be delivered to Christopher Blundell, the store-keeper at Fort George.—N. T. Post-Boy, April 10, 1758.

This is the day on which the sale of the belongings of the Earl of Loudoun was advertised to be held (see March 25), prior to his departure for home on April 18 (p. 29). See also April 17.

The 17th and 22d Regiments arrive from Albany, and are ordered to remain on board their respective sloops till their troops are ready to receive them. —Montresor’s Jour., op. cit. 152.

The city’s possession and care of implements of war is shown in a record of a payment “for Cleansing the City’s arms, fitting the Bayonets &c.” N. G. C. VI, 1: 150. In 1682, the military watch appointed for the city was under the provost, the commander-in-chief, Brockhauls, who required, among other things, that each person appointed to be on watch should bring “his Sword and Gunn” (ibid., 1: 97); but, in 1755, the city sent to England for 1,000 stand of arms, “in order to furnish those who have not Arms of their Own in Case of an Attack,” and these arrived on or about Aug. 18 of that year (see Jan. 16 and Aug. 7, 1755).

On receipt of a letter of advices from Sir Charles Hardy, who is at Halifax, the council orders that vessels carrying provisions there shall be free from impress, and that a proclamation to this effect shall be issued, as well as to discontentment descents.—Col. Coun. Min., 439. De Lancey issues such proclamation, which states that, as the king has ordered “a considerable Number of Troops, with a powerful Fleet, to Rendezvous at Halifax,” he has thought fit “to encourage the Inhabitants of this Province, to carry Provisions thither, for their Refreshment.” He therefore gives notice that “the Persons employed on Board of Vessels laden with Provisions, for the said Port, will be free from all Impress, and have the utmost Countenance and Protection from the Commander of his Majesty’s Ships there . . .” He also gives notice that the “Desertion of Seamen at this Time, when there is so great a Demand for their Service, to man the Transports fitting out in this Port, and a large Convoy of Transports are daily expected to arrive here from England, must be highly prejudicial to his Majesty’s Service;” he has thought fit that “all Persons, who shall harbour or conceal any Seaman, or other Deserters, belonging to any of his Majesty’s Ships, or to any Transport Vessel, now, or which hereafter shall be in this Port, shall be prosecuted with the utmost Rigour of the Law.” All magistrates, justices of the peace, sheriffs, constables, and other civil officers in the province, are commanded “to make, and cause diligent Search and Enquiry to be made for all such Deserters,” to apprehend them, and cause them “to be sent to this City.” To encourage enlistment in the transport service, those enlisting will be protected from impress during this service until their return home.—N. T. Post-Boy, April 17, 1758. See also April 21.

A proclamation is issued setting apart May 12 as a day of fasting and prayer.—Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 685. See May 12.

Several muster rolls, showing the number, names, ages, and size of the men enlisted in the several counties, bear dates from April 15 to May 17; Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 685-86.

“Arrived in this harbour the Prince of Orange Privateer, her hands pressed as all vessels were when they come in. Genl Forbes set out from this place for Philadelphia for the Southern Expedition.”—Montresor’s Jour., op. cit. 152.

The quarantine is still maintained off Bedloe Island to it the

The brigantine “Prince of Orange” is ordered on this day by the council on report of Dr. John Bard. The council also orders that printed copies of the act “to prevent bringing in and spreading infectious distempers” be distributed among the barque pilots (of whom five were appointed on Dec. 19, 1757).—Col. Coun. Min., 439, 437. On April 19, a privateer, with yellow fever on board, was ordered to quarantine. These vessels were discharged on May 5 and 8 respectively.—Ibid., 439.

“The house on White-Hall, now in the possession of Lord Loudoun,” is advertised to be let to a private family.—N. T. Post-Boy, April 17, 1758. See March 25.

The council takes action on quarantine regulations.—Col. Coun. Min., 439.

“Orders given out this day for all officers to repair on board their respective transports bound to Halifax Field officers & Staff officers Except.—Montresor’s Jour., op. cit. 153.

Although it is Sunday, Capt. Jasper Farmer, “of the Militia Train,” with several of his company, at about two o’clock in the morning, board the “Charming Jenny” (a vessel of the snow type), lying alongside the “new Dock,” in order to impress for the transport service. They impressed several; but “four of the crew, more obtinate than the Rest, retired into the Round-House, and there armed themselves with Blunderbusses; and aloft Capt. Farmer, and a Magistrate then standing on the Dock, desired them in an amicable Manner, to surrender, promising they should not go on board the vessel.” The crew returned; but the minute the Transports, yet they obstinately refused, and fired their Blunderbusses thro’ the Loop Holes, and wounded Capt. Farmer . . . of which Wound . . . he died.” These men did not surrender until a party of regulars, after firing a volley into the round-house, setted them. The coroner’s inquest brought in a verdict of murder against four of the snow’s crew.

On the same morning, about four o’clock, while another party of the militia “were looking for Sailors in the Out-Skirts of the City, they fell upon a House wherein nine Dutchmen were lodged, (they lately being brought in by some of the Privateers) who at first would not surrender; whereupon an Officer with a Party came to the House, and ordered his Men to fire, aloft two of the Dutchmen in the Garret would have surrendered and come down, the other seven having secreted themselves . . . One of the two was killed and the other severely wounded. The coroner’s inquest brought in a verdict of murder against the officer and against others unknown to the jury.—N. T. Post-Boy, May 1, 1758. This proceeding on the part of the militia and regulars, as well as the proclamation of Gov. De Lancey on April 14 (p. 5), were in direct violation of the statute of Queen Anne.—Dunlap, Hist. of the New Neth., Prov. of N. Y., and State of N. Y. (1840), II: Appendix W., p. 1x.

The artillery ship “Dublin,” with Capt. John Montresor on board, falls down to the Narrows.—Montresor’s Jour., op. cit. 153. It moved to Sandy Hook on the 26th.—Ibid.

The fleet of empty transports sails from the Narrows, where they have been at anchor, to Sandy Hook.—Montresor’s Jour., op. cit. 153. The movements of other ships are also recorded. See May 3.

Lord Loudoun embarks for England on the man-of-war “Hampshire,” being saluted on leaving by a discharge of cannon from the Battery, another salute was fired by the officers on board on his safe arrival on board.—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 1, 1758. See May 3.

A review of Loudoun’s proceedings in this country was published this year in London, having the following title: The Conduct of a noble Commander in America [Earl of Loudoun] Improperly reviewed with The genuine Causes of the Discontents at New-York and Halifax, and The true Occasion of the Delays in that important Expedition; including A regular Account of all the proceedings and Incidents in the Order of Time wherein they happened.

Thirty-one warrants are issued to pay bounties to volunteers in different parts of the Province, and allowances to field officers. These total over £57,000.—Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 685-86.

The movements of warships, transports, and privateers formed an important feature of the daily news during this stirring period. On this day it is reported that “The several transports taken up

THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND
1758 at this place for his Majesty's service" have dropped down to May Sandy Hook, "there to meet and join those that lately arrived thither from England," under convoy of H. M. S. "Devonshire," of 64 guns; the "Hind," 20 guns, and the "Hunter," 18 guns, "making in all near 60." They were to be joined by the "Great Arm- borough," and the "Gramont." The "Diana" has already arrived at this rendezvous. On April 30, Commodore Durell, who had arrived at New York early in March, went to the Hook on the "Gramont," to "take charge of the fleet from thence to Halifax, whether they sail in a few days,"—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 17 and May 1, 1758; New Am. Mag. (Woodbridge, N. J., 1758), p. 102 of "The Hist. Chronicle.

3 A return of men furnished by Kings Co. bears this date; and a muster roll of several companies of Suffolk Co. is dated May 4: "a size roll" of Capt. Brevettion's company of New York troops is dated May 5.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 687.

4 The Earl of Loudon sails for England on the "Hampshire," and the 17th and 22d Regiments embark for Halifax, the fleet consisting of 45 sail.—N. Y. Mer., May 8, 1758. See May 1.

5 "Set sail ye Feet. Art'y here from New York (apparently at Sandy Hook)—see April 24 and 26—the Hampshire with Lord Loud- don to proceed to England. Signals fir'd this day from the Com- modore for unmooring . . . The Fleet sail's, the Hampshire in Company the whole consisting of about 58 sail."—Moniteur's Jour., ap. cit., 175. This record proceeds with similar entries re- garding movements of the ships, etc. The convoy of the fleet con- sisted of the "Devonshire" (74 guns), "Ludlow Castle" (40), "Diana" (31), and the sloops "Gramont," "Hunter," and "Wind- chelsea."—Ibid.

6 Yellow fever having been reported on April 18 on the privateer "Quiver Crowell," Dr. John Baird reports as to the sanitary con- dition of this ship and the "Prince of Orange," lying at quarantine.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 685, 687. The former was discharged from quarantine on this day; the latter on May 8.—Cal. Coun. Min., 439.

7 Since Feb. 18 (q.v.), the common council has come to a new agreement with Archibald Kennedy for the purchase of "Bedows Island," which he owns, and the board approves the draft of a re- lease of the island to the city.—M. C. V., VI. 175.1-1752.

8 De Lancey issued a proclamation on April 14, appointing May 12 as "a Day of publick Humiliation, Fasting and Prayer, to supplic- cate the Pardon of our Sins, and to invite the divine Protection and Blessing on his Majesty's sacred Person, his illustrious Family, his Kingdoms and Colonies, Fleets and Armies."—N. Y. Post-Boy, April 17, 1758.

10 Also at the general's request, the council issues a warrant to Lieut-Col. John Bradstreet to impress bateaux men.—Ibid., 470.

11 Jacob Goetz is allowed $124 for binding 47 volumes of old records of the colony, for examining them, and translating various old Dutch books.—Ibid., 476.

12 Mayor Cruger produces a letter at a meeting of the common council, which he has received from Lieut-Gov. De Lancey, in which it is stated that the writer has received word from Gen. Abercrombie regarding the "difficulty there is to supply the Prov- incial Troops with Arms." The lieutenant-governor desires that the 1,000 stand of arms belonging to the city may be de- livered to Captain Maccloud or other proper officer, with the assurance from the general that they will be replaced when the arms come from England "for the use of his majestys Troops." De Lancey's original letter is preserved in metal file box No. 4, city clerk's record-room. It is ordered that the following answer be given: "That as the arms Required of us, were purchased by this Corporation at a very Great Expense for the use of the Inhabitants of this City and such other Bodies of the militia of the Country as may be Called into our assistance in Case of an Invasion and as so Dangerous an Event may with some Reason be speedily Expected, it is with the utmost Concern and Reluctance the we who on all occasions are willing to Testify our obedience to the authority of Government, find ourselves Constrained from a sense of that duty which we owe as Trustees to the publick, to signify to Your Honour our Inconsideration to Comply with your Command in sending to Deprive the City of the use of their arms at this Critical and Important Juncture. Hoping therefore that your Honour will not attribute our non Compliance to any Disposition to oppose the Demands of Government but to our absolute Inability to Comply with them in this Instance, We are," etc.—M. C. V., VI. 175.1-1752.

13 On May 19, however, De Lancey having urged compliance with his desire, "fearing that should he be obliged to Impose on them for the service it might tend to Establish a Disagreeable president" (sic), and having also represented to the common council that the want of these arms "would Cause an unavoidable delay to the greatest prejudice of his majestys service," the board decided to part with the arms, "as they are Immediately wanted in the service; and the necessity for the City this season is uncertain." The mayor was required to sign this answer, which stipulated that the arms were "to be paid for in Cash at the rate of Three pounds five shillings for Each Musket, in which sum we include the Cartouch Boxes Bayonetta, fill'd Cartridgges, flints and other accouterments belonging to them," and that the city was ready to deliver them to the comptroller of ordnance, or any other person properly authorized to receive them, "upon his Giving us a Receipt in Writing for the same, in order to the obtaining of a Warrant, from General Stanwick for the payment of the money which he has been pleased to assure the mayor he will Grant us Immediately upon producing such Receipt."—Ibid., VI. 175. See, further, June 20.

14 John Dies is allowed $560 for material and workmanship on the house in Fort George.—Am. Jour., II. 536.

15 During May, petitions are made, on this day and on the 26th, for commissions for the commanders of the snow "Greyhound" and the brigantine "King George," respectively.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 687.

16 The assembly appoints a committee to wait on the governor with a complaint against the quartering of French prisoners for so long a time in the colony.—Am. Jour., II. 557. See July 24. De Lancey answered on May 23 that he would give orders to have them sent away as soon as possible.—Ibid., 557. See July 4.

17 Gen. Abercrombie writes from Albany to Pitt: "New York has 22 completed her Levies, four of their Companies came off to the same time with me, and are arrived; the Remainder, I am told, are in Motion, so that we may expect them all in here soon . . . prior to my Departure for this Place . . . I embarked nine Companies of the 22d Battalion of Royal Americans, that had been in Garrison at New York during the Winter, and Could not be removed any sooner, by Reason of their having being daily employed as Labourers, in embarking the Battering Train, artillery Stores &c for Halifax, which has been a great saving to the public." —Corresp. of Wm. Pitt with Colonial Governors, I: 248-50.

18 John Thompson (of Scotch Origin), the "Captain of Thistle," near Whitehall Slip, advertises the sale, on this day, of all his household goods, kitchen furniture, etc. He also desires to settle at all outstanding accounts.—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 15, 1758. By May 29 (q.v.), George Burns had taken over the tavern. Scotch Johnny had been innkeeper of the Crown and Thistle since 1751, and possibly earlier. See May 16.

19 A draft of the charter of a vessel for the transportation of the 25 troops and stores is of record under this date.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 688.

20 "Ordered that Mr Nathaniel Marston have further Leave for the four Lotts of Ground on which his Still house Stands behind the Church yard for the Term of Eleven Years from the 25th Day of March 1757, on which Day he last lease expired at the Annual Rent of Ten Pounds and that the said Rent be paid free of all taxes and other charges . . ."—Trin. Min. (MS.).

21 George Burns (see May 29) announces that the "famous and noted tavern lately occupied by Mr. John Thompson (known by the name of Scotch Johnny) near the Whitehall slip, is now kept by the subscriber in the same character, who lately removed there- to, from the sign of Admiral Warren, opposite to the Presbyterian Meeting-house."—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 15, 1758.

22 "Your humble Petition to Wm. Pitt with Colonial Governors; I: 184. Since May 31, announces that the "famous and noted tavern lately occupied by Mr. John Thompson (known by the name of Scotch Johnny) near the Whitehall Slip, is now kept by the subscriber in the same character, who lately removed there- to, from the sign of Admiral Warren, opposite to the Presbyterian Meeting-house."—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 15, 1758.

23 These have been 350 Small Arms sent up from hence 2350 of them collected and pur- chased in this City."—Corresp. of Wm. Pitt with Colonial Governors, I: 184.

24 During June, petitions are made, beginning this day, for commissions for the commanders of the following privateers: the ships "Lord Howe," "Lark," and "Eagle," the sloop "St. Joseph," the "brigantines "Prince of Orange," "Duke of Marlborough,"

The government and council receive a royal mandate to swear John Watts as member of the council, in place of James Alexander, deceased; he is sworn in and takes his seat.—Col. Coun. Min., 440.

The council orders that timber be provided for the batteries at the Narrows according to the plan of Chief Engineer James Montmorency.—Ibid., 430.

A journal to this date of the proceedings of the fleet and army off Louisbourg is among the New York provincial records.—Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 689.

"M. D. Waddell, writing from Quebec to the Marshal de Belle Isle various particulars regarding the war in America, says "The sea swarms with English privateers, and we have not one."—N. T. Col. Doc., X: 718.

A committee of the common council is appointed to purchase 500 of "the subscription arms Lately Imported, and in the City to pay for the same out of the monies, which arose by the sale of the City arms to Gen. Abercrombie [see May 17] and that the remainder of the said monies be sent to England by the said Committee, for the purchasing there, for this Corporation, one Large fire engine, one small 15 and two hand 10, and for 500 there, Mr. George Smith also four hundred and fifty small arms and that the said Committee order their Correspondent to Cause the same to be insured."—M. C. CA., VI: 173-87. These purchases were made in London, through the London merchant, William Baker (see June 19, 1741), at a cost of £593 sterling.—From letter dated June 16, 1758, preserved in comptroller's office, box of vouchers no. 1. An invoice, of March 37, 1759, signed by Baker, consigns three fire-engines to John Cruger in New York, "for Account & Risque of the Corporation of the City of New York . . . by the Ship Britannia, Capt. George Massam." Baker received £25 per cent. commission for his part in the transaction. In another letter, of Jan. 7, 1760, Baker expressed to Cruger the hope that the fire-engines "done came safe to your hands," and he made a new statement of the balance due him, on account of his having recovered three guineas insurance because the ship "Britannia" had been conveyed by himself part of the way.—From originals in ibid.

The first "Commencement" of King's College is held. One who attended, describing it in a letter to the press as "the first Solemnity of the Kind, ever celebrated here," adds: "The Order of the Procession from the Vestry Room, where the College is now held, to the site, was an壮观. The President, with his Honour the Lieutenant Governor, who, by his Presence graced the Solemnity, were preceded by the Candidates for Bachelor's and Master's Degrees, with their Heads uncovered, and were followed by the Governors of the College, the Clergy of all Denominations in this City, and other Dignitaries of the City and the neighbouring Provinces. After short Prayers suitable to the Occasion, the Reverend Dr. Johnson, the President, from the Pulpit, opened the Solemnity, with a learned and elegant Oration Inauguralis. The exercises of the Bachelors were introduced by a polite salutatory Oration, delivered by Zivoosoa, with such Propriety of Pronunciation, and in engaging an Air, as justly gained him the Admiration and Applause of all present. This was followed by a metaphysical Thesis, learnedly defended by Kitzema against Ver Planck and Cortlandt, with another held by Reid, and opposed by two Ogless. The Bachelors Exercises were closed by a well-composed, and polished Oration, on the Advantages of a liberal Education, delivered by Cortlandt, whose fine Address added a Beauty to the Sentiment, which gave universal Satisfaction to that numerous Assembly. After this, Mr. Treadwell, in a clear and concise Manner, demonstrated the Revolution of the Earth round its Axis, and its Derivation from astronomical Observations, and the Theory of Gravity, and defended the Thesis against Mr. Cutting and Mr. Witmore, a candidate for the Degree of Master of Arts. This Dispute being ended, the President descended from the Pulpit, and being seated in a chair, in a solemn Manner, conferred the Honours of the College upon those Pupils, who were Candidates for a Bachelor's Degree; and on several Gentlemen who had received Degrees in other Colleges. The Exercises were concluded with a Valedictory Oration [in Latin] by Mr. Cutting, universally esteemed a masterly Performance. The President then address'd himself in a solemn pathetic Exhortation, to the Bachelors, which could not fail of answering the most valuable Purposes, and leaving a lasting Impression on the Minds of all the Pupils. The whole Solemnity being finished, by a short Prayer, the Procession returned back to the City-Arms [see Aug. 23, 1756], where an elegant Entertainment was provided by the Governors of the College. This important Occasion drew together a numerous Assembly of People of all Orders, and it gave me a sincere Pleasure to see the Exercises performed in a Manner, which must reflect Honour upon the College, and incite every Friend of his Country, to promote so useful, so well regulated an Institution."—N. T. Merc., June 26, 1758. See also Axtise, Hist. of St. George's Church, 28.

The names of the graduates and their degrees, from 1758 to 1774 inclusive, were published by Hugh Gaine, as a Catalogue, in the form of a broadside, probably in the latter year.—See reproduction, Pl. 53-b, Vol. I. This list shows nine who received the degree of bachelor of arts in 1758 (the name of the last, "Timothy Wetmore, A. B.", being omitted from a similar list, which shows only eight, as printed in the Hist. of Columbia Univ., 1904, p. 23). The Catalogue shews the degree of master of arts in 1758 (not thirteen, as stated in the Hist., p. 24).

Orders are issued by the provincial council for the militia to do guard duty in Fort George. It is also ordered that ordnance stores lost in the late fire in Fort George (July 27) be replaced, and that the barracks there be repaired.—Col. Coun. Min., 440.

A French vessel, sent into port by two privates, is thought to be the most valuable prize brought into New York since the out- break of the war.—Upcott Coll., I: 539, in N. Y. Hist. Soc.

Samuel Fraunces, "at the Mason's Arms, near the Barracks," threatens to prosecute, "to the utmost Rigour of the Law," the person who took "two sets Stock-Buckles, and one Bosom Buckle, from the said Dr. Jones, on last Saturday evening," and sent them to him.—N. Y. Merc., March 19, 1779. The "Mason's Arms" was the first tavern which Fraunces conducted in New York, and was probably opened by him after Feb. 27, 1776 (q.v.), when he and James Taggart, "Retailers of Strong Liquors," dissolved partnership in the "farmer's arms" by the sale of their property in a mortgage which Fraunces gave to Walter Rutherford on Jan. 15, 1776.—Liber Mortgages, I: 268-69.

It stood on the south-west corner of Broadway and Warren St. Fraunces turned over the tavern to John Jones in the spring of 1765, when he purchased the De Lancy Mansion on Broad and Pearl Sts., and opened the famous Queen's Head, later better known as Fraunces Tavern. Jones gave Fraunces a mortgage on the Mason's Arms on Feb. 3, 1762, and paid it off on Jan. 14, 1765.

—Ibid., I: 869. Jones later (Feb. 28, 1767) acquired from Trinity Church a 63-year lease on this property, which was a part of the Church Farm.—Sanford, Ch. Rep., IV: 660. On May 13, 1765 (q.v.), Jones offered the tavern for sale. He described it as "The House, at the Sign of the Mason's Arms, near the College ... a very convenient House for a Tavern, and has always been occupied as such, where the best Company in Town resorted ..." He announced that he would leave the house as soon as disposed of. Jones failed to secure a purchaser, and on June 13, 1767, mortgaged the premises to Roger Morris for $2,000, "milled Spanish pieces of Eight."—Liber Mortgages, I: 511-12. On Nov. 14, 1767 (q.v.), Jones, whose business relations with Fraunces seem to have been very intimate, advertised in the Evening Post-Boy that his tenant and shortly thereafter Richard Howard became the new proprietor of the tavern of the "in the fields."—N. Y. Merc., Feb. 18, 1768. Howard's stay was brief. Alexander Smith succeeded him in Oct., 1766 (N. Y. Jour., Oct. 30, 1766), and on Feb. 26, 1767 (q.v.), Murray and Smith announced that they had "entered into partnership, for carrying on the business of Vintners, and Victuallers, at the Masons-Arms Tavern, in the fields, lately kept by said Smith alone." They intended, they said, to "keep the said house with the same good reputation as in the time of their predecessor Mr. John Jones."—Ibid., Feb. 26, 1767. Jones made further efforts to sell the house in Dec. 1767, and finally announced that he would sell it by public vendue on Jan. 25, 1768.—N. Y. Merc., Jan. 11, 1768. By March 21 of that year, the tavern was in possession of Roger Morris, who offered it for rent.

Shortly thereafter, Edward Smith appears to have become proprietor. He became one of the most popular meeting-places for the Sons of Liberty, and, when a disagreement occurred between the radical element of the party and Abraham de la Montagne, whose tavern had been engaged by the conservative faction of the Sons of Liberty for their annual celebration of their "Anniversary" on March 5, 1774, Smith was taken over by the former as a "proper House for the Accommodation of all Lovers of freedom on that Day, and for their Use on future Occasion, in the Promotion of the Common Cause."—See Feb. 19, 1770. Henry Bicker, who had recently been conducting a tavern in New Brunswick, at the "Sign of the Tree of Liberty," became the first proprietor, and the house was called Mar. "Hamden Hall." The liberty pole in the fields stood almost opposite the house to what is now called 1767-1778 the house in which the brewery was erected. All the traffic, in the fields, were the barracks of the British soldiers. Both Hamden Hall and Montague's tavern, which stood on Broadway a few doors south of Warren St., were attacked by soldiers on several occasions preceding the outbreak of the Revolution. In May, 1771, John Cox, who lived in the house on March 10, 1757—same date as that printed—was attacked by the soldiers, and narrowly escaped being killed as is stated himself, evidently with some justice, for a prisoner for 13 years for debt, succeeded Bicker as landlord.—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 12, 1772. He, in turn, was succeeded, about May 14, 1774 (q.v.), by Edward Bardin. Within a year, Bardin left to open a house and gardens on Beekman St., and once more the Montague's became proprietors, with greater prosperity.—See May 29, 1775. During the British occupation of the city from 1776 to 1783, Montague's tavern continued under British or loyalist innholders, but Hamden Hall ceased to exist. In 1788, Trinity Church leased the premises to Cornelius Cregier for 30 years.—Liber Deeds, CCXXV: 374.

The name of the Post-Boy is changed to Parker's New-York Gazette: or, the Weekly Post-Boy.—Early Newspapers, II: 427. See also Jan. 4, 1743. The partnership of Parker & Weyman had been dissolved, and, with the issue of Feb. 13, Parker again became the sole publisher.

The minister (Rev. David Botwick), elders, deacons, and twenty-three of the Presbyterian Church petition for a grant and confirmation of certain premises on the northeasterly side of Wall St. —Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 699.

The common council directs the clerk to make payment of $5 to Henry Play, "for the hire of his House as a Guard House for his Majesty's Regular Troops Quartered in this City the past year."—M. G. C., VII: 167. This was at the rate of seven shillings a week.—Ibid., VI: 140. The same house was used in the winter of 1775-76.—Ibid., VI: 140. It has not proved possible, from title records or other sources, to determine the location of this house.

The council hears from Secretary Pitt concerning the operations of the campaign.—Cal. Gouv. Min., 445.

A new city ordinance is enacted "for Regulating the Lying of Vessels in the Great Dock and Slips of this City and Ascertaining the Rates to be paid for the Same, and for Preserving the Bridge and Common Swear of the Same Great Dock." —The former law on the subject (see March 22, 1685, and Nov. 18, 1731) is repealed. The new provisions, now enacted, are as follows: After May 1, 1779, dockage is to be paid yearly, by the master or owner of the vessel, on his first coming to "any of the docks, wharfs pears, Keys, Mole, or slips belonging To this Corporation." The rate for vessels belonging and the east river is prescribed. New Jersey's towers (except sea vessels that are not coasters), is six shillings yearly on vessels of five tons burden or less, and one shilling per ton above that burden. Dockage rates are prescribed for "Trading and Coasting Vessels" which come from as far "Eastward," as New Hampshire and as far "westward," as North Carolina, inclusive, with the customary allowance of only one month for the sojourn here; these rates being higher than formerly for vessels of 20 tons burden or over. The tonnage (or burden), when in dispute, is to be determined by the oath of the master or owner; or, in case of his refusal to swear or prove it, it shall be settled by the oath of the person suing or prosecuting. The penalty is raised from 5 to 90 shillings for every tide that a vessel stays at the mouth of the dock or slip longer than necessary to load or unload. No vessel is permitted to make fast or "hall down" (cf. Dec. 24, 1717) "by the Bridge in the Great Dock;" or load or unload ballast, flour, or goods there; or careen the said Bridge or by "any of the docks, Wharfs, Peers, Keys, Mole, or Ships," belonging to the city. Only at such docks, etc., in the Outer Ward is it permitted to make or keep a fire on board at night. Only small craft, such as ferry Boats Market Boats Pettitangers and Canoes, are permitted to come into "the Slips of the Bridge," that Leads under the Market house Commonly Called: the "fly Market, and empties itself into the East River." Sea vessels are permitted "Come into or lie at Within" any of the docks, etc., from Dec. 20 to March 20, paying dockage at the rate of six shillings a day while loading or unloading and one shilling sixpence a day.

27. Jacobus Roosevelt, John Chambers, Oliver Roosevelt, Jacobus Roosevelt, Jr., Cornelius Roosevelt, and William de Peyster, who are the owners of several lots in the Cripplet Bush, convey to the city land for a public highway, to be called Ferry Street, from Queen St. to the Cripplet Bush.—Sessions of Streets, Liber I: 1 (in Bureau of Engineering, Division of Design, Dept. of Public Works, Manhattan. See March 15, 1749). The street was begun ten years before—See March 15, 1749, and Landmark Map Ref. E. 1845; I: 699.

30. The Presbyterians make application for a charter.—Doc. Hist. N. V. (40 ed.), III: 304. Regarding the unsuccessful outcome of this and a later petition, see March 18, 1766.

3. The privater "King George" (Capt. Learcraft), of this port, sends in here a small French slop loaded with sugar and coffee.—Parker's Post-Boy, April 16, 1759.

9. Gen. Amherst, Gov. De Lancey, Christopher Kilby, and several officers of the army return to New York from Philadelphia. "The Guns upon Fort-George were discharged upon the Occasion."—Parker's Post-Boy, April 16, 1759.

The day Hu Majesty's Ship Lizard, of 20 Guns, Captain Doake, arrived here from Plymouth: She sall'd the 18th of February from England, in Company with Admiral Saunders, with a fleet of 8 Ships of the Line, and 20 Transports, bound for Louisbourg; and parted with them the 9th of March; so it is not doubted but they [the transports] are arrived at Louisbourg. Major-General Wolfe, Commander in Chief upon the Expedition up the River St. Lawrence, is on board the Neptune of 90 Guns, the Admiral's Ship."—Ibid.

Part of Col. Fraser's Highland Regiment has recently arrived from Albany. "Tis said this Regiment is to proceed to Halifax, in order to go upon the Expedition up the River St. Lawrence, at the particular Request of Major. General Wolfe, who experienced their Bravery at the Siege of Louisbourg."—Ibid. See May 8.

Benjamin Franklin, about to take passage for England, and now in New York, writes at length to Dr. Lining, of Charleston, S. C., on the subject of experiments with electricity and fire.—See sales catalogue of Henkels, Phila., who sold the original holograph letter at auction, July 1, 1920. Franklin's letter does not reveal that, at this or any other time, he undertook such experiments in this city.

15. Brig.-Gen. Monkton, with several officers of the army, embark on board a sloop, and sail for Halifax.—Parker's Post-Boy, April 16, 1759.

News from Antigua is published in New York regarding the remarkable success of the privater "Sturdy-Beggar" (Capt. Troup), of this port, in an encounter with the French fleet. Three of her captures, a ship and two sloops, have arrived here.—Parker's Post-Boy, April 16, 1759.

... The New York Regiment is by voluntary Enlistment, completed to 2500 Men; and as a remarkable Spirit for the Service prevails, there is not the least Doubt, but in a few Days we shall be entirely completed to 2600 Men [see Mar. 14, 1758], the full Establishment of this Colony."—Parker's Post-Boy, April 3, 1759. Cf. N. Y. Col. Doc., VII: 154.

... the following Colonies have agreed to raise the following Number of Men for the Service Year 1759: Massachusetts-Bay 5000; Connecticutt 3600; New-York 2680; New-Jersey 1000; Pennsylvania 2700; Virginia 1000. In all 15,980."—Ibid.

On this day, 27 warrants are issued to pay the bounty and emolument money for volunteers, amounting to over £2,550. By these warrants, to supply officers' tables, are also issued—to colonels-in-chief, £5 each; to colonels, £75 each; to lieutenant-colonels, £50 each; and to majors, £40 each.—Col. Hist. MSS., Apr. 15, 1759. On May 7, 1760, such warrants for the benefit of 26,152 men amounted to £50,078.—Ibid., 709.

Maj.-Gen. Amherst embarks for Albany on board the Hon. Mr. Kilby's sloop. The cannon on Fort George are discharged as a compliment to him.—Parker's Post-Boy, April 30, 1759.

The lease by the Port of New York of Eraser's Island describes it as "in the North Ward, marked in Francis Maseraechald's map [Pl. 34, Vol. I] between the New Gaol and the house of Capt. Thomas Brown near the stockades."—Emmet Coll., item No. 16872, N. Y. Pub. Library. The "stockades" were the palisades of 1746, stretching across the island in an irregular line above the city. They are shown on the same map; see also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 945. A man, jailed on suspicion of counterfeiting bills of credit, is pardoned on condition that he enlist.—Col. Coun. Min., 445.

1. The "XLII, or Royal Highland Regiment," which was "quartered in this City all the Winter Season," embarks on "board Sloops for Albany."—N. Y. Merc., May 7, 1759. Military items of this character, detailing the movements of commanders and troops, as well as maritime news (principally relating to privates) fill the local news columns during these critical times. The Mercury is often competing to print such events.

During the week prior to this date, "upwards of 40 Sail of Transports arrived from England, being those that came out with Commodore Holmes. The Commodore, in the Somerset, with the Terrible, proceeded for Halifax, as soon as the above Vessels got safe into Sandy-Hook."—Parker's Post-Boy, April 16, 1759.

"Colonel Frazer's Highlanders are now all embarked, and most of the Vessels that have them on board, as well as others with Artillery, &c. are fell down to the Watering-Place, and some to the Hook ..."—N. Y. Merc., May 7, 1759.

Lord John Murray's Royal Highland Regiment, which embarked on May 6 (p. 2), departs for Albany.—Parker's Post-Boy, May 14, 1759.

H. M. S. "Nightingale" (Capt. Campbell) and "Trent" (Capt. Lindsey) "sail from the Hook for Louisbourg, in order to join Admiral Saunders's Squadron, with the first Division of Transports under their Convoy, having Col. Fraser's Highland Regiment on board" (see April 15)—Parker's Post-Boy, May 14, 1759.

H. M. S. "Lizard" (Capt. Doake), which arrived from England on April 15 (p. 4), sails for Louisbourg, "with the second Division of Transports, having the 47th Regiment (that embark'd from Amboy) on board."—Parker's Post-Boy, May 14, 1759.

Gen. Amherst issues a proclamation offering exemption from impressment to persons who will convey to Lake George provisions for the troops destined for that point and beyond.—Parker's Post-Boy, May 21, 1759.

A race was advertised to be run on this day at "Greenwich Farm," the horses to be entered with James Ackland.—N. Y. Ga. (Weyman), Apr. 16, 1759. Races had been held since 1755 at Greenwich, on the estate of Sir Peter Warren.—See May 14, 1753, and Bayley's Old Taverns of N. Y., 182.

A large French prize sloop, which was here, taken by the privateer brigantines "True Britton," "Masterson," and "Duke of Marlborough."—Parker's Post-Boy, May 14, 1759.

On this day and the next, the provincial troops furnished by this city as its quota of the 2,680 men (see April 25), embarked for Albany. The present Y troops embarked at the same time.—Parker's Post-Boy, May 14, 1759.

His Majesty's frigate "Diana" (Capt. Scobmger), with several transports under her convoy, sails from Sandy Hook for Louisbourg. Major Morris is on board the "Diana" as a passenger.—Parker's Post-Boy, May 21, 1759.

In May, petitions were made, beginning this day, for commissions for the commanders of the following privates: the ship
In July, petitions were made, beginning on this day, for commissions for the commanders of the following privateers: the brigantines "Hope" and "General Abercrombie," the snows "Union" and "Dreadnought," and the ships "York," "Bradstreet," and "Junco." —Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 703.

Calwallack Cohen writes from "Coldingham" to his son, continuing his critical review (see 1779) of William Smith's History of the Province of New York (pub. in 1757, q.v.). He thus defends constituted authority: "We may clearly see the [sic] pernicious effects of liberty turned to licentiousness in New York, at the time of the Revolution [of 1776]. All the Governors of New York, even supposed to act as bad Smiths, if it presented them, did not produce half the mischief, in all the time of their Government, which was produced in one year by the suppression of legal Government. Blood shed, Rapine, confiscations, Arbitrary & tyrannical acts & atrocities, which could not be stifled to many years, were the consequence. This is too generally the case in all popular commotions, under the plausible outcry for Liberty. How cautious then ought every one to be in contributing anything towards the weakening of the legal powers of Government, or to do any thing which may give power to a disorderly Mob. A fire never more to be removed from the city.—Cal. Gown. Min., 445.

The small-pox epidemic raged in the city as late as Oct. 17, 1759 (p. v.), and again the next spring.—See March 11, 1760.

Olive de Lancey, as trustee of the children and heirs of Sir Peter Warren, deceased, let to "Christopher Kilby Esq" One of the "wards in the 3rd of His Majesty's Forces in North America," for the "use of Himself and the other Contractors for Victualling His Majesty's Forces in North America," lots in the West Ward shown on Maerschalck's maps as 8, 9, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, and 23. The lease runs from Nov. 1, 1758, for 21 years, and Kilby is to pay 15 "Spanish Pieces of Eight" for each lot, amounting in all to 310 "Spanish Pieces of Eight."—From original MS. in De Lancey Papers, 1647-1804, in N. Y. Hist. Soc.

Gen. Amherst writes from Fort Edward to Lieut.-Gov. de Lancey regarding the pecuniary distress of the army, and asking for a loan of £593,000.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 703. On June 14, the council decided to ask the assembly to act upon the proposal.—Cal. Coun. Min. See July 3.

In June, petitions were made, beginning on this day, for commissions for the commanders of the following privateers: the brigantines "Betsy" and "Hope," the sloops "Ann" and "Anne," and the snow "Jane."—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 703.

Gen. Wolfe lands an army of about 8,000 a few miles below Quebec. A French force of more than 16,000 is in the city.—Parkman, Montcalm and Wolfe, I: 195-210, 435-38, and authorities cited.

Gen. Wolfe takes possession of Point Lévis, where he proceeds to erect batteries.—Parkman, Montcalm and Wolfe, II: 212-15 and authorities cited.

July 4

The legislature passes an act (qf. March 7) for raising another huge sum (£250,000 in this instance) "to enable His Majesties General [Amherst] to Pay the Debts Contracted and to Carry on His Majesties Service in North America," and for retiring within a year the bills of credit to be emitted for this purpose.—Cal. Laws N. Y., IV: 350.

"As the keeping of prisoners in the city hall has been very inconvenient, and as the corporation has completed a new "Goal" on the Commons (see March 1, 1777), with "proper and Commodious apartments," an act is passed by the legislature for removing the prisoners from the city Hall to the new jail. The sheriff is required to remove them as soon as he is sworn in with an order for the purpose, "for the better and more convenient use of the keys of the city Hall to that body or its representative; and thereafter he shall not occupy the city Hall. The rooms in the new jail, designated as the "Goal or Goals of and for the City and County of New York," are "the two Cellar Rooms under the West side and towards the South, and after His Excellency, Col. Maerschalck, Aldermen and Commonality of the said City, the three Rooms or apartments in the West side . . . in the Middle Story and the six Rooms in the Third Story."—Cal. Laws N. Y., IV: 355.

The common council afterwards designated Oct. 1 (p. v.) as the last day for completing the transfer. Regarding the preliminary steps leading up to this removal to be removed from the city Hall and back into the Mayor's old apartments, see March 1, 1759; and Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 972.
of no officer, & where the temptations to concealment were so strong.

I intend to remark no farther on Mr. Smith's Character of any Governor, because what I have wrote I think sufficient to show how far his Characters are to be depended on. Notwithstanding of what I have observed, it does not follow that he has wilfully & maliciously calumniated them. That kind of early prejudice, a weak Judgement & a stubborn temper of mind are sufficient to account for these & many more absurdities in such kind of writers. How differently, at all times, do different Sects & parties think & speak of the same actions. The truth often is hid between them, & neither of them discovers it appeared on Mr. Smith's History, till I come to the time in which I had opportunity to be well informed of the public transactions; only before I leave the subject I have been upon, I cannot forbear taking notice of that assuming air which these Independents take upon them, in judging & condemning others, and in setting up for Patrons. This they know gives them authority among the gaping mob. In place of argument, I think, it may be better to set the colony of New York, in its worst state of Government, while it was under the despotick rule of the Duke of York, in contrast with the Colony of the Massachusetts Bay, while it was entirely under the Government of genuine independent republicans, that we may see how much reason these modern independants have to boast.

"In New York a general liberty of conscience was allowed; not the least appearance of persecution on religious matters. In the Massachusetts Bay none but Independents were allowed their common privileges: all others were persecuted, either driven out of the country or severely whipped, & some put to death.

"In New York Mr Smith allows that Justice was speedily administer'd, the people remained easy & quiet in their possessions, & very few laws suit any where, except those which were borrowed from New England. In the Massachusetts Bay, on the contrary, it is known, that the people were exceedingly litigious, on every little difference at law. Offences were multiplied by Positive Laws, restraining the innocent freedom & pleasures of diversions usual among men. A man was whippt at Boston who accidentally meeting his wife in the street, after long absence, kissed her. By this unnecessary restraint of our natural freedom, Hypocrify was unavoidably introduced among all ranks. By these unnatural restraints, a kind of Intusiasm prevailed in Boston, which, if it had not been restrained by the Kings Authority, would, in a few years, have got to have unpeopled the Country, by the numerous prosecutions & Executions on pretense of Witch Craft.

"Lastly New York generally was at peace & in amity with the Indians and its neighbours; But New England was almost perpetually at War with the Indians, & at variance with its neighbours.

In closing, Mr. Colden gives discerning definitions of tyranny and of bigotry. The letter was published in the N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections (1866), 203-11.

William Smith, whose well known work, The History of the Province of New York, was published in 1757 (p.7), refers to a letter he has received from Mrs. Farmer, a granddaughter of Jacob Leisler. He has charged "to fall under the Displeasure" of Mrs. Farmer because of what he has written about her grandmother. He says he cannot hope to assuage her grief, but assures her that his account was "collected from the most authentic materials & the original Letters and Papers of Mr. Leisler & Mr. Mils- bourne most of which are still in my Custody. The Facts asserted are indisputable and if my Observations upon them are not well founded I am sure they were not owing to any Brevi in Favour of Mr. Leisler's opponents for I had always a good Opinion of his Heart and Designs in setting up for the Prince of Orange and if there was not the greatest Prudence used by that Party it must be ascribed in a great Degree to the Confusion & Heat of the Times."—From a copy of the letter among the original Smith Papers, (MSS.) in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections, that work's History of the late Province of New York from its Discovery to the Appointment of Governor Colenso in 1766 (pub. in 1820), I, 184-96, Smith printed the act reversing the attainder (see May 3, 1695), a copy of which Mrs. Farmer had enclosed in her letter.—N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections (1866), 240.

"Since that the Troops that arrived here from Guadalupe Yesterday Week, have embarkd on board of Sloops, in order to proceed to Albany, and so on.—Most of the Sloops have proceed forward."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Julv 23, 1759.

Fort Niagara capitulates to the British under Sir William Johnson after a bloody battle. French communication between Canada and Louisiana is forever broken off.—Parkman, Montcalm and Wolfe, II: 244-49, and authorities there cited.

The French remove from Fort Ticonderoga to Crown Point at the approach of Gen. Amherst. Later, they abandoned the fortress at Crown Point, and surrendered the valley of Lake Champlain without a battle.—Parkman, Montcalm and Wolfe, II: 255-249, 45-58, and authorities there cited.

"Since our last Seven Sloops arrived here from Albany, with the Prisoners taken at Niagara by General Johnson, on board, amounting in the whole to 617... And we hear, that two Sloops with 200 of the private Men, are to sail this Day for New-York, in Connecticut, in order to be distributed in that Government: Some of the Officers are sent to Long Island, and the rest remain, as yet, in this City, with the remaining Part of the Privates, who are quartered in our Barracks, and proper Guards placed over them."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 26, 1759.

Newly arrived French prisoners from Niagara are sent to Suffolk County. The week before, prisoners taken at Niagara were distributed to New Jersey, Connecticut, and counties of New York.—Col. Coun., Min., 446.

Gen. Amherst having sent for more cannon, the council orders Christopher Baldwin to deliver them to Capt. Glegg of the artillery.—Col. Coun., Min., 446.

The British army under Wolfe, having scaled the heights at Quebec, attacks the French under Montcalm on the Plains of Abraham and defeats them decisively. Wolfe is killed and Montcalm mortally wounded. The city surrendered to the English on Sept. 18.—Parkman, Montcalm and Wolfe, II: 259-256, 458-459, and authorities there cited. Great Britain won a vast empire by this single battle, which Buncroft calls "one of the most momentous victories in the annals of mankind." See Oct. 12.

In September, petitions were made, on this day and the next, for commissions for the commanders of the private sloops "Relief" and "Hope," respectively.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 704-5.

Israel Detson is paid £262 for "Building a New Dock at the Out side of the Great Dock."—M. C. C., VI: 181.

At the suggestion of Gen. Amherst, the council orders that a proclamation be issued encouraging people to return to their settlements, etc.—Col. Coun., Min., 446.

A proclamation note to this effect by Gen. Detson, a copy of which by William Heysham master of the boat "Speedwell" of New York, for high treason, in giving comfort to the enemy.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 705.

At the request of Gen. Amherst, the governor and council summon the assembly to make provisions for continuing the New York provincials in the service.—Col. Coun., Min., 446. This was enacted on Oct. 18.—Ibid., 447.

Thomas Davis offers a reward for the return of a run-away slave to his house, "The Sign of the Harlequin at the White-Hall Slip."—N. Y. Merc., Oct. 1, 1759. No other reference to this house has been found; it probably was a tavern. At this time, Capt. Thomas Doran, commander of a fast-sailing privateer, the "Flying Harlequin," was also proprietor of a tavern. In 1768, his house, which stood on Burnet's Quay, fronting the East River, was offered for sale.—Ibid., July 11, 1768. In 1770, the "house of Thomas Doran" was on the "New Dock," near the Fly Market. Doran was still keeping tavern on Jan. 8, 1772, when the Marine Society held its annual meeting at his house.—Ibid., Jan. 8, 1776.

St. Andrew's Society meets at the house of George Burns, the sign of the Thistle and Crown, near Whitehall Slip.—N. Y. Pass-Buy, Nov. 19, 1759. The anniversary meeting of this society was again held here in the next year, but in the interim the sign had been changed to "King George's Head."—N. Y. Merc., Nov. 17, 1760.

Benjamin Blagge is appointed manager of the excise on tea in New York City, in place of Abraham Lymane, deceased.—Cal. Coun. Min., 447.

Liet-Gov. De Lanecy, writing to the lords of trade on Feb. 16, 1760, said: "... the 22d of November last was observed here, as a Day of Publick Thanksgiving, on the Success of His Majesty's Arms, by Prayer in the Morning, Firing of the Guns at Fort George at Noon, a Grand Dinner I gave to the Council, Assembly and principal Inhabitants, at which were present the whole Clergy of the several denominations in the City, and the Evening was concluded with Illuminations and Fire Works prepared for the occasion."—N. Y. Cal. Doc., VII: 426.

In December, petitions were made, beginning on this day, for commissions for the commanders of the sloop "S Dynasty," the brigantines "Polly" and "Charming Beckey," the schooner "Fly," and the ship "Hibernia."—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 706.

In a message to the assembly, De Lanecy refers thus to the existing law governing private lotteries: "And here it may be proper to point out to you, a Defect in the Act against private Lotteries, for though the Law be sufficient to restrain them in this Government, yet it seems to fall short of the End proposed, as it leaves this, a Mart for the Lotteries set on Foot in other Provinces."—Assemb. Jour., III: 604; Ross, "Hist. of Lotteries in N. Y., in Map of Hist., V: 148.

The assembly presents an address to De Lanecy, in answer to his speech containing news of British victories at Ticonderoga and Crown Point. Special mention is made of Gen. Wolfe, "who with an air of alacrity, and the truest Disinterestedness, has sacrificed his Life to the public Weal."—Assemb. Jour., III: 667. At some time between this date and 1762 (curiously enough it has not proved possible to fix the exact date), a monument to Wolfe's memory was erected in New York City. It appears on the Montresor Map and the Rutter Map of 1759.—See Fols. 40 and 41, Vol. III, and description of A, Pl. 5-b, Vol. IV, for maps of this monument, see 1761; and Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 964. Title: "Obelisk Erected to the Memory of General Wolfe and Others."

An account of moneys expended by the province of New York, in carrying on the war in North America, from 1754 to 1759, inclusive, bears this date.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 706.

M. Pouchot, French commandant of Forts Niagara and Levis, and subsequently transported as an English captive to New York (see Oct. 6.), in memoirs published at Yverdon in 1781, described New York as it was in 1760. Translated, his observations are as follows:

"The city is thrifty and quite commercial, and every one has an easy air. There are about fifteen or eighteen thousand souls.

"The principal harbor which is on the side towards Long Island, is always full of merchant ships which come and go continually, and there are usually two hundred and fifty or three hundred in port. The most bulky guns cannot be carried there. It is a little deeper on the Hudson Riverside, yet it is much less frequented, because it is not there sheltered from the south winds. The bars that we meet near Sandy Hook, doubtless would prevent vessels of the greatest force from coming up the river.

"At New York they have coast pilots, for conducting vessels from Sandy Hook to the city, for which the charges are very high. Along the quays of this city, they have constructed piers to receive the vessels which come up directly to the shore, and unload by planks or flying bridges.

"This city is not fortified, and has only a citadel at the point of the two passages. This is square, and about sixty teishes on the outside, revetted in good masonry, without ditch or covered way. It is well fortified with cannon. At the front, which is on the point of land, they have built upon some notches in the rocks, a wall twelve feet thick, which forms the imprisonment and a kind of false-bray of the citadel. When they have ninety pieces of cannon in battery, of from twelve to twenty-four pound balls. The platforms are all of large flat stones. These pieces are mounted on marine carriages, and sweep not only the bay, but a small island used as a hospital for the Quarantine."

From "Memoir upon the Late War in North America between the French and English," by M. Pouchot, translated by Franklin B. Hough, II: 84-86.

"The following is found in a descriptive account of New York: "In the province of New-York [outside of Manhattan Island], to obtain a good title to the vacant lands, first there must be produced an Indian deed, which must be approved by the governor and council, by warrant; it is surveyed by the provincial surveyor, and patented by the governor and council; the fees are very high."

"The valuations of the several counties may be taken from the quotas allowed each of them, in proportion to their respective taxes, when paper money was emitted upon loan; for instance 1778, they emitted 400,000 l. currency upon loan, whereof New-York city and county 10,000 l. . . . "—From A Summary, Historical and Political (1780), by William Douglass, M.D., II: 254.

"Here is a court of chancery, a court not known in New-England, for which a chancellor is occasionally appointed."

—From "Ibid., II: 317.

Copper ore, from Schuyler's mine in New Jersey, is shipped from New-York.—Ibid., II: 258.

"The earliest streets to be identified by number rather than by name were designated at about this time as First, Second, and Third Streets, shown on "The Ratter Map" (Pl. 44, Vol. 1). Valentine (see Man. Com. Coun., 1855, p. 499) says they were "projected about 1760." They do not appear on the Maatschappel Plan of 1755 (Pl. 14, Vol. 1). They are shown but not named on "The Montresor Plan" of 1766 (Pl. 46, Vol. 1). The numbers were displaced by the present names, Chatham, Forsyth, and Eldridge (heroes of the war of 1812), on March 24, 1847 (5 eb). See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 309, 309, 1010.

Capt. Archibald Kennedy erected his spacious and famous mansion on the site of No. 1 Broadway at about this time.—Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 350.

The "Minutes of the estate of Philip & Stephen Van Cortlandt Enq' de 9 1760" mention houses and lots in Stone St., "fronting the Exchange," also on Broadway; in De Peyster St., at the dock "behind the Treasurer," etc., and the names of the lessees therein. These are in the MSS., N. Y. Hist. Soc.

The first lease from Trinity Church of property along Broadway which is found recorded, bears date in 1760, and was for four lots on the southwest corner of Murray street; the lessees were Bell & Brookman, carpenters; the term, twenty-one years, and the rent right pursuant, etc. (See Man. Com. Coun. (1856), Vol. 1, 54.)

The domestic establishment of Abraham de Peyster, who lived in a three-story brick house, has been described by Valentine to illustrate the style of living among the wealthiest merchants at this period. Two leather-bottomed sofas were in the entrance hall. Mahogany and black walnut furniture, brasses, chins, scooies, etc., are listed as distributed throughout the various rooms of the establishment. The best bed-room, which was on the second floor, was called the "wainscot-room." On one side of the "wainscot-room," so called from the old tapestry it contained, which had been preserved in the family. The house contained, besides the usual living rooms and bed-rooms, an office, an apple-room, a garret, and a wine-cellar. The stable, in the rear of the yard, contained a chaise, a two-horse sleigh, and a one-horse sleigh. The family plate presented to them, an array of solid silver dishes, salvers, tankards, bowls, and a variety of other articles, weighing 1,727 ounces and valued at about $12,000.—Man. Com. Coun. (1856), 532-35.

From this date until 1768 Matthew Pratt occasionally painted portraits in New York. Cullen was one of the prominent people who sat for him.—Dunlap, Hist. of Art of Design, I: 114. For a history of Pratt's life and work, see ibid., I: 110-16.

Secretary Powel writes to Lieut.-Gov. De Lancy: "His Maj's postmaster General, having represented to the Lords Committee for Trade and Plantations, that the packet Boats, established for carrying on a communication between the Kingdoms and His Maj's Colonies in North America, have frequently been detained considerably longer at New York, than the time allotted them to stay there, which is twenty days, ... I am directed by their Lordships to recommend it to you, to never detain the packet Boats longer than they are absolutely necessary for His Maj's service, and especially when there are two or more Packet Boats laying at New York."—N. Y. Col. Docs., VII: 419-20.

Secretary Pitt urges the governors in America to persuade the various assemblies to raise at least as large a force of men for the Canadian campaign as they did last year.—N. Y. Col. Docs., VII: 420-21. See Feb. 16.

The committee appointed on May 11, 1758 (M.C.C., VI: 131), "for Inspecting into the Encroachments made upon the Rights of the Association in the Outward," makes its report. They "have Caused Several Surveys to be made of a Number of Patents Contiguous to the Commons in the Outward." The surveys which they have hitherto caused to be made have been chiefly confined to "that Tract of Land Surrounded by the Bowery Lane and Bloomingdale Road the Road leading thence to the great Hills, The Road from the Great Kill to Greenwich Lane and the Greenswich Lane on its Extent from the Great Kill Road to the Bowery Lane," within which extent of ground several patents are included on which the present owners have made encroachments. These encroachments and the persons who have made them are "required to cease, and to remove the same," ibid., II: 10. They include "the Weylandt Patent," second, an encroachment made by Peter van Arden; third, an unpatented "Vacancy" (belonging to the corporation) in the possession of Anthony Covenhoven Thomas Clarke and the Representatives of Sir Peter Warren on the one Side and John Dewit and Jacobus Hone on the Other; and fourth, another "Vacancy," in the possession of Jacobus Hone. On the discovery of these "Vacancies," the committee reports, they "Convened" the various persons concerned, and demanded "what Terms they had to Offer us in Behalf of this Board Concerning the same." Their replies are embodied in the report.

The committee further reports that it will determine by exact survey "the State [old] Controversy Between mt abraham Lefferts and John Devoor Concerning the Lands Belonging to this Corporation lying Between their respective Tracts and the Road;" also that they are the opinion that this inclosure should be brought against Dennis Hicks and those claiming under him, who have held a house and land in defiance of the board for several years; and that David Provoost should be "Ejected by Course of Law" for holding over on a corporation lease and committing trespass on the premises by cutting trees in the "Continual use of the grounds," etc., etc., for "destroying the wood." The committee asks for instructions on certain points, and the common council orders that certain leases be made, and that Alderman Scott be given warrant of attorney to prosecute certain actions of trespass and ejectment.—M. C. C., VI: 108-202. For location see Landmark Map Ref. Key, title, "Streets," III: 952 et seq.
“A Subscription some Days ago was set on foot, and carried on with such Spirit throughout the several Wards in this City, for the Benefit of the Poor thereof, that a very considerable Collection was soon made, and, by our worthy Magistrates, immediately laid out for the Relief of the Poor, in Wood, &c. all the Necessities of Life, at this Time, being at a much higher Price than was ever known in this City.” — N. T. Post-Boy, Jan. 4, 1760.

It was represented to Trinity vestry “that the Pantiles on the Roof of St. Georges Chappell are too weighty for the Roofe and Walls of the said Chappell;” it is ordered “that the said Tiles be removed and sold and the Roofe shingled.”

Feb. 8.

Whipping “at the Cart’s Tail” (see Aug. 25, 1760) is still in vogue. Four prisoners, convicted of petty larceny by the court of general sessions and possessed of “no Goods & Chattels,” are sentenced to “be tried [tomorrow] to a Cart’s Tail and carted round part of the City and to receive each Thirty Nine Lashes upon their & each of their Bare Backs in manner following to wit five [at] Furgans Corner, five at the meat market five at the old slip market five at the Coenties Corner, five at the John Livingstone’s Corner, five at Dealls Corner and four at City Hall.” — Min. Frequent robberies at night show the inefficiency of the watch.—Parker, Hist. of Post-Boy, Feb. 11, 1760. See Feb. 5, 1762.

The mayor having produced the draft of “a Law to prevent Razing in the City of New York,” it is approved by the common council and ordered published. It recites “that the Vending and disposing of goods, and other things by way of Rafling, or otherwise, that determines and alters the property of goods, or other things, by lot or Casting the Dye,” has proved pernicious, “Especially in Corrupting the morals of Children, Apprentices, Servants and Slaves, and the Occasion of their Stealing, Piflering and Robbing their parents, masters or mistresses, and by often Doubly advancing the value on such goods, or other things Beyond or above the real or Inniswicke Value.” To prevent this, it is ordained that any person or persons so vending or disposing of goods, etc., “or by any other method ... depending on, or to be determined by lot or Chance,” shall pay a forfeit of £3, “to be Recovered by any person or persons that shall and Will Sue and Prosecute for the same,” one-half of this sum, when collected as prescribed in the law, “to be paid to the Church Wardens of this City, for the Use of the Poor thereof, and the other half or Moiety to the person or persons that shall sue.” — M. C. C., VII: 204.

Gen. Amherst requires the same number of men for the ensuing campaign as in 1759 (see March 7, 1759).—Col. Coun. Min., 447. See Feb. 13, 1762.

“Ordered that a Petition be preferred to the Mayor Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of New York for a Grant of the Water Lots from the Rear of their Ground fronting on Hudson River (between the south bounds of their said Ground adjoining upon Division Street [the present Fulton St., west of Broadway] and the Stockadoes) to Low Water Mark and from thence two Hundred feet into the said River beyond Low water Mark Excepting thereout nevertheless the Ground and Streets included in a Grant made by this Corporation to the Governors of the College ...” — Trin. Min. (MS.).

John Burling advertises for sale the wind-mill “in the Out-ward of this City, near the Bowery-Lane.” It has “two Pair of Stones, and is in good Repair.” — N. T. Merc., Feb. 25, 1760. See also the references to various wind-mills in Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 96.

The mayor informs the common council “that Mt Watts and Others had sent for a Large Clock which they intended as a publick one, and desired of him to propose to the Common Council that if they would Take Charge of it, and Erect it in the Exchange at their own Expense it was at their Service.” The board agrees to accept it. — G. C. VII: 206. John to the New York Public Library is the editor of the original subscribers to the “Exchange.” — See June 10, 1762.

“‘The Rector and Inhabitants of the City of New York in Communion of the Church of England as by Law Established’ (Trinity Corporation) petition the common council for a grant of ‘All the Land and Soil fronting their Land on Hudson River from the North side of Division Street same as Partition or W. Fulton Stj to the Ground Granted to the Governors of the College and from the North side thereof to the Stockadoes to Low water mark and the Soil Under the water from thence Two hundred feet into the said River upon such Reasonable Conditions as to this Corporation shall seem Meet.’ A committee is appointed to ‘Treat with the said Rector, &c.’ and Gen. (N. W.) Washington.” — M. C. C., VII: 206. No report of this committee is entered in the Minutes. Nine years later, April 7, 1769 (p. v.), the same petition was presented to the common council and another committee was appointed with the same instructions (ibid., VII: 159), and with the same result. On June 16, 1771 (p. v.), when the same petition was again presented, the board took it into consideration without referring it to a committee. See June 22, 1772.

The location of the Meal or Wall St. Market is shown by an advertisement of this date, which reads: “To be sold at public vendue ... a large and convenient dwelling-house, with the lot of ground thereto belonging, on the corner of Wall Street and Queen [Pearl] Street, opposite to the Meal Market, near the Merchants’ Coffee-House, now in the occupation of Mr. Daniel Bright.” — N. T. Post-Boy, March 3, 1762. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 959. DeVoe, Market Book, 247. See, further, Aug. 4, 1772.

Again, on account five at the John Livingstone’s Corner, five at Dealls Corner and four at City Hall.” — Min. Gen. Sessions of the Peace (MS.), 1732-1762; N. T. Merc., Feb. 11, 1760.

From this time until 1803, the promoters of the “Free Bridge” (see Jan. 2, 1759) made several vain attempts to recover from the government the amount of their investment. On March 21, 1762, the petition to the house, Jacob Dyckman, Jr., John Vermilye, and Benjamin Palmer, stated that they had erected the bridge at a cost of £350, and received but £350 in private subscriptions. They, therefore, now ask permission to raise the balance “by way of Lottery, or otherwise.” — Assem. Jour., II: 619. No action was taken; and on Dec. 7, 1763, Palmer and his associates again submitted their petition to the house, this time suggesting that a toll be allowed on all traffic across the bridge.—Ibid., II: 737. Once more the matter was pigeonholed until October 4, 1764, when the petitioners again sought reimbursement.—Ibid., II: 795. On October 12, the house voted to reject the petition. Colonel Philips whose monopoly at Kingsbridge had been broken by the erection of the “Free Bridge,” voted against giving aid to Palmer.—Ibid., II: 795. For further attempts on the part of the builders of the bridge to regain their money, see Aug. 6, 1766, March 5, 1767 and April 18, 1769.

On March 19, 1803, 100 members of the assembly made the following report regarding the petition of Benjamin Palmer: “It appears from statements made by the petitioner, that a number of individuals with the petitioner, built a bridge across the Harlem river, in the year 1759 [1758], by subscription; and that the petitioner paid $200, more than his proportion, which he pays upon the report to this day, amounting to $1,300, which the petitioner prays may be paid him, either by a state tax or lottery. Your committee conceive that it would be improper to grant the prayer of the petitioner.” The assembly also refused to grant the request.—Senat. and Assem. Jour. (1803): 216-17.

2,680 soldiers, including officers. Forces from neighboring colonies, combined with this New York contingent, will make an army of 10,000 men, "as a Major" of Regular Troops Montreal and other Posts belonging to the French in Canada." Provision is also made for omitting bills of credit for £3,000 and for cancelling the bills in short periods. This amount is to be "Levied and Paid by the Freeholders Inhabitants and Residents of the County of York, and the Colonists within this Colony during Eight Years" according to definite proportions. The yearly quota for New York City is £2,500—Col. Laws N.Y., IV, 395:481.

A private sale is advertised of a "very commodious new House and Lot of Ground, situate in the Broad-Way, next Door to the Rev. Dr. Johnson's, being in Front 29 Feet, and Breath 32 Feet, two Stories high with 5 Fire-places in it, and a Cellar under the whole House. . . . For further Particulars, enquire of Mr. John Dowers, who will give a good Title for the same."—N.Y. Post-Boy, March 31, 1760. See Feb. 6, 1758.

The provincial council received a letter from Gov. Pownall of Massachusetts, addressed to Lieut-Gov. De Lancey, reporting that a fire has destroyed part of Boston (on March 20—see Boston Post-Boy, March 21). It is ordered that the assembly be asked for a grant to the sufferers, and that collections be made for their relief.—Col. Coun. Min., 439:49. See June 10.

11 Francis Maerschakal delivers to the common council "the Draft or plan of a Road which he hath lately Laid out by the direction of this Corporation in the west ward of this City." It is thus described: "Beginning from the Spring Garden House [Broadway and Ann St.] where the street now is of the Breadth of Eighty Two feet six Inches, and Extending from thence North Thirty seven Degrees, East Thirty Minutes, Untilit Comes to the Ground of the Late Widow Rutgers [Broadway, Church and Thomas Sts.] Leave- ing the street thereof Fifty foot in Breadth." The report is approved and ordered recorded.—M. C. C., VI: 214. The street was called Great George Street in 1775—See "Broadway" in Landmark Map Ref. Key, III, 949-955, and description of Pl. 5-6, II 278-79.

12 The committee of the common council which had charge of the regulations and paving of Dey St. (see Oct. 31, 1759) in the West Ward, is required "to cause the Broad way Street from said Dey street as far as Division [now Fulton] Street on both sides to be forth with Regulated and paved, and report the same to this Board with all Conveniences attached."—M. C. C., VI: 214. They made no report however, until July 24, 1761 (p. v.), when they recommended a specified grado for the convenience of buildings already erected on Division (Fulton) St. This was ordered to be executed.—Ibid., 214: 274.

13 "We have now but two Privateers, on a Cruise out of this Port, viz. The Ship Duke of Cumberland, and Sloop Harlequin [see Aug. 16], which last has been on Foot from the Beginning of the War, and most of her Cruises remarkably successful."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), June 16, 1760.

14 The first commencement of King’s College in its own building is here.—Hist. of Columbia Univ., 26. A published account states: "On Tuesday last [June 24], a publick Commencement was held in this City. In the Morning the College Hall was opened with a short and elegant Latin Speech, by the Rev. President; from whence the Students and Candidates, dressed in their Gowns, and uncovered, proceeded to St. George’s Chapel, followed by the Governors of the College, and other Gentlemen . . . The Audience on this Occasion was large and polite, and expressed a great Satisfaction at the Order, Dececy and Judiciousness, with which the whole was conducted."—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 30, 1765. See also July 15.

15 The Rev. Martin Bury, an English clergyman, traveling through the middle colonies, makes the following observations on New York. From Staten Island, "I embarked for New-York; and after a pleasant passage over the bay, which is three leagues wide; and various delightful prospects of rivers, islands, fields, hills, woods, the Narrows, New York city, vessels sailing to and fro, and innumerable porcupines playing upon the surface of the water; in an evening so serene that the hemisphere was not ruffled by a single cloud, it arrived there about the setting of the sun.

"This city contains between two and three thousand houses, and 16 or 17,000 inhabitants, is tolerably well built, and has several good houses. The streets are paved, and very clean, but in general they are narrow; there are two or three, indeed, which are spacious and airy, the Broadway, and the Bowery. In this street have most of them a row of trees before them; which form an agreeable shade, and produce a pretty effect. The whole length of the town is something more than a mile; the breadth of it about half an one. The situation is, I believe, esteemed healthy; but it is subject to one great inconvenience, which is the want of fresh water; so that the inhabitants are obliged to have it brought from springs at some distance out of town. There are several public buildings, though but few that deserve attention. The college (see May 1760, when finished, will be exceedingly handsome: it is to be built on three sides of a quadrangle, fronting Hudson's or North river, and will be the most beautifully situated of any college, I believe, in the world. At present only one wing is finished, which is of stone, and consists of twenty-four sets of apartments; each having a large sitting-room, with a study, and bed-chamber. They are obliged to make use of some of these apartments for a master's lodgings, or library, chapel, hall, &c. as soon as the building shall be completed, there will be proper apartments for each of these offices. The name of it is King's College.

"There are two churches in New York, the old, or Trinity Church, and the new one, or St. George's Chapel; both of them large buildings, the former in the Gothic taste, with a spire, the other upon the model of some of the new churches in London. Besides these, there are several other places of religious worship; namely, two Low Dutch Calvinist churches, one High Dutch ditto, one French ditto, one German Lutheran church, one presbyterian meeting-house or preacher's ditto, one unapathists ditto, one Moravian ditto, and a Jews synagogue. There is also a very handsome charity-school for sixty poor boys and girls, a good workhouse, barracks for a regiment of soldiers, and one of the finest prisons I have ever seen. The court or statelyhouse makes no great figure, but it is to be repaired and beautified. There is a quadrangular fort, capable of mounting sixty cannon, though at present there are, I believe, only thirty-two. Within this is the governor's palace, and underneath it a battery capable of mounting ninety-four guns, and barracks for a company or two of soldiers. Upon one of the islands in the bay is a hospital for sick and wounded seamen; and, upon another, a pest-house. These are the most noted public buildings in and about the city."—Burnaby, Travels through the Middle Settlements in North-America (London, 1775), 105-8.

"The people carry on an extensive trade, and there are said to becleansing-houses for washing linen from New York; near [blank] the Red Hook slip. They export chiefly grass flour, pork, lard, cotton, and staves. Their manufactures, indeed, are not extensive, nor by any means to be compared with those of Pennsylvania; they make a small quantity of cloth, some linen, hats, shoes, and other articles for wearing apparel. They make glass also, and wampum; refine sugars, which they import from the West Indies; and distil considerable quantities of rum. They also, as well as the Pennsylvanians, till both were restrained by act of parliament, had erected several sliding mills, to make nails &c. But this is now prohibited, and they are exceedingly dissatisfied at it. They have several other branch trades of manufactures, but, in general, so considerable, that I shall not take notice of them; one thing it may be necessary to mention, I mean the article of shipbuilding; about which, in different parts of this province, they employ many hands."—Ibid., 110-11.

"The manufactures have made no greater progress here than in the other colonies; but as a subscription library has been lately opened, and every one seems zealous to promote learning, it may be hoped that they will hereafter advance faster than they have done hitherto. The college is established upon the same plan as that of the Jerseys, except that this at New York professes the principles of the church of England. At present it is but small, so far as is yet a propriety pleasing, or so good as might be wished. Its fund does not exceed 10,000 L. currency, and there is a great scarcity of professors. A commencement was held, nevertheless, this summer, and seven gentlemen took degrees. There are in it at this time about twenty-five students. The president, Dr. Johnson, is a very worthy and learned man, but rather too far advanced in life to have the direction of so young an institution. The late Dr. Bratow left to this college a fine library, of which they are in daily expectation."—Ibid., 112-13.

"The inhabitants of New York, in their character, very much resemble the Pennsylvanians; more than half of them are Dutch, and almost all traders, therefore, either habitually frugal, industrious, and parsimonious. . . . The women are handsome and agreeable; though rather more reserved than the Philadelphian ladies. Their amusements are much the same as in Pennsylvania; viz. balls, and sleighing expeditions in the winter; and, in the summer, going in parties upon the water, and fishing; or making excursions into the country. There are several houses pleasantly situated upon East river, near New York, where it is common to have turtle-feasts: these happen once or twice in a week. Thirty or forty gentlemen and ladies meet and dine together, drink tea in the afternoon, fish and amuse themselves till evening, and then return home in Italian chaises, (the fashionable carriage in this and most parts of America, Virginia excepted, where they make use only of coaches, and these commonly drawn by six horses,) a gentleman and lady in each chaise. In the way there is a bridge, about three miles distant from New York, which you always pass over the kissing-bride, called the Bridge of Sighs, and entitled the salute the lady who has put herself under her protection."—Ibid., 113-14. See also Winsor, Nat. & Crit. Hist. of Am., VI: 245, 284; VIII: 489.

John Riker and others (over sixty persons named, inhabitants on both sides of a river, the other upon the model of some of the new churches in London. Lient.-Gov. James de Lancey dies suddenly. His funeral on the following day was thus described in the Mercury: "At three Quar- ters past Six, P. M. his Majesty's Ship the Winchester, of 50 Guns, ... now in the North-River, fired a Gun for the Funeral to move, which was done from his Honour's Seat in the Bowery Lane. At the same Instant Guns began firing from Copy Battery, and to the Number of fifteen, which was followed by the Winchester, and she by the General Wall Packet, each firing the Same Number with the Battery." The order of procession to Trinity Church is fully described.—N. Y. Merc., Aug. 4, 1760. For sketch of his life, see N. Y. Post-Boy, July 31, 1766; and Gaz. (Gowan), 1846, 375; "Memory" by Edward E. de Lancey, in Doc. Hist. N. Y. (40 ed.), IV: 647-49; Smith's Continuation of the Hist. of N. Y., in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections (1830), V: 281-83. Calwadaller Colten, as oldest councillor, is summoned by ex-press messenger to administer the government.—Cal. Coun. Min., 418.

Calwadaller Colten, who arrived in town yesterday from his home in Coldenham, Ulster Co., is sworn in as president of the council, to fill the place-in-chief; the other councillors, as usual, take the chair. He issues a proclamation giving notice of the death of Gov. De Lancey, and continuing all public officers in their places.—Cal. Coun. Min., 445; N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), Aug. 4, 1760; N. Y. Merc., Aug. 11, 1760. Colten was several times called upon after this to serve as lieutenant-governor of the province; namely, from Aug. 8, 1761 to Oct. 26, 1761; Nov. 1, 1761 to June 14, 1762; June 28, 1765 to Nov. 15, 1765; Sept. 13, 1769 to Oct. 19, 1770; and April 7, 1774 to June 28, 1775. He died at Flushing, L. I., Sept. 21, 1776.—See Chronology, under these dates.

"Payment of £10:00 is made by the common council for repairs made to "the meal Markett and the Dock and Drain there."—M. G. C., VI: 217. See, further, Feb. 23, 1762.

Colten invites Gen. Amherst to share the house within the fort with him. He proposes that the general have "all that part of the House on the left hand of the Stair, or North part of the House, which contains all the large rooms, with the kitchen, stair, and the two rooms over the Kitchen & likewise the two Rooms on the first floor where Mr. Appy kept his office. The other small rooms on the right hand above stairs will be sufficient for my family, with the room on the front floor of the right hand corner for a chair place."—N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections (1864), LXX, 1762.

The privy sloop "Harlequin" (see June 16) arrives at New York. She "has made a saving Cruise, having taken 7 Prices. She was chased by a Ship about the Lat. 57 or 58, but did not think proper to speak with her."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), Sept. 1, 1760. Inhabitants or their own or the army's interests from the Market to the Broadway to the North River" petition the common council that this street be regulated, by lessen-of the English, the extension of British dominion over new and productive territory; and the General's "Humane and Generous Use of Victory," which "must Convince the attentive World that Britons never Conquer to enslave." The draft of "a freedom" is also read at this meeting, and it is ordered that it be "handsomely Engrossed on parchment and the Seal of this Corporation affixed thereto..." from God in Gold Box." With an inscription in Latin engraved thereon, the text of which is recorded in the Minutes. The address and freedom were presented to Gen. Amherst on Nov. 27.—Ibid., VI: 232-36, 237. The cost of the gold box was £27.—Ibid., VII: 254.

14 The sand branches of the city's revenue for the past year were: ferry rent, £660; dock rent, £500; licenses (for two years) £2430; interest of market stalls, £245; rent of water lots, £16141.1d.; land rent, £1218.1s.; Exchange rent, £50; total, £22831:24.—Iourn. of City Chamberlain, III: 198. The fiscal year begins Oct. 14.—See Dunegan Charter, April 27, 1686.

15 The companies of "Col. Montgomery's Highland Regiment" embark for Halifax.—N. Y. Gaz., Oct. 20, 1760. They arrived Aug. 31 (q.v.).

20 This day is appointed "for a general Thanksgiving to Almighty God, throughout this Province, for the Continuance of his Divine Protection to the City of New York, and the Preserving of the American Colonies, in the late Fighting with the French, Spaniards, and the Reduction of all Canada."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), Oct. 20, 1760. See Col. Coun. Min., 449 (Oct. 1).

In the morning between seven and eight o'clock, "Our late most Gracious Sovereign, King George the Second, was suddenly seized at his Palace at Kensington, by a violent Disorder, and fell down Speechless, and soon expired, notwithstanding all possible Methods used for his Recovery. His Majesty departed this Life in the 77th Year of his Age, and the 34th of his Reign: Beloved, Honoured, and Regarded by his Subjects for his Eminent and Royal Virtues."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), Jan. 5, 1761; N. Y. Col. Dict., VII: 449. Official notice of the king's death reached New York and was received by the common council on Jan. 1, 1761 (q.v.).—See also Jan. 16, 1761. The new sovereign, King George III, reigned until Jan. 29, 1820.

26 The old remarkable large Bass or Linder Tree facing Benjamin Stout's at the Entrance of the Bowery" is blown down.—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), Oct. 27, 1760. "There was a merchant named Benjamin Stout, who lived at 6 Golden Hill when peace was declared after the Revolutionary War. Uncle Ben they used to call him."—Old Merchants of New York, III: 31.

29 John Thumason writes to John Sargent of London: "Our Good, therefore wise General [Amherst] is coming down tho' he has done all that can be done, & what before him could do Success has crown'd all his undertakings, and he has restored Peace to this Land, without the Loss of many Men, he always secured the coast watch, and the whole coast of the Back Inhabitants as well as the Back Inhabitants of the Tiranies of the army, had a Strict eye to Justice, punishing all that were Faulty in the Army, as Civil Law done in Government without respect to persons, after all this, many say more was in his power & he ought to have done it, & others as Ignorant say all was done for him, & he has done Nothing, this shows the absolute Impossibility of Pleading every Body, or Acting in a Publick Character without Blame. I hope those at the head of affairs may see & Reward his merit, and never give up the Great acquisitions, but annex them to the Crown, & Future Ages Bless the Man that's rooted out so noxious an enemy... the General has established New York Paper Money thro' all his conquests even to Quebec, this will be a Great advantage to this Government & a mighty support to the Credit of its mony we dont know but war may last another twenty years & the same Paper Money will serve then as well as now."

30 Last week a remarkable Trial, which has been in the Law near 20 Years, came on in the Supreme Court here, between The Rector and Inhabitants of the City of New-York of the Church of England, as by Law Established, and the Family of the Bowers, who, in 1742, were deprived of their King's Farm; when the Jury after being out about 20 Minutes, gave their Verdict in favour of the Defendants."—N. Y. Merc., Oct. 27, 1760. See Aug. 16, 1757.

32 From "Our Court at Saville House," the king addresses the following letter to Cadwallader Colden, "or in his Absence to the Commander in Chief of our Said Province for the time being:"

"Gentlemen: We have received with great joy and satisfaction your letter of the 9th instant, [Sept. 1761] to us, and have ordered that the same be sent to the Congress at Philadelphia. We are persuaded that the measures which we have taken for our protection will be very acceptable to you, and that the measures of our honorable Congress will be equally so to us. We now intrust you with a copy of this letter, and shall be glad to learn the sentiments of our Congress on the subject."

28 Of his being the king's birthday (and the news of his death, on Oct. 25, not yet having been received), the cannon on Fort George are fired “and other Demonstrations of Loyalty and Joy shown.”—N. Y. Gen. (Weyman), Nov. 17, 1760.

1760 Gen. Amherst entered the city. Here the walls of the city, slurred by the Cannon on Fort-George,” and soon after “waited on by the principal Gentle- men of the City.”—N. Y. Gen. (Weyman), Dec. 1, 1760. On Nov. 27, he received from the corporation an address, unusual in its fervour. “The invaluable Services” of the general “in Annexing the Extensive Country of Canada to his Majesty’s Dominions in America” are emphasized in the opening lines. Whereas numerous frontier settlements, “abandoned to the Relentless fury of an insatiate foe were soon Reduced to dismal and Undistinguished Ruin,” and this city “famous for its extensive Commerce Beheld and wept the Diminution of its Staple,” now “The Peasant may Return in Security to his Fields; Husbandry will soon Revive; the face of nature smile with the Blessings of peace; and this Flourish- ing City rejoic in the Plent} of its Markets. This surprising Change we attribute with the most humble Gratitude to the paternal Care of our most gracious Sovereign in appointing Your Excellency to Conduct his Victorious Armies in America.” But Sir while so Remarkable an Event will never Fail to Furnish the most ample Testimonials of Your Military Accomplishments, the ingenuous mind must at the same Time receive a peculiar Satisfaction from the Contemplation of an other Rest of Your Con- contribution to the Humane and Generous Use of Victory. . . You Compassionate Treatment of the Vaquoshoned Canadians must appear most Singularly amiable. To Require of a disarmed yet Impeachable Foe whose Humanities have deserved the Severest Strokes of Vindictive Justice, nothing More than a quiet Submission to the Gentle Dictates of British Rule is indeed a Disinterested Virtue and must Convince the attentive World that Britons never Conquer to enslaved . . . Sir, that the God of Armies may Continue to Furnish your head with Wisdom, Your Breast with Fortitude and Your Arm with Strength; that he may Cover you as with a Shield and make Ye terrible to your Enemies in the day of Battle; that You may Long live to Enjoy the Gracious smiles of your Royal Master, the Greatfull acclamations of the British Nation and the peaceful Eulogium of an approving Con- science: that Your name may Be Remembered With Thankfulness by the Latest Posterity; and that Your unwearyed Labours for the path of Victory may meet with their due Rewards here, and an unfading Crown of Glory hereafter; are the Earest Wishes and Desires of Your Excellency’s most obedi humble Servants.” At the same time he is presented with the freedom of the city, with seal enclosed in a gold box.—Ibid. C. C., Vol. 2, 342-35.

1760 “In particular pleasure that the Success of his Majesty’s Arms in the Reduction of Canada has Contributed so much to the Happiness of the people of this Continent, and it is my most hearty Wish that this City may Reap all the advantages it Can desire from this Conquest, and that it may prosper and flourish to the Latest time.”—Ibid., VI, 237.

Bill, Monthly Returns, and other Engravings neatly done on Silver, Copper, &c. with Care and Dispatch, and all Sorts of Copper Plate Printing done in the best Manner, at reasonable Rates, at Anthony Lamb’s at Sir Isaac Newton’s Head, in New-York.”—N. Y. Merc., Dec. 1, 1760. As Henry Dawkins lodged with Anthony Lamb (see Nov. 17, 1755), Lamb “may have been an employer of engravers, rather than an engraver himself. No engraved work signed by Lamb is known.”—Stauffer, Am. Engravers on Copper and Steel, I, 155.

Augustus Bradley writes from the “City Hall Jail, N. Y.” to Gen. Amherst, informing him of the illicit trade between New York and the West Indies, and describing the ill-treatment he received from Aldermen Livingston and Bogart for exposing it.—Cal. Hist. Misc., Eng, 718. Dec. 10 and 11, 1760, Capt. Collet’s Cohnen lists of the vessels engaged in the illicit trade to Hispaniola.—Ibid., 718. For depostions relating to this subject, see ibid.

1761 In 1777, John Adams wrote to William Gordon, who was collecting materials for a history of the Revolution, that his history “should begin at least from the year 1761.”—The Life and Works of John Adams, IX, 462. Cf. Winsor, Nat. & Crit. Hist. of Am., VII, 15.

The number of homes in the city is 2,747—Bancker MSS. in N. Y. Pub. Library.

The earliest public monument recorded in the history of the city was probably erected this year. It was a stone "obelisk in the memory of General Wolfe and others on a site near the north-west corner of Eighth Ave. and 14th St, which was at that time the property of Oliver de Lancy. Because of the latter's very great interest in the hero of Quebec (see Dec. 11, 1759), it has generally been supposed that the funds as well as the site were assigned by himself. —Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 964. Cf. "The Wolfe Monument at New York" in Am. Scen. & Hist. Pres. Soc. Record (1914), 121-26. In this account the theory is advanced that De Lancy, who adhered to the side of the king during the Revolution, took measures for the removal of the monument, in 1783, when he went away to England with the evacuating British army. The facts that the monument is not shown on the Bancker survey of the lands of Sir Peter Warren in August, 1773, and that the road is called "Old Greenwich Lane" instead of "Road to the Obelisk," appear to indicate its removal prior to that date, and to controvert Dr. Hall's theory.—See plate, VIII, III, 11.

A newspaper advertisement of July 12, 1762, gives this interest- ing description of a model of the De Lency estate including the Wolfe monument: "This is to inform the Gentleman and Ladies of this City, That there is just brought to Town, and to be disposed of at a most curious Price of Pieces of Work representing a Country Seat, with the Chapel, Summer House, Flower Gardens and Grottos belonging to it; also a Monument in Memory of General Wolfe, on the Top of which is the Image of Fame, below which are the Emblems bearing the English Standards in the Body of the Piece is the Corpus on a Couch, at the Foot of which is Minerva weeping, at the Head is Mars, pointing to General Amherst, who stands as a small Distance, as meaning, Behold a living Hero, with other Pieces too tedious to mention . . . The whole is inclosed in a Glass Case."—N. Y. Merc., July 12, 1762. See also N. Y. Hist. Soc. Quarterly Bulletin, Oct. 1920. The monument is shown on Pls. 40 and 41, Vol. I, and it is possible Du Simister's faint sketch portrays it in A. Pl. 4, Vol. III (note the tiny outline near the city hall to the right). It does not appear on Pl. 42, Vol. I, as stated in Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 964. See also plate description, III: 864.

Hugh Gaine publishes A List of His Majesty's Land Forces in North-Am, with the Rank of the Officers in the Regiments and Army. It also shows the colors of the regimental uniforms. Although it is not dated, the year 1761 is the latest date appearing on any of the officers' commissions. There is a copy of this list preserved in the N. Y. Pub. Library.

The council is notified officially of the death of King George II (see Oct. 25, 1760). "The new king is not to be proclaimed until the necessary papers have been received from England."—Cal. Coln. Min., 451. See Jan. 16.

It is resolved by Trinity vestry "that the Church and Chappell be put in Mourning on Account of the Death of his late Majesty King George the Second."—Trin. Min. (M.S.). It is also resolved to raise £500 for a new organ.—Dix, Hist. Trin. Church, I: 296.

The Gazette contains the following: "The Gentlemen, and most of the Inhabitants of this City, entered into Mourning for the Death of our late most gracious Sovereign George the Second when it was observed with great Reverence and Decency.—The several Churches in Town were hung in Mourning, and Sermons preached in each of them suitable to the Occasion."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), Jan. 12, 1761.

Orders are received from the lords of trade "to proclaim George III, to use the old seal, to make change in the prayer for the royal family," and to continue "former officers in their places."—Cal. Coln. Min., 452.

About twelve o'clock, the new king, George III, is proclaimed at Robert George's sent Cohnen, that Britain, France, and Ireland. The proclamation is read, accompanied by the discharge of the royal salute, after which Cadwallader Cohnen, the president of the council, the governor of Georgia, the mayor of the city, and various other officials and gentlemen of the city, escorted by military companies, marched in procession up Broadway to the city hall, where the proclamation was again read while clerks were given and the royal

It is noted that, "not withstanding the Severity of the Weather, the Whole began and concluded with great Order and Decency."—N. Y. Gen. (Weyman), Jan. 19, 1761. See also Cal. Coun. Min., 452.

An advertisement reads: "William Clajon, In order to satisfy the Wants of the Public, and Laidies, who desire to be taught the French Language grammatically, and with a true Pronunciation, having, according to his Proposals, been examined at the College in this City, by the Revd. Mr. Carle, Minister of the French Church, and the Revd. Mr. Testart, another French Minister, in Presence of the Revd. Doctor Johnson, President of the College, and fully satisfied of his Capacity, intends this Day to open his School, at the House of Mrs. Boskirk, two Doors from the Coffee House, in Dock Street."

...he takes to Children; his sign being to perform within Six Months, what he promises to do, viz. to give a true Pronunciation to his Scholars, to enable them to translate French into English and English into French, so as to fit them to improve afterwards without any other Help, than the Method he will advise them to take. He therefore undertakes to teach no others, but such as are both willing and capable of Improvement, and is determined not to sacrifice his Honour Character, even to the Caprice of Children, or to the Laviiness of some Parents."

"He has compiled a Compendious Grammar of the English Language for such Gentlemen and Ladies as are unacquainted with Grammar."—N. Y. Merc., Jan. 26, 1761. Clajon later (see May 19, 1766) established his school in close conjunction with the French Church.

More than the usual amount of exposure to public ridicule is involved in the punishment imposed on one Edward Dillon by sentence of the court of general sessions. After being "put into a Cart and carried round the City," he received 39 lashes at the whipping post. He was then confined for some additional days, but brought forth for 39 additional lashes before receiving his discharge.

An advertisement in the Post-Boy reads: "To be sold at a very reasonable price, by Samuel Francis [see Jan. 15, 1761], at the sign of the Masons' Arms near the Green, New York, a small quantity of portable [potable] soup, catchup, bottled gooseberries, pickled walnuts, pickled or fried oysters fit to go to the West Indies, pickled mushrooms, a large assortment of sweetmeats, such as currant jelly, maraschino quinces, grapes, strawberries and sundry other sorts."—Farker's N. Y. Pain's Boy, Feb. 5, 1761.

Forty-three merchants of New York sign a memorial addressed to Colden urging the necessity of a lighthouse at Sandy Hook (see Feb. 7, 1757). A loss of $50,000 by shipwreck within the last few months shows, they claim, that "more certain guide than Highland and Lowland" is needed by mariners. The purpose also is to build a pilot-house there and provide whale boats. The owner's demand, however, of $1,000 for four acres of "barren sandy soil" there they consider exorbitant.—See the original memorial, Emmet Coll., item No. 10759 in N. Y. Public Library. On March 23, the memorial was referred to the assembly.—Cal. Coun. Min., 452. A bill to raise $5,000 the same by lottery was signed by Colden, May 19 (g.v.), but the drawings did not begin until June 14, 1763 (g.v.). There is preserved in the Library of Congress a series of 22 wash drawings by Ozzanne, the official artist with the French fleet that visited our shores during the Revolution (see July 11, 1775). One of these drawings shows the fleet lying off the Hook, and the Sandy Hook lighthouse in the distance.

The council and assembly appoint a joint committee to draft an address condoling his Majesty, King George III, on the death of his grandfather, King George II, and congratulating him on his accession to the throne.—Assembly Jour., II: 650.

Colden, by the king's orders, urges the assembly to provide for the raising two thirds of the number of men raised for the last campaign.—Assembly Jour., II: 650. See March 26, for the assembly's action.

Colden was printed of a meeting of the governors of the college to be held on March 25 (g.v.) "at the house of Edward Willett, at the Sign of the New-York Arms."—N. Y. Gen. (Weyman), March 16, 1761.

The lords of trade proposed to the king that Robert Monckton, Esq., a friend of George I and governor in chief, Cadwalader Colden Esq Lieut Gov't and Benjamin Pratt Esq. Chief Justice "of the province of New York. Monckton had been lieutenant-governor of Nova-Scotia. He and Colden received the appointment by order in council on March 20.—N. Y. Col. Docs., VII: 460-61. Regarding Monckton's instructions, see ibid., VII: 461-64.

Francis Maenechale makes a survey of the land at Greenwich belonging to the heirs of Sir Peter Warren.—See the original with the Warren Papers (MS.), in N. Y. Hist. Soc.; see, also, May 26, 1761 and A. Pl. 5-b.

A fire which starts during the night "in a Block-House at the upper End of this City" is extinguished "without any other Damage than its total Reduction."—N. Y. Gen. (Weyman), March 23, 1761.

Some New York merchants (not named) present a memorial to the provincial council relating to a lighthouse at or near Sandy Hook; it is referred to the assembly.—Cal. Coun. Min., 452. See Mch. 13 and Apr. 3.

Because of the small-pox in the city, an "Assembly Chamber" is again established (see Dec. 6, 1757, and Oct. 17, 1759) in the house of Teunis Somerindyck in the Out Ward. Sessions continued to be held here until April 4 (Assembly Jour., II: 650, 657), and again from May 5 to 19 (ibid., II: 657, 665). The assembly returned to the city hall on Sept. 4 (ibid., II: 665). It was necessary to meet again the following year (see May 19, 1762). Edward Willett is appointed steward of King's College. He is to have the use of two rooms and a kitchen in the college, and such part of the garden as the president may allow; he is to keep the students' rooms clean and have their beds made, and provide for such as may choose to "dine with him" upon terms to be agreed upon. It is ordered by the college authorities that "the students' Breakfast, Dine and Sup together in the College Hall, but that they be allowed no meat at their Suppers." The rent of rooms in the college building for students is fixed at £4 per annum. A committee, consisting of the Rev. Henry Barclay (rector of Trinity Church), the Rev. Samuel Johnson (the president), the Rev. Mr. Auchmuty, and Mr. John Livingston, is appointed "to settle the Rates that the students are to pay for their Diet." The rules established by the committee show weekly rates for one, two, and three meals a week (being 3s. a week for three meals a day) in the "Bill of Fare for Every Day in the Week."—Hist. of Columbia Univ. (1964), 27-28, and Moore, Origin and Early Hist. of Columbia College (1800). See March 16.

The assembly resolves that inasmuch as his Majesty is about to withdraw his regular forces in North America (see March 11, 1762), immediate provision should be made "for levying, paying, and cloathing 1780 effective Men, Officers included, to be employed in securing the Possession of his Majesty's Conquests in North America."—Assembly Jour., II: 652. On March 27, the assembly resolved to allow £5,000 for the purpose.—Ibid., II: 653. On May 3, Colden communicated that the new levies fell greatly short of the number provided for by the law passed at the meeting of the Assembly, and urged that the number be completed without delay.—Ibid., II: 658.

Nine French prisoners, "being the Remainder of the Garrison of Port Detroit," arrive at New York. Rumours say they are to be sent "to Jamtias on Long Island."—N. Y. Gen. (Weyman), April 6, 1761.

In a message to the assembly, Colden says: "The Erecting a convenient Building for a Light-House near Sandy-Hook is an Object so worthy your Consideration, and a Provision for it, so essential to the Welfare of our commercial Interests, and the Preservation of a very useful Part of the Community, that I cannot avoid recommending the Memorial I received on this Subject [see March 13] to your closest Attention."—Assembly Jour., II: 655. A law for this purpose was passed on May 19 (g.v.).

Cadwallader Colden, president of the council, gives his assent to several acts which are published "in the usual Manner . . . without the Walls of the Fort."—Assembly Jour., II: 657. Outside these walls, facing Bowling Green, was a usual and most conspicuous position for posting such bulletins.

A committee of correspondence is appointed to correspond with the agent of the colony at the court of Great Britain "concerning the publick Affairs of this Colony."—Assembly Jour., II: 657. See, further, Oct. 18, 1764.

The anniversary feast of St. George is to be held "at the House of James Elliott, at College Hook," by R. Y. Gen. (Weyman), Apr. 3, 1761. On Oct. 31, 1765 (g.v.), this tavern, which was owned by 1761 James de Lancy was leased to James Acland. Later (see Apr.

Apr. 27, 1767) was run by John Bridge and was called "Corlear's at Corlear's Hook, which was offered for sale or lease on June 9, June 9, 1777 (p. v).

17 A wager of £50, "dependent on a Horse's going from Mr. Adam Wagner's to West River Bridge and back in Ten Minutes, being 14 Miles and 3

"The Men of War and Transports, lately preparing here to assist in some important Expedition against our common Enemy the French, fell down a few Days ago to Sandy-Hook, where they were left on Saturday last [May 2] all well, waiting for a Fair Wind to push out. As the Wind yesterday Morning blew fresh from the Western Board, no doubt they took the Advantage of it."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), May 4, 1761.

Accounting for a mortgage of this date given by John Marshall to Lawrence Read, the palisades and block-houses along the line of Chambers Street (see Pl. 34, Vol. I; Landmark Map, Pl. 174, Vol. III; July 6, 1745; Sept. 17, 1757) were still standing.—Liber Deedts, I: 211.

9 The members of the assembly pass a resolution refusing to increase the number of men which, on March 26 (p. v.), they ordered to be raised for the coming campaign.—Assemb. Jour., II: 660.

In accordance with its action of March 14 (p. v.), the assembly draws up an address to the king.—Assemb. Jour., II: 662-65.

An act of the assembly for raising by lottery a sum not exceeding £5,000 for the purpose of building a lighthouse at Sandy-Hook (see March 15) is signed by Lieut-Gov. Colden.—Jour. Leg. Coun., II: 1458. Additional funds were necessary to finish the work (see Dec.
11, 1762). The lighthouse was completed June 11, 1764 (p. v).

Archibald Kennedy, Joris Brinckerhoff, and others petition the common council for "two Ferries Between this City of New York and the Island of Nassau the one of them from the present Ferry House on the said Island to Pecks Slip in this City and the other from the Land of Hendrick and Peter Remsen on the said Island to Coenties Slip in this City as also proposals of Hendrick Remsen and Peter Remsen Relating to the Same." Consideration of the petition is deferred.—M. C. C., VI: 247. On July 9, Peter Schuyler (go) and assured the commissioners that they might have used the ferry if it was granted; and they petitioned for "Liberty to erect and Build a peer from the Wharf of Colonel Peter Schuyler into the East River in order to make a more Safe harbour from thence to Mr Cruger's Wharf [see Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 994] and also Easterly to Croemiens Wharf upon the Same Conditions as the peer at Coenties was lately Granted." Consideration of this petition also was deferred.—Ibid., VI: 252. No further reference to either of these petitions appears in the Minutes. That a second ferry was not established at this time is shown by the fact that, in 1766, an application for a second one was again unsuccessfully made.—See Feb. 19, 1766.

The history of the proceedings begun on April 26, 1770 (p. v.), and renewed on May 21, 1774 (p. v.), to obtain grants of water lots at Hunter's Key (between Wall St. and Old Slip)—see Pl. 43, Vol. I—is again revived when William Brownjohn, Rigler Shults, and others, who are owners of houses and lots "fronting that part of the east River Commonly Called Hunters Key or Rotten Row," complain in a petition to the common council "that the Ground and Soil fronting their respective houses and Lots of Ground" have been "injured" and "taken away" by reason of the Fifth that Flows there from the said River." That this condition led to the use, in 1766, an application for a second one was again unsuccessfully made.—See Feb. 19, 1766.

The name of the Common Council's Call to the House of Assembly in May 1761 was, "The Assembly and House of Assembly in the City of New York.

There were seven men on the Board of the Common Council: James Livingston, George Washington, Benjamin Kissam, on the Case made before them, Respecting Hunters Key.—Ibid., VII: 75.

The petitions for the water lots, the legal "opinions," and the petitioners' prospects of success were taken into consideration on August 31, and the corporation decided to grant the lots "without Reserving a hundred feet . . . for the use of the Corporation," and to accept the offer of an annual quit-rent of 5 shillings per foot. A sufficient amount of ground in front of Brownjohn's property was to be reserved for a public slip.—Ibid., VII: 91.

28 This decision concerning the public slip met with protests from William Weyman (the printer) and others, but, on Dec. 10, the board decided to adhere to it.—Ibid, VII: 84-85; 91; see also ante, p. 22. (The ground at the end of Wall St. was declared to be a public slip in 1764, p. v.) The granting of water lots at this part of the shore was now begun. John Burger's claim was approved on Jan.
14, 1765; and on March 2, 1765 (p. v.), further grants were decided upon.—Ibid., VII: 98-99, 106. For other references to Hunter's Key or Rotten Row, see advertisements in N. Y. Post-Boy, March 26, 1761; N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), Feb. 25, 1764; N. Y. Merc., May 8, 1765; and Sept. 2, 1765; such notices to the contrary were made.

The common council appoints a committee "to View and Cause down's Arms, on the New-Dock" is the meeting place of St. Andrew's Society.—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), May 18, 1761. The society was still holding its meetings here in February, 1765 (N. Y. Merc., Feb. 11, 1765); before June 10 of this year, the widow Vernon had removed to Albany, where she opened the "King's Arms Tavern."—Ibid., June 10, 1765.

King George III's birthday is observed "by a Discharge of Twenty-three Pieces of Cannon from Fort-George, being the Number of Years His Majesty was then old." At night the city is "handsomely illuminated."—Post-Boy, June 11, 1765. Weyman publishes a notice "That by Order of the Deputy Post-Masters General, another Set of Posts are soon to be established between New-York and Boston, to set out on Thursdays from each of those Places, and meet at Hartford in Connecticut, from whence they will lead to the use of the principal towns, and will arrive at New-York and Boston on Wednesday, weekly."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), June 8, 1761.

The "Aldermen and Common Councilmen" of the Dock and South Wards are appointed a committee to repair "the Long Bridge on the North Side of the Exchange." On July 24, they were required to repair "the Long Bridge to the Southward of the Exchange (the foundries with both of them)" are so injurious. "VI., 252, 253.

For the location of both the "Long Bridge" and the Exchange, see Pl. 30, Vol. I. Between Nov. 25, 1761, and Dec. 1, 1762, about $300 was expended on these repairs.—Ibid., VII, 275, 290, 295, 306, 312-13.

It is ordered by the common council "that the Clerk of this Board prepare a Bond from this Corporation to the Ministrers Elders and Deacons of the Reformation Protestant Dutch Church of this City," in the penalty of $3,000, conditioned to pay $1,000 on or before July 24, 1762, with interest at five per cent., and dated July 24, 1762. M. C. G., VII, 254. The interest ($20) due July 24, 1762, was paid Sept. 15, 1765, by warrant to Abraham Banker.—Ibid., VII, 500.

The top of the steeple of the New Dutch Church is struck by lightning, which tears off some of the shingles "in the crooked Course of its Direction," and sets the building on fire. The flames are extinguished by the combined efforts of the New York Fire Company.—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), June 24, 1761. "This is very inconsiderable." It is said "this is the third Time this Church has been struck by Lightning—probably occasioned by its Situation."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), July 27, 1761. This was the Middle Reformed Dutch Church. See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 935, and Pl. 28, Vol. I. A similar accident happened to it two years later (see June 15, 1763).

For earlier ones, see Oct., 1750.

After receiving reports from two committees, one appointed June 12, 1760 (p.u.), the other, May 28, 1761, recommendations are approved for the regulation and paving of Divition (now Fulton), or, more properly, that part of Putnam west of Broadway and Vesey Sts., and also Broadway between those streets.

The committees are continued.—M. C. G., VI: 254-55.

The chairman of the committee for regulating the streets in Montgomery Ward reports to the common council that he has caused "Frankford Street" to be regulated by the city surveyor with a specified grade. It is ordered that the owners and tenants of the property on this street be required to pave it at their own expense, in such manner as the alderman and assistant of this ward shall direct.—M. C. G., VI: 256.

"A Camp is now forming on Staten Island, near the Centre of which, as a Place, a piece of Ground is allotted for a Market Place, where all Persons willing to supply the Towns with Provisions or Goods, are invited, and will be encouraged and Protected; Ground for putting up Tents or erection Booths, will be allowed to every Person, who applies to the Commanding Officer, without any Reward; and all Manner of Things will be permitted to be sold, without Tax or Restraint. It will only be required that nothing be sold, but in the Market Place; and that no Spirituous Liquors be brought under any Pretext to Camp. James Robinson, D. Q. M. G.——N. Y. Merc., July 27, 1761.

Cadwallader Colden, who was appointed lieutenant-governour on March 20 (see March 17), is now sworn into office.—Col. Coun. Min., 455. Colden had previously been president of the council and commander-in-chief.—See Aug. 4, 1766.

Colden informs the lords of trade that, like Hardy, he is directed in the king's instructions to grant commissions to judges and other officers "during His Majesty's pleasure only." Nevertheless, Clinton, while governor, and DeLancey, while lieutenant-governour, granted commissions at their pleasure, without the consent of the council.—N. Y. Gaz. Oct. 12, 1761.

“The Rector and Inhabitants of the City of New York &c (Trinity Corporation) prefer to the common council “a Release or Quit Claim to the Corporation & their Successors of a number of Streets mentioned in a Map annexed to the said Release or Quit Claim.” This the board accepts; and orders “that the Clerks enter the same in the book of Grants belonging to this Corporation.”—M. C., VI: 262. The date on the deed is April 9, 1761. The MS. deed, with the map by Maerchalk annexed (both on velum), was until recently in the possession of the comptroller, but is now recorded in Liber of Ancient Conveyances, I: 21, register’s office, New York. The streets thus released to the corporation were: Reade, Chambers, Warren, Murray, Barclay, Vesey and Fulton Sts., all from Broadway to the Hudson River; Robinson, the present Park Pl., from Broadway to King’s Highway; College grounds; Church St. from Fulton St. to Lispenard’s land; College Pl. from the north side of the college grounds to Lispenard’s land; also Lumber St. (Trinity Pl.) in Trinity Church lands; Rector St., and First, Second, and Third Sts. on Trinity land (streets not on the plans) naming respective streets in modern Greenwich, Washington, and West Sts.; also a narrow lane, 50 ft. north of Warren St., from Broadway to the river, a lane not existing on the modern map.

Benjamin Blagg, John Alliner, and Joseph and Daniel Latham give to the city a piece of ground in Montgomerie Ward, 25 x 160 ft., on the north side of Cherry St., bounded on the cast and west by land owned by the grantors, and on the north by “the meadow ground Commonly known by [a] Wollert Webbers meadow.” It is to be used forever as a public street. The common council accepts it, and orders that the clerk enter it in “the Book of Grants.”—M. C., VI: 262-63. This became part of Roosevelt St.—Liber Ancient Conveyances (Register’s Office), I: 12-13; Liber Deeds, XLII: 196; XVIII: 249; Liber City Grants, C: 273. A committee, appointed April 1, 1760, to treat with the executors of John Cruger, Stephen Bayard, and Edward Holland, deceased, the late mayors, and also with the present mayor, “Concerning the Monies Arriued by the stalls and standings during their respective Majesties.” and to “Consider and settle the form of a plan for the Revenue.” Stalls, who buy to sell again shall not enter into the Amount of the what said Stalls and Standings Sold for During their respective majestys,” but that the board should reserve “their Right to all the monies proceeding from the Stalls and Standings in future.” Unless an Explanatory Clause to the present Charters Could be Obtained Whereby a certain sum not Exceeding one hundred pounds £, annum Should be appropriated to the use of the mayor for the Time Being and the Remainder to the Use of the Corporation.” The common council thereupon orders that the committee “propose the said Explanatory Clause to the present Charters in such a manner that the City and Salisfit the passing of it Accordingly.”—Ibid., VI: 262. No such provision appears in the acts of the provincial legislature.—See Col. Laws N. Y., Vol. IV.

In a letter to the printer, a correspondent gives interesting facts regarding the use of wood-burning stoves in New York. He mentions a recent warning against erecting or continuing to use stoves, “unless they were so situated at that the End of their Pipe might be put into the Funnel of a Chimney.” He refers to their “great Utility” which is “sufficiently known by every one that has used them,” adding: “The great difference of the Fuel that is burnt in them, is Opposition to that which is burnt in a common Fire Place . . . a small Quantity of Wood will make a Room as comfortable as a Fire Place where the Wood can be a Consideration Weighty enough in this Place where Wood is so dear.” He describes the advantage of a chimney over “a Pot with Coals.” The merchant in his counting-room and the tradesman in his workshop, without a chimney, is obliged to idle half the time in cold weather, “to the immediate Impairing of his Family”; or else be reduced to the “disagreeable Necessity” of using “a Pot with Coals,” by which “his Health is in great Danger of being impaired.” He says “the great Fire in Boston” (see June 10, 1760) was caused by “a Pot of Coals in a Workshop.”—N. T. Gen. (Weyman), Nov. 2, 1761. On Dec. 31, 1760, an act was passed “for the more Effectual Prevention of Fires and for Regulating of Buildings in the City of New York.” This was deemed necessary because many houses were roofed with shingles.—Ibid., IV: 571. See Dec. 1, 1778.

The trustees of the First Presbyterian Church resolve to purchase “a Proper Parsonage House and take a Deed for the Same in Trust for the Church.”—Proceedings of the Trustees of the 1st Presby., Ch. (“Wall Street Church”), Vol. I. On Feb. 25, 1753, “John Murray, et al, Trustees of the Presb. Ch. of the C. N. Y.” conveyed this piece to Stephen van Cortlandt.— Liber Deeds, XLIX: 16 (New York). The parishioner plot is now covered by the western end of the United States Realty building and by the western part of Thames St. adjoining.

SirJeffery Amherst is invested with the gold collar and red ribbon of the Order of the Bath, the ceremony taking place in the military camp on Staten Island. The letter from See. William Pitt to Maj.-Gen. Robert Monckton, governor of the province, announcing it to be the king’s pleasure to make Amherst a knight commander, is read in the presence of several officers of the army. The letter, dated Whitehall, July 17, 1761, expressed the king’s pleasure that Monckton should perform the ceremony and that it was “his Majesty’s intention that the same be done in the most honourable and distinguished manner that circumstances will allow of . . . and as may at the same time, mark in the most public manner his Majesty’s just sense of the constant zeal and signal abilities which General Monckton has exercised in the service of his King and country.” Amherst, having received the order, responded to Governor Monckton: “I am truly sensible of the distinguished honours of his Majesty’s royal approbation.”—Universal Mag. (London), Dec., 1761, XXIX: 350. This was the first investiture of the order ever performed in America. The second investiture was upon Sir William Howe, sixteen years later.—Mayo, Jeffery Amherst, 197. See Jan. 18, 1777. When Gen. Washington was appointed to the command of the troops, he was saluted “with a Royal Discharge of the Cannon on Fort George.”—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), Oct. 26, 1761.

It complimented him upon his "Gallant Conduct and Interpretable Behaviour in the Middle Passage, on the Plains of Abraham in Quebec." The draft of "a Freedom" is also agreed to, "with the seal thereto, Inclosed in a Gold Box with the City Arms Engraved on the Lid thereof." These, engrossed and "Signed by the Members of this Corporation," were presented on Oct. 31.—M. C. G., VI: 370-72.
31 Nov. As a message to the town, Lieut.-Gov. Monckton says: "The excessive Number of Tipping Houses throughout the Province, points out the Utility of a Law to restrain them; they are ruinous to many poor Families that might otherwise be useful to the Community. And Destructive of the Morals of Servants and Slaves, Brings so prevalent and pernicious, as to claim your most serious Consideration."—Assemb. Jour., II: 662. On Nov. 27, a bill was ordered brought in "to regulate the Licencing of Inns and Taverns, and for the Suppression of Tipping Houses."—Ibid., II: 671-72.
35 Dec. Shakespeare's Hamlet is staged for the first time in New York, at the Chapel St. Theatre (see Nov. 18), by Permission of his Honour the Lieut.-Governor.—M. C. G., Dec. 14, 1761. This description appears in the August issue and includes the following information: "The streets are irregular, but being paved with round piddles, are very clean. No part of America has greater plenty and variety in its markets. Oysters are a considerable part of the support of the poor, and that single article is computed to be worth, annually, 10 or 1200 l. some kinds are very large, so that one or two of them try'd, are a meal for a reasonable appetite. Here are two Dutch, two Episcopal, one French, and two German Lutheran churches; one Presbyterian, one Baptist, one Quaker, and one Moravian meeting-houses, and one Jewish synagogue. The city hall is a strong brick building, oblong, and of two stories high, with two wings, at right angles with the centre. The floor below is an open walk, except two goals, and the goaler's apartments. The cellar underneath is a dungeon, and the garret a common prison. This edifice is erected in a place where four streets meet, and fronts, to the south-west, one of the most spacious streets in the town. The eastern wing contains the great assembly-room, a lobby, and the speaker's chamber. The west wing, on the same floor, forms the council-room, and a library; and in the middle space, the supreme court is usually held. The city has, in reserve, 1,500 stand of arms, for sea, for the poor, &c. in case of an invasion."—London Mag. (Aug. 1761), 400.
36 Colden, in a message to the assembly, says, "It is well known that when the Salary of the Chief Justice was first fixed at Three Hundred Pounds, about the Year 1715, the Value of the current Money was much higher, and the Price of all Necessaries for the Support of a Family, much lower than at present."

A descriptive account of New York written in this year contains the following:

The "militia of New York [State], according to the general estimate, does not exceed 18,000. The whole number of souls is computed at 100,000."

"New York [City] is one of the most social places on the continent. The men collect themselves into weekly evening clubs. The ladies, in winter, are frequently entertained either at concerts of music or masquerades, and make a very good appearance. They are comely and dress well, and scarce any of them have distasteful shapes. Tinctured with a Dutch education, they manage their families with becoming parsimony, good providence, and singular neatness. . . . Their schools are in the lowest orders; the instructors want education, and through a long shameful neglect of all the arts and sciences, the common speech is extremely corrupt; and the evidences of a bad taste, both as to thought and language, are visible in their proceedings, public and private. . . . "Gentlemen of estates rarely reside in the country, hence few or no experiments have yet been made in agriculture . . . have not, as yet, entered upon any other manufactures, than such as are indispensably necessary for their home convenience. Milt-making, which is perhaps the most natural of any they could fall upon, was begun some years ago, and hats were exported to the West-Indies with great success, till lately prohibited by an act of parliament. The chief exports of the West-Indies are sugar, brine, raw hemp, tobacco, cotton, hemp, scents, fish, and bread. 3 Mar. Announcement is made by Edward Willett, steward of King's College (see March, 1765). On Monday May 26th a school will be opened in King's College to teach Soldiers (summer and at the outbreak of the war with France they had felt the necessity of conquering Canada, "to prevent a total Depopulation of our Country." With the thought "that one strenuous Effort would put an End" to all their "Difficulties and Dangers," they had exerted themselves "beyond what could have been expected." They are now greatly disappointed to find themselves "still involved in so great an Expenditure," but they will go beyond what can justly be expected, rather than the least Share in such a Public Imposition.

They laid on their "Zeal for his Majesty's Service," and in the hope 11 As the king "is about to withdraw his regular Forces in North-America, to be employed upon some improvement in the Western

Enyemy," the assembly resolves that provision be made for paying and clothing "so many Men, as with the 173, now in his Majesty's Service in the Pay of this Colony, will make the Number of 1795 Men (Officers included) to be employed during the Absence of his Majesty's regular Forces in securing the Possession of his Conquests in North-America." This proves that the forces of the king (see March 26, 1761) had not yet been withdrawn on this date.

In regard to Colden's message of March 3 (p. 9), the members of the assembly resolve that they "cannot, consistent with the Trust reposed in them, provide for the keeping of any regular Forces, in being a Custom interwoven into the Constitution of this Colony, for the Inhabitants thereof to provide for defending themselves only by their Militia, and to serve his Majesty in all attacks on the

10. John Jones's "Bege Leave to inform the Publique that he is removed to the House, which formerly has been kept by Mr. Samuel Francis, at the Sign of the Mason's Arms next Door to Mr. De Grusse's in the Fields, where he intends to give the same Entertainment as formerly has been done by Mr. Francis. . . ."—N. Y. Merc., April 10, 1762. This was at Warren St. and Broadway, and De Grusse's, next door, was owner of a rope-walk, which extended along the present Warren St. from Broadway to a point beyond Church St. (see Pl. 34, Vol. 1). For a history of the Mason's Arms tavern, see March 19, 1759. Francis (later known as Fraunces) was now occupying the house in Broad St. (see Jan. 15).

13. The Board agreed with M[annheim] M[asten] [Several Lots of Ground in the Broad Street [Broadway] for the sum of Two thousand five hundred pounds Containing about one hundred feet in front and one hundred & fifteen feet in length more or less Subject to the Leases by him made."—Trin. Min. (MS).

14. The Dutch shop "Hope" arrives laden with sugar, coffee, and indigo. She was captured by the brig "Mars."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), April 19, 1762.

23. On this day, the "Anniversary of St. George, his Excellency Sir Jeffery Amherst, gave a Ball to the Ladies and Gentlemen of this City, at Crawley's New Assembly Room. The Company consisted of 96 Ladies, and as many Gentlemen, all very richly dressed, and 'tis said the Entertainment was the most elegant ever seen in America."—N. Y. Merc., April 26, 1762. Crawley kept the "New York Arms."—Ibid., Jan. 31, 1763; Landmark Map Ref. Key, III. 47.

26. The Committee: or The Faithful Irishman" is presented at the Chapel Street Theatre for the benefit of the "Charity School."—N. Y. Merc., April 26, 1762. "This is the second Play the Company have given this Season to public Uses [for the first, see Jan. 25]; which, with their unceasing Conduct during our Residence here, the Entertainment the Town has received from their Performances, has greatly increased the Number of their Friends, and considerably Obtained many Objections hitherto made against Theatrical Representations in this City."—Ibid., May 3, 1762. See May 3.

29. It is announced that the printing business under the firm name of "James Parker and Company in New York, Printers" will, after May 1, be carried on solely by John Holt, "who has had the Management of the Business for near two years past."—Parker's N. Y. Post-Boy, April 29, 1762. For the first publication of the Post-Boy by Holt, see January 17, 1762. See May 6.

May 1. A Mauchline's survey, bearing date, of lots "On East side of Road leading from new Jail to Fresh Water," is preserved in ticle No. 3 in "Real Estate Division" of comptroller's office, Municipal Bldg.

3. Plans of several of the sites of engagements between the French and English at Fort Niagara and Fort Duquesne, engraved on two large Copper Plates, by Michael De Bruls, Engraver, and an inhabitant of this City." De Bruls, himself, is taking subscriptions for these "in the Road beyond the New Goal, on the Hill, where the above engraved Plates may be seen."—N. Y. Merc., May 3, 1762. For De Bruls's proposed views of New York City, see Oct. 11.

11. David Douglass advertises that "A Pistole Reward, Will be given to whoever can discover the Person who was so very rude to throw Eggs from the Gallery upon the Stage last Monday (see April 26, by which the Clouts of some Ladies and Gentlemen in the Boxes were spoiled, and the Performance in some Measure interrupted." The advertisement is headed "Theatre, in New York."—N. Y. Merc., May 10, 1762. On April 2, 1764 (q.v.), the theatre was advertised for lease.

14. Jacob Roosevelt and Philip Livingston present a request to the consistory of the Dutch Church, "signed by a great number of members of the congregation, as well as others, together with a request from young men baptized and partly reared in our church," for the services of "a minister using the English language . . . according to the Dutch Constitution." The president of the consistory, J. Kitzmiller, replies that an answer will be delayed, because "there is a great number of members, to whom they owe no less consideration, who have not signed said petition."—Eccles. Rec., VI: 3817-18. The proposal was considered at meetings of the consistory on May 13, 17, and 18 (ibid., VI: 3819); on July 6 and 12 (ibid., VI: 3826-27); and on Aug. 3 (ibid., VI: 3828-30). On the last date, 29 of the 49 consistory wrote to the call of an English minister; and on Sept. 19, it was agreed that a subscription should be circulated for his support.—Ibid., VI: 3831.

19. There was some opposition to the plans of Oct. 13, 1762 (ibid., VI: 3832-33); but on Dec. 16, the plan was perfected whereby a minister might be introduced to preach in the English language in the new church on Nassau St. The eighth article of this plan provided that "If this plan be approved, and such an English minister shall be called, a Church shall be deliberately be constructed in the New Church, not only to remove the present great noise [echo?] but also to make more room for those who neither have nor can obtain sittings, and are inclined either to the Dutch or English service."—Ibid., VI: 3838-40; 3839-61. For further information see Jan. 6 and 14, 1763.

26. Rev. Morgan Dix, D.D., late rector of Trinity Church, quoting Dr. Benjamin F. de Costa, stated that the movement to erect a second "Chapel of Ease" (St. Paul's) for Trinity corporation, which was begun with a resolution at the vestry meeting of April 5, 1763 (q.v.), "may have been and probably was encouraged by the state of things existing in the Dutch congregation. Already preachers in the Dutch language had become unpopular among the younger portion of the Dutch congregation, which was thought by not a few, showed signs of diminution. The better portion of the people were now familiar, in so far as the right, with both English and Dutch, and were also doing business with the English. The young people improved every opportunity of worshipping at Trinity, the 'English Church,' and there was a loud call for a minister in the Dutch Church who could preach in both languages. He then describes the dissatisfaction in the Dutch congregation following the introduction of English preaching there in 1762, resulting in "a renewed movement in the direction of Trinity Church with which the Dutch had been on the kindest terms from its foundation. An established Church, too, was, in accordance with all their ideas, their own Corporation having been recognized as the establishment down to the occupation of New Netherlands by the English. Therefore the defection could not be stayed, and Peter Van Brugh Livingston said that if the change in the Dutch Church had been made thirty years earlier they would not have met with such losses, but, as it stood, the greater half of Trinity consisted of ascensions from the Dutch Church. . . . and the third edict [St. Paul's] was not commenced any too periodical. Coden, in a message to the assembly, refers to the declaration of war with Spain (see April 5) and urges the assembly to provide its quota of men. He thinks the deficiency of enlistments may be attributed to "the extremely high Price of things in the Sum of Ten Pounds," and suggests the impressment of deserters and "all others, who having no visible Employment or Means of Subsistence, are a Burthen, and even dangerous to the Community."—Assembly, Jour. II: 700. The assembly answered, on May 5, that the bounty of £100 was more than that paid in any other colony; that 1,000 men had already enlisted, and "near a Month yet to come before the Time for influting expires;" and that to impress men "would rather tend to prejudice the Service."—Ibid., II: 701.

Notice is hereby given, that the Post-Office is removed from the Whitehall, to the Corner-House of Mr. Cornelius Fisher, opposite Mr. Joseph Hayne's, in Smith-street."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), May 10, 1762. It was moved again May 2, 1763 (q.v.). See June 18.

An act for raising £1,000, by "way of Lottery," for repairing the city hall receives Coden's signature.—Assembly, Jour. 1791; Col. Laws N. Y., II: 621-22. The lottery was announced Sept. 9 (q.v.).

John Holt becomes the sole printer of Parker's New-York Gazette or, the Weekly Post-Boy, and changes its name to The New-York Gazette or, the Weekly Post-Boy, which was the title it had borne some years earlier (see Jan. 1, 1753). For fuller details, see April 29; Early Newspapers, II: 427; and Am. Antiquarian Soc. Proc., (1917), XII: 470, 471.

This is appointed a day of fasting and prayer, "to implore the continuance of the Divine Blessing, on His Majesty's Arms, and for restoring and perpetuating Peace, Safety and Prosperity to His Majesty, His Kingdoms and Colonies."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), April 10, 1762.

Set up for the Entertainment of Lovers of that Sport, by George Barr, at the DeLancey's Arms, in the Bowery, where the best of Liquors and Attendance may be had.—Not less than Ten will be admitted to the Grounds each Day: The Price to be proportion'd to the Number that ride.

"It is thought this Riding (being a new Thing in this Place) will afford great Diversion."—N. Y. Gen. (Weyman), May 10, 1762.

A published notice requires the annual meeting of the government, and "at the Head of the City, near the house of Elias De Grusnea near the negroes Burial place for the Receiving of such pitch Tar Turpentine and Shingle, shall or may be put in any place to the Southward of the Fresh Water, the common council decides upon "a Certain place near the house of Elias De Grusnea near the negroes Burial place for the Receipt of such pitch Tar Turpentine and Shingle."—M. C. C., VI: 487. See Nov. 12, 1755.

The common council orders that the Meal Market be removed "and Carried and affixed to the Oswego market."—M. C. C., VI: 272. The Oswego Market, to which some of the material is here ordered to be taken and "affixed" was in the middle of Broadway opposite Crown (Liberty) St.—See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 939.

It is ordered by the common council "that Mr. Francis Marschall the City Surveyor do Lease out the Several lots by him Lately laid out near Catimeets [see "Catimets Hill" in Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 695 lying to the Eastward of the Kings high Road leading from Spring Garden to the Kings Bridge for the Term of Twenty one Years under a yearly rent of four pounds with this Restriction to the Lessee not to assign or make over the Same or any part thereof without the Leave and approbation of the Corporation first had and obtained."—M. C. C., VI: 287-83.

"Lawrence Kilbrun, Portrait Painter, Takes this Opportunity to acquaint the Publick, that he is removed to Crown-street, which leads from the Fly-market up to the New Dutch Church, next door to Mr. Stephany, Chymist, and over against Messr. Livingston's Sugar House."—N. Y. Merc., May 17, 1762.

Colden informs the assembly that 430 men are lacking to complete the colony's quota of forces, and urges the completion of the levy. "...for it is now the signal years of Loyalty, you should expose yourselves to Reproach by slackening your Zeal for the common Good, at this important conjuncture."—Assemb. Jour., II: 702.

"This is to give Notice, To all Gentlemen and Ladies, Lovers and Encouragers of Music, That on Thursday next, being the 27th Instant, will be opened, by Messrs. Leonard and Dienneal, Muckster Masters of this City, at Mr. Burnes Room, near the Battery, A publick and weekly Concert of Music;" admission, four shillings.—N. Y. Gen. (Weyman), May 24, 1762. See May 27.

Colden writes to Gen. Amherst: "The Mayor tells me that the Corporation have a house on Bellow's Island of four rooms each of twenty feet, set apart for the reception of the sick, and another House on the said Island where the Physicians & Surgeons may be accommodated."—Colden Papers in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections (1876), IX: 210.

Mr. Mayor, in behalf of Oliver DeLancey Esq produced to this Board the Draft of the Survey of a publick Road or high way by him proposed to be Laid out at Greenwich instead of the present one, to Begin from the Road Leading from Capt. Clarke's and so to Run of the Same Breadth the Road now is through the Land of Mrr Warren to the Southward of the house and ground of Yellis Man wick, whose Order is by this Billar that the said Oliver DeLancey have Liberty to alter the Road accordingly in such manner as by him above proposed, provided the same Road do bind to the Southward of the said Manwells Land the whole length thereof so as to Give him access thereto, from every part of the Southerly side of his Lands and that the said Oliver De Lancy in consideration of his Carrying the said Road through Mrr Warrens Land, have Liberty in her Behalf to Fence in and Inclose the old road Leading to the River as private property."—M. C. C., VII: 238. The above mentioned survey, dated May 24, 1762, was made by Francis Maerschall; it is preserved among the Warren Papers in the N. Y. Hist. Soc. See Sept. 3, 1762. The road made by Oliver de Lancy is shown without name on the Ratzer Map of 1766 (Pl. 41, Vol. I). It was subsequently the Great Kill Road; to the present day it survives as Gransevoort St. See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 1000 (Gransevoort St.) and 1001 (Great Kill Road); Pl. 175, Vol. III. Maerschall appends to his survey the remark: "The New Intended Road is Good Level Land."—See also the following important surveys of Sir Peter Warren's lands: (1) One showing the land between Broadway and Greenwich St., and the grant in the Hudson River; and (2) the "Survey of the Alteration of the Road at Grinidge" (Greenwich), the latter being the one above referred to, showing Capt. Thomas Clark's road, Warren's Lane, the old road which leads from Greenwich, and the "New Intended Road which leads from Greenwich."—All of these surveys are preserved with the Warren Papers in the N. Y. Hist. Soc. See, further, A. Pl. 5-b, Vol. III.

The Earl of Stirling writes from New York to Lord Romney: "This part of his Majesty's dominions in North America, though populous and flourishing, still labours under the very great disadvantage of wanting for the security of a Military Road, and if some attacks were to be made towards establishing one. A College has been founded and partly built, but for want of sufficient funds it is, in some measures, at a stand, and cannot go on with spirit. It is an object that seems to me so worthy of the notice of the Society for the encouragement of Arts, Manufactures and Commerce [of which Lord Romney was president]; that I could not avoid recommending it to your Lordship. The bearer, Dr. [James] Jay [see Aug. 19], will present your Lordship with an address from the Governor of the College. They most ardently wish for the countenance of the Society, and it will be the best recommendation they can have to the rest of the world."—From The Life of William Alexander, Earl of Stirling [see of James Alexander], by N. J. Hist. Soc. Collections (1847), II: 63.

A weekly concert is opened by Messrs. Leonard and Dienneal [see May 24] at "Mr. Burns' Room, near the Battery."—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 27, 1762. The tavern of George Burns was at Whitehall and bore the sign of the King's Head.

The merchants of the city, in a petition to Colden, give their reasons for having, up to the present time, continued their "Commercial Intercourse . . . with the French West India Settlements." They now propose to trade themselves, and, if possible, "Totally to suppress it, during the Continuance of the Present War in America." They ask that Colden "abate the rage of that resentment which some of our fellow Citizens at present Labour under, from a Concern in such trade." The petition signed in more than fifty names,—Chaloner, Hakewill, Hume, Hurlbut.

A gally of 12 guns, called the "Harlequin," is launched to the ship yards. "She is reckoned a very fine Vessel, and is very well built."—N. Y. Merc., June 14. Another gally of 16 guns, the "Monckton," was launched the following week.—Ibid, June 14.

The last Commencement of King's College under Dr. Johnson, its first president, is held, nine students being graduated with the degree of bachelor of arts. He was succeeded on Nov. 16 by the Rev. Myles Cooper, as acting president, who, on April 22, 1763, was elected president.—N. Y. Gen. (Weyman), June 14, 1762. Hist. of Columbia Univ. (1904), 28-29, 42.

Robert Monckton arrives in New York. At his landing at Whitehall he is "welcomed by a Discharge of the Artillery From Fort George, and the Earl of Halifax Packet . . . and received by his Honour the Lord Mayor and Corporation, and as many of the principal Gentlemen of this City, as could be collected on so short a Notice. It was intended that the City Militia, and the Independent Companies were to have been drawn out on the Arrival of his Excellency, but the Time would not admit thereof."—N. Y. Merc., June 14, 1755. permitting.—The Masters to be spoke with (when in Port) from 11 till 12 o’clock, at the Coffee-House. Letters will be delivered to the passengers provided for on board, a steerage passenger, two dollars, and a two wheel carriage, horse, or cow, one pony.—N. T. Gaz. (Weyman), Sept. 13, 1762. This appears to have been the first regular transportation service established via Long Island Sound.

15 Sept. The Laws.—The “Prohibition of selling the hay by measure,” which is a method “unequal and uncertain” by reason of the “Unskilfulness” or “Distinguishing” of the “Cartman or Waggoner,” and which gives rise to controversy “between the Boatmen and Cartmen” or “between the Buyers and Cartmen.” This law requires, among other things, that “furniture, Maps, and Conveyances, Machines or Engines, and Scales and Weights for Weighing Carts and Wagons and Hay, shall be made, Erected, furnished and provided at the Three following places” — the south end of the Broadway Market; Whitehall Ship; and the dwelling-house of the widow Van Kuren, in Montgomery Ward. The law fixes a price of one shilling and sixpence for the weighing of hay, to be paid to the person appointed to weigh hay, which sum is to be “returned to such Cartman or Waggoner, one half thereof by the seller, and the other half by the Buyer of such Hay.” Every “Cartman and Waggoner” is required to weigh his cart or wagon before he shall carry it up, and which is appointed to weigh shall mark the weight with a marking-iron “upon the after part of the Shaft, or other place Easily to be Seen.” — M. C. G., VI: 298–300.

Oct. 11 Michael de Bruls solicits subscriptions for “Two different Water Views and two different Land Views” (of New York City) which he has been “engaged to do.” These views are “drawn in English, High Dutch and Low Dutch,” and are to be “curiously engraved on a Copper Plate, of 21 by 12 Inches each, and printed on best large Paper.” There will also be “nearly engraved on another Copper Plate” a plan of the streets “with their respective Names.” Along with the prints will be published a pamphlet giving “an exact Account of the wholesome Climate, pleasant Situation, Products, etc. of this Province, for the Benefit of the Subscribers, which they may chuse either in English, High Dutch or Low Dutch.” The subscription price is stated as 20 shillings, “One Half to be paid on subscribing, the other Half on the Delivery of these Five Prints.” Each subscriber will “give his Quality and Place of Abode,” and subscriptions “will be closed on the last Day of January next.” Delivery will be made “on or before the first Day of February next.” De Bruls’ establishment was “at the lower end of New-Street, Next Door to Col. Thodey.” — N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 11, 1762. In the “Expense Account Book” (MS.) of Cadwadler, Colen (preserved in N. Y. Hist. Soc.), under date of Oct. 31, 1765, appears this item: “Paid De Bruls for Subscribing for 2 Sets of his Plans of New York . . . £4 19s.” Du Similitude, in his notes on maps, etc. (book 1412 Y, Ridgeway Branch, Library Co. of Pa.), says: “Mr. Banya De Bruls, brought from France. His Excellency the Governor, Accounts of Repairs to the Government’s House, &c. in the Fort; amounting in the whole, to the Sum of £53:19:3½.” — Assem. Jour., II: 711.

Applications are to be made to Mr. George Harrison, “in the Breast of the City of New York.” — N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), Oct. 11, 1762. This was apparently a dancing assembly. — N. Y. Merc., Nov. 8, 1761.

Sir William Franklin (illegitimate son of Benjamin Franklin), — the governor of New Jersey, writes from “Siberot, near Fearsam Hants,” to William Strahan (an old friend of his father), stating, among other things, that he desires a portrait of the king to be painted by “Rameau, the King’s Painter,” and sent him at New York. He also states: “The Print of Mr. Chamberlyne’s Picture of my Father was not done when I came away, but I told him that if the Execution was approved of by Mr. Ludwell and Mr. Myers, that I would take 100 of them.” — From the original letter, sold N.Y. Nov., 1762.

1 Oct. 15 The Thames.—“We hear a very handsome Piece of Plate, having proper Inscriptions, and Emblematical Representations on it, has been sent over . . . to His Excellency Sir Jeffery Amherst, as a Token, among the Rest this Excellency has received, of the high Sense the Nation has of his great Service in America.” — N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), Nov. 1, 1762.

18 Preliminaries for restoring peace with France and Spain are signed at Fontainebleau. They were ratified Nov. 22, at which time hostilities were to cease, and from which date the return of ships captured at sea was to be reclaimed. — N. Y. Gaz., Nov. 24, 1765. The resolution was issued at the court of St. James's, and, on Jan. 24, 1765 (p. 707), the news had reached New York, and a like proclamation was made.— N. Y. Merc., Jan. 24, 1765. For the peace treaty, see Feb. 10, 1761.

19 By a secret treaty of the same date Louis XV cedes to Spain “that part of Louisiana which lay west of the Mississippi, with the island on which New Orleans is situated. France waives its claims to its Louisiana possessions, and submit to the United States for the decision of a mutual pirate crisis, parted with all her American possessions on the main land, and her name nearly disappeared from the map of North America.” — Wistar, Nat. & Crit. Hist. of Am., VI: 686.

9 The Laws, Statutes, Ordinances and Constitutions, Ordered, Made and Established. These Laws, the Laws of New-Holland, English, High Dutch and Low Dutch, are to be “curiously engraved on a Copper Plate, of 21 by 12 Inches each, and printed on best large Paper.” There will also be “nearly engraved on another Copper Plate” a plan of the streets “with their respective Names.” Along with the prints will be published a pamphlet giving “an exact Account of the wholesome Climate, pleasant Situation, Products, etc. of this Province, for the Benefit of the Subscribers, which they may chuse either in English, High Dutch or Low Dutch.” The subscription price is stated at 20 shillings, “One Half to be paid on subscribing, the other Half on the Delivery of these Five Prints.” Each subscriber will “give his Quality and Place of Abode,” and subscriptions “will be closed on the last Day of January next.” Delivery will be made “on or before the first Day of February next.” De Bruls’ establishment was “at the lower end of New-Street, Next Door to Col. Thodey.” — N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 11, 1762. In the “Expense Account Book” (MS.) of Cadwadler, Colen (preserved in N. Y. Hist. Soc.), under date of Oct. 31, 1765, appears this item: “Paid De Bruls for Subscribing for 2 Sets of his Plans of New York . . . £4 19s.” Du Similitude, in his notes on maps, etc. (book 1412 Y, Ridgeway Branch, Library Co. of Pa.), says: “Mr. Banya De Bruls, brought from France. His Excellency the Governor, Accounts of Repairs to the Government’s House, &c. in the Fort; amounting in the whole, to the Sum of £53:19:3½.” — Assem. Jour., II: 711.

7 His Majesty has granted a Royal Bounty of £600, for the joint Benefit of the Colleges lately established in the Cities of New-York and Philadelphia, and has authorized the making a Collection for the same laudable Purpose throughout the Kingdom.” — N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), Dec. 6, 1762; cf. Aug. 19. See May 9, 1765.

12 The Act for the establishment of the University of New York, and the City of New York, is read, at meeting in City Hall; the Governor, the Mayor, Aldermen, and Commonalty, present. The Act received the assent of the Governor, and the Act was accordingly, and in due form, published in the New York Gazette, the 14th day of December, 1765; and the Charter of Incorporation was accepted in the name of the Governor and the City, by Mr. John Pentland, Collector, as aforesaid, and the Charter was returned to the Governor.

18 A provincial act is passed to “impose and Enable the Mayor of New York to order the raising a Sum not exceeding Fourteen hundred Pounds by a Tax . . . for Lighting of Lamps, and providing a Sufficient Number of Watchmen.” — Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 671. Similar acts were passed annually thereafter during the month of December.

19 On this day also another act is passed, which provides that 30 freemen shall be appointed in the city of New York, in addition to 1762 the number already serving. According to a former act said number was not to exceed 500. Ibid., IV: 677. Still another of this lot was used in erecting the old City Hall.—M. C. C., VI: 314. The proceedings which followed are briefly stated in the following summary: On March 8, 1765 (p. 9), the board "having agreed this day with And"k breastied to alter & repair the City Hall for the more Commodious Reception of the Several Branches of the Legislature, and for the Holding of Court, the other public uses," he was allowed, "as being the principal Carpenter or master workman," the sum of 16 shillings a day for every day in actual service, but he "is to Receive no benefit from those who lie Shall Imply under him," and he shall "keep the acc't which Immediately Relate to his Business etc.;"—Ibid., VI: 723. April 12 (p. 6), the "Committee appointed to order the Repairing and ornamenting the City Hall" submitted to the board "the draft or plan of Such Alteration or Amendment;" this was approved, and it was ordered that "the Said Committee Cause the same to be repaired and ornamented in such Manner accordingly." At the same time, the "managers of the Lottery appointed in and by Act entitled an act for Raising the Sum of three Thousand pounds by way of Lottery towards repairing the City Hall" (Assemb. Jour. II: 701), "exhibited their accounts of the Lottery Monies by them severally-received," and it was ordered that the same shall in addition to the sum to be paid to Philip Livingston, chairman of the committee.—Ibid., VI: 726. April 20 (p. 6), it was ordered that the committee "write to Bristol for so much Thatch of Copper as is Necessary to Cover" the city hall (p. 527); on June 16 (p. 9), that they "have power to Raise the same a Story higher" (p. 331); and on July 11 (p. 9), that the Committee in Bristol be brought forward so far into the Street, as to be upon a Range with the two wings thereof" (p. 335). On Nov. 9 (p. 7), the mayor was required to write to Bristol "for so much more Thatch of Copper as will be found Necessary for Finishing the same."—Ibid., VI: 357. Dec. 5 (p. 9), it was ordered that the committee have liberty to borrow £500 upon interest "for the use of this Corporation" (p. 766). On May 11, 1764 (p. 9), payment of £500 was made to Whitehead Hicks, alderman of the East Ward, by the city treasurer, "out of the monies paid into his hands by the Church Wardens of this City . . . to be by him applied towards Rebuilding the City Hall," the board agreeing to return the sum "to the said Treasurer or Chamberlain as Soon as the Same shall be by him required."—Ibid., VI: 725-76. Aug. 29, Alderman Hicks received £500 from the treasurer out of the same fund (p. 386-87). On Nov. 9 (p. 9), it was ordered that the second £500 "towards defraying the Expenses for Enlarging the City Hall" (p. 400); and on May 3, 1765 (p. 766), received £500 from the treasurer (p. 417). On the same date it was ordered that Andrew Breastead for the present do finish the Library Room in the City Hall in the most plain and Cheap manner that can be, and Repair the Stairs as well Leading from below to the Assembly Chamber, as that Leading to the Common Council Room in the Like manner" (p. 418). A number of payments were made on Nov. 20, 1767 (p. 76), for the materials and work done on the repairs.—Ibid., VII: 90-92. The total expense from Dec. 5, 1765, to this date, is estimated to be about £9,694. John Zurricker is paid £15 for "the Cutting of Twelve Cornishes and five Arches for the old City Hall."—M. C. C., VI: 313. It is ordered by the common council that the fireroom "appear in leather Caps at any fire which may happen within this City;"—Ibid., VI: 315. The common council orders payment for repairs to the Broad- way Market.—M. C. C., VI: 313. For the origin of this market, see April 13, 1758. It was also called the Oswego Market.—Land- mark Map Rep. Key, III: 959; De Voe, Market Book, 272. The Master, intending to leave New York, offers for sale, besides his hardware shop at the "Cross Keys and Crown," near the Fly Market, a "new riding chair and single door, and a negro man, about 30 years old." Elbersee may be seen at the "Whitehall Coffee-house, from the hours of 10 to 4;"—Ibid., VII: 764. A "good new dwelling-house, and 4 lots of ground, wherein Benjamin Keats now lives, situated in the West-end of the city of New York" are offered for sale. Applications are to be made to Philip Kissick, of New York, "vintner."—N. Y. Merc., Dec. 27, 1765. This was a tavern at the present 235-254 Broadway, later Montague's. See April 5, 1754.

Probably in this year were drawn, by Capt. Thomas Howdell, R. A., two views of New York, one from the south-west and one from the south-east. These views, which were engraved by P. Canot, are reproduced and described in Vol. I, Pls. 37 and 58.

Two separate copies of a map formerly made by Mr. Maerschel in this year are on file in Vol. II of "Bayard Deeds" (1780-1845) in the N. Y. Hist. Soc. The original was "either lost or mislaid during the present troubles," a record to this effect appearing on the copy, made by S. Gale on May 6, 1780. The original is described in: "A Map of a Parcel of Land Situate near the Hospital in the City of New York—Part of the Estate of the late Reverend Henry Barclay Deceased. Scale Forty Feet in an Inch . . ." This survey shows the location of "The Negroes Burrying Ground," "Ground Fronting the Hospital," "Ann St.," "Anthony St.," "Libert St.," "Katherine St., etc."

Work on the Atlantic Neptune, a collection of charts, plans, and views of the coast and harbors of North America, was begun in this year. The plates were made under the supervision of Lieut.-Col. Des Barres for the use of the British navy. The work extended from 1761 to 1784, and the printing began in 1774. Editions were priced at 1775, 1780, 1814, and 1834. For a detailed account and a description of the publication, see I: 349-52. Two of the Atlantic Neptune views of New York are reproduced as Pls. 44 and 45A, Vol. I.

In this year, James Beekman erected his mansion-house, "Mount Pleasant."—Liber Deeds, XL: 475 (New York). On the modern map it would stand at the north-west corner of First Ave. and 41st St. The house became the headquarters of Gen. Howe, in Revolutionary days, and it was here that Nathan Hale was condemned to death, as a spy (see Sept. 21, 1776). The house was demolished in 1787.—Liber Deeds, MCCCLXXII: 282, 284 (New York). A marble mantle from one of its stately rooms is now in the possession of the N. Y. Hist. Soc. See Landmark Map Rep. Key, III: 948; Pl. 176, Vol. III. For views of the mansion, both exterior and interior, see Man. Com. Coun. (1854-55), 496-498, 502. For an account of the Beekman farm in relation to modern streets, see N. Y. Times, Dec. 6, 1914.

John Brinner, "Cabinet and Chairmaker, from London, At the Sign of the Chair, opposite Flatten-Barrack Hill, in the Broad-Way, New-York" offers "every article in the cabinet, chair-making carving, and gilding business." He "carves all sorts of chimney pieces, glass and Picture frames, and all kind of work on marble and wood." Deck book cases, library book cases, writing and reading tables, commodate and bureau dressing tables, commodate and plain chests of drawers, all sorts of plain and ornamental chairs, sofa beds, settees, couches and easy chairs, etc.;—N. Y. Merc., Jan. 3, 1765.

The members of the Dutch Church who opposed the call of an English minister (see May 3, 1762) inform the consistory that they will agree "to the call of such a minister to preach in the New [Nassau St.] Church . . . , retaining one turn for the Dutch on Saturday." In six, eight, or ten years, they think, "another church shall be built on suitable grounds belonging to the church; and this Third Church shall be for the use of the English service; and to the building of which they promise for themselves and others to give liberally." John Hardenbroek is requested "to make a plan of a Gallery in the New Church, according to the eighth article [see May 1, 1762], and state how much time may be required, and the timber may be obtained for seasoning." A committee is appointed "to write to Holland, to such gentlemen as they deem suitable, to look out for such a minister."—Ectles. Rec., VI: 384-42. A blank call was sent to Holland on Jan. 13 (p. 2) for a minister to preach in the English Church. The letter gave a review of what had happened up to that point, and the minister promptly the call. Among other things it stated that "as our New Church is a large edifice, being one hundred English feet long and seventy-five feet wide, it will require a man with a strong audible voice . . ."—Ibid., VII: 583-59. Regarding the chosen minister, see July 16.

"The mayor is granted £125 by the common council for his fees the past year in connection with granting "Lynces for retailing of Strong Liquors," 241 licenses were issued, yielding £3918.—M. C. C., VI: 317.

A letter is written by the ministers, elders, and deacons of the Reformed Protestant Dutch Church to the Rev. David Longueville and the Rev. James Blindhall at Amsterdam, which reads in part:

"Being an English Colony and all matters of Government, Courts of Justice, and our trade and Traffic with foreigners Carried on in the English Language has by the Lenght [sic] of time gradually undermined our Mother Tongue, in so much that there is scarce a principal family in this City and Even of our own Church whose Children clearly understand the Dutch Language by means whereas we have Daily the Mortification to see the Overspilling of the wealthiest members of our own Congregation Leave our Divine worship, not being able to apprehend what is taught And Join themselves to different Societies that are amongst us, and in Such Numbers, that the Respective English Congregations at Present in this City for the greatest part Consists of Persons who are Descendants of parents that were formerly Communicants of our Church, And they daily Leave us not without regret on Account of their not fully Understanding the Dutch Ministers and of Course are more Edified by English Preaching. Our Congregation has therefore been for some Years past a Nursery for all the English Denominations of Christians in this City, and those Chiefly from our Principal people, Whereby most men now in power belong to other Congregations though Linially Descended from Dutch Parents." Therefore, they express the desire that an English speaking preacher of the Reformed faith be sent over. They want a "Gent Orator Used to Elegant Language, Acquainted with men and Books, to be Othodoxy in his Principals, Of an Unblemished Character, and Affable in his Behaviour." In a postscript they mention the Rev. Archibald Laddie, minister at Vlissingen in Zeeland, as one whose qualifications they would be pleased to have investigated.—A Journal of the proceedings of the Consistory of the Reformed Protestant Dutch Church of the City of New York in Regard to the Petitions of their Congregation for Calling an English Preacher and the Disputes arising therefrom—1762 (MS.), preserved in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Cf. Eccles. Rec., VI. 5834-96, where the letter is erroneously dated. Jan. Laddie was called (see July 16).

The royal proclamation of Nov. 26, 1762, is issued here, declaring a cessation of hostilities with France and Spain (see Nov. 3, 1762); it is ordered to be reprinted and published.—Cal. Coun. Min., 460-61; N. Y. Merc., Jan. 21, 1763. Peace was concluded on Feb. 10 (7.8.).

A newspaper advertisement reads: "To be sold at Public Vendue, At the Merchant's Coffee House, on the 26th Day of January Instant the House and Lot of Ground known by the Name of the Whitehall Coffee-House, with house adjoining, being Part of the Estate of the late Col. John Moore."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), Jan. 10, 1763. The Whitehall Coffee-House had been opened on June 14, 1762, by Rogers and Humphrey, who notified the public that they had made arrangements to receive from London and Bristol "all the public Prints and Pamphlets, as soon as published," and to have on hand a "weekly Supply of New-York, Philadelphia, Boston, and other American Papers."—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 8 1763. The enterprise was, apparently, a failure.

A post-rider, James Monckier of Hartford, has for some time been regularly carrying the N. Y. Gaz.; or, the Weekly Post-Boy from New York to Hartford, by way of New Haven.—See a notice by John Holt in the Post-Boy of March 3, 1763.

Gen. Gage, in a letter to Col. Bradstreet, at Albany, thanks him "for Supplying Fort George with Flower," and informs him that carpenters are to start from New York on the 10th, "and, I hope will join those from Boston at Albany."—Gen. Gage's Letters (MS.), 1759-73, in Harvard College Library.

The Treaty of Paris.—Articles of a peace concluded by England, France, and Spain are signed. By this treaty Great Britain receives control of Canada and all the territory east of the Mississippi, except New Orleans, The French are to have the liberty of fishing and drying on the coast of Newfoundland, and of fishing in the Gulf of St. Lawrence three leagues from the coast belonging to Great Britain. They are likewise ceded the islands of St. Pierre, and Miquelon.—N. Y. Merc., May 16 and 23, 1763. For the "Preliminaries for restoring peace," see Nov. 3, 1762.

After the news of the treaty of peace reached America, Benjamin Franklin, then postmaster-general, established a monthly postal service between Canada and New York.—Smith, Hist. of the Post-Office in British No. Am., 1, citing Gen. P. O. Treasury Letter-Book, 1760-1771, p. 95. See April 25, 1772.

CHAPTER III
THE REVOLUTIONARY PERIOD
1763-1776-1783

PART I
1763-1776

VERY brief summary of some of the principal events of the Revolutionary epoch in New York City's history, from this date (following the "Treaty of Paris"—see Feb. 10) through Nov. 25, 1783 (the date of the evacuation of the city by the British), is contained in Chapter III of Vol. I, pp. 304-34.

John Kingston, James Reade, and their respective wives, release to the corporation "all their Right and Interest of and in Several Streets" laid out through land "lying a little to the Northward of the fresh water."—M. C. C., VI: 321-22. A map of this land made by Francis Maerschak, and dated Nov. 21, 1754, is known as the "Kingston Draught." The streets on this tract, above referred to, are the modern Mott, Mulberry, Baxter, and Park Sts., and Mission Pl. See Aug. 35.

William Walton, Jacobus Roosevelt, and others living in the eastern part of the city, petition the common council for leave to build a public market house at or near Peck Slip, at their own expense. They find they can more conveniently and cheaply buy produce from the country boats that bring such articles to this slip; but they are prevented from doing so by a city ordinance which requires that provisions shall be carried to and sold only at the public markets.—From the original petition (MS.) in file No. 4, city clerk's record-room. Consideration of the subject being deferred (M. C. C., VII: 321), it was ordered, on March 8, that a certain committee "direct the Same to be made and Erected in such convenient place thereabouts as they Shall Judge most requisite for the public Good."—Ibid., VII: 324. The expense for finishing this market was paid on Oct. 28.—Ibid., VII: 352.

The Peck Slip Market was the first one built of brick in the city. It stood facing Water St., on the westerly side, at the head of Peck Slip, which derived its name from Benjamin Peck; and was in the neighbourhood of fashionable dwellings. For various newspaper references to it, see De Voe's Market Book, 303. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 929.

The "Hay Machine" (scales) erected by Isaac van Hook (see July 1, 1756) "proved abortive," but he is paid $75919 for the expense of erecting it.—M. C. C., VII: 322. On May 11, 1764, he was given permission to erect another "in that part of his ward directed by act of assembly."—Ibid., VII: 376-77. See also De Voe, Market Book, 273.

The members of St. Andrew's Society hold their quarterly meeting at the "Sign of the Province Arms."—N. Y. Gen. (Weyman), Feb. 21, 1763. This was the City Tavern, at 115 Broadway, of which, at this time, John Crawley was proprietor. See May 2, 1754. On April 11, Crawley advertised a venue, to be held on the 28th at his house, the "New-York Arms," of tavern furniture, which included "three complete Sets of Pyramidal Glasses, with Sylabub, Jelly, and Sweetmeat ditto," and announced that he would leave very soon for England.—Ibid., Apr. 11, 1763. By May 16 (g.o.), George Burns had become the new proprietor of the Province Arms. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 977.

The deacons of the French Protestant Church petition Monckton for a charter, incorporating them "by the name & style of the Minister, Elders & Deacons of the protestant French Church of the City of New York." They review the history of the church in the province.—Doc. Hist. N. Y., III: 295-96. See also June 19, 1703, and July 8, 1704. Regarding the probably unsuccessful outcome of this petition, see the rejection of similar petitions of the Lutherans, Presbyterians, etc., under March 24, and Aug. 26, 1767.

"This Board having agreed this day with Andw Breasted to alter & repair the City Hall for the more Commodious Reception of the Several Branches of the Legislature, and for the Holding of Courts, and other publick uses [see Dec. 21, 1702], and for that purpose have allowed him, as being the principal Carpenter or master workman, the Sum of Sixteen Shillings p'd Day, for every Day he Shall be in actual Service, he the said Andrew Breasted is to Receive no benefit from those who he shall Employ under him, and to keep the acct &c which Immediately Relate to his Business &c."—M. C. C., VII: 323. See April 12.

A committee of the common council is appointed to supervise an addition to the Counties Market.—M. C. C., VII: 324. This was the fish market at Counties Slip and Pearl St. See Nov. 15, 1720; Aug. 22, 1711; May 7, 1712; Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 958.

Three petitions are presented to the common council regarding new markets on the North River. The first is from a group of inhabitants of the West Ward, "Residing near the slip at the Lower end of Cortlandt Street," who ask "leave to Erect a public market House there at their own expense." The second is from another group in the same ward, "Residing at the Lower End of Deys Street," who ask "leave to Erect a Market House also there at their own Expense." The third is from certain inhabitants in this ward, "residing at or near the Oswego Market in the Broadway Street," who petition "against Granting the prayer of the above said two Petitions" until they also can be heard.—M. C. C., VII: 335.

The originals of the three petitions, still preserved in the city clerk's record-room (file No. 4), reveal several interesting features of the market conditions of that day. The first two groups of petitioners complain of the distance from the North River of "the Crown Market (more commonly called the Oswego Market) in the Broadway" (at the centre of Broadway at the present Liberty St) because "the Country Produce brought down and across the said River to supply the markets of this City must be carried in Carts from the different slips and wharfs on the North River to the said Crown Market, by which means (together with the Ex pense of sometimes Storing the same at or near the said wharfs till it can be carted) the Price of the said produce is very much enhanced to your Petitioners and other Purchasers." It is explained by those petitioners who are in favour of Cortlandt St. that "the Produce in general supply'd by the People residing on both sides of the North River, is brought down by Boatsmen, who likewise in a great degree officiate as Factors, but being paid only for the bare Freight of the same, to shun the danger of leaving their Boats exposed in the different slips with the property of others on board, and the Ex pense of Cartage, do very frequently dispose of the Produce at the Riverside, in contempt of the Law established by the Worshipful Board to the Contrary, and to the great disappointment of those who daily attend the Public Markets to purchase Necessaries for the immediate use of their Families; That some Boatsmen, fearful of transgressing the good Institution forbiding any Persons to dispose of Country Produce but at the Public Markets, for want of a Proper Market Place, often refuse to take in charge or bring such effectual supplies as they otherwise might do, which must needs occasion a scarcity of the same, and consequently cause that which is brought, to be kept up at an extravagant Price; That the hardship attending the Farmers themselves who attend the Market, is very obvious, on Account of the carting their produce (beside that Ex pense as by attending the first Load, what remains in the Boat or on the Dock, is liable to be pilfer'd, and many other Casualties, for which reason above they dread bringing at one time to Market more Produce than can be contained in a single Cart, which is another bad tendency towards the supply of the City."

The petitioners in favour of Deys St. say that "the said Deys Street from the Broadway to the said slip, having lately been dug out and paved by an order of this worshipful Board, is wide and spacious, and has a very gradual, easy and easy ascent in all parts of it, to which it is much the best street leading from the Broadway to the North River as well for Car's Wagons and other Carriages as for persons to walk on foot.

The opposition group desire particularly to be heard against the proposal to build a market "at the North River," the Dwelling house of Peter Messier" (see July 16, 1763). Although the two proposals are not again specifically referred to in the records (that for a market at Cortlandt St. was previously rejected—see M. C., V: 56), both appear to have been denied.—See ibid., VII: 331-32.

Daniel Horsmanden is appointed chief-justice of the supreme Vol. VII: 258. For the controversy in regard to the appointment of judges, their tenure of office, and salary, see Aug. 11, 1764.

Trinity Church offers for lease 220 lots of ground, "joining the Stoocadales, and along the North River," for the terms of 21, 42, or 63 years.—N. Y. Gaz. (Weymar), March 31, 1763. The stockades or palisades which were built in 1746 (see July 6, 1745) are shown on the Holland Map, Pl. 16b, Vol. I. See also Sept. 17, 1757, and Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 945.

Lodwick Bamper, "near the New-English Church, in Beekman's-street," offers for sale rum, molasses, and other commodities, including "waffle-irons," "German flutes," and "large Dutch Bibles with copper plates."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weymar), March 21, 1763. In May, 1755, Edward Bardino, who had been proprietor of Hamden Hall, at Broadway and Warren St., "removed to the house and large garden in a backstreet, formerly called Chapel-street, lately occupied by Mr. Bamper, and now called Kenningstown."—Rivington's Gazetteer, May 18, 1775.

Apr. 4. Prendergast advertises the sale on this day of a "Good new commodious Dwelling House and Lot of Ground, together with another Lot adjoining, both Lots of 67, 56 acres or any three lots of the Corporation. . . . It has all the Conveniences for fit a Tavern, is now kept as such . . . at the Sign of the Hurlers; has a very fine Tennis-Court, or Fire-Alley, and lies between the New-Gaol and Fresh Water Hill . . ."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weymar), April 4, 1765. On June 20, 1765, Prendergast again advertised his two houses to lease. He described each house as having "three good Fireplaces, a good Cellar, and renting now $21 per annum."
—Ibid., June 20, 1765. Again, on April 18, 1766, he announced the sale, on April 29, by public vendue of his tavern, the "Sign of the Hurlers."—N. Y. Merc., April 18, 1766. The location given of this tavern coincides with that of Benjamin Kierstede's, which was taken over prior to March 21, 1756 (p. v.), by Luke Clarke.

Samuel Francis opens an ordinary at the "Sign of Queen Charlotte" (see July 26, 1763).—N. Y. Gaz. (Weymar), April 4, 1765.

"Ordered that Mr Reade Mr Masston Mr Horsmanden Mr Hemans and Mr Pink [see note for this as a Commoner] be Enquired to and look out for a proper and Convenient Lot of Ground in this City whereon to Erect a New Church and report their Opinion to this board with all Convenient Speed."—Trin. Min.
(M.B.). These proceedings resulted in the erection by Trinity of the second chapel of ease, known as St. Paul's, and still standing, the sole surviving ecclesiastical building of the colonial period on Manhattan Island. The movement was probably encouraged by Trinity's accession of many English-speaking members of the Dutch congregation.—Dict. Hist. of Trin. Church, I: 90-93. See June 16.

The committee "appointed to order the Repairing and ornamenting the City Hall" (see Dec. 21, 1765) submits to the common council "the draft or plan of such Alteration or Amendment." The plan is approved and the authorization of the committee is ordered to put it into effect.

At the same meeting the managers appointed in accordance with the provisions of the act for raising by lottery the sum of $3,000 to repair the city hall (see May 6, 1762) make a report of their actions. The board orders that the "Several Ballance, still due to Philip Livingston, chairman of the committee."—M. C., VI: 326.

According to a notice published on April 4, the governors of King's College are desired to meet on this day in the college hall.— N. Y. Gaz. (Weymar), April 4, 1765. It is the first date of record of their meeting there. They were announced to meet there again on Aug. 12.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 4, 1765. On Aug. 23, however, the Apr. announced place of meeting, "the House of the Proprietors, near the Exchange."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weymar), May 15, 1765.

The Rev. Myles Cooper, "a Gentleman recommended by his Grace the Arch-bishop of Canterbury for his distinguished Learning, firm Attachment to our happy Constitution, Pruity and amiable Character," is unanimously elected president of King's College.—
N. Y. Gaz. (Weymar), April 20, 1765.

Notice is given in the Mercury that "the first of May the 18 Printing-Office at the Bible & Crown, in Hanover-Square (see May 12, 1757), is to be removed to Rotten-Roe, next Door to that Corner opposite the Merchants' Coffee House."—N. Y. Merc., Apr. 19, 1765. Ford, Jew. of Hugh Gaine, I: 9. Gaine moved once more on Oct. 3, 1765 (p. 717).

The committee appointed "to order the Repairing and ornamenting the City Hall" is directed to "write to Bristol for so much Thatch of Copper as is necessary to cover the same wall and place the Expenditure thereof to this Corporation."—M. C., VI: 357. See June 16 and Nov. 9.

Payment of $15,155 is ordered by the common council for repairs to "Cozzies street."—M. C., VI: 319. This pier was constructed in 1759 (see April 26, 1760) and is designated as the "Albany" first on the Marsterschall Plan of 1755 (Pl. 34, Vol. I). Further payment for repairs was ordered Jan. 12, 1764.—Ibid., VII: 365-64.
For the extension of this pier, see March 7, 1765. It is sometimes alluded to simply as "the Corporates pier" (ibid., VII: 111), not to be confused with the later "Corporation Dock"
(Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 985). On the Hudson River, New-York, is the tower of London for levelling the king in an article published in the North Briton.—

It is ordered by the governors of King's College that the committee "for Building the College" (see May, 1760) be a committee "to include the College Ground with a Fence of Posts & Rails."—

Mrs. Sarah Steele, who had been for a short time proprietor of the "King's Arms" tavern, just north of the corner of Broad and Water Sts. (see Oct. 3, 1748), moves to Whitehall, taking with her this famous old tavern sign.—N. Y. Gaz., May 2, 1765. The large house into which she moved was on the present south-east corner of Whitehall and Bridge Sts., and had been erected as a private dwelling, in 1658, by Cornelis Steenwyck, and occupied by him until his III. Mrs. Steele remained here until shortly after Jan. 12, 1767
(p. v.), when she offered the house for sale or lease. On April 1, 1768, the premises, then occupied, probably as a private dwelling-house, by Col. Gabbert, were again offered for rent, "with or without Furniture, as may suit the Tenant." Apparently the house was not re-opened as a tavern until 1770, when Edward Bardino, proponent (see note for this as a Commoner) before May 13, 1771 (p. v.), Burns had succeeded Bardino, and the house was again advertised for rent.
Burns was still here on June 24, 1771, when another advertisement offered the place for lease. It may be presumed, from the frequency with which the premises changed hands, that the old house had fallen into decay and was no longer desirable for tavern-keeping.
No record exists to indicate that this site was a popular resort during the next few years. The house was burned during the great fire of Sept. 21, 1776. While Mrs. Steele and others were conducting the King's Arms tavern at Whitehall, another and more popular "King's Arms" was being kept at the upper end of Broadway, the later noted tavern of Montague, for a history of which, see March 11, 1754.

"The Post-Office is removed to Mr. Van Dam's House, where Capt. Pryce lately dwelt, opposite the North-West Corner of the New-Dutch Church."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weymar), May 3, 1765. For the use of the church itself as a post-office later, see Jan. 27, 1785.

John Holt offers for sale certain acts of assembly "At the New Printing Office, at the House where Mrs. Steel has for some Years kept the King's Arms Tavern, opposite the Exchange in Broad St."—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 26, 1765. Holt's former location was at Burling Slip (see April 29, 1762).

John Holt observes, in his newspaper, that it is much more necessary in New York than in London that names be put on doors, as the inhabitants here move every May Day and if, with the name of the inhabitant (which might be on a moveable board), the name of the street or place were also affixed to every house, it would en-

Donzede Archibald Lailde, of the English church at Vlissingen in Zeeland, having been recommended by the Amsterdam correspondents of the New York consistory for the position of English minister at New York, the consistory decides to call him to officiate in the "new" Dutch Church (on Nassau St.).—Eccles. Rec., VI: 357. The call was dated July 20. He was offered £500, New York money, to be paid annually, with the right to quarter sums.—Ibid., VI: 3874-50. The opponents of Lailde wrote to the classis of Amsterdam on July 22, stating their opposition to an English preacher (ibid., VI: 3858-81), but the classis maintained its position.—Ibid., VI: 3899. It was recorded in the minutes of the classis of Amsterdam, on Oct. 3, that Rev. Mr. Lailde had informed them he had accepted the call.—Ibid., VI: 3893. On the same day the classis wrote to the opponents of Lailde in New York, pointing out that it was desirable to have an English-speaking minister to hold the allegiance of members of the Dutch Church who have been brought up to use English, and to the English language, and that there were few if any buildings of the church might be better protected.—Ibid., VI: 3898-99. Rev. Mr. Lailde was installed by the classis at Amsterdam on Dec. 5, 1755, and signed the "Formula of Concord."—Ibid., VI: 3907. For further action, see Dec. 7. He arrived in New York on March 29, 1764 (p. 49).

The king's proclamation for a general peace, dated Mar. 21, 1765, is published in New York. The high cost of food supplies is complained of in a petition bearing this date, signed by many of the leading citizens of New York, which states "That in all populous Cities the Regulation of the public Markets respecting the Price of Provisions hath ever been esteemed a Matter of great Importance to the Inhabitants and worthy the attention of the public. That your Petitioners have for some time past observed with concern that many of the Necessaries of Life have been Sold in our Markets at exorbitant Prices, and that Beef in particular is Sold at a much higher rate as your Petitioners are Credibly informed than in the Neighbouring Colonies. And the your Petitioners hoped that as well the price of Beef as of other Butchers Meat exposed to Sale in the said Markets by the greater piety of the Provisions necessarily consequent on the Conclusion of a peace yet they are Surprised to find that the same Continues as high as it was in times of much greater Consumption and Scarcity. Your Petitioners therefore humbly pray your worships so to regulate and Assess the said Markets that shall be Held in the said Markets and of such other Provisions as may be thought to require the like regulations as to your Worships shall seem Just and reasonable."—From the original petition in the city clerk's record-room, beautifully engrossed on parchment, and endorsed "filed Aug. 17 1763." The common council orders that Prince Street in Montgomery Ward and "Cleat" Street be dug down and levelled.—M. C. C, VI: 337. The Prince Street was changed to Prince Street by an Act of May 21, 1764 (p. 26). "Cleat" Street was the modern Cliff Street. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 996, 1008; Post, Old Streets, 61.

A new law "for Regulating the Public Markets within the City of New York and for Preventing the Forestalling of Provisions Coming to the said Markets," offered by the committee of the common council appointed on Aug. 15 (p. 25), is approved and ordered published. It has the same preamble and some of the provisions as the law of Nov. 18, 1754 (p. 36). Every day in the week, Sunday excepted, is to be a market-day, from sunrise to sunset. "Country people and others, resorting to the said market's may stand or sit in such part or parts thereof as are not from Time To Time particularly appropriated and Allotted to other person or persons and their [ze][z] vend their Flesh, fish, poultry, Herbs, Fruit Eggs, Butter Cheese, Bacon and other provisions and commodity's in the public markets hereafter mentioned. That is to say, at the door of Old King's Slip next to the Market House at and the Market House at or near Countess's Key Commonly Called the Countess's Slip and at the market House in the Broadway commonly called the Broad Way Market all which are hereby Appointed to be the public and Common Market's within the said limits, except Old Kindred Kind of Grain of all kinds only Excepted and which are only to be sold at the Broad Way Market, and the Old Slip Market Aforesaid." The principal feature of this law is section II, which is intended to prevent the cornering of the food supply by speculators, and the consequent increase in prices charged by them. It is the same as in the act to restrain the Buckets of retailers, "who shall not Sell Again," are not to enter the markets until the afternoon; they are not to expose their goods or provisions for sale in the markets or streets; and they are not to "forestall" provisions coming to the markets,—that is, buy them before they reach the markets. No unwholesome food is to be exposed for sale. Butter placed on sale in pound rolls, pots, dishes, or other vessels, under six pounds, shall have a weight marked on it, and butter not marked or under-weight shall be forfeited to the poor. Butchers are to pay market fees for their stalls, etc., and for meats they place on sale, to be collected by the "Farmer" (the lessee) of the markets; but country people are allowed to sell meat raised on their farms without paying fees.—M. C. C, VII: 337-42. De Voe's Manual Book, 145-47.

Y. Gaz. (Weyman), Aug. 29, 1763. On Sept. 12, a large addition to the library was announced and "Conditions for subscribing" were given as follows: (a) Each Subscriber to pay Five Dollars a Year, viz. Two Dollars on subscribing, and one Dollar at the beginning of each quarter afterwards. (b) No Subscriber to take above one Book at a Time out of the Library. (c) Any Subscriber losing or spoiling a Book shall pay the full price of it, or the Set, taking the Remainder.

"Note,—Books will be delivered out of the Library any Time, except Sundays, and after Store is shut."—Ibid., Sept. 12, 1765; cf. N. Y. Gaz., Hist. of N. Y., Oct. 1765. Sale to the public about this library appeared in the Post-Boy of Sept. 26, 1765, soon after the reestablishment of the Corporation Library (see Aug. 23, 1765).

In a letter to Geo. Monckton, Jonathan Watts reports the receipt of $1,015.176, a fine payment on the sale of Monckton's furniture.—See June 28. A balance of $1,027.186 was reported as received in another letter, of the 17th. He reported as not sold and in his case a "Silver Urn or Tea thing," that "would not sell any thing near your price. . . . Things seem at present in a deep sleep, the old gentleman [Colden] still in the Country. . . . I have paid your subscription to the Greenwich Book [see May 26, 1765] which goes on pretty well."—Aspinwall Papers, 489, 490, 491. In another letter, of Dec. 27, he wrote: "The Greenwich road is ready & very good one it is."—Ibid., 505.

Samuel "Francis" now calls his tavern the "Sign of the Queen's Head," and advertises "Sweatmeats."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), Sept. 12, 1765; see Dec. 6, 1764.

Colden writes to the Earl of Egremont: "We have a Set of 14 Lawyers in this Province as Insolent, Pertinent, and at the same time as well skilfull in all the chicanerie of the Law as perhaps is to be found anywhere on the continent."—Ibid., p. 765. "We are very sorry to restrain the disinterested judges of ability and skill in the law are required. But "the distinguished Families in so small a Country are so united by intermarriages & otherwise" that in few cases can a cause of any consequence be brought before a judge who "is free from connections with those interested either in the Case or in other Cases similar to it."—Colden Papers, 97, 98, 231.

The minister, elders, and deacons of the Lutheran Church petition Colden for a charter. Embodied in this petition is the narrative of an earlier one, of Feb. 8, 1759 (p. 29),—Doc. Hist. N. Y. (140 ed.), III: 297. See also ibid., III: 298-99. The petition was denied.—See July 13, 1764.

"Bull-heating" (or baiting) is to be hold in the Bowery Lane near the De Lancey Arms Tavern (kept by George Barr).—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), Sept. 26, 1763.

Hugh Gaine Acquaints the Public, that this Day he removes his Shop from Robert Coenties (now April 8) to the House he formerly occupied in Hanover Square.—N. Y. Merc., Oct. 3, 1765; Jour. of Hugh Gaine, I, 9 (editorial note). Except for a few weeks (see Sept. 24, 1765), Gaine continued his office here until the publication of the Mercury ceased in 1773.

We are credits meal, Colden. That the Merchants of this City expect in a few weeks from Ireland, about 6000 Pickins of best Irish Butter; on the arrival of which, 'tis not impossible the Country People who used to supply our Markets, may be obliged to purchase large Quantities of Salt."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), Oct. 3, 1764.

Walter C. Colden to Governor Coenties (see June 28) writes from New York to Geo. Monckton: "It may not be improper to observe to your Excellency, that it has been usual to send over a new Great Seal 1761 for this Province at the Accession of a New King. It has been longer delayed at this time than usual & may be forgot. The Kings & Queens Pictures have likewise been sent at the same time & some other things."—From the original letter (hitherto unpublished), in N. Y. Pub. Library, Oct. 24, 1763, vol. 2d, 247; ed. noted "New York MS. Letters & Documents, 1684-1775."

18 The German Reformed Congregation in New York having written to Germany for a minister to come over, the Rev. Johann Michael Kern arrives. He preached several times, and on Jan. 25, 1764, received from the church a commission to serve as its minister. Rev. Lambeth De Ronde, of the Dutch Reformed Church, witnessed the installation on Jan. 26.—Eccles. Rec., VI: 3921. See also Oct. 28, 1765.

19 William Johnson adjoins to begin on this day a course of experiments and lectures on electricity, "At the Assembly Room at the City Arms."—N. Y. Merc., Oct. 24, 1763. See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 997. See also Oct. 31.

It is resolved by the consistory of the German Reformed Church in New York to join the classis of Amsterdam or the synod of Holland, and that the Low Dutch ministers of this city, Rittersma and De Ronde, be conferred with in order to carry the resolution into effect.—Eccles. Rec., VI: 3901. The necessary credentials for subscription to the classis of Amsterdam were signed on June 18, 1764 (ibid., VI: 3924-35), and the clasists was notified by letter of June 21.—Ibid., VI: 3939-40.

20 The common council orders the payment of "the further sum of $8 . . . towards defraying the Expence of finishing the market House in pecks Slip."—M. C. C., VI: 352. This date, therefore, marks approximately the time of its completion. It was begun on or about Feb. 15 (g.c.). See also De Voe, Market Book, 702.

21 Sir Henry Amherst, commander-in-chief of the British forces, is in New York, urging the government of this province to raise 1,400 men for employment on the frontiers.—Assembly Jour., II: 721.

22 At some point prior to this date, the Dove Tavern was established at what is now the north-west corner of Third Ave. and 66th St. (Weyman), Oct. 31, 1765. Although it was a popular landmark for over thirty years, the names of only two proprietors are known to us,—those of Abraham Rice, who occupied the premises prior to 1773, and Alexander McEachland, who was there for a time prior to 1789 (see Nov. 6, 1789). Near here, Nathan Hale was executed on Sept. 22, 1776 (p.c.). This public house was kept here under the same name as late as 1798.—M. C. C. (N.), XII: 284.

23 Electrical experiments are advertised to begin at 11 o'clock at the "Exchange." Tickets are sold at "the Gentleman's Coffee House," and by H. Gaine.—N. Y. Merc., Oct. 31, 1765.

24 According to the Ordnance Act [see June 16] he built on the Church Ground up the Corner of Division Street."—Trin. Min. (MS.). Fulton Street, west of Broadway, was at this time called Division Street; the church referred to is St. Paul's Chapel.—Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 914, 998. See also April 5, 1764.

25 As the city hall is being repaired (see Aug. 15), the assembly adjourns to the next day in the common council chamber.—Assembly Jour., II: 720.

26 "It appearing to this Board that there is a deficiency of Copper wanting for the covering the following City Hall—M* Mayor is therefore desired to write to Boston on Account of this Corporation for so much more Thatch of Copper as will be found Necessary for finishing the same and to remit to M* Henry Cruger in Bristol the Ballance of his Account Against this Corporation for Copper Herefore purchased of him [see April 20] and charge the said Remittance to this Corporation."—M. C. C., VI: 537. See Dec. 5, 1764.

27 A provision of the law that the boundaries between Pennsylvania and Maryland and between Maryland and Delaware. They were employed on this work until Aug. 1768. On Sept. 9, they sailed from New York for England.—Hist. Mag., 1st ser., VI: 199-202.

29 Gen. Thomas Gage arrives in the city from Montreal "to take upon himself the command of his Majesty's forces in North America."—N. T. Gen. (Weyman), Nov. 21, 1765; Winson, Nat. & Crit. Hist, of Am., VII: 701; VIII: 463.

30 The common council appoints Andrew Maerschalk and Gerard Bancker "Public Surveyors of this City."—M. C. C., VI: 358.

Andrew Maerschalk was the son of Francis (N. Y. Merc., Dec. 22, 1765), who was first appointed city surveyor on June 8, 1735 (g.c.), and who died Sept. 6, 1776 (ibid., Sept. 9, 1766).

31 The assembly resolves that the corporation of New York City had no right to declare a law for assailing all kinds of Victuals to be set to sale in the publick Markets of this City, and for establishing a new Assise for that purpose."—Assembly Jour., II: 729-30. A bill making void this repeal was passed by the assembly on Dec. 14.—Ibid., II: 737. There is no record of its reaching the Senate.

32 The Gazette reports the death, in Jamaica, L. I., of a very old man, John Cockier. "He often said he was a soldier in the Fort in Governor Leyser's [Leisler's] Time . . . and had often shot Squrels, Quails, &c. on or near Fort Barker's Hill in this City, which was then a Wilderness."—N. Y. Gen. (Weyman), Nov. 28, 1763. Pot Baker's (Potter's) Hill rose from the west shore of Little Collect Pond (see Pl. 8-1, Vol. I). The present hall of records is built on the levelled site of its crest.—See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 967.

The common council orders "That the Committee for Causing the City Hall to be Repaired, have Liberty To Borrow upon Interest for the use of this Corporation the sum of Five Hundred Pounds."—M. C. C., VI: 360. See also May 11, 1764.

34 Johnson writes to the lords of trade: "Without doubt much illicit Trade is carried on in this place, and, tho' more of it has been detected and punished in this Port, than any of the other Colonies, I am persuaded there is not less among them, in proportion to the Trade. That the officers of the Customs in this Port, are more careful than in the others, I believe from this observation, that the illicit Traders send their vessels to the nearest port to the Eastward or Westward of this Port, from whence they import their cargoes, with proper clearances & certificates that the goods are legally import. . . ."

35 The Merchants in this place complain, that there is not the same care taken to prevent illegal Trade in Delaware River, and to the Eastward that is in this Port, whereby the Merchants in those parts are able to undersell them, and they loose their Trade, and that this place will be impoverished, while the others grow rich."—N. Y. Col. Docs., VII: 68-85.

36 Anticipating the early arrival of Rev. Archibald Laflifie (see July 16), the consistory of the Dutch Church on Nassau St. decides that "the proposed gallery" (see May 3, 1762) shall be constructed. The work was entrusted to Messrs. Hardenbrook and Brestede, carpenters.—Eccles. Rec., VI: 3909. On Jan. 8, 1764, it was resolved that "the proposed gallery" (see May 3, 1762) shall be twenty-one feet deep, and not less than eleven feet high. The South gallery to be fifteen feet deep and of the same height." The supporting posts, as originally proposed, were to be of red cedcar from Georgia. The committee and carpenters were to provide such posts for the gallery as they deemed best, and to "complete all the other material."—Ibid., VI: 5909, 3912. In the records of March 8 and 14, a "newly approved plan" is mentioned on the basis of which the consistory was requested to proceed with the work. A committee of three also was appointed "to arrange the benches in the order they now are in relation to the pulpit," and this "improved plan" was presented on March 27.—Ibid., VI: 3915, 3916. On May 1, 1764, the consistory resolved "That the pillars of the gallery be carried through to the roof of the church to support the same," a procedure that made it necessary "to take off the roof." The sum of £600 was borrowed from Gerardus W. Beckman "to complete the New Church."—Hist. Mag., 1st ser., VII: 915-17; see also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 915, under "Middle Reformed Dutch Church." Refering to the changes made in the interior of the church in 1764, Rev. Thomas De Witt, writing in 1876, stated: "The pulpit was removed to the north end and galleries were erected on the other three sides, with the entrances were formed on the north and south sides."—A Discourse delivered in the North Reformed Dutch Church (College), in Aug., 1862 (1875), 28-29.

In a letter to Gen. Monckton, in England, Daniel Horsmanden says: "Our Assembly have been somewhat untoward as to Genl. Amherst. Recent in N. America, the Indians, now armed against the French, have been employed against the Indians [see Oct. 30], the Reason that the like Application was not made to the Government to the Eastward: They have provided for Levying ball that Number, 5000, of which to be under the Command of the General, the rest to guard the Frontiers of . . ."
Albany, Ulster & Dutchess as the Govr shall direct."—Chalmers Papers, IV, in N. Y. Pub. Library.

A note to Gen. Monckton, Jonathan Watts says: "I am sorry the assembly out of dislike to the old Man [Caldwell] have taken off the £200 they added to your Salary, it looks too unsteadily—Geo! Gage believe he has made a requisition of all the Colonies for Men to act rigorously in the Spring but has got no Answer . . . We are passing many Bills but sadly puzzled to make a Council & after all to have a whole Branch of the Legislature trusted in the hands of three Men, the majority of five, is too much."—Chalmers Papers relating to N. Y., II.

13 A provincial act is passed "to Regulate the Pilots and Establish their Station at Sandy Hook and the port of New York . . ." It provides for the appointment of a master and three or more wardens of this port.—Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 711. As early as June 10, 1758, a master and eight wardens of the port had been appointed.—Stevens, Chamber of Commerce Records, 1769-1784 (1867), 127.

There is presented, in the assembly, a bill entitled "An Act to prevent the Practice of Cock-fighting." It had a first and a second reading, but there is no record of its passage.—Assemb. Jour. II: 737.

The provincial council orders a proclamation to be issued assenting of the New York Province to consider the Connecticut River as its eastern boundary. It was issued on Dec. 18.—Col. Coun. Min., 465, 593. See, further, July 12, 1764.

Capt. John Montresor reports: "This day arrived at New York in 26 days from Sandy Hook, from Col. Gladwin [commander of the garrison thereof] to the Commander in Chief."—Montresor's Jour. op. cit., 252-53. Gen. Gage, writing to Col. Braddock, under date of Dec. 25, also gives the 16th as the date of Montresor's arrival.—Gen. Gage's Letters (M.S.) op. cit.

20 William Livingston and William Smith, Jr. are paid £117,111110 for revising the laws of this colony from 1742 to 1762.—Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 734. The revision was ordered on Nov. 8, 1760 (g. v.) and the laws were published in 1762 (g. v.).

A provincial act is passed providing for a lottery to raise £5,000 "to be laid out, in a Bounty on Hemp to be raised in this Colony." Elias de Grusche and John Long are appointed "Inspectors of all Hemp on which a Bounty is to be allowed."—Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 737-39.

Anticipating the completion of the Sandy Hook lighthouse (see June 11, 1764), an act is passed "to lay a Duty of Tonnage on Vessels for defraying the Expense of the Light-House on Sandy Hook," the money to be applied for buying oil, tallow, coal, etc., and for the services of a keeper.—Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 741-45.

An act is passed to prevent hunting with firearms in the city of New York. Any person "convicted before any member of His Majesty's Court of Commissions of shooting a man, woman, or child, or other person without license "shall forfeit and pay for every such offence the sum of Twenty Shillings."—Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 745, 749.

Colden signs a bill passed by the assembly to punish more effectually idle and disorderly persons who make it a practice to rob and plunder in the orchards, gardens, fields, and inclusions, in the Out-Wards.—Assemb. Jour. II: 739, 738.

"At the Sign of the fry'd Oysters and Platter," opposite the Moravian Meeting House, in Fair (Fulton) St., fried and pickled oysters are "served in or out of the House."—N. Y. Merc., Dec. 26, 1765. Ten years later this, or a similar sign, hung out from, a tavern at Whitehall. See Nov. 20, 1773.

At about this time, Hangovers invented the spinning-jenny.

Francis Bernard, in his Principles of Law and Policy applicable to the British Colonies in America, written in the spring of 1764, speaks of the advantage of unifying the administration of the colonies. Bernard presents 97 proposals, among which are these: Representatives should have been called to Westminster, and a convention parliament thus organized should have acted to define constitutional relations of the colony and mother country; learnings heard in the colonies in 1764 should be heeded; under existing circumstances the colonies consider that taxation has been sprung on them.—From Bernard's Select Letters on the Trade and Government of Am. (London, 1774).

The first volume of the Journal of the Votes and Proceedings of the General Assembly of the Colony of New York, covering the period from 1691 to 1713, inclusive, is published by order of the general assembly, by Hugh Gaine at his own Printing Office at the Bible & Crown, in Hanover Square. The second volume, covering the years 1714 to 1765, was published by him in 1766. In an appendix to this Journal, it is stated: "Inasmuch as a few of the Votes and Proceedings of the General Assembly, relative to the Affair of Capt. Jacob Leisler, are missing, and consequently the public not fully informed, as to the Justice or Injustice of his Suffering: It was therefore thought necessary, for the Satisfaction of the Public, and in Justice to the Family and Descendants of the said Capt. Leisler, to publish the following Act of Parliament, relating to that Catastrophe." Then follows the Act of 66 Geo. III (1656) for reverting the attainder of Jacob Leisler and others. Leisler was executed 73 years before this publication of the act.—See May 16, 1761.

By an order of the "Post-Masters General," issued by "James Parker, Comptroller," from the general post-office at Woodbridge, N. J., mail between New York and Philadelphia is to be delivered three times per week, weather permitting. "A Post Rider with the Mail for Philadelphia" will leave New York at one o'clock Monday, Wednesday, and Friday. "Letters will pass from one to the other in less than 24 Hours."—N. Y. Merc., Jan. 2, 1764. See also N. J. Arch., 1st ser., Vol. XXIV (Newspaper Extracts, Vol. V), 291.

Thomas Brookes advertises for sale a house and lot in William St., "next Door to the Roe-Buck", evidently a tavern.—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), Jan. 2, 1764. On Dec. 1, 1764, Mr. Le Gry, a fencing and dancing master, proposed to open a school in the house of John Ewer, at the upper end of Horse and Cart St.—N. Y. Merc., Dec. 4, 1769.

An attack on the jail by soldiers is thus described in the Post-Boy: "On Sunday night last, the City was alarmed by the Ringing of the Bells, and the Cry of Fire, but it proved to be a Riot of a Party of Soldiers, to rescue a Private from [Montreal's] Men from the New Goal in this City. . . . In this Riot a few Persons were wounded or hurt, and One Servant was killed." According to the prisoners, Mr. Miles, the keeper (see Jan. 17, 1767), refused the soldiers' demand for the keys and struggled with them until he was cut and bruised. Then they broke "all the Locks from the Doors from the Cupola down to the Dungeons, not excepting those where Criminals for the most atrocious Offences were confined."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 19, 1764. On Jan. 25, five of the soldiers were found guilty by the general court of "breaking the gaud and rescuing Major Rogers." They declared "the Major was privy to the Design."—Ibid., Jan. 26, 1764.

"We hear that one Company of the New-York Provincial Volunteers marched above a fortnight ago, another last Sunday, and that the remainder will follow in a few Days. They are all clothed in the most complete manner for the Service."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), Jan. 15, 1764.

The Rev. George Whitefield leaves the city for Boston. "He has spent seven Weeks with us preaching twice a Week to more general Acceptance than ever; and been treated with great Respect by many of the Gentlemen, and Merchants of this Place."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), Jan. 21, 1764.

Jonathan Watts writes again to Monckton: "You have said nothing about the House at Greenwych of course it is supposed to remain with you—Gen' Gage is at a loss for a House & I am sure would be glad of the use of it, till you want it yourself."—Chalmers Papers relating to N. Y., II. On March 11 (g. v.), Watts again wrote to Monckton on this subject.

It is reported that "there are more Horses now to be let, in this City, than have been at any Time for 7 years past." The commerce of the continent is said to be "in a languishing condition; our Debt in Europe increases; our Power to pay it off decreases. To find out the Causes, and point out a remedy for this great evil; is Object of the most serious Consideration to every Friend to Great-Britain and North America; for which End, the Merchants of this City had public Notice to assemble on Friday last, at Mr. Burn's Long-Room where a very considerable Body of them met, and appointed a Committee in this City, to request the Legislature of this Province, representing the Decline of Trade, and the Dis- tresses of the Merchants and Traders of this City; praying its Inter- position with the Parliament of Great Britain; And as every Gentle- man who is a Friend to the Trade of our Mother Country, or has Property in this Province, must conceive himself interested in the Success of this undertaking, it is hoped that they will contribute thereo, by furnishing such Materials as they may think proper to introduce on this Occasion, by a Direction to the Province Arms, where they will be gratefully received by the Committee, who will fix such Times to meet; of which the Pulbick will have Notice."—

10. "Provident and Correcting the New Goal" is given power by the common council to "Cause to be Erected opposite the said New Goal a Pulbick Whipping post, Stocks Cage and Pillary" at the City's Expense.—M. G. C., VI: 366. See Sept. 5.

One Turner secures the lease of the "Exchange" for one year at the yearly rent of $60 from May first.—M. G. C., VI: 765.

"The Merchants of this City are earnestly requested to meet at the Queen's Head, (Mr. Fracco's) near the Exchange, on Wednesday next (March 7) ... on Business of great Importance to Trade."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), March 5, 1764. See March 8.

"Memorial of New York merchants on the sugar act sent to the lords of trade."—Cal. Coun. Min. 464. See also April 20.

Colden transmits to the lords of trade a "memorial which the Merchants have ordered their agent to present to the House of Commons" (see March 5)—N. Y. Col. Doc., VII: 612.

In another letter to Montague, Jonathan Watts says: "Greenwich stands still empty as it did, people wish you would fill it again, I observ'd before to you, that Gen Gage would like to have it till either you arriv'd or relinquished it—The Merchants send you a Copy of their Memorial on Trade" (see March 5).—Chalmers Papers relating to N. Y., II. For evidence that Gage did occupy the ground, see June, 1764.

"Edward Bairden [Bardin], Who Keeps the Sign of the King's Arms, at the upper End of the Broad-Way, facing the Commons, the House wherein Philip Kuyckx formerly lived, and lately Benjamin Kuyckx [see April 14, 1764], is desired to inform the Pulbick, That he has now open'd a said House for the Entertainment of Company, where constant Attendance is given, and every Thing that is genteel and agreeable provided. ... The best of Madeira Wine, Miel, Oakes, &c. &c. &c. and Tarts will be drawn from Seven in the Evening till Nine at Night."—N. Y. Gaz.
(Weyman), March 6, 1764. For a history of this tavern, which later became famous as Montagne's, see April 5, 1754.

The London Coffee House, on the new dock, is mentioned in an advertisement. This was probably at Wall and Water Sts; for in 1763, when an auction of "New and Old Books" was announced to be held there, the house was described as "opposite the Merchants Coffee-House"—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), March 12, 1764; N. Y. Merc., Oct. 31, 1768. This was evidently the same tavern as the "Duke of Cumberland."

Gen. Gage, writing from New York to Col. Bradstreet, says:
"What News about the Provincialists, is that New York promises to make up their Troops 500 complete, Jersey has voted Four Companies of Sixty each, and I expect 500 from Canada ... I press the Governors to have all their People ready by the Time the Navigation is practicable, which I hope will be soon. I can't positively give you an Answer till the final Answer is given by the Assembly of Pennsylvania, which must come shortly. The Assembly have presented some Bills, which the Gov't has returned with Amendments.
This is all we yet know ... I believe your Information is wrong about the Designs of the Massachusetts Government. They do not chuse to assist, but to throw the Expense on the Governments who are concerned more than themselves, by being more exposed to the Fourteen of the "Indians lately taken by the Party sent out by Sir William Johnson" arrive at New York. They are "properly taken care of by being lodged and fed in separate apartments in our New Goal, with Iron (instead of Leather) Moccasins at their Heels"—at which they give "a very sneering and insulting Cast of the Features."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), March 26, 1764; Golden Papers in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections (1878), I: 519.

Rev. Archibald Laidlie (see July 16, 1763) arrives at New York, to officiate as English-speaking minister in the Dutch Church on Nassau St. He produced his credentials before the consistory on Apr. 1 (q.v.)—Eccles. Rec., VI: 594; Journal of the proceedings of the Reformed Dutch Church, ap. cit. He was inducted into the position on April 15 (q.v.). It was his intention to preach annually in Dutch.
The Dutch Psalms were being translated; "to enable both English and Dutch to sing together."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), April 16, 1764. Regarding the English version of the Psalms, then in Dutch, see Eccles. Rec., VII: 792, 792, 793.

Writing from New York to Sir William Johnson concerning the Indian troubles, Gen. Gage says: "The Provinces have been very backward in affording that Assistance so much for their Interest to do. Connecticut however has agreed to raise 500 men, Jersey about 200, and Pennsylvania 300. And I only number those Troops for Colonel Bradstreet to begin his Campaign, And that he may now push on as fast as he pleases, I have put all the Forces from Albany Westward under his Command. The Number of Indians I shall desire of you for this Army, I will mention in my next, when I have settled with Colonel Bouquet, the operations to the Southward. But the Troops you have plaid there old Trades, vol. the men, & then quarrelled with the Governor about the Rev. Archibald Laidlie (see Mar. 29) produces his credentials before the consistory of the Reformed Protestant Dutch Church.

As the New Dutch Church was rendered unfit for service by Reason of Turning the pews on a new plan for building three Gal-laries, it was agreed to Referr Inducing Mt Laidlie into the Congre-sation until the Ground pews in the New Church were set in their proper place.—Jour. of the proceedings of the Ref. Prat.
Dutch Church, in N. Y. Hist. Soc. He was inducted on Apr.
15 (q.v.). For the account of the remodelling of this church, see
Dec. 7, 1763.

Mr. Huske, American born and educated in Boston, "has lately got a seat in the House of Commons; but instead of standing an Advocate for his injured Country, he has officiously pressed in the House of Commons, to lay a Tax on the Colonies, which will amount to $500,000 per Ann. Sterling." He says the colonists are well able to pay the money.—N. Y. Merc., April 2, 1764.

An advertisement reads: "To Be Let, The Play-House at the upper End of Broadway. The Method is the same as at the Westward.
Very convenient for a Store, being upwards of 90 Feet in Length, high 40 Feet wide."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), April 2, 1764. The theatre was later reopened for performances (see April 3, 1766). See also,
Dec. 19, 1769.

It is ordered by the common council "that the Hill nearly opposite the Widow Montany" in Montomerye Ward of this City be Dug Down and Levelled."—M. G. C., VI: 174. This was evidently along Queen St., as "the Widow Montanye's Gate" is there.—
Ibid., VI: 61.

On this day, "the morning being dark and cloudy," there was "some Thunder and Lightning, one smart Flash of which struck the Steeple of Trinity Church, but did no great Damage."—N. Y.
Merc., Apr. 9, 1764. In reference to this matter Sir William Johnson wrote to David Colden on Apr. 22, asking information about the length and thickness of the conducting rod and whether the occudrants in any way "make against Dr. Franklin's method of preserving Houses and other edifices from Lightning?"—Colden MSS., in N. Y. Hist. Soc.

Answering on May 7, Colden wrote: "The Steeple of Trinity Church is furnished with a Conductor Rod, not less than half an Inch Square—Only the Point above the Weather Cock is very Long & Glit &c. I believe the whole is well executed unless it be the joinings of the parts of the Rod, at each of which there is a large knob of Iron.
The Point of the Rod is not melted or any alteration made in it, that we can discern from the ground, nor is the Conducting Rod broken in any part. The Lightning Struck into One of the Urns, of which there are four upon the Corners of the Square Column of the Steeple, above which the Conical Spire rises more than a Third of the whole height—the stroke broke off some pieces of wood from the foot of the Urn, but no effects nor its path cannot be traced lower down, which shows it must have been a weak Stroke—Some gentlemen who live near the Church, took notice of the change in the Column, which was remarkably low, & had observed to each other that they appeared considerably lower than the top of the Steeple, just before it was struck. One family were so much alarmed by the nearness of the Clouds & a little thunder, that they ordered the fires in the Houses to be put out, for fear of accidental Fire—" Considering the situation of the Urn, which I believe is 50 or 60 feet below the top of the Spire, & not more than 15 feet distant from the Center of the Base of the Spire it appears extremely improbable that the Cloud, from whence the Stroke issued, was above the top of the Spire, and that the effect of the Stroke was confined to the Clouds, there is great reason to believe the Cloud was really below the Point of the Conductor. And if So, this Instance will not in any degree invalidate Dr. Franklin's method of Preserving Houses from Lightning, but shows that in such high Edifices a Point & Con-

CHRONOLOGY: THE REVOLUTIONARY PERIOD: 1763-1776

1. The Dutch party or faction of the consistory of the Dutch Reformed Church makes proposals for peace in the consistory, respecting English preaching and contributions for the support of the English minister, Dominie Laidlie.—Eccles. Rev., VII: 3920-21. See also 1765.

5. “Ordered that the Church Wardens or one of them have power to take up upon Interest the sum of One thousand pounds towards building the New Church [see Nov. 5, 1765] upon the best Terms they can not exceeding Six Pounds Interest at Annum.”—Trin. Min. (MS), Dec. 7, 1765, and authorized to borrow for the same purpose a sum not exceeding £3,000.—Ibid. On June 7, 1765, the order was repeated for another £2,000, and on March 7, 1766, a similar one was passed, the sum this time being £1,150.—Ibid. The corner-stone of the church was laid on May 14, 1766.

6. Parliament passes a measure modifying the Sugar Act of 1733 [see Feb. 21, 1773]. The duty “upon all molasses and syrups of the groweth, product, or manufacture of any foreign American colony or plantation imported into the British colonies and plantations in America” is reduced from 6d. to 3d. per gallon, while the importation of all rum and spirits from the same source is prohibited. It was especially provided that the revenue accruing from the duties should be reserved and “from time to time disposed of by parliament, towards defraying the necessary expenses, of defending, protecting, and securing, the British colonies and plantations in America, and for other purposes to be become effective on Sept. 29.—Parliamentary Hist., XV: 1427-30.

19. Rev. Archibald Laidlie’s induction takes place this Sunday morning at the New Dutch Church (Nassau St.). In the afternoon he preached to an audience of “about Four thousand souls.”—Jour. of the proceedings of the Ref. Prat. Dutch Church.

The king gives his assent to the bill “for preventing such paper bills of credit, as may hereafter be issued within any of his Majesty’s colonies or plantations in America, from being made legal tender in payment of money.”—Ann. Reg. (1765), 65. For the action of the assembly, see April 19.

Having heard that Parliament intends to restrain the paper currency of all the colonies [see April 19], the assembly resolves “that if the said Plan be carried into Execution, it will not only highly reflect on the Credit, Honour, and Punctuality of this Colony, but also reduce it to a State of Bankruptcy.” The committee of correspondence is ordered to transmit to the colony’s agent in Great Britain “a proper State of the Paper Currency of the Colony, with ye reasons why it should not be paid.”—Ibid., VII: 749.

The merchants of the city present to the assembly a memorial which they have prepared to be forwarded to parliament. The memorial states: “That the declining State of the Commerce of this city and the other Northern Colonies, from the present rigorous Executions of the Statute of the sixth of his late Majesty George the Second, called the Sugar act [see Feb. 21, 1773], is become an Object of such serious and universal Concern, that the Mercantile Part of the Community who are more immediately interested, would at so melancholy a Juncture, be lost to all Sense of Duty to their Country and themselves, were they to remain Immune of the impairing Ruin... they have for many Years past carried on a very beneficial Traffic with several of the foreign Sugar Islands, as well before as since the Act, which by imposing Duties that amount to a Prohibition, would long since have deprived them of the Life and Support of their Commerce and Credit, had they been severely executed; for your Memorialists conceive... that the Suppression of their Trade with the foreign Sugar Islands, by whatsoever Means effected, must necessarily end not only in the utter impoverishment of his Majesty’s Northern Colonies, and the Destruction of their Navigation, but in the greatest Depredation of the British Manufactures and Artificers, and the great Diminution of the Trade, Power, Wealth, and naval Strength of Great Britain.” The merchants give a detailed account of the general commerce of the northern colonies, and then declare that if “this dreaded Law be revived or continued” it must be another “blow to the Trade of this Country, and especially to Great Britain and ruinous to her Colonies... The Incapacity of making good our Payments, already severely felt, must necessarily sink our Credit, and gradually decrease our Imports from Great Britain. Members of Manufactures will remain without Employ, and be obliged to transport themselves... to foreign Parts for a Subsistance.” “The Manufacturing Towns, those Springs of British Opulence, decay. The Revamps of Lands, Iron Works, and Collieries, fall and Trade, in general, languish and decline...” The continuation of the Sugar Act will be productive of the duty which is imposing the Subjects of Great-Britain and infringing those of the several European States, who have dependent Plantations in the Islands of the West-India Seas.” The assembly approves of the memorial and resolve authorized to direct the colony’s agent in Great Britain “to give all possible-Organization, and to the Remonstrance, as a matter of serious Interest,...” as “Resolved, That the Governor and Company of Merchants in London trading into Great-Britain, shall immediately communicate the present Information to Congress, and to the Congress...”—Assembly Jour., II: 750-51. News of parliament’s action, on April 6 (p.c.), had not yet reached New York. For the action of the merchants at the time of the Stamp Act, see Oct. 31, 1765.

The legislature passes an act for raising 160 men “to be employed against the Enemy Indians and other purposes therein mentioned.” This law regulates the enlistment of the men, their pay, their equipment, the length of service, and the penalty for desertion.—Col. Laws N.Y., IV: 757-63.

It is resolved by Trinity vestry “that a Gallery be erected on Each Side of the Organ above the present Galleries for the use of the Charity Schollars.”—Trin. Min. (MS).

All the medicines, instruments, and utensils “belonging to his Majesty’s Hospital” at the Battery, are to be sold at auction on this day.—N. Y. Merc., April 2, 1764.

The governors of King’s College appoint a committee “to inclose the Ground fronting the South side of the College within a Board Fence.”—Hist. of Columbia Univ. (1901), 37-38. See also May, 1763.

The governors of King’s College order “that a conductor be fixed to the capsule of the college bell, to give warning against lightning.”—Moore, Historical Sketch of Columbia College, 498.

Golden pays “Blundell on Acci of Repairs to ye Fort Colours,” 35.—From Cadwallader Golden’s Account Book (MS), kept by his son, now in the archives of the N. Y. Hist Soc. Christopher Blundell was the custodian of ammunition and stores at the fort whose salary ceased with the disbursing of the independent companies in 1760. He continued to serve, however, "in hopes of being some how provided for."—From a letter of Cadell to Gen. Monckton in Aspinwall Papers, 498.

It is ordered by the common council that “Fifty Lamps and Lamp Points” be purchased and “Erected in some of the most public Streets in this City, where its Conceived they will be most beneficial.”—M. C. C., VI: 377. Fifty points were paid for these on Aug. 15.—Ibid., VII: 385. The following year (Jan. 4), 30 more were ordered.—Ibid., VII: 403. See also Dec. 31, 1761.

The city treasurer is ordered to pay £50 to Whitehead Hicks, “out of the monies paid into his hands by the churchwardens of this City and raised and Collected by Virtue of an Act of the Goverour Councill and General Assembly of this Province Lately made and Published, Entituled an Act to Impower & Enable the Mayor Recorder and Aldermen of the City of New York to order the raising a Sum not Exceeding fourteen hundred pounds for the purposes within mentioned” (Col. Laws N.Y., IV: 719-19). Alderman Hicks is to apply this money “towards Rebuilding the City Hall.” The board agrees to return it to “the said Treasurer or Chamberlain as Soon as the Same shall be by him required.”—M. C. C., VI: 377-376. On Aug. 29, Hicks was commissioned to receive £300 more for the same purpose.—Ibid., VII: 385-87. See Nov. 9, 1764, and May 3, 1765.

Cornelius P. Low, a merchant, petitions the common council for a water lot “fronting his Lot of Ground on the Southwesterly Corner of Burnet’s Key,” in the East River, about 35 feet wide “in Front on said Key” and about 50 feet wide “on the Southwest Side of the said Lots Fronting the Street on the Eastward Side of the Ship in Rotten Row” (Hunters Key—see Vol. I, Pl. 14). He proposes building “a Pier Fronting the said Street and a part of the said Ship,” where Col. Bedouin living on the West Side of the said Pier will be Entirely Secure from Receiving any Damage from the Ice in Winter Season,” and for which purpose the pier will have to be “Built in the most Substantial manner in order To Withstand The Great Quantities of Ice Which in Winter Seasons With The Lying of Ebb Tides Takes The Highest Place. It is appointed to make inquiry.”—M. C. C., VI: 377-78. Full report by this committee was made on Jan. 25, 1765; stating their approval of the proposal, and advising that, to prevent the "filling up the May Docks on each side," he should leave "a Vacancy of Forty Foot 11 between the present Dock and the said Peer so to be Built for the Tides way which vacancy to be of Forty Foot. As a Strong Bridge for Carriages &c.," and he should "Leave Forty one feet to the End of the said Peer and Lott Above mentioned For a Street to be Opened when therunto Required By this Corporation."—Ibid., VI: 405-6. On Oct. 28, the clerk of the board produced "the Draft of a grant of a Water Lott to Cornelius P. as a Lyne and living in the East River contiguous to his house and Ground from the present Coffee house," and it was approved for execution.—
Ibid., VI: 437-38. See Pl. 34, Vol. I.

On Feb. 27, 1766, Mr. Low, stated in a petition that, "upon Calculating the Expanse he shall be put to" in extending a pier into the East River, "and the Risque of having the Same over set or destroyed by the Ice Whilst Building," he found the terms of his grant "very Inadequate to such Ex pense and Riske." He asked for the "Priviledge of the Wafrage of one Vessel on the South westery side of the said pier as Long as the Soil on that Side shall Remain ungranted with such further Time for Completing the same pier as this Board shall think Reasonable."—Ibid., VI: 13-14. The action of the board on this petition does not appear in the Minutes; it was probably involved in their consideration of the petition of Robert Murray.—See July 24, 1766.

In a memorial to the common council, Robert Leake, the "Commissionary General of Stores and Provisions for His Majesty's Forces in North America," states that he purchased a lot belonging to Mr. Dehollon on the North River on which to build the New House, and it appears the work on the building is suspended. The surveyors have stated that "the New Dock is laid too far into the Slips." His remedy for this is "to incline farther to the northward."

17 In a petition to the king, Sir James Jay, in behalf of the governors of King's College (see Aug. 19, 1764), presents a review of the origin, progress, and present condition of the college. He states some of the expenses of the last year, and the donations from the assembly, from the Soc. for Propagating the Gospel (£200), and from individuals, and to the necessity of making an appeal for funds in England, which has resulted in raising about £5,000, clear of expenses, including the king's own donation of £500. Still further assistance is necessary "to carry on the design even in its present confined manner much less to render it of more extensive and general utility," and, Mr. Jay continues, "considering that the Universities in Britain and Ireland were liberally endowed with lands, by your Maj's? Illustrious Predecessors and relying on your Maj's favor, we expect the advancement of Religion and useful knowledge .. ." he is encouraged to petition that the king "will be pleased to grant twenty thousand Acres of land in the Province of New York, free of the conditions of cultivation and Quit Rents to the Govt of the College . . . for the use and behoof of that College" and that he be allowed to locate the quantity of lands allowed the said College out of any of the Crown Lands in the said province before any person or persons who have obtained orders for lands in the said province, are permitted to locate the same . . ."—N.Y. 18 The house of commons having passed a resolution to the effect that "it may be proper to charge certain stamp duties in the . . . Colonies and Plantations," the Earl of Halifax orders the governors in America to send to England "a list of all instruments made use of in public transactions, law proceedings, Grants, conveyances, securities of Land or money within your Govt, with proper and sufficient instructions" as a letter to the same. "Could it be fit to pass a law in accordance with the above resolution, it may be put into effect "in the most effectual and least burdensome manner."—N.Y. Col. Docs., VI: 646. The Stamp Act was passed on March 22, 1765 (q.v.).

19 Inhabitants residing in and near Ferry St. in Montgomery Ward present a petition to the common council, stating "that they are and have frequently been overflowed with Water occasioned from the Drain or Canal in said Street not being sufficient or Large enough to discharge the great Confluence of Waters that Descend to it from the Neighbouring Elevated Streets and Lanes." They ask for relief and a committee is appointed to investigate.—M. C. G., VII: 385. On Sept. 10, it was ordered that the city contribute £100 toward enlarging the drain.—Ibid., VI: 388.

20 A new pillory "with a large Wooden Cage behind it" is being erected "between the New Goal and the Work House" (see Feb. 27). The cage is said to be designed "for disorderly Boys, Negroes, &c. who publicly break the Sabbath."—N.Y. Merc., Sept. 10, 1764.

21 William Adams, at the Sign of General Monckton, upon the New Dock, "in the House formerly occupied by Mr. Marshall," offers good entertainment. Adams "has lived two Years with General Monckton; also hath been Steward and Butler to the Hon'. James Hamilton." Having lived in the "best Families," he feels that he knows how to "attend Gentlemen in a proper Manner."—N.Y. Merc., Sept. 5. This house was formerly known as the Sun Tavern.

22 The subject of a private ferry or ferries to Jersey becomes a matter of official notice. The common council appoints a committee "to take into Consideration Whether those People Residing in that part of Jersey Called powles's Hook have any Right to ferriage to and from this City."—M. C. G., VII: 388. See June 28, 1764; May 3, 1765.

23 The assembly sends an address to the lieutenant-governor, in reply to a message from him. One of the recommendations made by Col. John Law regarding the revenue and expenditure was for the advancement of Religion and useful knowledge. 12. Charles Ward Aplotheke constructs a house and parcel of land to Nicholas Jones.—Liber Deeds, XLIII: 415. This house became known as the Nicholas Jones house; it was situated between the present 10th and 11th Sts., 500 ft. to battle wood, and was sold by heirs of Jones—William Rogers and Ann, his wife—to Sarah, wife of William Heywood, Oct. 31, 1816.—Mott, The N. Y. of Yesterday, 47. In the battle of Harlem Heights, this house, as the Nicholas Jones house, became somewhat famous.—Lambert, Map Ref. Key, III: 981-982; Pl. 178, Vol. III. See April 10, 1857.

The assembly addresses a memorial to the king, in which it is stated that the members cannot, "without the strongest Demonstration of Griev, express their Sentiments on the late Intimation of a Design, to impose Taxes upon your Majesty's Colonists, by Laws to be passed in Great-Britain." The power of taxing themselves, they also say, is "fundamentally interwoven" in their constitution. They have never abused the power, as their "strenuous Exertions, upon every publick Emergency," demonstrate. They have "ever been a People, zealous for the Rights of their Sovereign, sanguine in the publick Cause, ready to strain every Nerve, upon every Occasion;" they have "supported the whole Weight of Savage and Canadian Fury, for near a Century," and have been "as bold as their Blood as their Treasure." They recommend to the king's consideration the "present ruinous State" of their commerce and the concern which they have received by the late act of parliament by which all commercial intercourse between the colonies and the West Indies is at an end. The prohibition laid on the exportation of lumber to Ireland has resulted in the diminishing of imports of linen from Ireland; this and other acts of trade have "established a publick Stream of Justice." The wisdom of their ancestors shown in enacting more brightly, "than in the Institution of Juries, for the Decision of all Controversies, that concern the Lives, Liberties, and Property of the Subjects." Lastly, the want of a paper currency is a great evil, "to which the Colonies, are unhappily made Subject, by an Act of Parliament lately passed for that Purposes." Summing up, they declare "that one of the principal Blessings they have to expect, from a Continuance of their exclusive Right to tax themselves, the Restoration and Extension of their Commerce, the Execution of Law, in the antient and ordinary Method, and the Continuance of their Bills of Credit, will be their Capacity to do the most faithful and ready Services, to their King and Country, upon every Occasion."—Assemb. Jour. II: 769-73.

Similar memorials are sent to the two houses of parliament.—Assemb. Jour. II: 777-79.

13. An act to make an assembly that the committee appointed to correspond with the agent (R. Charles) of the colony in England (see April 4, 1761) be also a committee, during the recess of the houses, "to write to, and correspond with the several Assemblies, or Committees of Assemblies on this Continent, on the subject Matter of the Act, commonly called the Sugar Act of the Act restraining Paper Bills of Credit in the Colonies from being a legal Tender; and of the several other Acts of Parliament lately passed, with Relation to the Trade of the Northern Colonies; and also on the Subject of the impending Dangers which threaten the Colonies of being taxed by Laws to be passed in Great-Britain."—Assemb. Jour. II: 780. Such "Committees of Correspondence" subsequently became an important instrument in effecting American independence. For full consideration of this subject, the history of colonial affairs leading up to it, and its subsequent developments, see The Sons of Liberty, by Henry B. Dawson (N. Y. Hist. Soc., 1890).

On Nov. 20, 1764, Justice Livingstone, from the committee appointed on Oct. 18, 1764, reported that the committee had, with the "Committees from the several Governments on the Continent in Congress," come to sundry resolutions and drawn up "Representations to his Majesty and both Houses of Parliament."—Assemb. Jour. II: 783.

15. A new "Act for Regulating the Militia of the Colony of New York" was passed, and the fundamental law on the subject without several of the amendments which were temporarily in effect at various times in former years.—Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 767-77. Oct. 20.

16. Charles Ward Aplotheke controversies in the Colonoby under Nov. 17, 1741; Dec. 17, 1742; Sept. 24, 1743; Feb. 16, 1746; Dec. 7, 1754; Feb. 19, 1755. This act expired Jan. 1, 1769; but was provided for by a new Militia Act on March 24, 1772 (p. 60). By an act of assembly "the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonality of the City of New York and their successors, be Regulated and in Repair the Present Highways and to Lay out and Regulate and in Repair such other Publick Roads or Highways in the said City and County as shall thereafter be laid out by Act or Acts to be Panted for that Purpose."—M. C. C. VII: 404. Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 837-94.

An act is passed to regulate the public profligacy in New York. It provides for the appointment of the keepers of the pounds and determines the fees that are to be charged.—N. Y. Col. Laws, IV: 825-826.

17. An act "by paying and Discharging Several Sums of Money Claimed as Publick Debts of this Colony, and Other purposes there-mentioned," the treasurer is ordered to pay the following: 1£18:4s "for Repairs to the Pumps and Wells in Fort George" from Sept. 4, 1753 to Dec. 14, 1756.—1£8:7:4s "for Sundry Repairs done in the House in Fort George, to the Battery, Hospital, and Red Store House" in the months of June and October, 1765, and in the year 1764. 1£6:13:4d "to pay the several persons who were aiding and Assisting the Merchants of the City of New York in drawing up a Memorial in Order to be presented to the Parliament of Great Britain complaining of the Hardships they are suffered in by the late Acts of Parliament" (see April 24 . . . for Making out several Copies thereof, and for Other Expenses attending the same.)

18. To Abraham Lott on account "to Enable him to carry on the usefull work of Reprinting and Binding up the Votes of the General Assembly of this Colony to the Number of three Hundred Books of the first Volume of the said Votes" (see Jan. 8, 1762).

1£6:14d "to be employed and applied in providing Chairs, Branches, Curtains and other Necessaries for furnishing a Room for the use of the Council in the City Hall of the City of New York."—Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 795-94.

Col. Montgomery arrives with dispatches for Gen. Gage from Col. Bradstreet at Sandusky. These inform him of the treachery and villany of the Senaca, Shawnees, and Delaware tribes of Indians. In a letter to Sir William Johnson, Gage says: "By their Conivinence we are disappointed in our Hopes of settling our Busi- ness at the Illinois; in the manner we wished . . . Pointis has a Letter from the French to tell him that their Fathers are not crushed, as the English would make the Indians believe, and mention a large Fleet coming into the Mississippi. I have just received Letters from Home, that a Spanish Gov't & Lieut. Gov't were nominated for New Orleans, and have an order to inform me that the Spaniards were soon expected. This therefore must be the Trick of some Villains, to prevent our getting to the Illinois in order to keep the Trade in their hands as long as possible."—Gen. Gage's Letters (MS.), under date of Oct. 21 and 25, 1764. Capt. Montgomery, named above, is probably not the famous Richard, of later days, but his brother Alexander, who was engaged at Quebec in command of a company of grenadiers.—J. Sparks, Richard Montgomery, in Biography Series, Vol. I.

A committee of the King's College governors is appointed to cause a proper lodge to be erected, to level the college yard, and to plant trees accordingly hence.—Moore's Hist. Sketch of Columbia College, 50. The trees were carried to the college green by Robert Benson, John Jay, Robert R. Livingston, and also (as stated in 1876 by Hon. John Jay of the class of 1856) by Richard Harison, and were planted by them when students there.—Hist. of Columbia Univ. (1864), 58. Regarding the final removal of these trees (1904-)more, see 1877.

Charles Ward Aplotheke and John Temple are sworn in as mem- bers of the council, the latter being surveyor-general of customs also.—Col. Coun. Min., 466.

19. Ollier de Lancy writes to Gen. Monckton: "Last Week G. Nov. Gage Left Greenwich [see March 14] not in So Good order as when You went away owing to the Worst Sett of Servants that ever managed a Family I shall take it as a Great favour if You'll let me know If You shall have any further Occasion for the House and farm which I Truly wish as Your Return to New York is more wished for and Your Presence more Necessary Than I shall take the Liberty to Tell You in affairs of Government."—Chalmers

9 A committee of the common council is appointed to "Regulate and pave Roosevelt Street, Queen Street, St. James's Street, and Rutgers's Street in the out-ward."—M. C. C., VI: 400. Roosevelt St. is mentioned in Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 1008; Queen St., modern Pearl St., at pp. 1007, 1008; St. James's St., modern James St., at p. 1003; Rutgers St., at p. 1009. 10 Alderman Hicks (see May 11) is directed to "Borrow on Interest for the use of this Corporation the sum of five Hundred pounds toward the expenses of enlarging the City-Hall."—M. C. C., VII: 400. See May 3, 1767.

11 Jonathan Watts writes thus to Monckton: "The Colony is so chastig'd at the Treatment of their paper Money [see April 18 and Oct. 18], considering how dutifully they have obey'd the requisitions of the Crown, that brought it all upon them, that they would not hear of so much as offering the forty Thousand pounds Act to the Lieut Gov't, of Course it goes on sinking & the Government loses the Funds."—Chalmers Papers relating to N. Y., II.

23 Capt. John Montesor, a British engineer who had come to America with Braddock in 1755, and had served under a succession of commanders since, arrives in New York from Albany and reports to Gen. Amherst. Montesor kept a journal, which is printed in the N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections for the year 1881. The frontispiece of this printed journal is a portrait of Montesor. He became chief engineer in America in 1776. His Journal reflects his loyalty to the crown and his detestation of the Sons of Liberty. See Feb. 8, 1766, and Pl. 40, Vol. I, for the "Montesor Plan" of the city, made by order of Gen. Gage.

Gen. Gage and some of his officers have formed a scheme of taking a regiment of Indians into British pay; to be partly com-mmanded by their own warriors and uniformed in the English maner. Several Indians, thus equipped, appeared very proud of their new dress; and it was proposed that the uniforms of their chiefs should be very magnificent, with a view to introducing the practice with greater facility.—Upcott Coll., in N. Y. Hist. Soc., II: 229.

The public is informed that, on account of "the present dependable State of our Trade," a "Society for the Promotion of Arts, Agriculture and Economy in the Province of New York" has been formed to promote the "true Interest of this Colony, both public and private." An invitation, mentioning "Mr. Van Der Spiegel, the Society's Treasurer," and signed by Benjamin Kissam, Secretary, is extended to "every real Friend . . . to become a Member thereof" and to meet the present members "at the House of Mr. Samuel Francis [see Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 978] at Six o'clock in the Evening of this Day . . . where the Plan of the same is to be more fully explained."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), Dec. 5, 1764. See Feb. 24, 1765.

Roger Morris is sworn in as a member of the council in the place of John Chambers, deceased.—Cal. Coun. Min., 466.

Samuel Francis "begs leave to observe that he has completely fitted up his House and Long Room at Spring Gardens Vauxhall."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 6, 1764. This is the Old Bowling Green on the North River. See March 29, 1758.

The council orders that a proclamation be issued declaring peace with the Indians.—Cal. Coun. Min., 466.

A "new Vice-Admiralty Court over all America, having jurisdiction of breaches of the revenue laws wherever the offence might occur in the British Colonies," is established by an act of the British parliament. The Earl of Northumberland was appointed vice-admiral by the king.—Mass. Hist. Soc. Proceedings, XVII: 29.

"To be Sold Twelve Years Lease of Two good dwelling houses, and lots of grounds situate on the north corner of the Spring Garden, facing the New Goal, and Work House;—the corner house, noted for a well accustomed Tavern, keeping the sign of General Wolfe, has four rooms on the lower floor, and is convenient above stairs.—The other is a new house joining the aforementioned . . ." Inquiries are to be made of Michael Hansen, living in the "first above mentioned Premises."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), Dec. 24, 1764. This tavern stood on the present Spruce St. and Park Row. It was again offered for sale on June 8, 1767 (q. c.).

Some time prior to this year, the residence of Nicholas W. Stuyvesant, known as "Peter's Field," was erected.—B. R. Winthrop in Man, Com. Coun. (1862), 691. It stood in the block bounded by 15th and 16th Sts., First Ave. and Avenue A. It was demolished between 1829 and 1832.—Cf. Map 210, register's office, Liber 3, Vol. 100, CCLXXXIX: 391. The dwelling was on the site of the "Treffedyck House," shown on the Manatus Maps, C. Pls. 41, 42, and 424, Vol. 11; see description of Manatus Maps, I: 189-88. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 952; Pls. 102 and 41, Vol. I, and Pl. 175, Vol. III.

In this year, Division Street was laid out.—Liber Dods, XLVIII: 364-67 (New York). It was surveyed and regulated in 1799.—M. C. C. (MS.), IX: 416.

"They write from New York, that two Breweries for pale and brown Beer are now carried on with great Briskness in that City; the former producing a Male Liquor little inferior to the most-admired Ales imported from England; Several hundred Thousand Bottles of it have been exported to the neighbouring Islands and Colonies in America in the Course of last year."—Upcott Coll., II: 251.

In this year, William Grice, an American silversmith, was admitted as a freeman of New York. A description of a sugar bowl made by him may be found in Met. Museum of Art, Cat. of Exhibition of Silver used in N. Y., N., and the South (1911), 27.

This year, Cary Dano, silversmith, was admitted as a freeman of New York, where he continued to work for thirty years. In 1786 he was a member of the Gold and Silver Smiths' Society. Two pieces of his workmanship are described in Met. Museum of Art, Cat. of Exhibition of Silver used in N. Y., N., and the South (1911), 122.

The wall of the High Dutch Church (German Reformed), on Jan. Nassau St. (see Aug. 26, 1763), having given way, so that service cannot be held there without extreme danger, the consistory of the Dutch Church permits Domine Kern to use the Dutch Church between the times of worship there.—Eccl. Rec., VI: 3791. The injury to the walls of the church (which was the converted theatre, built in 1753, and sold to this congregation in 1758, q. c.) was due to a heavy fall of snow, which caused the walls to spread.—Ibid., VI: 4053-59. A newspaper contributor states that "a Gentleman in this City appeared last Sunday Evening at the Funeral of his only Child, without any other Kind of Mourning, than a Hat Band: and his Bearers without Scarfs." This is cited as a laudable example of economy to be imitated by persons of all ranks in the present declining State of our Country."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), Jan. 3, 1765. Cf. Man. Coun. Coun. (1853), 406.

A "Very fine Dark Brown Marr" is offered for sale at "Mr. Stout's Tavern-Keeper, at Fresh-Water."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 3, 1765. This tavern was later known as the Flowl and Harrow. It stood at what is now the intersection of Doyers St. and the Bowery, where, as early as 1755, a "tavern" had been kept, as is indicated on the manuscript map, Pl. 50, Vol. I. Before July 9, 1772, John Fowler was proprietor. His house, which he called the "Farmer's Tavern," was the starting-point of the stage line between New York and Boston.—N. Y. Jour., July 9, 1772. After the Revolution, Gabriel Furman took the "noted house and stables in the Berry Lane, before the war kept by John Fowler and of late by Barney and Pell."—N. Y. Packet, Feb. 9, 1784. Furman, having hung out a sign of the "Free American," offered "Gentle Boarding and lodging."—Ibid., Jan. 4, 1786. By 1792, James Myers was proprietor of the tavern which was now more designated as the "Berry Lane and Harrow."—Daily Ady., Feb. 7, 1792. Hendrick Doyer, a distiller, purchased the property in 1774, and evidently demolished the old house, as he had the land surveyed and cut up into lots in 1797, and Doyers St. cut through the property as it is today.—Map 458, Register's Office; Pl. 70, Vol. I; Banker survey, in box B-E, folder C, MSS, Dosen, N. The members of the Society of Arts, etc. (see Dec. 5) decide upon the "Mode of proof proper to be made by the Candidate for premiums" offered for manufactures. This is to be by affidavit of the maker before two justices of the peace in the county where the material has been made, "specifying the quantity; that it was made in this province, and that no part of it had been before offered to, or received by, the society, with an intention to receive the premiums; nor any part of the quantity inferior to the sample produced."—N. "The declining state of business in this city, together with the high Rents and Prices of the Necessaries of Life, have reduced very many Families and poor People to Great Distress, especially since the late severe Weather," contributions for their relief have been made by "several humane Gentlemen."—N. Y. Merc., Jan. 28, 1765. On the same occasion, and also "by Mistake," was taken a "white Satten Bowered Cloak, lined throughout with greenish Slining, belonging to Mr. Martin, and a Green DB, for his servant. At this time, Major James resided in the "Broadway." Vauxhall was the old "Bowling Green" on the North River. See Pls. 26 and 40, Vol. 1; and "Vauxhall Tavern and Garden," in Landmark Map Rel. Capt. John Morgan records: "the Hudson's River was froze across so as [to make it possible for] Sleighs and people to pass to the opposite side from New York." He states that he is "Employed in assisting Capt. Henry Gordon Chief Engineer in making a plan of part of North America shewing the upper Lakes and Posts therein together with the several passes, Portsages, Ranges of Mountains, sources of Rivers, for the Marquis of Granby, Master General of the Ordnance."—Morgan's Jour., 324. The completed plan, "done by the Engineers at New York," was sent to England on March 17—ibid., 333.

Several Gentlemen of this City, moved by the Distresses of the Poor in this severe Season have not only contributed themselves to the Relief of the Most Needy, but have gone about the Town to solicit the Benefactions of others for the same charitable purpose; and to find out and relieve the most necessitous."—N. Y. Merc., Feb. 25, 1765.

The Society of Arts, etc. (see Jan. 21) agrees that "some Sums of Money . . . be lent to encourage industrious Persons in the Linen Branch" and that "a honorary Gold Medal be given for each of the three first Flat-Mills that shall be erected in this Province." Competitors for the agricultural premiums are to give "particular Account of the Place, Soil, Condition, and Extent of the Ground; the Season, Steps of the Culture; and, as near as may be, an Estimate of the Value of the Labour."—N. Y. Merc., Feb. 25, 1765.

On June 1 (q.v.), the members decided to establish a flax-spinning school.

The name " Sons of Liberty " is first used by Col. Isaac Barré in his off-hand reply to Charles Townsend . . . when George Grenville proposed the Stamp Act in Parliament" on this day. Jared Ingersoll of Connecticut sat in the gallery of the house as Barré spoke and sent a sketch of his remarks to Gov. Fitch, who published it in the New London papers. May had not shed its blossoms before the words of Barré were as household words in every New England town. Midsummer saw them circulate through Canada, in French; and the continent rung from end to end with the cheer ing name of the Sons of Liberty."—Bankroft, Hist. of U.S., III: 196; Thomson, Pulpit, 131; see also this name in a broadside of Feb. 3, 1770, "To the Sons of Liberty in this City," which is reproduced as Pl. 40, Vol. IV. See also Pl. 45, Vol. IV. "Dr. J. H. Trumbull, in a paper " Sons of Liberty in 1755" published in the American Antiquary, Jan., XXIII, 386 (1826), showed that the term had ten years earlier been applied in Connecticut to organizations to advance theological liberty. It is also sometimes said that the popular party at the time of the Zenger trial [see Aug. 1, 1735] had adopted the name."—Winsor, Nat. & Crit. Hist. of Am., VII: 72.

A house in the Bowery, "Known by the Name of the Sign of Thomas Koull Kan," is advertised to be let by Peter van Zandt.—N. Y. Merc., Feb. 11, 1765.

The "Exchange House" is let to Thomas Jackson for one year, beginning May 1, at 500 yearly rentable, payable quarterly.—M. C. C., VII: 409.

After a decision of the common council (by an 8 to 7 vote) that water lots may be disposed of to certain petitioners at private sale rather than at "publick Vendue," Mayor Cruickshank observes that "during such a period, as was presided, the Recorder could not as he conceived be Legally En titled to a Vote in this Common Councill." A dispute arising on this point, it is ordered, for the governing of future votes, "that Alderman Hicks Do Retain William Smith Junr and John Morine Scott Esq" and take their Opinion whether the Recorder has a Right by the Charter to this Corporation to Vote in Common Council During such time as the Mayor presides.—M. C. C., VII: 408-9. Various petitionings regarding water lots, docks, etc., were presented on March 7, but voting on them was deferred until this legal opinion was obtained (410-11). On April 12, it was ordered that Alderman Hicks form the two legal advisors that, should they disagree, "they have Liberty to Call in one other Gentleman of the law for his Opinion so as to make a Majority," and it was agreed that this majority opinion "shall Determine the same and be Carried into president for the future" (415). The decision was rendered on July 50, and, as the opinion of the recorder "has no voice" when the mayor is present; Scott and William Livingston were of opinion that he bad, and their opinion therefore prevailed (423-26).

Golden writes to the Earl of Halifax regarding what he calls the "laughing influence" of the passage of the Law. He reviews the development of this influence since Gov. Clinton gave De Lancy the commission of chief-justice "duning good behavior," at which time an association of lawyers was formed, which has strengthened the popular side of the government and deprecated the power of the crown.—N. Y. Col. Doc., VII: 705-6.

Trinity Church leases to John Jones, a "Peruke-maker," for 61 years, two lots on the south-west corner of Warren St. and Broadway.—Sandfor, Chan. Rep., IV: 660. This was the Mason's Arms Tavern (see May 15). See also March 19, 1759.

A petition is presented to the common council to "extend Mar. Counties peer [Albany Pier—see April 29, 1765] Two hundred feet farther into the East River." The petitioners offer to advance to the corporation "for Carrying on and Completing the same" £1,000 to be repaid in five years without interest.—M. C. C., VI: 410. While no record appears of the granting of this petition or of the repayment of the loan "without interest," it is possible that the extension was undertaken and completed (or nearly so) in 1768, because several payments for the work are recorded: Aug. 15 and Sept. 29, 1769 (ibid., VII: 72, 53); May 12, 1768—three items (ibid., VII: 112, 113), all in connection with "the Corporations peer" or "the Corporation peer;" Sept. 28, 1768—two items (ibid., VII: 122, 125), both for "finishing the addition to the Albany peer." Subsequent payments in 1770, 1771, and 1774 (ibid., VII: 199, 222, 265; VIII: 14), for "work done to the Albany pier" and for the "addition to the Albany Pier" probably suggest finishing touches.

A committee of the common council is appointed to inspect the "Road Leading By John Morine Scott's Esq' Commonly Called the Tour Road;" and to inspect also the Bloomingdale Road and to report plans for widening and repairing them. Following the provisions of an act of the assembly of Oct. 20, 1764 (q.v.), (making the members of the common council "Commissioners to Regulate and keep in Repair the present highways," etc., with power to appoint surveyors, overseers and laborers), Adam Van denburgh is made a "Surveyor or overseer of that Part of the publick Road or high way Leading from this City as far as the Extent of the Bowery Division which Terminates at a Run of two Miles from the possession of Jno. Lamarter Bucksmith;" Garris Vanden-bergh is made "Surveyor or Overseer of the Road Commonly Called Grinage Road, also the Tour Road passing by John Morine Scotts Esq' and the Bloommald Road;" and Adolph Benson of Harlem is made a "Surveyor or overseer of the Road or high way Commencing from the first water lot North of the Exton that was the Bowery Division Ends, and so Running from thence as far as the Kings

7 THE first stone of a new German Reformed Church is laid, on the site of the former one at the present 64-66 Nassau St. The builders are Van Dalena and Hendrickse, who should improve on the "structure" (ibid., vi: 4037), erected "at a cost of $7000." (ibid., vi: 403). The cost of construction was probably $3,000 rather than $1,000. —See ibid., vi: 3999. According to the location, see 1758. This church was sold in 1822 to the Southern Baptist Congregation. —Greenleaf, Hist. of the Churches, 246. It was torn down in 1860, to be converted into an eating-house (cf. Greenleaf, op. cit., 27), but was demolished in 1877.—Smith, N. Y. in 1798, 152. See also Landmark Map Rep. Key, III: 935.

8 The creditors of Robert Evans, an abscinding debtor, are notified to meet on this day at the House of Charles Gilmore, Tavernkeeper, on Cannon's Dock.—N. Y. Merc., Dec. 17, 1764. Cannon's Dock was at Broome St., between Goerck and Tompkins Sts.

9 By a petition of this date and another of March 29, the consistory of the Dutch Church makes application to the common council for 12 lots in the "Vlakte" (an ancient name for the Commons, of which City Hall Park is the N. Y. Y. Park).—Eccles. Rec., VI: 592-82. The records of the city, county, and state do not reveal any portion of the Vlakte owned or occupied by the Dutch Church, but in olden times many real estate transactions were recorded in the church minutes and not in the register of deeds. —In June, 1767, the court appointed a committee to "request from the corporation a deed for the land bought in the Vlakte."—Ibid., vi: 4080. Again, on Oct. 10, 1768, the consistory resolved "That the seal of our corporation be affixed to the instrument containing the agreement of the Church with this City, for the ground bought in the Vlakte."—Ibid., vi: 4276.

10 The Stamp Act receives the royal assent by commission.—Ann. Reg. (1769), 71-72. It requires that, after Nov. 1, stamped paper be used for practically all legal documents and customs papers, for appointments to all offices carrying a salary of $20, save military and judicial offices, for all grants of privilege and franchise, and the laws, carried by the colonial government, for licenses to retail liquors, for all pamphlets, advertisements, handbills, newspapers, almanacs, and calendars, and for packages of playing cards and dice. The paper is to be printed by the government and sold only by officers appointed for that purpose. No money save silver may be accepted in payment for the stamps. Heavy penalties are to be imposed for forging or counterfeiting stamps, and for using un-stamped paper in cases where it is forbidden by this law. The act is cited as Gen. HI, c. 12. It was printed at London in a separate pamphlet, and republished by J. Parker in the province of New Jersey in 1768. The N. Y. Y. Y. Y. may be found also in Pickering's Statutes at Large, XXVI: 179-204; for an abridged text, see Macdonald, Documentary Source Book of Am. Hist. (1908), 132-31. The proceedings in parliament may be followed in the Parliamentary Hist. XV and XVI, and in the Ann. Reg. (1769). The fullest account of the debates is in Bancroft, United States (ed. 1852), V. Contrasted English and American views are presented in Frottingham's Rise of the Republican, Chap. 51; Lecky's England in the Eighteenth Century (Amer. ed.), III: 332-75; Mahon's England, Chap. 43, 45. The best-known contemporary expression of American opinion, called out by the proposal of a stamp act, is Otis's Rights of the British Colonies for a more moderate statement, see Stephen Hopkins's Rights of the Colonies Examined (in R. I. Col. Records, VI). For the expression of the N. Y. press when the news reached America, see April 11. For subsequent events, see Dawson's The Park and Its Vicinity.

11 The act is necessary to be carried on, in the Engineers Department, to make the Forts more defensible and to keep the Barracks in repair, but which are delayed till such time as His Majesty's Pleasure shall be signified thereon."—Stevens, Catalogue Index of MSS., 1761-1787, in Lib. of Congress, citing Public Record Office, War Office, XVI: 78.

13 News reaches America of the "Resolves of the House of Commons relating to a Stamp Duty [see March 21] on printed and written Paper, Parchment, etc., in the Colonies."—N. Y. Post-Boy, April 11, 1765. The Mercury of April 15 reported: "We hear that [during the Debate in the House of Commons when the Resolves passed, not a man spoke who did not declare his Opinion that America ought to be taxed: Nor would any one introduce a Petition into Parliament's behalf, even the most interested, and those who are of the Opposition, all refused to present such a Petition."

14 Colleen writes to the Earl of Halifax: "I have the great pleasure to inform your Lordships, that this Government continues in perfect Tranquility, notwithstanding the anxious efforts of a Faction to raise discontent in the Minds of the People & disorder in consequence of it. The most effectual method in their opinion for obtaining their ends. A few of the Profession of the Law continue to publish most licentious abusive weekly papers. I have restrained every return or reply to them. They have produced the contrary effect to what the authors design'd, but what I expected. While by malicious Calumny the Authors endeavour'd to asperse the characters of others, they have sunk their own Reputation. No illicit Trade has been discovered of late."—N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections (1876), 480; Wilson, Mem. Hist. N. Y., II: 350. "Gen. Gage sends over the small guard of the Fort" consisting of "May about twenty of the Artillery Regiment," to the southward. N. Y. Col. Des., VIII: 759.

15 In a letter to Geo. Monckton, Colleen says: "I did every thing that was in my power to prevent the public Disputes which have touched my duty in supporting the Kings Instruction, & endeavour'd to have had the matter quietly submitted to the Kings Determination. But the Gentleman of the Law seem to have placed the chief stress of their Cause in raising public Calumny; & therefore all endeavours to prevent it became fruitless. Notwithstanding of this I am fully persuaded the People of this Province will quietly submit to the Kings Determination whatever it be."—Colleen Papers (1757), 11; Wilson, Mem. Hist. N. Y., III: 351.

16 The city treasurer is ordered to pay Geo. Whitehead Hicks "be him applied towards rebuilding the City Hall" (see May 11, 1764). At the same meeting the common council directs that "Andrew Breastead [see March 8, 1765] for the present do finish the Library Room in the City Hall in the most plain and Cheap manner that Can be, and Repair the Stairs as well Leading from below to the Assembly Chamber, as that Leading to the Common Council Room in the Like manner."—M. C. C., VI: 417, 418. See Nov. 20, 1767.

17 Payment is made by the common council "for Glazing and Amending the City Lamps," also "for paying so much of the Broad way Street as the Hay Machine Covered near the Oswego Meet."—M. C. C., VI: 417.

18 Archibald Kennedy and William McAdams petition the common council for "an exclusive Grant of the Right of ferriage from this City, across Hudson River to the Jersey Shore" (see Sept. 10, 1764). Consideration is deferred.—M. C. C., VI: 417. On Oct. 14, Cornelius van Vorst, of Bergen Co., N. J., in a petition to the common council, states that he is the owner of Paulus Hook, in Bergen Co., opposite New York, and has recently set up a ferry there. He maintains a carriage nearly half a mile long, and a lane nearly a mile long, as well as keeping open the public road, for the accommodation of travelers. To aid him in meeting the expense involved, he asks the Board to allow him for some time to "take the Benefit of both Sides of the said Ferry . . . and that then the said Ferry be established and maintained by this Honourable Board, and the Petitioner jointly, the Corporation thereafter receiving all the Profits of Ferriages from, and your Petitioner estab. New York. . . . He also asks that the Landing in the City might be fixed at Messrs's Wharf as being the most convenient Place for that Purpose."—From the original petition in the city clerk's record-room, endorsed "filed the 14th of October 1765."—M. C. C., VI: 436. Both petitions were considered on Jan. 31, 1766, and a committee was appointed to confer with the petitioners. The committee reported on Feb. 25, 1766 (p.c.), and the proposals of Van Vorst were agreed to.—M. C. C., VII: 2, 8.

19 The king assents to the bill for rendering more effectual in America the act for punishing mutiny and desertion.—Ann. Reg. (1767), 157.

20 John Jones advertises for sale the "House, at the Sign of the Mason's Arms, near the College," which he intends leaving as soon as disposed of. "It is a very convenient House for a Tavern, and has always been occupied as such, where the best Company in Town (without Dancing Room), can be attained the longest, adjoining the same. There is yet 63 Years of the Lease to come..."—N. Y. Merc., May 13, 1765. Jones probably wished to devote his time to Ranelagh Gardens, which he opened on June 3 (q.v.), at Broadway and Thomas St. He did not immediately sell the Mason's Arms, and on June 12, 1765, mortgaged the tavern to Roger Morris. By Nov. 14, he had taken over the Queen's Head Tavern from Samuel Francis, renaming it the "Free-Mason's Arms."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 14, 1765. See March 15, 1790.

The house and farm, later famous as the seat of Roger Morris, whose mansion-house still remains, are offered for sale by John Carroll, a butcher, who had purchased the farm on Jan. 29, 1769, from Jacob Dyckman and others.—Liber Deeds, XXVII: 4 et seq.

The advertisement describes the place thus: "A Pleasant situated Farm, on the Road leading to King's-Bridge, in the Township of Harlem, on York island, containing about 100 Acres, near 30 of which is Wood land, a fine Piece of Meadow Ground, and more easily may be made; and commands the finest Prospect in the whole Country: The Land runs from River to River... there is on it a good House, a fine Barn 44 Feet long, and 42 Feet wide, or thereabouts."—Pub. in N. Y. Merc., from May 13 to June 15, 1765.

Roger Morris, an Englishman, and a soldier in America under Gen. Braddock and later under Wolfe, married Mary Philipse of Yonkers, on Jan. 28, 1768. He retired from the army in June, 1764, in the following summer apparently settled upon the Carroll farm, and built the residence which still bears his name.

His property was confiscated after the Revolution and sold by the commissioners of forfeiture to John Berrian and Isaac Ledyard. For the succeeding history of the Roger Morris Mansion, see July 9, 1768. See Shelton, The Jumel Mansion; also Addenda, 16.

Samuel Francis advertises the newly "New Vaux Hall."—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 16, 1765. See Jan. 28.

A news item states: "we have certain Accounts that a Clause is added to the Mutiny [sic] and Desertion Bill [see May 10], whereby Justices of the Peace are empowered to billet Soldiers on the Inhabitants in America, at their Discretion."—N. Y. Merc., May 27, 1765.

In a communication to the press, a writer ("Publicola") states: "I observe, that many of our most worthy Citizens, and principal Gentlemen, are clad in Country Manufactures or turned clothes. 24th, That Spinning gets daily more in Vogue, so that we rather want Materials than industrious Hands. 30th, That the farmers are endeavouring to remedy this Difficulty by the large Quantity of Flax-Seed sown more than usual, and their Intention of keeping more Sheep. 4thly, That little Lamb now comes to Market, as no true Lovers of their Country, or whose sympathetic Breasts feel for its Distresses will buy it. 5thly, Tint Sassafras, Balm and Sage are almost to be found; it is useful instead of more wholesome... Lastly, The Fashion of Funerals and Mourning is in general much altered from the late troublesome, ridiculous, and expensive Method; for what could be more absurd, than for a Person, when in Affliction for their dear Relatives, to be dressed about Dress and Ceremonial, and perhaps involved in a large Bill of Costs, when their Creditors are most apt to call upon them..."—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 19, 1765.

Joris Brinckerhoff, in his will of above date, orders all his real estate in New York, including his dwelling-house, "with all the buildings thereon, and the house and lot in the rear of the same, and all buildings on the same ground" to be sold at public vendue. Referring to this Peltrotau says: "His dwelling house and lot are now No. 73 Pearl Street, and is the east part of the lot where the Old Stad House, or City Hall, stood in ancient days..."—Abstracts of Bills, VII: 197.

As "there are a great Number of poor Children in Town, whose Parents are incapable, or not in a Situation to teach them Flax-Spinning," the Society of Arts, etc. (see Feb. 4) resolves "to erect a Flax-Spinning-School."—N. Y. Merc., June 10, 1765. Further resolution in regard to this, were passed on Aug. 5 (q.v.).

John Jones, an Englishman, on the new pleasure garden called Ranelagh at the old homestead of Anthony Rutgers, on Broadway and Thomas St., which had been built about 1730 (see Feb. 7, 1722). His announcement states that there will be a "Concert of Musick" every Thursday evening, and afterwards "a small Fire-Work will be played off." As the latter part of the project of the King's Almshouse Jones hopes for the patronage of all ladies and gentlemen.—N. Y. Merc., June 3 1765. The second performance, which took place on June 17, was interrupted by a "Number of disorderly Persons in a Riotous Manner" breaking into the Garden.—Ibid., June 17, 1765.

Later, concerts were given every Monday and Thursday, the gardens were "illuminated every Night," and the "best Entertainment" provided by the proprietor, "notwithstanding the arful Injunctions of some ill-natured People."—Ibid., June 15, 1765. N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 5, 1765. Admission, at first cost two shillings, was later reduced to one shilling, owing to the "Scarcity of Cash."—N. Y. Jour., Aug. 18, 1766. Jones had given up the Gardens before Feb. 1, 1766 (q.v.), when Rutgers offered the place for rent, but he advertised stating that he would build in the spring a new house, "fit for any Gentleman." Samuel Francis had become the new proprietor by June 8, when he opened the Gardens, which he had "newly fitted up in a very genteel, pleasing Manner."—N. Y. Merc., June 8, 1766. Before the spring of 1774, a Mr. Vansel was in possession of the house, garden, and orchard of Anthony Rutgers, which were again offered for rent.—Ibid., Jan. 13, 1772. Although the place was known as Ranelagh for many years, its career as a pleasure-garden seems to have ended with its occupation by Francis. John Ireland purchased the property on Nov. 2, 1796 (q.v.), and Ellingbam Embree acquired it on March 20, 1797.

Edward Hanby who has a tavern called the "Fortune of War" on Mary St., now Baxter, and near the Fresh Water Pond, advertises that a well dressed man, calling himself captain of a vessel, left at his house "A good Body Coat, two laced Jackets, a Tye Wig, and a bay Mare," which he believes to have been stolen.—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 6, 1765.

"Mrs. Barclay's Old Pye-House, is now reviv'd by Catharine Space, between the New Dutch Church and the Fly-Market... may be had every Noon and Evening, Hot Chicken-Pies, etc. likewise all Sorts of Tarts, after the neatest and best Manner."—N. Y. Merc., June 10, 1765. This was on Crown (Liberty) St.

The New-York Gazette (Weyman) is temporarily suspended! after the issue of this date (No. 530), on account of the Stamp Act. The following occasional issues appeared last July 15 (No. 517), July 21 (without a number); Sept. 16 (No. 524). With the issue of Nov. 25 (No. 543), regular publication was resumed. The last issue was that of Dec. 28, 1766 (No. 545). [p.]

"John Jones of the City of New York Peruке maker" mortgages to Roger Morris the Mason's Aruns Tavern (see March 19, 1759), the land being thus described: "two Certain Lots of Ground Situate being and in the West Ward of the said City and known and Distinguished in a Certain part or Chart of the part of the Church Farm which lies to the Southward of the Stockade by Lotts Number three hundred and Twenty two and three hundred and Twenty three are allowed to be in breadth Twenty five foot each the said Lott Number three hundred and Twenty two Containing in Length one hundred & ten foot three inches and the said Lott number three hundred and Twenty three Containing in length one hundred and Eleven foot two inches and the said Lott number three hundred and Twenty four and by Lorrther by Number three hundred and Twenty four Together with all and Singular" etc. The mortgage calls for the payment by Jones, before June 13, 1766, of "two thousand milled Spanish pieces of Eight or the Value thereof in good and Current money of New York."—Liber Mortages, II: 541-12.

The lords of trade submit to the king the draft of a commission constituting Sir Henry Moore governor of New York in place of Monckton.—N. Y. Col. Desc., VII: 745.

Payment (50s) is made for 24 chairs, many chairs made for the use of the common council by their order.—M. C. G., VI: 419. An investigation has failed to produce any further information regarding these chairs.

We hear that Mr. James M'dEvers, Merchant, of this City is appointed Commissary for collecting the Stamp Duties in this Government.—N. Y. Merc., July 17, 1765. See Aug. 22. A poster or broadside, advertising Thomas M'oere's "Genuine Country Almanack For the Year 1760," shows the location of the press of William Wermyn, the printer of the Gazette, to be "Opos- site Synagogue Alley, in Broad-street." 8. Colden writes to Gen. Gage: "As there is no guard now in his Majesty's Fort in this City, I think it my duty to apply to your Excellency for such a number of Men at least as may be sufficient to guard it. I have therefore had a plan drawn of a Magazine for the Significance of certain articles, and the assistance of the New York volunteers in building it.

"I have thought proper to send you a copy of the plan, a drawing of the Magazine, and a plan of the Fort at New York; which, after I have seen the plan of the Magazine, will be sent to you. I have also had the plan of the Magazine taken from the Fort, and a drawing of the same, which I shall send you. I have also had the plan of the Magazine taken from the Fort, and a drawing of the same, which I shall send you."

"I am now preparing a plan for the Magazine, and the Magazine will be sent to you. I have also had the plan of the Magazine taken from the Fort, and a drawing of the same, which I shall send you."

The plan of the magazine is in the possession of the family.

The house of representatives of Massachusetts at their last session appointed a committee to meet the committees of the assemblies of the whole continent, if they see Cause, at New York, the 1st of October, to unite in a Petition to his Majesty and the Parliament for relief under the insupportable grievance of the Stamp Act, &c. The announcement continued:—"It is hoped neither the Governor of Virginia, nor the Governor on the continent, will think this so improper a step as to dissolve their assemblies to prevent it."—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 18. See also N. Y. Cal. Docs., VII: 759–61. The Stamp Act Congress did not convene until Oct. 7 (p. 0).

The general council takes cognizance of a resolution of the house of lords (dated March 5—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 751), condemning the exhibition of two Mohawk Indians in London in a public show conducted by a Jew named Myers.—Cal. Coun. Min., 488.

"All the Vessels coming to this Port from sea, and even Coasters, and some smaller Vessels, have of late been much disturbed by the Hawke Man of War, lying in the Bay, which brings them all too, and takes their Hands. Tis strange there should be such a Want of Hands in this Time of Peace. It is thought that this Practice will be a great discouragement, and Obstruction to the Coasting Trade. One of the Officers who pursued a Vessel to the Town, was pretty roughly treated by some of the populace."—N. Y. Merc., July 22, 1765.

22. The king decrees that the course of an appeal in New York Province shall be from the inferior courts to the governor and council, and thence "to the King in his Privy Council."—N. Y. Col. Docs., St. 37–19.

23. A proposal is made by Jacobus van Zandt to establish a Latin and English grammar school under the direction of the consistory of the Dutch Church, in which the elements of the religion of this church shall be taught as well as the languages. This is agreed to by the consistory, of which Rev. Archibald Liddell is president, promet. It also agrees that a voluntary collection shall be taken for the building or hiring of such a schoolhouse. It is reserved for future consideration what site would be most suitable for it, whether on the Harpending grounds, or those which lie along the Old Church" (in Garden St.).—Eccles. Rec., VI: 1999. On Aug. 1, however, "the leading of a subscription to build or hire a suitable school house for the Latin school, etc... was presented" to the consistory for approval; "but for important reasons, the going around with it was delayed until the beginning of September."—Ibid., VI: 4001. Apparently, the plan came to nothing.—For a recent biography of such a school, see Kilpatrick, "The Dutch School of New Netherland and Colonial New York," in Bull. No. 12, U. S. Bureau of Education (1912), 156.

24. A company of the "Royal Americans" arrives here from Crown Point and is now quartered in the Barracks in Fort-George.—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 26, 1765; in July 8.

25. "In a letter of this date from New York, the writer says, that "Trade in this part of the world is come to so wretched a pass, that you would imagine the plague had been here, the grass growing in the most trading streets; and the best traders, so far from wanting the assistance of a clerk, rather want employment for themselves, if they can get it."—Gen. Gage to Colden, August 6. [Dutch] Church "at Nassau and Cedar Sts." is approved. It is referred to the church masters, who are to number the vaults.—Aug. Eccles. Rec., VII: 4001. On Oct. 15, twenty-two deeds for vaults sold were submitted to the consistory, and it was ordered that they be signed and sealed.—Ibid., VII: 4013. On Oct. 11, six more deeds of vaults sold were signed and sealed.—Ibid., VII: 4024.

At a meeting of the Society for Promoting Arts, etc., resolutions are passed, "to encourage two spinning schools [see June 3]... that Mrs. Gill should teach in one of these schools, in the barracks at the New Goal, and Mrs. Wood in the other, at the Fresh Water... to furnish each scholar with the use of a wheel and thread, and fixed prices to be paid for the wool... by suitable premiums, the merits of those Scholars who distinguish themselves by their industry and skill, and to allow all the scholars the profits of their own work."—N. Y. Merc., Aug. 12, 1765. See March 21, 1766. A letter from London states: "I am very sorry to hear such repeated bad Accounts from America, but at the same Time, I have the pleasure to tell you, that it is generally believed, that the new Ministry will repeal the Stamp Act this next Sessions."—N. Y. Merc., Oct. 7, 1765.

27. Thomas Jackson is appointed by the common council to have charge of the corporation library (see June 27, 1763); he is required to "attend at the Library Room in the City Hall on Mondays and Thursdays, from half after Eleven oClock in the morning until one, to let out the Books," and "to keep an exact account of the Income therefrom," and allow 10s. 6d. per annum for his trouble."—M. C. G., VII: 427. On Sept. 16, the trustees of the "Society Library" also appointed him keeper of their "well chosen Collection of the most useful modern Books, with a considerable late addition, of which a Catalogue will be separately printed... Shelves in this Library is now worth $10 10s and is transferable by the Subscribers."—N. Y. Merc., Sept. 16, 1765. Cf. Keep, Hist. of N.Y. Soc. Library, 176–77.

28. A committee, appointed "to cause Robinsons Street [the present Park Place] in the west ward to be Levelled," reports "that the same is to take its Beginning from the Lamp post in the middle of the Broad way one foot above the Ground," and is to be regulated in a specified manner to the middle of Church St., also that Church St. is to be regulated between Robinson and Barclay Sts. It is ordered that this plan be compiled with.—M. C. G., VII: 427. This is the first laying out or regulating of these streets. See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 1008.

29. Colden receives a letter from James McEvers, lately appointed (see July 1) "Distributor of Stamps" for this province, resigning the office. He says that "Since the late Riot at Boston, & the inflammatory Papers lately printed in the Colonies, People of this City are so incendi'd... that I find it will be attended with the greatest Risk of my Person and Fortune, to Attempt, & indeed impossible for me to execute the Office... and have accordingly wrote to the Commissioners Signifying that I cannot Submit to a Service that will be attended with very dangerous Consequences... if I had Attempted it, my House would have been Pillag'd... my Person Abused, and his Majesty's Revenue Impaired."—Colden MSS. in N. Y. Hist. Soc. See Sept. 2 and Oct. 28.

29. The steeple of the New Church is again struck by lightning (see June 15, 1765). The lightning is "led down by the Conductor" of the lamp post, so that the church "sustains but little damage."—N. Y. Merc., Sept. 2, 1765.

30. Colden informs Sir William Johnson of the resignation of James McEvers (see Aug. 30) who, he writes, has already "entered into bond before me for the due execution of his office" but is "terrified by the suffering & ill usage they have met with at Boston, & the threats he has received at New York."—Colden Papers, 1877, 47.

Gen. Gage writes to Colden: "It must give every well-wisher to his Country the greatest Pain and Anxiety to see the Public Papers crammed with Treason, the Minds of the People disturbed, excited and encouraged to revolt against the Government; to subvert the Constitution, and triumph in Sodom and Gomorrah. But this Worse can invent is propagated as Truths by these Enemies of their Country, to sow Dissention and create Animosities between Great-

The general assembly of the colony of Rhode Island, in its last session, appoints "Commissioners for the intended Congress to be held in New York in October next, in order to agree on the most probable and effectual measures for the inspection and oppress'd British Colonies on this Continent."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 26.

Mr. Jackson, who has been appointed keeper of the New York Library and Society Library, both at the city hall, is "Master of the Academy at the Exchange."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 19, 1765.

Elkanah Deane, the coach-maker, was doing business in New York at this time. The ledger of James Beckman contains an entry of this date: "To cash paid Elkanah Deane for a new chaise, $80.00."—Houghton, "Coaches of Colonial N. Y. " (1890), 15. The first advertisement of the Deanes, however, did not appear until Feb. 27, 1766 (p. v.).

The general assembly of the colony of Connecticut appoints commissioners "to meet those of the other Colonies, at the congress, to be held at New York, the first of October next."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 26.

Lieut.-Gov. Colden writes to Sec. Conway: "Soon after it was known that Stamp Duties were by Act of Parliament to be paid in the Colonies, virulent papers were published in the Weekly Newspapers, filled with every falsehood that malice could invent to serve their purpose of exciting the People to disobedience of the Laws and to sedition. At first they only denied the authority of Parliament to lay internal Taxes in the Colonies, but at last they have denied the Legislative Authority of Parliament in the Colonies, and these Papers continue to be published." He adds that "Major James of the Royal Regiment of artillery having observed the riotous disposition of the People in this place, after what had happen'd at Boston; and being informed that many of the guns were honey comb, and the carriages rotten, and that there was no powder in the Fort, he order'd in some Field Pieces and howitzers, together with a sufficient quantity of ammunition and other stores. Under the same date, Montresor reports also "Advice of more riots at Boston regarding the Stamp act." On Sept. 6 (p. v.), Montresor sent Colden a copy of his report regarding the fortifications.

Montresor writes to Colden: "Enclosed is as nearly as I can recollect, the Copy of my report to Gen'l Gage delivered yesterday afternoo[.] This concerning the Precautions Necessary to be taken to put Fort George in a proper state of defence, sufficient to preserve it ... against any intestine Insult, & without any very conspicuous appearance of rendering it more so, that [that] it is at present. ... The Works of this Fort being entirely on barbette renders it extremely easy to defend its front towards the Town, and all its defences and defence and make report for making it more respectable against any interrare Insult as expected. Complied with this Order a o'clock P M and completed and presented by 4: just two hours after."—Montresor's Jour., 318. Under the same date, Montresor reports also "Advice of more riots at Boston regarding the Stamp act." On Sept. 6 (p. v.), Montresor sent Colden a copy of his report regarding the fortifications.

A number of copies of this paper had been delivered to the post-rider at Woolbridge, N. J. (by James Parker, it is supposed). of America at this alarming juncture, are come to Town, and the Oct. rest daily expected: We hear they have already begun their Conferences [but see Oct. 7], which it is supposed will be continued a sufficient Time to answer the Purposes of their appointment.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 7, 1765.

The Stamp Act Congress meets at the city hall, New York. It is described at the time as "the most important that ever came under Consideration in America." There are 28 delegates from nine of the colonies; four of the colonies did not send delegates, though expressing their sympathy with the movement. The list of "the great men whom it was given to that Assembly to call together". They came from Massachusetts-Bay, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, "the counties of New Castle, Kent and Sussex on Delaware," Maryland, and South Carolina.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 10, 1765. On Oct. 9, a "declaration of the rights and grievances of the colonists in America," originally drafted by John Dickinson, a delegate from Pennsylvania, was agreed to. It set forth, in 14 articles, their protest against any taxation by the British parliament in which they were not represented, their right to trial by jury, and the "manifest tendency" of the Stamp Act "to subvert the rights and liberties of the colonists." On Oct. 22, the congress approved an address to the king which reviewed the conditions under which the colonies had been established and the inherent liberties secured to them by the English constitution. It besought the king to take into consideration the dignity of his subjects, "the happiness of Parliament imposing duties and taxes on these colonies," and "to afford them such relief as in your royal wisdom their unhappy circumstances shall be judged to require." The memorial to the lords, passed the same day, claimed "one of the most essential rights of these colonies, the trial by jury," and entered formal protest against taxation by the British parliament, especially against the Stamp Act. It entreated them "to pursue measures for restoring the just rights and liberties of the colonists and preserving them forever inviolate, for redressing their present and preventing future grievances." The petition to the house of commons equally expressed from him by the colonists the feelings and desires as those embodied in the memorial to the lords. The con-

The provincial council hears from Sir Henry Moore, the newly appointed governor (see Sept. 21), that he will soon leave England.—Cal. Coun. Min., 469. See Nov. 13.

A third New York coach-builder (see Jan. 22, 1759; Nov. 19, 1755) advises his business. This is Samuel Lawler, "at the Sign of the Golden Fleece, in the Street of the same name," to his brother, James Lawler [see Nov. 10, 1755 in the Broad-Way:—Where Gentlemen, and others, can have, in the genteelst Taste, and equal to any made in Europe: Coaches, Chariots, Phaetons, Chairs, and every other Machine in the Business, not inferior to any imported from London."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 10, 1765; Houghton, Coaches of Colonial N. Y. (1890), 14, 19–20.

The following notice appears: "Whereas a great Inconvenience arises, for Want of a particular Place being appointed for the Sale of all Sorts of Home Manufactures, which greatly discourages the Maker from bringing such Things to Town; and when brought, they are obliged to strole about the Streets with them, in an uncertain and disagreeable Manner. And whereas a like Inconvenience arises to all Persons wanting to supply themselves with such Articles; be it therefore enacted, that there shall be a Street, or Market-place, in the City of New-York, where the Makers of any Articles, goods, or Manufactures, may, by act of Assembly, be permitted to sell their goods, at reasonable Rates of Interest; to the Advantage of the Makers, and to the Publick Benefit." The Act was not enforced, however, due to the objections of the merchants and the inconvenience it caused.

October 11

The "Stamp Act Congress" at New York (see Oct. 7) adjourns. The clerk was directed to make a copy of the proceedings of the congress for the use for each of the colonies. Two sets were sent to England in different vessels.—See Authentic Account of the Proceedings of the Congress held at New York in MDCCLXX (pamphlet, 1767), in N. Y. Pub. Libr., having been laid by the clerk, at a full Meeting, on Monday the 7th instant October, it was unanimously agreed and resolved to give this public Notice, That a Market will be held below the New-Exchange, in the City of New-York, on Wednesday the 24th of this Month: Also on the first, third, and fifth Wednesdays of November and December, and on the third Wednesday of every Month following. That on said Days will be exposed to Sale, All Sorts of Home Manufacture only: And Notice is hereby given, That the following Articles are in great Demand, Linen and Woolen Yarn; Linen and Woolen Cloths and Stuff, of all Sorts; Tow-Cloth, Stockings, and Knit. It is thought that persons will find it advantageous and convenient to them, and that Buyers will thereby supply themselves, where they may meet with better Choice of the Articles wanted. N.B. Most of the Inhabitants of the City have agreed, not to buy any of the above Articles from Hawkers and Strollers."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 17, 1765.

Colden writes Sec. Conway that "the inflammatory Papers continue to be published, exciting the People to oppose the execution of the Act of Parliament for laying a Stamp on the Colonies." The "most remarkable of these" was "distributed along the Post Roads by the Post Riders." The New York post master found that "one or more bundles of them were delivered at Woodbridge, New Jersey, to the Post Rider [see Oct. 11], by James Parker Secretary to the General Post Office in N. America." Colden adds: "Parker was formerly a printer in this State [New York] and has now a Printing Press and continues to print occasionally. It is believed that this Paper was printed by him."—N. Y. Col. Dict., VII: 267.

John Holt states in the Post-Boy: "A Meeting of the Friends to Liberty and the English Constitution, in this City and Parts adjac-cent, is earnestly desired, by great Numbers of the Inhabitants, in order to form an Association of all who are not already Slaves, in Opposition to all attempts to make them so."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 17, 1765.

This evening the ship "Edward," which "brought us, last Voyage, the News that the Stamp Act was passed, has now brought the Stamps themselves,... They were ship'd so privately, that not a Passenger in the Ship knew of their being on board, till a Man of War here came on board to take Care of their Security."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 24, 1765. Montresor says that 2,000 people gathered the next day, "on the expectation the Stamps would be landed, but were disappointed." They were secretly landed in the night and deposited in the fort. Many placards appeared "threatening the Lives, Houses and properties of any one who shall either issue or receive a stamp."—Montresor's Jour., op. cit., 336. Colden wrote in his "Letters to Constable," under date of Oct. 23: "Gave a Saylor belonging to the Garland who brought the first Bail of Stamp'd Papers into the Fort... £500/240/0."—Colden MSS.

The stamps having just arrived, James McEvers is requested to take charge of them, but he refuses.—Cal. Coun. Min., 469. A letter received at New York Oct. 30 (p. 24) contained his resignation as "Distributor of Stamps." A market for "Home Manufactures" is open under the Exchange," the goods being brought here by their makers from their homes in the country. "There was plenty of Women's Shoes of different Makers, which had a quick Sale, and Hote's Make were totally disregarded by all the Judicious. Brown bleached Linen and Diaper, Cambric, Thread Stockings, and Caps, and Woolen Yarn Stockings were quickly sold.—And great Demand was made for more of these Articles, and also for Wooden Cloths and Stuff of all Sorts, Gloves, and Shoes, and Goods of all Kinds. And we hoped, that next Market Day, being Wednesday the 6th of November, the Country Makers will supply the great Demand."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 24, 1765. The market days were the first and third Wednesdays of each month. On Nov. 6, there was the same great demand. Everything was "immediately bought up," as all ranks of people took "a laudable Pride in wearing what is made among ourselves." It was hoped "to convince the most incredulous, that we are not so destitute of either Ingenuity, Materials, or public spirit, as has been alleged."—Ibid., Nov. 7, 1765, and see ibid., Dec. 19, 1765; Jan. 2, 1766.

The "Stamp Act Congress" at New York (see Oct. 7) adjourns.

James McEvers, the "Distributor of Stamps" having resigned (see Aug. 16), and the care of the stamps having devolved upon the Governor and Councilors, the Commissioners of the stamp office, London, are informed by David Colden (son of the lieutenant-governor) regarding the situation in New York.—Colden Papers (1877), 50–52.

Colden writes Sec. Conway that he now has "five packages of stamped Paper for this Province in the Governor's House in the Fort, and two for Connecticut; Three more are lying on board the 'Phaeton,'" which come by the Regent, and are expected there. He thus describes the circumstances of their arrival: "I desired the Captains of His Majesty's Ships of War, now in the River, to protect the ship in which they should come. For this purpose a sloop was placed at Sandy Hook and a Frigate midway between that and this place, while the Coventry layd before the Town. By this care, the ship with the 132 Vessels in the harbor of stamps on board, was brought to an anchor under the guns of the Fort and protection of His Majesty's Ships. The night after the ship arrived, papers were pasted upon the doors of every public Office, and at the corners of the streets, one [of which I enclose. The Lawyers who have raised the osudious spirit cannot be counted without proper judges.—"N. Y. Col. Desc., VII: 768, 769. A facsimile of this paper is shown in Col. Desc., and reads as follows: "Pro Patria

—Ibid., VII: 720.

A day or two later, "packages of stamped papers were landed from His Majesty's Ship 'Garland' at noontide without a Guard or the least appearance of discontent among the people."—Ibid., VII: 771. Colden gave his reasons to Sec. Conway (March 28, 1766) for bringing the stamped papers into the fort instead of putting them on board the "Coventry." In his opinion they would not be safe on the "Coventry" because the Winter approached when the Ship must be brought to one of the Wharfs in the Town, her guns must be put on shore and the officers could not prevent the men from leaving the ship. —Ibid., VII: 823.

The city grants to Augustus von Cortlandt, Oliver de Lancy, and Richard Shawkirk, water lots in the rear of their properties, having a total frontage on the Hudson River of 668 ft. (between the present Rector St. and Battery Place) and extending to a line 200 ft. beyond low-water mark with the obligation that each of the grantees shall make and leave to the city three streets, each 40 ft. in width: First (later Greenwich St.), at high-water mark; Second (later Washington St.), 150 ft., farther seaward, at or near low-water mark; and Third (later West St.), across the outer end of the lots. —City Grants, Liber C, 297-318.

The new free bridge (see Jan. 2, 1770), which "has for some Time been out of Repair, and dangerous to pass... is in better Repair than ever, well founded upon Stone, so it is hopefull, the Publick will have a good Bridge for many Years, and will be free of paying that exorbitant Toll as before."—"N. Y. Merc., Oct. 8, 1765.

A news item in the Mercury describes the reception given to the ships in which the odious stamps were brought to New York. "All the Vessels in the Harbour lower'd their Colours, to signify Mourning Lamentation and Woe. Mr. McEvers, who was asked by the governour to take care of the stamps, refused to have anything to do with them (see Oct. 27) it was reported that not one of the persons appointed would execute the office. The stamps are now a great matter, and people know what to do with them, and are more aminable, and dangerous to be meddled with, than if they were infected with the Pestilence."—"N. Y. Merc., Oct. 28, 1765. In the same issue it is reported that "most of the Gentlemen in Town, have entered into a Resolution not to buy any European Manufacturers till their Trade is more open, the Sugar Act altered, and the Stamp Act is repealed: It is hoped this will animate the Country People to make plenty of Linnen and Woolen, as they may be assured of quick Sale, and good Prices."—Ibid.

Rev. Lambertus de Ronde writes to the classics of Amsterdam "That the large 'New Dutch Church' is, inside and out, most sumptuously fitted up, while the old building [Garden-Roode] is left to decay, just for the purpose of having the upper hand."—Eccles. Rec., VII: 4031. See Feb. 2, 1766.

Peter Rushmore, after various bequests, leaves the rest of his estate to his grandson, Peter Rushmore Maverick. Referring to this, Pellegrino says: "The house and lot of Peter Rushmore was on the north side of Liberty street, 25 feet west of Liberty Place. In 1802 Peter Rushmore Maverick sold it to the Quakers, and a meeting house was built. This was afterward sold to the noted Grant Thorne."—"Parties of Gifts, VII: 87, and appendix, in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collection.

Montresor in his journal reports "several People in mourning for the near Issue of the stamps and the Internment of their Liberty." Even the "Bag-gammon Boxes at the merchant's Coffee House" are covered with Black and the Dice in Crap. A mob went through the streets crying "Liberty! liberty!" burning lamps and window-sashes, threatening to burn alive Maj. James of the Royal Artillery as Commanding the Troops in the Fort for the protection of the Oct. Stamps."—Montresor's feuè, 336. Cf. statement of H. B. Dow, 31 Oct. 1765, "the troops were kept quietly dispersed without doing any damage." Colden required Mayor Cruger to investigate the alleged plot "to bury Major James alive," and to do all in his power "to prevent a Mob or Riot." He also requested Archibald Keonedy to send the marines from "his Majesty's forces to reinforce the Troops in the Fort."—Colden Papers, op. cit. (1877). N: 53.

At a general meeting of merchants, held in Burns' "City Arms" (Tavern), an intercollegiate committee of correspondence, consisting of five "Sons of Liberty," is appointed to secure the cooperation of the merchants in other parts of the city. Petitions are also adopted as follows: "First, that in all Orders they send out to Great-Britain, for Goods or Merchandise, of any Nature, Kind, or Quality whatsoever, usually imported from Great-Britain, they will direct their Correspondents not to ship them, unless the Stamp Act be repealed: It is neitherwise agreed, that all such Merchants as are Owners of, and have Vessels already gone, and now cleared out for Great-Britain, shall be at Liberty to bring back in them on their own Accounts, Crates and Casks of Earthen Ware, Grindstones, Pipes, and such other bulky Articles as Owners usually fill up their Vessels with. Secondly, it is further unanimously agreed, that all Orders already sent Home, shall be countermanded by the very first Conveyance; and the Goods and Merchandise thereby ordered, not to be sent, unless upon the Convention mentioned in the foregoing Resolution. Thirdly. It is further unanimously agreed, that no Merchant will send any Goods or Merchandise sent upon the Stamp, to Great-Britain, that shall not be shipped after the first Day of January next, unless upon the Convention mentioned in the first Resolution. Fourthly, It is further unanimously agreed, that the foregoing Resolutions shall be binding until the same are abrogated at a general Meeting hereafter to be held for that Purpose. In Witness whereof we have hereunto respectively subscribed our Names. [This was subscribed by upwards of Two Hundred principal Merchants.]

"In Consequence of the foregoing Resolutions, the Retailers of Goods, of the City of New York, subscribed a Paper, in the Words following, viz. We the underwritten, Retailers of Goods, do hereby promise and obliged ourselves not to buy any Goods, Wares, or Merchandize, of any Person or Persons whatsoever, that shall be shipped from Great-Britain, after the first Day of January next; unless the Stamp Act shall be repealed—As Witness our Hands, Oct. 31, 1765."—"N. T. Post-Boy, Oct. 31 and Nov. 7, 1765. See also Addenda. For the activities of the merchants, in reference to the "Sugar Act," see April 20, 1764.

Hendrick Rutgers and James Delancy enter into an agreement "for the settling & establishment of partition Lines between their respective Lands &e., and an improvement, of a public Street or Highway" between their lands. —Liber Deeds, XLVIII: 694-697; M. C. C. (MS.), IX: 175. This agreement was delivered to the common council on Feb. 18, 1789, by Henry Rutgers, the son of Hendrick, and it was ordered that it be recorded—M. C. C. (MS.), IX: 175. The "public Street or Highway," subsequently laid out and appearing for the first time on Pl. 41 and 42, Vol. I, was appropriately named Division St. (not to be confused with the former Division St.—see July 24, 1761—which is shown on the same plates as Partition St.). Cf. plate description, 1: 143.

James de Lancey leases to James Ackland a house and parcel of land at Coster's Hook—"in Libor, Montgomery, II: 351. De Lancey had previously leased this place to one James Elliott, a mariner, who had conducted a tavern here (see April 13, 1761). The place became well known as "Ackland's," a well-frequented waterside tavern, the house standing at what is now the north side Liberty St., about 100 ft. north of Van Dam St., and extending to and including Nos. 41, 42, and 64. Vol. I. Ackland is mentioned in an advertisement as "at Crown Point, near New-York."—"N. Y. Merc., Feb. 11, 1768. James Ackland died prior to Oct. 9, 1769, when the house, then in the occupation of Mr. Van Den Ham, was offered on a forty-eight hours lease.—N. T. Merc., Oct. 1, 1769. From this time until the expiration of the lease, the tavern seems to have been turned over to James Devereaux (see Liber Montgommery, II: 381), and, by 1772, was known as the Coster's Hook Tavern of John Brandon.—N. Y. Merc., April 27, 1772.

A T this alarming Crisis when we are threatened with a Deprivation of those inviolable Rights which our Ancestors purchased with their Blood—Rights, which is Man, we receive from Nature; as Englishmen, have secured to us by our excellent Constitution; and which once torn from us, will in all Probability never be restored. At this important Time, when we are exerting every legal Effort to preserve ourselves and posterity the complete and undisturbed Enjoyment of these, it is of the last Consequence to act with Vigilance and Unanimity. It must appear obvious to every unprejudiced Mind, that Sincerity would prove as fatal to us, as a Delusion; and therefore, the more effectually to guard against both—a Number of the Inhabitants of this City, have determined to drop all Party Distinctions that may have originated from a Difference in Sentiments on other Matters—to form themselves into a Society, under the general and honourable Appellation of the United Sons of LIBERTY—and finally to adhere to the following RESOLUTIONS.

I. To hold a general Meeting on the first Monday Evening in every Month, at the House of Mr. De La Montagne.

II. To convene occasionally if Circumstances occur to render it necessary.

III. That we will not give our Wealth to the Merchants, Traders, and other Inhabitants of this City.

IV. The grand Design of this Association being to Support the Merchants, Traders, and other Inhabitants of this City—that, we will not in any manner whatever contribute to the Execution of them, by all legal Means in our Power.

V. That we will not knowingly purchase or sell any Person or Property who shall violate the Non-importation Agreement.

VI. That we will not employ, or be employed by, or in any way hold connexion with, those who violate the Agreement, or with such as shall Conspire against their good Conduct, by dealing with them.

VII. That we do meditatively and sincerely pursue such Measures, and such only, as shall appear best calculated to promote the general Good of the Colonies. That the sole End of the United Sons of LIBERTY, is to secure their common Rights—that the Object we have principally in View, is a repeal of the Acts imposing Duties on Paper, Glass, &c. and that we will not as a Society under the said Appellation, engage in any other Matter whatever.

N. B. The United Sons of Liberty, are to hold a Meeting on Monday Evening next, privily as soon as the House of Mr. De La Montagne; and do hereby publicly invite every Lover of constitutional Freedom, to meet with them at the above-mentioned Time and Place.

CHRONOLOGY: THE REVOLUTIONARY PERIOD: 1763-1776

1765 Nov.

"It is probable the Conductors of this Expedition intended the whole Affair should have ended here; but while many of them were attending the Fire, a large Detachment of Volunteers making their Passage thro' the other Side of the Palisades, went on another Expedition, and repaired to the House (lately known by the Name of Vaux-Hall) and now in the Occupation of Major James, of the Royal Regiment of Artillery. . . . This Gentleman was one of those who had unfortunately incurred the Renunciation of the Public, by Expressions imputed to him. It is said he had taken a Lease of the House for three years, and had obliged himself to return it in the like good Order. He might receive it fitted up in an elegant Manner, and had adjoining a large handsome Garden stored both with Necessaries and Curiosities, . . . and had in it several Summer Houses; The House was genteelly furnished with good Furniture; contained a valuable Library of choice Books, Papers, Accounts, Mathematical Instruments, Draughts, rich Clothes, Linen, &c. and a considerable Quantity of Wine and other Liquors. . . .

The Multiitude bursting open the Doors, proceeded to destroy every individual article the House contained. . . . the Beds they cut open and threw the Feathers abroad, broke all the Glasses, Chins, Tables, Chairs, Desks, Trunks, Chests, and making a large Fire at a little Distance, threw in every Thing that would burn. . . . Drink or destroy'd all the Liquor. . . . and left not the least Article in the House which they did not entirely destroy . . . after which they also beat to Pieces all the lower Floor Orderly; having carried away the House, leaving it a mere Shell; also destroyed the Summer Houses, and tore up and spoiled the Garden. All this Destruction was completed by about 2 o'Clock. The imagined Cause of Resentment, operated so powerfully, that every Act of Devastation on the Goods of the unhappy Gentleman was considered as a Service to Liberty . . . Many Military Trophies, even the Colours of the Royal Regiment, were taken and carried off triumphantly.

"The Spirit, of the People, not only of this City and Colony, but of the Neighbouring Colonies, knowing how much depended upon our Behaviour, was highly raised; and great Numbers came from the Country, and Parts adjacent, to attend the important Crisis: Some returned Home satisfied with our Firmness, and determined to maintain their Freedom in their respective Places of Residence, and assist us, if their Assistance should be necessary. But many who came from distant Parts, chose to stay till our Affairs were settled into something of Calmness and Security . . ."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 7, 1765. It was in this letter, also, that the phrase "The glorious Uncertainty of the Law," since then so often used, was brought into local prominence.

Colonel's account of this affair is as follows: "On the evening of the 1st day of this month, the Mob began to form in the Numbers, and, after it became dark, they came up to the Fort Gate with a great number of boys carrying Torches & a scaffold on which two images were placed: One to represent the Governor in his grey hairs, & the other the Devil by his side. The scaffold with the Images was brought up within the Sides of the Gate, and all the objectors to the formation of rebel clubs from the Mob. As they went from the Gate they broke open my coach house, took my chariot out of it, & carried it round the Town with the Images & return'd to the Fort Gate from whence they carried them to an open place, where they had erected a Jibbett within 100 yards of the Fort Gate, there hung up the Images. After hanging some time they were cut down, & burnt in a fire prepared for the purpose together with my Chariot, a single Horse chair & two sledge, our usual Carriages when Snow is on the Ground, which they took out of my Coach House. [For description of his next "chariot" see May 12, 1765, G.G.] While this was doing a great Number of Gentlemen of the Town, if they can be called so, stood round to observe this outrage on their King's Governor. The Garrison was at the same time on the Ramparts with preparation sufficient to have destroyed them but not a single return was made in words or otherwise from any Man or Persons in the Town. Very few Names and Persons were chronicled."

He says, further, that Maj. James, also, felt the wrath of the mob. They "breke open his house [Vauxhall—see Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 981], burnt all his furniture, wearing cloaths & everything in it to a great value [see Dec. 19, 1766], at the same time destroying his life in the Garden, and burning a great part of it in the cellar."

Even the master of the vessel who brought the Stamps his life being threatened, was obliged to fly."—Mon-tresor's Jour., 337-38.

Capt. Kennedy (vide infra) gives orders not to allow the stamps to be taken on board the men-of-war. "Many stragglers thronging in with arms from several parts even Connecticut, for plunder &c. The Fort pretty well under cover this Night. The Governors Family obliged to seek protection on board His Majesty's Ship the Sovereign."—Montereor's Jour., 338. Colton said that Kennedy refused to receive the stamps because he was aware of the design of the mob to force the Commissioners to destroy the Harbour. Kennedy is said to be the "most of the in City, of which he had in his own & his wife's Right more than perhaps any one Man in it."—Colton Papers (1787), 80-81.

Gage writes to Colton "counselling circumspection with regard to firing at the mob at the Fort."—Colton MSS.

The common record states that this Board taking into Serious Consideration the Intimation that his Honor the Lieutenant Governor was willing to Deliver the Stamp'd paper now in Fort George to Captain Kennedy [Archibald Kennedy, Jun.] or any other of the Commanders of the Kings Ships in the Harbour, and that Captain Kennedy, in answer to the Earnest Request Signified to him last night, informal that he Carrier will not receive the Stamp'd paper; it is Therefore Resolved that it appears to this Board absolutely Requisite to Remove the present Dis- satisfaction and Save the City from the most Distressing Confusion, that a Committee immediately wait upon his Honor, and in most Requisite manner acquaint him with the present dangerous State of things, and Request that for the peace of the City and the preventing of an Effusion of blood be would be pleased to direct that the Stamp'd paper be Delivered into the Care of the Corporation, to be Deposited in the City Hall, and Guarded by the City Watch. Therefore this Board doth hereby Order his Honour Acquainted of the same, and Returned for answer in the words following.

Fort George November the 5th 1765. Nov. 5.

"MT Mayor and Gentlemen of the Corporation.

"In Consequence of your Earnest Request and Engaging to Make Good all Such Sums of money as might be Raised by the distribution of Such of the Stamps, Sent over for the use of this province as shall be Lost destroy'd or Carry'd out of the province, and in Consequence of the unanimous advice of his Majesty's Councils, and the concurrence of the Commander in Chief of the Kings forces, and to prevent the Effusion of blood and the Calamities of a Civil War, which might ensue by my withholding them from you, I now deliver to you the packages of Stamp'd paper and parchments, that were deposited to my hands, in his Majesty's Fort, and I doubt not you will take the Charge and Care of them Comformable to your Engagement to me. I am with Great Regard Gentlemen your most Obdient humble Servant, Walladader Colles.

"At which time his honour Resolved that the mayor would give him a Receipt in the words following (which the mayor Executed accordingly in behalf of this Corporation) viz: Received of the Honourable Walladader Colen Esq&r his Majesty's Lieutenant Governor and Commander in Chief of the province of New York Seven Packages containing Stamp'd paper and parchment all marked No 1. J M E [McEvans] New York, which I promise in behalf of the Corporation of the City of New York to take Charge and Care of, and to be accountable in Case they shall be destroy'd or Carry'd out of the province, as particularly Set forth in the Minutes of the Common Council of the said Corporation of this day Witness my hand in the City of New York this first five day of November 1765.

M. C. C., VII: 435-46.

Montereor writes that placards throughout the city threatened "the storming of the Fort this Night" unless the stamps were delivered. The seven boxes were taken "to the city Hall in Carts . . . attended by 5000 people." One hundred barrels of powder had been procured by the disaffected. They had intended to "collect the Commits in Chief, also the friends to the Government and have marched them in front when they purposed the attempt of attacking the Fort."—Montereor's Jour., 338-39.

A New York letter says: "The people here are prodigiously discontented, and their actions are but a little way from an open rebellion: They talk publicly of attacking Fort George, and burning the stamps: there are 340 soldiers in the fort, and they are putting it in the best posture of defence in their power. The soldiers have spiked up about 90 pieces of cannon on the battery, to prevent their destroying the Harbour. The people are in constant confusion here: if the Mayor and Aldermen do not succeed in their endeavours to restore peace and order, many lives must be lost, and great part of the city reduced to ashes."—Upton Coll., II: 307.

is issued by Hugh Gaine in lieu of the regular issue of the Mercury for Nov. 11. The date of issue was probably Nov. 11. although given by Ford in The Journal of Hugh Gaine, I: 114, as Nov. 5 (cf. p. 43), while a copy of the broadside, sold at Anderson's Feb. 19-20, 1918, has written in ink at the top "November 7th, 1765. The broadside narrates the matter of "last Friday Evening on the Commons" (see Nov. 1). It also contains news from Boston (Oct. 28) and from Philadelphia (Oct. 31). From copy preserved in N. Y. Hist. Soc. There were two subsequent folios printed by Gaine with the same heading before the regular issues of the Mercury were resumed on Nov. 25. They doubtless were in lieu of the issues of Nov. 11 and Nov. 18; the earlier one is preserved in the Yale University Library; the latter one in the N. Y. Hist. Soc. See also Aug. 5, 1752; and Early N. Y. Newspapers, II: 422.

"Perfect tranquility (as to appearances) this day."—Mon-tresor's Jour., 339.

A manuscript notice addressed "To the Freeholders & Inhabit-tants of the City of New York," is posted at the Coffee House, and after remaining there a good part of the day, is taken down after night and brought to the governor.—Colton MSS. It is reproduced as PL 38, Vol. IV.
Colden receives a memorial from Maj. James in regard to his dwelling-house, burned by "a Mob" (see Nov. 1, with a loss of 500 "chose Books, a great many of His Majesty's Papers & Plaos, besides all his Manuscripts & Curiosities of Antiquity," etc.—Colden MSS. Cf. Montezos's Jour., 337. The assembly compensated Maj. James for his loss on Dec. 19, 1766 (q.v.).

And a long letter to be sent abroad, reviewing the recent events and the present situation in America and particularly in New York in regard to the rights of the colonies, is published in the Post-Boy. It mentions the meeting and activities of the "Stamp Act Congress" (see Oct. 7), the landing of the stamps (see Oct. 26), the general meeting of merchants on Oct. 31st, the burning of the governor's effigy, and the attack on Maj. James's residence (see Nov. 1).—N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 7, 1765.

John Holt, printer of the Post-Boy, announces that he has "concluded to continue his weekly Publications, as usual, upon unstamp'd Paper; which as they have been hitherto, he intends ever shall be sacred to Liberty,—and consequently to Virtue, and Religion, the Good of his Country and Mankind." And he hopes that Country which he has earnestly endeavoured to serve, and those constitutional Laws, which he has ever obey'd and endeavour'd to maintain, and the Subjects of them, will support him in any Hazards to which he is exposed by his difficult Situation."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 7, 1765. This was probably in answer to the letter addressed to him on Nov. 2 (q.v.).

In a letter from New York a "young Lady in Town" writes that "a Mob, by removing the artillery out of this City, are resolved to resign the charms of dress and let a horrid homespun covering (which can become none but a country wench) take place of the rich brocade, and graceful satin."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 7, 1765.

Montezos states that the lawyers here are deemed by the people to be "Hornets and Firebrands of the Constitution. The Plotters and Incendiaries of the present Rupture."—Montezos's Jour., 339.

Colden, who has received no instructions up to this time regarding what to do with the stamped paper, writes Sec. Conway: "Has not the Mayor and Corporation by taking the stamped papers voluntarily into their custody assumed the office of Distributor of Stamps? It evidently appears now who were the conductors of the Mob by its immediately ceasing in every appearance as soon as the Packages were delivered to the Mayor and Corporation. The leaders of the Mob issued their Edicts from time to time by affixing their Plackarts in the Merchants Coffee House and at the corners of the streets where they remained whole days and nights, I transmit copies of two of the most remarkable of them, the one "Commit the Country," that the young people there are the handwritings, in both the same, may lead to a discovery. By the last which is a kind of Proclamation of Peace, they disown every Authority that is not derived from their Representatives. On this principle only was the Demand made of having the stamped papers delivered to the Corporation and by this they hope to preserve their influence.

"People in general are averse to Taxes of any kind. The Merchants in this place think they have a right to every freedom of Trade which the Subjects of Great Britain enjoy. But the Inhabitants of the Country are absolutely free of the seditious spirit which rages in this Town."—N. Y. Col. Decr., VII: 775-76.

One of the sedition papers referred to is an anonymous letter addressed to Colden, accusing him of having bound himself by oath "to be the Chief Murderer of their Rights and Privileges," etc. It threatens him with death if he fires upon the town. This paper was put in the Country, that the words preserve there as if they were handwriting, in the same, may lead to a discovery. "It is indeed unfortunate to your Excellency, that the Colonies, in general, are now groaning under the Burthen of great Grievances, and filled with feartfull Apprehensions of the Loss of Some. But it is no small Alleviation of our Grief, that we can assure your Excellency we feel no Abatement of that gracious Protection, which has so gloriously distinguished the Princes of his Majesties illustrious House. And as we do with undissembled Sincerity, present this address of Devotion and Loyalty to our Royal Sovereign, So it affords us this small Pleasure that by your Accession To the Government, We again have the Prospect, that the true State and Fidelity of his Subjects in this Colony, will be faithfully represented to the Throne.

Impressed with the most favorable Sentiments of your Excellency (whose Arrival at this Capital Juncture was most ardently wished for) we rejoice in the confident Expectation of the Preservation & Establishment of the publick Peace and Felicity; and Shall always be ready on our Parts, not only to contribute to the Maintenance of good order in this City, but to the Comfort and Ease of yourself and Family. — M. C., VI: 444-45. At the same time, the "Draft of a freedom to be preferred to his said Excellency" was approved. The same "Engrossed on Parchment and the Seal of this Corporation affixed thereto" was "to be Enclosed in a Gold Box, with the City Arms engraven thereon." The "Draft of a freedom to be preferred to his Excellency the honourable Thomas Gage . . . was Likewise Read and agreed to." —Ibid., 445-46. The governor was presented with "the said address, as also with the freedom of this Corporation," on Nov. 21 (p.e.).

John Jones is removed from his House in the Fields, to that of Maj. Samuel Moore, formerly the Free-Mason's Arms, near the Exchange: Where he will endeavour to give as elegant Entertainment, as can be had anywhere else, in America. . . . —"N. T. Post-Bay, Nov. 14, 1765.

The "Minerva" arrives with "stamped paper" (see Dec. 21). The latter encloses a letter from the Stamp Act into execution, but the council advises against it as impracticable—Col. Coun. Min., 470.

Concerning this "second Importation of Stamps," the "Sons of Liberty, ever vigilant for their Country," expressed alarm and were "indisputable in their Endeavours to have them lodged with the First, in the City-Hall. A respectful Application was made to the Mayor and Corporation, who worthily exerting themselves, they were accordingly landed on Saturday morning last, and deposited there. The Magistrates cannot be too much praised for their noble Endeavours to preserve Peace and quiet the Minds of the People, in order not to make any Sacrifice to our Liberties to Despoilation." —N. T. Post-Bay, Nov. 21, 1765.

Montesquieu records under this date: "Fort George was dismissed by order of the Governor."—Montesquieu's Jour., 339-40.

See Nov. 1765, for the death of Mr. Yo. Eliot, collector, and Lambert Moore, comptroller, of the customs, write to Gov. Moore, asking directions about using stamped paper for clearing vessels.—Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 759.

Gov. Moore, in his first address to the council and assembly, says: "I flatter myself, that your Zeal for His Majesty's Service, and the Good of your Country, will engage you to carry on your Session with the Unanimity becoming your Station, and the Purposes for which you are convened; Let these great Objects be ever present before you, and have such Influence on your Conduct, as not to be underestimating of that Protection which has been extended by our Most Gracious Sovereign, to His most distant Subjects. My ready Concurrence shall never be wanting in every Measure consistent with the King's Instructions, which can tend to promote the Interests of this Province; and I shall be extremely happy to have it in my Power, as much as it is in my Inclination, to make it the most flourishing Part of His Majesty's Dominions in America."

—Assemb. Jour., II: 783. For the assembly's answer, see Nov. 22.

The Dutch Church presents an address of welcome to Sir Henry Moore, the new governor.—Eccles. Rec., VI: 4023-24.

Gov. Moore is the recipient of the address and freedom voted by the common council on Nov. 14 (p.e.), and makes reply as follows: "Gentlemen."

"I return to you my hearty thanks for this Address, and for your Expressions of Regard for myself and Family. It will be no small comfort to me, if my arrival here can, in any Shape, contribute to the Public Peace & Tranquility; nothing on my part shall be wanting to establish them on a Lasting foundation, and from your assurances of Duty & Loyalty to His Majesty, as well as readiness to make such a sacrifice of all private interests, as of obtaining so desirable an End." —M. C., VI: 448. A manuscript draft of this answer appended to the address is in file no. 4 in city clerk's record-room.

The Post-Bay of this date express itself regarding the governor thus: "Now the unity which appears in the whole Behaviour of our new Governor, endears him to the People of this Colony; His ordering the hostile Preparations at the Fort, to be entirely stopt, and, above all, his declaring he had nothing to do with the Stamps, has rid the People of those Fears which Proceedings anterior to his Arrival, had justly suggested to the City, and Liberty, on Friday last, gave him the most expressive Marks of their Joy, by their meeting, in great Numbers, in the Fields, where they erected Pyramids and Inscriptions to his Honour, and one of the grandest Bonfires ever exhibited in this City. They had previously sent him a congratulatory Address on his Arrival, which being dictated by the most sincere Gratitude, was not the less pathetic for being destitute of the Pageantry which often attends those of more regular Bodies. His Excellency received it with the greatest Politeness, and made a complaisant Answer." —N. T. Post-Bay, Nov. 21, 1765.

The common council appoints a committee "to prepare the draft or plan of a Bridewell as also an estimate of the expense thereof and refer the same to this Board with all Convenient Speed for their approbation." —M. C., VI: 449. The Encyclopædia Britannica says that the name "Bridewell" is derived from that of a castle situated, formerly the Free-Mason's Arms, now between the Barbican and long used as the occasional residence of the kings of England. This castle, named "from the well of St. Bride or St. Bridget close by," was, in 1555, made over to the city of London by Edward VI to be used as a penitentiary or reformatory. Since that time the term has become a synonym for reformatory.

The need of a "Bridewell" in New York was suggested as early as May 7, 1707 (p.e.), but nothing had been done. On Nov. 10, 1760, a second committee was appointed to see about its construction; and in the following year, on Oct. 14 (p.e.), it was decided "to fit up without Delay" two rooms "in the New Goal House [see Dec. 1, 1756, and April 9, 1757] for the use & purpose of a Bridewell." —M. C., VI: 467, 468. On Nov. 20, 1767 (p.e.), an arrangement was made whereby William Dobbs, a mariner, was to be keeper of the place until the "first of May Next" in return for £31 and the "profits arising from the Labour thereof." He continued as keeper and was paid for his services and expenses from time to time.—Ibid., VII: 92, 215, 227, 243. Payments were also made for furniture, fuel, etc., for the use of the Bridewell.—Ibid., VII: 98, 99, 100, 102, 103, 112, 120, 125, 134, 141, 245, 265, 269, 282, 357.

On Apr. 7, 1773, a committee, which had been formed to Enquire into the State of the Bridewell, and to recommend ways and Means for putting the Same upon some Better Regulations, "reported that Dobbs would undertake its management for the next year for a salary of £30 and "his Usual Perquisites," and to render to the board every three months an account of all the profits arising therefrom. This was approved.—Ibid., VII: 414. But, soon after (July 13, 1773), Dobbs having signified his intention to resign, Alexander Montefrill was appointed keeper, his services to begin Aug. 1 at a salary of £50 per annum.—Ibid., VII: 415.

In Nov. 1774, the first steps were taken for the erection of a bridewell, the last public building commenced by the city (but not finished) before the Revolution. See, further, Feb. 7, 1774.

In answer to the governor's address of Nov. 19 (p.e.), the assembly says: "We have great Reason to rejoice in the Continuance of his Majesty's paternal Care and Tenderness to us, who, when remove from the Bride the last bridge of communication he had with his Majesty's unremitted Protection."—Assemb. Jour., II: 784-85.

Sir William Johnson writes to the lords of trade: "The late furious & audacious behaviour of the New Yorkers—excited & supported by several Persons of Consequence there are doubtless laid before the Lords by every faithful servant who dare write, and is not afraid that his House shall be burned, or himself massacred.
CHRONOLOGY: THE REVOLUTIONARY PERIOD: 1763-1776

28 Zachariah Hood, stamp officer for Maryland, is known to have fled to this city. Several small parties seek “the Place of his Concealment.” He is found at Flashing and induced to “sign a resignation from the Office of Stamp Officer for Maryland.” The company returned “carrying the Flag of Liberty, with the Words Liberty, Property and no Stamps.” On Dec. 2, McEverson (see Aug. 30) was compelled to sign a resignation which would supplement one he had already given to Lieut. Gov. Colden and the Council. —N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 5, 1765.

Peter Lancey, a native of America, having been appointed one of the inspectors of stamps for America, finds, on his arrival in New York from London, that the stamps “are disagreeable and odious to all ranks and conditions of this colony,” and therefore resigns. —N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 28, 1765. See also Nov. 29.

Montresor writes: “I received Orders from the General by his Aid de Camp to dismantle the Fort and erase its present temporary parapet.” —Montresor’s Jour., 340. This work was in progress on Dec. 1. Ibid., 341.

An anonymous letter was received on Nov. 26 by the clerk of assembly, with instructions on the envelope to open it in the assembly. On this day it is read, and found to be scandalous and seditious. The text, which is badly spelled and punctuated, is contained in the minutes.—Assem. Jour., II: 785. It was signed “Freedom,” and the writer refers to himself as one of the “Sons of Liberty.” A proclamation was issued, on Dec. 2, offering a reward for the discovery of the author or authors.—Cal. Hist. M. Eng., 760.

Montresor writes: “A son of liberty stabbed with a Bayonet by one of the Royal Artillery.” —Montresor’s Jour., 341.

In a message to the assembly, Gov. Moore says: “The Ex pense of furnishing the King’s Troops in America with Quarters, Carriages, and other Necessaries, being by an Act passed the last Session of Parliament, to be defrayed by the respective Colonies, the Commander in Chief of his Majesty’s Forces hath in Consequence thereof, demanded of this Province that Provision which the Act requires, for the Troops at any Time quartered within, or marching through it.” —Assem. Jour., III, 785—80. On Dec. 13 (J.V.), the assembly passed resolutions relating to this demand.

Colten sends to England an account of the province. “The People of New York,” he says, “are properly distinguished into different ranks.” —Jour. 1. The Proprietors of the large Tracts of Land who include within their claims from 100,000 to above one million of acres under one Grant . . .

2. The Gentlemen of the Law make the second class in which properly are included both the Bench and the Bar Both of them act on the same principles and are of the most distinguished rank in the Policy of the Province . . .

3. The Merchants make the third class many of them have suddenly rose from the lowest Rank of the People to considerable fortunes and chiefly in the last war, by illicit Trade . . .

4. In the last Rank may be placed the Farmers & Mechanics . . .

This last Rank comprehends the bulk of the People and in them consists the strength of the Province. They are the most useful and the most moral, but alas! the Dopes of the former, and often are ignorantly made their Tools for the worst purposes.”

Colten then goes on to describe the great power of the lawyers. They “rule” the House of Assembly “in all matters of importance,” and “every man is afraid of offending them and is deterred from making any public opposition to their power and the daily increase of it.” The lieutenant-governor tells also about the controversy over the judges’ commissions (see Aug. 12, 1761), the dissension caused by the Stamp Act (see Aug. 31), his correspondence with Geo. Gage in reference to the defence of the city (see July 8 and Sept. 2), the strengthening of the fort (see Sept. 23), and the events of Nov. 1 (J.V.). In conclusion, he says: “the authors of this Seditious Spirit in the Colonies have extended their views even to Great Britain, in hopes of raking a spirit of discontent among the Manufactures there: They publish in the Newspapers that the importation of British Manufactures are greatly decreased since the duties on the American Trade and that the Colonies are under a necessity of setting up the Manufactures which they otherwise would import from Great Britain.” What has been published of the Manufactures lately set up, are absolute Falsedeeds . . .

All the wool in America is not sufficient to make Stockens for the Inhabitants and the severe Winters in North America render the production of Wool, in great quantities impracticable.

The Merchant men of New York and the other Places, have entered into an Agreement, not to import any goods from England the next year, unless the stamp act is repealed; this scheme is calculated solely to influence the People in England and should it be executed the people in America will pay an extravagant Price for old Mohr eaten Goods, and such as the Merchants could not otherwise sell.” —N. Y. Col. Doc., VII: 797-800.

Montresor writes: "The Governor proposed to the Assembly to furnish money for getting this Harbour, Town Environcs &c. surveyed &c."—Montresor's Jour., 342.

The assembly again prepares petitions to be presented to King George III and to parliament (see Oct. 18, 1764). These express their sentiments of love and loyalty for the king and the government but repeat the list of grievances. The colonists complain of the "internal Taxes and Duties on Merchandise for raising a Revenue in this Colony, by Authority of Parliament, the Extention of Admiralty Jurisdicctions to causes only cognizable at Common Law, and the granting of Appeals from the Verdicts of Jurors." In addition, they declare that "the Restrictions lately laid on our Trade, necessarily tend as well to a more dangerous Monopoly in Favour of our West-India Islands, as to the Ruin of this Continent, by discouraging the Improvement of our Lands," and, in regard to the prohibition of a lawful tender in paper money, "kumbly apprehend that the Statute making our Bills of Credit no legal tender for the future, will be found extremely detrimental both to the Crown and the Colony."—Assemb. Jour., II, 795-802.

After an address of consideration given to the governor's message of Dec. 3 (p. 9), the assembly passes the following resolutions: That where his Majesty's Forces are quartered in barracks belonging to the King, they are always furnished with the necessaries required... without any Expen to the Countries in which they are quartered. That as there are barracks belonging to his Majesty, in this City, and in the City of Albany, sufficient to accommodate double the Number of Forces contained in the Return laid before the General Assembly, an Application to them appears altogether unnecessary at present. That if any Expen should be occasioned by their being quartered, the Governor shall supply them with what is required.... the House ought to consider thereof after the Expen is incurred."—Assemb. Jour., II: 802-3.

Ceden, having retired to his country house, writes Sec. Conway: "The Port is dismantled everything Major James introduced of artillery, artillery stores and Gun Powder removed out of it. "New York by its situation, the great quantity of Artillery in it, and of ammunition and small arms 14,000 in the King's Store may require the more immediate attention of his Majestys Ministers. Whatever happens in this place has the greatest influence on the other colonies.column by column..." Montresor says, "must live amongst a people strangely intimated at this time, by the malicious and virulent papers continually published & dispersed amongst us."—N.Y. Cal. Docr., VII: 794.

Cenden's country house was "about 15 miles from Town," on Long Island.—Ibid., VII: 814, 916.

It having been represented to the assembly "that an illegal Attempt has been made... to deprive the inhabitants of this Colony of their antient and undoubted Right of Trials by their Peers, by bringing an Appeal from the Verdict of a Jury," these resolutions are passed: "That the Trial by Jury, is the Right of the Subject, not only by the common Law, by Statute Law, and the Laws of this Colony, but essential to the Safety of their Lives, Liberty and Property.... That an Appeal from the Verdict of a Jury, is subservive of that Right, and that the Crown cannot legally constitute a Court to take Cognizance of any such Appeal. " That Cadwallader Ceden, Esq., the Lieutenant Governor of this Colony, has, to the utmost of his Power, endeavored to give Success to that dangerous Machination so naturally destructive of the Security, and Peace of the Subject. That the Conduct of the Governor Ceden, and his Lieutenant Governor Col. Moore, has filled the Minds of his Majestys Subjects in this Colony, with Jealousies and Distress, to the great Prejudice of the public Service, and the Repose of the Inhabitants. That it is the Duty of this House immediately to represent House, the Illegality and the dangerous Tendency of the late Innovation."—Assemb. Jour., II: 786, 805-6.

"The Stamp'd Papers, &c. brought to North-America, has produced nothing but Vexations and Misfortunes to every Person who had any Thing to with them."—N.Y. Merc., Dec. 9, 1765.

Montresor begins a survey of New York City at the request of Gen. Gage. He completed it by Feb. 8, in less than two months. The survey was made secretly for military purposes, and numerous inaccuracies bear testimony to the hardness of its execution. Du Similier, writing in about 1768, referred to this survey as "extremely incorrect and full of gross errors."

Montresor spent the summer of 1766 in reducing the plan to "a scale," and in surveying Governor's Island and a part of Red Hook. He sailed for England on Oct. 30, where he supervised the engraving of the plan, returning to New York in August, 1767. The first state of this engraving, which bears the date 1766, is very scarce. The second state was published in 1775. See Pl. 40, Vol. I, and description, 339-40; see also Montresor's Jour., 342-43.

Montresor writes: "This night about 8 o'clock the Effigies of Lord Corville Mr Gneville and General Murray were paraded several times through the streets amidst a large concourse of people who halted first where the Governor was in company and gave 3 Huzzas, they were carried to the Common and there burnt."

Montresor, Jour., 342-43.

"An Address to the Inhabitants of New-York," entitled "Liberty, Property and no Stamps" (see Nov. 28) is "dispersed in several Parts of this Province and widely read."—Gage. "The Stamp Act is calculated to bereave us of the most valuable Rights we derive from Nature, and the English Constitution, and will, if it takes place, strip us of Freedom and Property, and reduce us to a State of absolute Slavery; has been, by a great Number of able Writers, most fully and nearly demonstrated..."—Governor's Address, 40, 1775.

"The Assembly passes resolutions taking into their most serious Consideration, several Acts of Parliament lately passed, granting Stamp, and other Duties to his Majesty, and restricting the Trade of this Colony." The resolutions declare that the colonists are entitled to the "same Rights and Liberties" as other English subjects and protest against the acts.—Assemb. Jour., II: 875-6.

A suitable order is issued on the application of the mayor and magistrates for a military guard.—Cal. Conn. Min., 470.

Companies detailed by Col. Oliver de Lancy and the Earl of Stirling are ordered "to mount guard at the city hall... and to put themselves under the direction of the city authorities."—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 460. A list of the independent companies of the city, with their officers, bears this date.—Ibid.

Obadiah Wells advertises that he handles on commission articles of house manufacture for the country people who do not choose to attend the market at the Exchange.—N.Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 19, 1765.
1765  The "Gentlemen of the Law" resolve "to carry on Business as usual, without paying any Respect to the Stamp Act."—N. Y. T., Dec. 23, 1764. See Dec. 6.

20  Gov. Moore writes to Sec. Conway of the measures he has been connected with in Congress; declares the "complaints" raised in regard to the Stamp Act. "As it was not in my power to employ open force, I had no other remedy left but to let the People be sensible of the inconveniences which of course would attend the suspension they so much desired of the Stamp Act, and they begin already to be very severely felt, for all kind of business has stood still since that time. I have absolutely refused the holding of any Courts of Administration or Chancery which together with the Courts of Common Law are now shut up, and as no vessel will be suffered to go out of the Harbour all their Commerce here must be inevitably ruined if they persist in their obstinacy much longer."—N. Y. Col. Dart., VII: 592. See Jan. 16, 1766. The prevailing conditions are depicted in greater detail in the following extract of a letter from New York, appearing probably in a London newspaper of the same date: "Our port is shut; no vessels cleared out; no law and no money circulating; in short, all traffic and trade seems to be at an end. The country people, that are willing to pay, bring their produce to market to raise money, but can scarce sell any thing. Flax-seed, that other years sold at 12s. to 14s. per bushel, not to mention last year when it sold at 15s. to 20s. per bushel, is now no more than 3s. to 6s. per bushel, and but little sells at that. A great many Merchants that can part will not, in order to prevent remittances from being made to your part of the world. The people of the Province seem to have such an aversion to taking the Stamping papers, that they will sooner die than take them. What the event will be is really to be dreaded."—Upcott Coll., in N. Y. Hist. Soc., III: 347.

3 The Post-Boy states that on this night, between twelve and one o'clock, "a large Number of armed Men went on board the Minerva [see Nov. 15], Capt, Tillet, lying at Rotten-Raw, and demanded the Stamp'd Papers, supposed to be on board, belonging to the Colony of Connecticut, but the latter Instant deliver'd into Fort George; notwithstanding which, they search'd the Vessel in every Part, and finding there was none on board, returned without doing any Mischief."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 26, 1765.

Several prisoners (debtors) in the new gaol effect their escape by striking down the keepers when the latter are locking up the several wards, thus procuring the keys and unlocking the door. The Post-Boy explains: "It is said the Prisoners concerned in this Escape, have drop'd Papers about Town, declaring that they should not have formed such a Design, had it not been that Business was at a Stand by the Stamp Act, and they had no Prospect of a Discharge by the usual Methods of the Law."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 26, 1765.

23 Owing to the difficulty of obtaining slate, stone, etc., for building materials, the legislature suspends, until Jan. 1, 1766, the fire prevention statute of Dec. 31, 1764 (Low, V.), which required their use after Jan. 1, 1766, for construction purposes south of Fresh Water.—Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 869. See Dec. 31, 1765.

Michel Guillaume St. Jean de Crèvecoeur is naturalized as John Hector St. John by act of the legislature.—Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 899-900. Crèvecoeur lived in New York at intervals between 1764 and 1790, and during that time took numerous jaunts through the colonies.—Crèvecoeur, Letters from an American Farmer (1904), xiii-xx. For his description of New York City, see 1776.

Montresor states that a crowd collected to destroy Capt. Kennedy's house but was "suppressed by the Mayor." The mob is said to have destroyed Edmonds' Mill to carry about the last day of this year. See A. Montresor's. Jour., 434.

1766  Some time prior to this date, a wind-mill was erected on the Rutgers' farm, near the corner of the present Old York St. and New Bowery. It is shown on Pl. 20, Vol. I, which constitutes the only intimation found as to the time of its building. See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 962; Pl. 174.

In or about this year, Andrew Elliot, the collector and recoverer general, purchased about 17 acres of land on the Bowery Road, and erected a handsome country-house (the modern site being on the north side of 9th St., 100 ft. west of Broadway), calling it "Minto," after an estate in Scotland belonging to a member of his family.—Liber Deeds, XXXVII: 808. This estate was later the property of Robert Richard Randall (see June 5, 1790), who, in 1801, devised it to establish the "Sailors' Snug Harbor."—Ibid., XLVI: 212. See also Man. Com. Coun. (1864), 839-40; Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 974.

In a letter to Dr. Abel Stevens, the birth of Methodism in New York City in 1766 is thus described by Dr. G. C. M. Robertss: "A few of them [the Irish Palatines] only were Wesleyans. Mrs. Barbara Heck, who had been residing in New York since 1706, visited them frequently. . . . It was when visiting them on one of these occasions that she found some of the party engaged in a game of cards. . . . Her spirit was roused, and, doubtless embodied by her long and intimate acquaintance with them in Ireland, she seized the cards, threw them into the fire, and then most solemnly warned them of their danger and duty. Leaving them, she went immediately to the dwelling of [Philip] Embury, who was her cousin. It was located upon Barrack-street, now Park Place. After narrating what she had seen and done . . . she appealed to him to be no longer silent, but to preach the word forthwith. She carried his excuses, and urged him to commence at once in his own house, and to his own people. He consented, and she went out and collected four persons, who, with herself, constituted his audience. After singing and prayer he preached to them and enrolled them in a class. He continued thereafter to meet them weekly."—Stevens, Hist. of Meth. Epis. Ch. in U. S., I: 54-55. Soon Embury's house could not hold all who desired to hear, and a larger room not far from the quarters of the British troops was hired. About Feb. 1767, Capt. Thomas Webb "of the King's service, and also a soldier of the cross and a spiritual son of John Wesley" began to help with the preaching.—Buckley, Hist. of Meth. in the U. S., I: 120-21. The next step was the renting of "the rigging loft," for which, see 1767.

In this year, a petition was presented to the consistory of the Reformed Protestant Dutch Church "praying that another Church might be Erected upon some of the Grounds belonging to the Church for Establishing Libraries been on the site Instant deliver'd into Fort George; notwithstanding which, they search'd the Vessel in every Part, and finding there was none on board, returned without doing any Mischief."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 26, 1765.

A company of the Sons of Liberty meet at the house of William Howard, and adopt resolutions asserting their determination to "go to the last Extremity," and restore their "Liberties and Fortunes, effectually to prevent the said Stamp-Act from ever taking Place in this City and Province," etc. They agree to meet at the same place once every fortnight, or more often if necessary.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 9, 1766.

A news item states that "about 12 o'Clock last Night, a Company of arm'd Men went on board Capt. Haviland's Brig, lying at or near Cruger's Dock, and after obliging the People to deliver up the Keys, and get Lights, they opened the Hatches, search'd the Vessel from Stem to Stern, and seized the Stamped Papers for this Province and Connecticut, amounting to 10 Boxes, with which they loaded a large Boat, and proceeded with it to the Ship-Yards, where they broke the Packages to Pieces, and with some Tar-Barrels and other Combustibles, made a Bonfire of them and their Contents. . . . When the Whole was entirely consumed, they all quietly dispersed, without doing any Mischief, or even altering the Vessel."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 9, 1766.

A meeting of the council is called to decide whether to issue a proclamation offering a reward for the discovery of the persons who destroyed the stamped papers. The city magistrates are asked to declare whether the peace can be maintained by civil authority.—Cal. Col. Man., 470.

Montresor says: "Advertisements placarded throughout the General proclamation from the Sons of Liberty to those sons that burn the Stamps the other night."—Montresor's Jour., 435.
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1766. “The mayor and magistrate are of opinion they can for the future preserve the peace of the city; the people in general desire the restoration of the stamps.”—Col. Geo. Min. II. 140. Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 752.

15. “We have now in our Harbour, 18 ships, 17 snows, 19 brigs, 13 schooners, and 44 schoops; in all 111 sea vessels.”—N. T. Merc., Jan. 13, 1766. See Dec. 21, 1766.

14. “A course of experiments and lectures on electricity, and another on magnetism, are advertised to be held this week at the City Arms.—N. T. Gen. (Weyman), Jan. 13, 1766. See also Oct. 26, 1765.

4. “A proclamation by Gov. Moore is published, in which, after receiving the recent seizure and destruction of the ten boxes of “Spirit Paper and Parchment” (see Jan. 6), he sends a reward of £100 for the discovery of the perpetrators.” All Magistrates, Justices, Sheriffs, and other Peace Officers, within this Province, are strictly charged and commanded, diligently to proceed in their Duty, and to do their utmost for the Discovery of, and apprehending the offenders aforesaid, that they may be dealt with according to Law.”—N. T. Gen. (Weyman), Jan. 11, 1766.

13. “We are desired to give Notice, That the Society for promoting Arts, etc. are to hold an extraordinary Meeting precisely at Six o’clock in the Evening Of Tis Day; when, besides other Business, Persons are to be appointed to adjudge the Premiums [see Dec. 10, 1764] to the several Claimants, who are to produce their Proof on Wednesday for Arts, and the Friday following for Agriculture.—As the Premiums for the Year ensuing will be under the Consideration of the Society at their next stated Meeting, such Persons, as cannot attend, are requested to send their Proposals orHints in Writing to the Secretary Benjamin Kissam Esq.

N. B. The Market for Home-Manufactures so proper for the Season and which increases in suitable Articles every Market Day holds on the third Wednesday, the 15th Current, under the Exchange of T. G. (Weyman), Jan. 13, 1766.

12. Montresor records that “Children nightly tramp the Streets with lanterns upon Poles & hanging... the Magistracy either approve of it, or do not dare to suppress it.”—Montresor’s Jour., 326.

10. Colden asks for a pension, being near 75 years of age and having been over 40 years in the council.—N. T. Col. Docs., VII: 805. He says he “can not go to town in this cold Season,” without danger to his health.—Ibid., VII: 812.

16. Gov. Moore, in a communication to Sec. Conway, says: “In my former letters [see Dec. 21, 1765] I have had the honor of informing you that all business was at a stand, and that no courts were held; as this obstinate Act of Parliament was made.”—N. T. Col. Doc., VII: 506. In another letter of the same date, Moore writes to Dartmouth that a ship from England has been forcibly entered, and the stamped papers taken from on board and destroyed. He adds: “the disorders have become so general that the magistracy are afraid of exciting the powers they have [been] vested with, and dread nothing so much as being called upon in these troublesome times for their assistance.”—Ibid., VII: 867.

17. “The Weyhawk Ferry house,” the corner-house at the lower end of Division St. (Greenwich), is kept by Joseph Fitch.—N. T. Post-Boy, Jan. 16, 1766. This was a great resort for country people.

18. “In Testimony of the sincere Regret of every patriotic American for the most interesting Death of the Duke of Cumberland, it is recommended that Gentlemen wear Crapes in their Hats, and the Ladies black Ribbons and Handkerchiefs, as suitable to the present American Spirit.”—Suppl. to N. T. Post-Boy, Jan. 17, 1766.

19. Montresor states that “The Sons of Liberty assembled at night in the Fields & bespoke a very large supper, but upon some disagreement (which is generally the case) they broke up and dispersed as usual.”—Montresor’s Jour., 345.

20. Jonathan Watts, writing from New York to Geo. Monckton, says: “We are just come from Council. The Govt behaves sensibly and coldly, he lets the stamps stand till he can hear from home. Secretary Conway by his majesty’s order has wrote a most excellent letter to the Congress on the Confusion of America, wise, mild, and just.”—Aspinwall Papers, in Memoirs Soc. Col. Hist., 25.

21. “Letters from New York say, that if the Stamp Act should be repealed, the American Colonies will cheerfully carry into Execution the late Resolution of Council, for fitting out a certain Number of armed Vessels, at their own Expense, to act in the nature of Guardia Costas.”—London Chron., Jan. 20, 1766.

22. “We can assure the Publick from good Authority, that Lord Colvill has lately declared, that he would not interrupt any Vessel with the Clearances, until he had received Orders from England for that Purpose.”—N. T. Merc., Jan. 20, 1766.

23. Charles Oliver Bruff, “Goldsmith and Jeweller, at the Sign of the Tea- pot, Tankard, and Ear-ring, the Corner of King-street, rear the Fly-market,” advertises that he “makes and mends all Manner of stone Buckles stone rings, ear-rings, broches, plait all sorts of hair lockets in a curious manner; lockets enamelled: it makes all manner of sleeve-buttons, mourning rings of all sorts, trinkets for Ladies, rings or lockets plain or enamelled, gold necklaces or stone of all sorts...” Said Bruff makes all kinds of Silversmith’s work, mends old wares in that way. He hopes for the encouragement of the Gentlemen and Ladies of this City, as he will study to use them well.”—N. T. Merc., Jan. 20, 1766. On Feb. 5, 1775, he added that he charged “all sorts of arms, crests, cyphers, heads and fancies, in the nearest manner and greatest expedition with the heads of Lord Chatham, Shakespeare, Milton, Newton, Pope,” etc. (see Feb. 6, 1775). The advertisement and Order thinks that Bruff employed an engraver for this latter work because “his former advertisements make no mention of engraving.” Stauffer further suggests: “As Henry Purcell [see May 29, 1775] advertises at times in the same journal, he may have been the engraver to whom Massay [the present writer] refers...”—Stauffer, Am. Engravers on Copper and Steel, I: 50-51.

24. The linen factory under the management of Obadiah Wells (see Oct. 5, 1764) advertises for “a large quantity of spining flax.”

25. The industry has been brought to “such perfection, that a piece of green linen made by Mr. John Hill, at this city, was sold at our Market... for eight Shillings per yard.”—N. T. Post-Boy, Jan. 21, 1766.

27. Benjamin Franklin, who at this time was the London agent for the colony of Pennsylvania, is examined before the house of commissaries as to the temper of the colonies respecting the Stamp Act. He declares that the people are very discontented, for they consider the act both unjust and unconstitutional. In his opinion, the colonies are really unable to pay the tax, but, even if this were not the case, he feels sure that they would refuse to pay an internal tax under any circumstances.—Memoirs of Benj. Franklin, I: 325-26; IV: 552-58; Parliamentary Hist., XVI: 137 et seq.

28. Montresor writes: “Arrived Capt. Chalmer’s vessel from London in which came 15 packages of Stamp papers, which were by the Mayor & Corporation secured and lodged in the City Hall.”

29. Most of the people here, he says “acknowledge the King, but not power over them.”—Ibid., VII: 867.

30. “The Petition of the Minister Elders and Deacons of the Reformed protestant Dutch Church of the City of New York” is “preferred” to the common council, “Setting forth that their predecessors have for near a Century Fast [see March 17, 1763] made use of the Cimetry or Church Yard Adjoining to the Old Dutch Church for the Burying their Dead, which from the Length of time & the Contracted Limmits of the Ground is now so full of Dead Bodies that it is hardly Possible to Open the Ground for a Grave without Digging up some of the Corps there Interred, a Circumstance very disagreeable and Indecent and therefore praying that this Board would be pleased to Grant unto them and their Successors for Ever a Certain piece of Ground in the Commons near the Sugar House of Mr Henry Culver, the East End of which fronts the main Road that Leads to Fresh water and is Comprehended in a Survey lately made thereof by Francis Marschalck one of the City Surveyors &c which said Petition being taken into Consideration by this Board they did thereof Resolve themselves into a Committee to View the Ground prayed for, in Conjunction with the Petitioners to morrow afternoon, and that the said City Surveyor do attend this Board at the same time.”—M. C. C., VII: 164.

31. The original petition (see March 17, 1763), dated March 29, 1763, came into the city clerk’s record-room. For locations of streets and landmarks in the description, see Map. Com. Coun. (1866), 606, 609. On Feb. 11, the common council decided to “Grant unto the said petitioners the aforesaid piece of Ground. The consistory of the Dutch Church resolves "That the Old Church [on Garden St] be repaired and the old seats be removed with the old floor, to be sold this fall, the money, as the Trust, and that henceforth no more dead shall be buried there.
Further the Tower shall be repaired in the best manner, and in place of the old glass, chequers shall be put."—Eccles. Rec., VII: 4572. On May 12, it was questioned whether the repairs should be undertaken; and a committee was appointed to inquire what amount of money would be needed.—Ibid., VII: 4589. The committee reported, on June 17, "that the walls would not allow the Tower to be set upon the roof as now, but the new one should be massed upon from the ground, outside of the front walls, and extending four or five feet from the octagon wall. If this decision of the consistory. It was considered unnecessary to delay the un-taking, as there was a prospect of enough money coming in.— Ibid., VII: 4601. On June 26, however, the resolution of June 17,
"in reference to the building of the Tower at the west end of the church," met with obstacles. It was resolved "to build at the east end of the church, to remove the octagon wall straight, and proceed as quickly as possible. Again, on July 2, the committee found difficulty regarding the building of the tower. "So in view of both methods it was at last unanimously resolved to build it where the porch is and to go on with it at once."—Ibid., VII: 4652.
Regarding the plans for alterations, see July 10.

At a meeting of the Sons of Liberty, a committee is appointed "to correspond with the Sons of Liberty in the neighbouring Colonies."—N. Y. Merch., Feb. 10, 1766.

Trinity church is "engaged upon a third large new Church-building" (St. Paul's).—Eccles. Rec., VII: 4537. See May 14, 1764

Montresor states that "This night several Children were dispersed by the watchman, (for the 1st time) for parading the streets with 3 effigies and Candles, being about 300 boys, Cryers and newsmongers and caryers parcling the street and crying aloud
'the downfall of the Stamp Act.'" The Sons of Liberty control the press completely, he says, and declare "they will fight up to their knees in blood rather than suffer the Stamp act to be put in force in this Province and if they can assist even in any other."—Montresor Jour., 349.

"Firearm Survey for the Commander in Chief."—Mon-tresor's Jour., 349. Thus briefly Capt. Montresor records the completion of the plan of the city which he undertook on Dec.
16, 1765 (q.t.), at the command of Gen. Gage. The plan is shown

The common council contributes eight pounds "towards pur-ching a Fire Engine for the more Easy Extinguishing of fires on Long Island."—M. C. C., VII: 3. Such apparent generosity on the part of the magistracy is probably explained by the fact that the company owned property at the ferry terminal on Long Island.

The Sons of Liberty hold a meeting upon "particular Business, having received from one of their members in Philadelphia a letter stating "that a Bond on stamped Paper, with a Mediterranean Pass, from a Merchant in this city, had been sent to Philadelphia.
In consequence, the messenger was compelled to give up all the other blanks in his possession, and on the next day these were burned by the man who received and sent the bond, "before the public Coffee-House, in presence of a multitude of Spectators." All the persons concerned in the affair "pleaded their Innocence, by decrying . . . that no Charge was made for the same, and as it was necessary to enter into bonds for the said Passes, that they did not conceive they could risk their Persons and Effects."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weymann), Montresor records that he has begun "reducing the large Plan [see Feb. 8] to the scale."—Montresor's Jour., 349.

The "Sons of Liberty" are notified to meet on this day at "the House of Richard Howard, in the Fields."—N. Y. Merc., Feb. 17, 1766. This was the old Mason's Arms Tavern at Warren St. and Broadway.

Gettysburg present building is "Altogether Incapable of Containing the Congregation and the Cemetery too small for the decent Interment of their Dead," the ministers, elders, and other members of the English Presbyterian Church petition the common council government to them "the Angular Lott Adjoining to the Ground late-called The Green for The English Presbyterian Church with an Additional Lott Suitable for a Cemetery Subject and that the increase in population delays traffic. They ask that the board "will for the Future Either Add or Order two Boats to Land at Ferry or Pecks Slip Being Nearly Opposite the Landing place on Nassau Side," but the petition is rejected.—M. C. C., VII: 5. The location of the one ferry thus far established to Nassau Island was at Pecks Slip.—Ibid., VII: 457. For an earlier petition, see
May 22, 1765.

Gov. Moore informs Sec. Conway that, because of "some outrages," he has been forced to make "a private Application to Gen Gage for some military Assistance (our present Force here [New

A newspaper clipping, apparently from a London paper, reads:
"Very large Orders in the Stationery Branch have this week been countermanded from North America, where, we hear, one Paper Manufactory has lately been established at New York [see July 14, 1768], and another at Philadelphia, which will soon be able to supply most of the neighbouring Colonies."—Upcott Coll., N. Y. Hist.
Soc., 447.

Colden is of the opinion, he writes to Conway, "that no great Force will be requisite to reduce the City of New York to obedience.
After the Fort shall be restored to the state it was in when I left it, I believe a thousand men may be sufficient. It is very likely we will have to such a Force as may destroy all hopes of Resistance. After such Force arrives, I am humbly of opinion, if Proclamation be made that all riotous assemblies, or open disobedience of the Laws shall be treated as Rebellion, the People will submit without opposition and the whole Province will fall under the example of the City.

The committee appointed to consider the petition of the ministers, elders, and other members of the English Presbyterian Church (see Feb. 19), reports that £40 per annum has been offered for the land applied for, which, upon survey, was found to comprise about nine lots, 25 by 100 ft. The members agreed that this ground was the most convenient place to build a church. Annexed to the report was a statement, by the church committee, of their reasons for choosing this site. The only other ground worthy, in their opinion, of consideration was "that opposite to the Old Wind Mill Spot," but that location was rejected by them because, among other reasons, it was inconveniently situated. A church erected there would be endangered by fire from the many wooden buildings in the vicinity, and its nearness to the Dutch Church might cause hindrance to both sects. The petitioners hoped that the rental of £40 per annum would be considered sufficient, inasmuch as Trinity Church had received its land free, and the Dutch Church had paid only about half as much, and because they, having never received a grant from the city, were "proper Subjects for the Bounty and favour of the worshipful Board." The common council, on hearing the committee's report and the Church's unanimously agreed to grant the land at the proposed rental, and ordered a draft thereof to be prepared.—M. C. C., VII: 8-12.

City Grants, Libr C: 372. The land was that bounded by the present Nassau and Beeckman Sts. and Park Row. The church was opened Jan. 1, 1765 (q.t.). For 3 years after it was built, it was known as "The New Church," but in 1798, when the next Presby-

"The Chamberlain Church was erected (on Rutgers St.), the name was changed Feb. to "The Brick Church."—Knapp, Hist. of the Brick Predby. Ch. 1.

The first ferry to the Jersey shore under municipal regulation is established (for an earlier private ferry, see June 28, 1764). A common council committee, appointed to confer with petitioners for this ferry privilege (see May 3, 1765), reports that Cornelius van Voort offered the corporation $20 per year for seven years, "they to appoint the rates of ferriage in crossing . . . after the said term of 7 years be expired he would give the Corporation a free landing on his side, they making the most they can from New York there, provided the Corporation would grant him the same privilege from Jersey side to New York; as he was possessed of 15 large and commodious boats for the use of ferriage, which should always be in repair for that purpose; that the Corporation might settle the place of landing on New York side, though he would recommend to have it at the same place he now lands at." The proposals were agreed to, and it was ordered "that the landing place be fixed at the ground or pier of Nicholas Roosevelt Espy the lower end of Thomas [Thames] street."—M. C. G., VII: 8. See Feb. 20, 1767. See also "Paulus Hook Ferry," in Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 941.

27 There appears in the Gazette an extract from a letter from "a Gentleman in London who is well acquainted with America" to the effect that "the Stamp-Act is in the Way to be repealed, . . . tho' every possible Endeavour is used that Satanic Malice, Chicanery, Obstinacy, or Fraud can invent, yet I apprehend it will be carried through both Houses. . . . Mr. Benjamin Franklin has sent me word that he was examined by the Commons [see Feb. 3], and gave such clear and explicit Answers to the Questions proposed, and mentioned his own Sentiments with so much firmness and Resolution, as at once did him great Credit, and served your Cause not a little."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), May 25, 1766.

Ekanah and William Deane, brothers [see Sept. 20, 1765], "Coach-Maker's from Dublin," advertise their partnership. They "have now done to as great Perfection, all Branches of the Coach-making Trade, as can be imported; such as wood Work, in all its Branches; Carving, Painting, Gilding, and Japaning; Trimming, Harness and Saddler's Work: Likewise Smith's Work of all Sorts, relative to said Trade, even Axlets, and Steel-springs, equal in Quality, if not superior, to any imported from England." The advertisement continues: "As we can now make and finish, (without the Assistance of any out of our own Shop) in the genteel and best Manner, all Kinds of Coaches, Chariots, Landaus, Phaetons, Post-Chaises, Curricles, Chairs, Sedans, and Sleighs. We can afford to make any of them on more reasonable Terms than has been yet done by any Person in this City, and as we are determined to contribute as much as in our Power, to the Prosperity of the Coach Makers and Coachmen of America here, to make and sell any of the above Carriages, Five per Cent. cheaper than they can be imported from England." They further say: "we likewise warrant and engage all our Work for one Year, (accidents excepted) being the most that any Coach-maker in Great-Britain or Ireland do." The advertisement closes: "Said Deane's have two Curricile Chairs, one Chaise, and a Kitteren-Chair, one Double Horse Sleigh, . . . and one Pair of Curricile Harness, with a Steel sliding Bar. . . . Their shop was "in Broad-Street."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 27, 1766. Their business became an important factor in New York trade at this time—Houghton, Inscribed Colonial N. Y. (1890), 15-16. Their rivals were James Hallett (see Jan. 22, 1730) and Samuel Lawrence (see Oct. 5, 1765). For the meaning and description of the various vehicles mentioned in this advertisement, see Houghton, op. cit., 19. On June 11, 1765, James Beek- man paid Deane £911.15 for a "Chaise and Gilding" (Ref. Key, III: 909).—Ibid., 15. For an account of the Beekman coach, now in the N. Y. Hist. Soc. collection, see ibid., 21.

28 Montresor states that Gov. Moore has bought and wears "two Homespun Coats made in the Colonies for the Encouragement of arts in the Colonies as an Example for others."—Montresor's Jour., 351.

6 Upon a supposition that the cannon upon the battery were spiked (see April 6 and 18) by order of Lieut.-Gov. Colton, his effigy is exhibited "sitting upon a piece of ordnance, (properly mounted) with a drill, constructed in such manner as to be continually firing." A newspaper article of the affair says that "at his back hung a drum, as a badge of his former profession: On his breast was fixed a paper, on which were the following lines, "I'm decry'd by Infidels, and look'd upon with horror. "And am forced to do penance, tho' not in the church. "After it had appear'd in the principal streets of the city, attended by many thousand spectators, (altogether it rain'd great part of the time) it was carried to the common, where a fire was immediately made of the effigy, and the accoutrements of the multitude, who dispersed directly after."—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 13, 1766; Penn. Gaz., March 20, 1766. Colton had been burned in effigy once before (see Nov. 1, 1765).

7 It was represented to this board that Alderman Roosevelt intended to purchase on behalf of the city, at the cost of New York, to grant and Convey to them two Water Lotts belonging to him adjoining the Water Lotts of this Corporation upon Condition that the Ferry across Hudsons River between this City and Powles hook should be established and fixed from his said Lotts but in as much as the said two Lotts will not be sufficient to accommodate the said Ferry without the addition of so much of the Water Lotts belonging to this Corporation adjoining the said two Lotts and of Equal demensions therewith And this Board Considering the Convenience and advantage arising to the Publick from the said Ferry thereupon Resolves that the said Grant and Convey to the City Corporation two of their Lotts belonging to this Corporation adjoining the said two Water Lotts of Alderman Roosevelt and of Equal Dimensions for the use of the said Ferry but for no other use or purpose whatsoever upon Condition that the said Ferry is to be Established and fixed there for ever but if the said Water Lotts so granted by this Corporation for the use aforesaid shall again Revert and be in this Corporation."—Trin. Min. (MS.).

Montresor states that there are 1,700 barrels of gunpowder at Turtle Bay and 500 at Prevost's on the East River "lodged in a Powder Magazine," also, that 3,000 tons of ordnance stores are "lodged in a Stone house on the North River exposed, as being without Guard or Defence."—Montresor's Jour., 352. See March 29.

The king gives his assent to the repeal of the Stamp Act, but it is not to go into effect until May 1. — Ann. Reg. (1766), 77. According to a letter from Bristol, the bill passed the house of commons on March 4, and was sent to the Lords on March 5. — N. Y. Gaz., April 28, 1766. Montresor, therefore, must have been misinformed when he wrote in his Journal: "the 24th of January, the Stamp act was Repealed. Upon receiving the accounts 3 or 400 boys tore through the several Streets with the shouts of the Stamp act's Repealed."—Montresor's Jour., 357.

Furthermore, on this day, the king gives his assent to the bill for securing the dependency of the colonies on the British crown. — Ann. Reg. (1766), 77. This act (generally known as the "Declarationary Act") declared that the "Colonies and Plantations in America be, and the same are hereby declared to be, and form a part of the British Empire, and are subordinate unto and dependent upon, the Imperial Crown and Parliament of Great Britain; and that the King's Majesty, by and with the Advice and Consent of the Lords . . . and Commons . . . had, hath and of Right ought to have full power and authority to make Laws and Statutes of sufficient Force and Validity to bind the Colonies and People of America, Subjects of the Crown of Great Britain, in all Cases whatsoever."—Stat. of Gt. Brit., VII: 571.

Montresor writes that the Sons of Liberty are preparing to have a procession and burn, in effigy, Sir Jefry Amberth. They say "he proposed to augment the military forces in America, towards the more effectual forcing the Stamp act." They further propose "erecting a Statue to Mr. Pitt (as a friend) in the Bowling Green on the Identical Spot where the Lieut. Governor's Charter was burned (see Nov. 1, 1766) and to name that Green—"Liberty Green" for ever."—Montresor's Jour., 357.

The docking facilities of the city at this time were inadequate to meet commercial needs. A petition to the common council of inhabitants living near Burling Slip states that this slip is frequented by New England and Long Island trading Boats, that usually bring their Country Produce to the city; and the petitioners wish the common council to prohibit sea-going vessels from occupying the slip. "The there is no Publick Dock Provided for laying up Sea Vessels, they say, "yet there are many Places about the Wharfs and Keys of this City and in Particular Rotten Row, Sufficient to contain the Sea Vessels belonging to this City without injury to the Country Trade; That therefore we conceiv..."
CHRONOLOGY: THE REVOLUTIONARY PERIOD: 1763-1776

18. of March 1766, states that Jeronimus Remsen, the proprietor of the water lot on the east side of Burling Slip, “is now docking out the same, by which means the said Slip is much contracted.” The same day, another petition to the Commissioners of the sea-going vessels, and the petitioners ask that the latter ships may be prohibited from coming into the slip.—From the original petitions (MSs) in File 4, city clerk’s record-room. Neither the petitions nor the action upon them, if any was taken by the common council, have been recorded in the Minutes.

At a public sale, the ferry between New York and Nassau Island is leased to Samuel Waldron for five years at the annual rent of $660; the wharves and slips to Luke Roe for three years at $620 per annum; and the “Stalls and Standings” to Alexander White for two years at an annual rent of $540.—M.C.C., VIII, 14.

The ministers, elders, deacons, and trustees of the Presbyterian Church petition the king “to grant and confirm the Premises” (of their church on Wall St.) to them and to create them “a Body Politick and Corporate in Deed and in name, by the Name and Style of ‘The Ministers, Elders, Deacons and Trustees of the Presbyterian Church of the City of New York according to the Westminster Confession of Faith, Catechisms and Directory, agreeable to the present established Church of Scotland.” Attached to the petition was the form of a charter, as they desired.—Doc. Hist., N. Y. (4th ed.), III, 301-3; Cal. Hist. MSS. Eng., 761. See July 30. This petition was denied by the king on Aug. 26, 1767 (q.v.).

Lieut. Hallam, on board the “Garland,” is reported to have said that Holt (printer of the Post-Boy) would be hanged, if he were in England, “for the licentiousness of his Paper.” The Sons of Liberty are greatly incensed; they send two of their number on board the “Garland” to demand the lieutenant, but he refuses “any intercourse with them,” and orders them ashore, the vessel lying close to the wharf. “The Rabble cry’d out ‘bring the Lieut. ashore with a Halter about his neck.’” They assembled again the next day, and it is said in the Minutes that “in their present situation, they found the vessel too strongly guarded. The lieutenant, however, felt ‘obliged to confine himself on Board from the threats he had received.’”—Montresor’s Jour., 333-54.

The New York Society for promoting Arts, etc., at their meeting held on the 5th instant, granted a great number of premiums on the several branches of arts and Agriculture, particularly for raising the greatest quantities of flax, hemp-seed, and barley; to the persons who shall spin the greatest quantities of yarn and thread; Manufacture the best pieces of linen and tow-cloth; produce the greatest quantity of pitch; make the three first stocking looms of New York; the three first vessels built there; or the greatest quantity of worsted: make the best 100 pairs of Women Shoes; or the greatest quantity of good tiles, not less than 50,000 of which were sold in New York in 1766. A medal was given for raising from the quarry, manufacturing, etc., the greatest quantity of good slate, for covering houses; for the first flax-Mill, to go by Water for the first bleach-field,” etc.—Uptown Coll., in N. Y. Hist. Soc., III, 411. The society was in communication with similar societies in other parts of the country in order to compare records of work and progress.—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 20, 1766.

It has been “agreed amongst the Sons of Liberty here,” says Montresor, “to wait on the Comit in Chief [Gage] that they might be informed of . . . the reason for his ordering Troops to New York.” Because the governor has never interfered “during all the tumults and disturbances” the rabble deems this “a sufficient Sanction of his being for the present Irregularities; having never till now, ever had the shadow of Opposition to present itself against them.”—Montresor’s Jour., 354.

A letter of this date from Bristol says: “We now come to beg your attention to three things on which solid and lasting advantage can be secured, viz: ‘1. The Increase of the population of this country; 2. The establishment of a military force; 3. The preservation of the trade within bounds, and that no person be burnt in effigy.” Let no indelicate reflections be permitted to be inserted in any of your news papers against the legislature.—2. Discontentance & inform government of any illicit trade that may be carried on from the East Country. . . . This very thing has bro’t on all that has happened.”—N. Y. Merc., May 26, 1766.

Montresor states that “1000 Barrels of Powder & 12,000 Stands of Arms” (see March 16) are “put on board the men of War for Safety, as not being thought secure where they were stored.”—Montresor’s Jour., 356.

Sec. Conway writes from St. James’s to the governors in America a conciliatory letter, enclosing copies of two acts of parliamet 29. A new rule for securing the defense of the Colonies on the Mother Country; the second for the repeal of the Act of last session, granting certain stamp duties in America.” He explains “A Revision of the late American Trade Laws is going to be the immediate object of Parliament.”—N. Y. Col. Docs., VII, 823-24. The two laws which Conway transmits were passed on March 18 (p.v.).

Montresor states that “Five Ruffians or Sons of Liberty fell on an officer of the Royal Americans on the Common about Dusk, behind his Back and beat him mercilessly and broke his sword, which he had drawn in his Defence.”—Montresor’s Jour., 356-57.

“The Sons or Spawns of Liberty and Inquisition,” as Montresor chooses to call them, are “still venting threats and insulting the Crown & Officers under it.” Lieut.-Gov. Colden, in particular, are they threatening, “In Case the Stamp act is not repealed.”—Montresor’s Jour., 355, 357.

Announcement is made that “The Twin Rivals” will be presented at the “Theatre in Chapel-Street” (see April 2, 1764) on April 9.—N. Y. Post-Boy, April 3, 1764. See April 4.

A Grand meeting of the Sons of Liberty to settle matters of moment, amongst the many whether they shall admit the strollers arrived here to act (see April 7), the General has given them permission. These Heroes of Liberty keep an office and enter minutes and record them & all their correspondence to their licentious fraternity throughout the different Provinces: . . . Some Stamps can were said in the Streets were publicly burnt, at the Coffee house, together with some play bills, all to prevent Their Spirits to flag.”—Montresor’s Jour., 357-58. See May 1.

Some of the inhabitants begin work on the spiked cannon at the Battery (see March 6 and April 16), hoping to make them useful again. Montresor thinks their efforts will be unavailing, because the gun “are mostly old and honeycomb, the carriages so scarce as to be able to support the weight of metal, the Platforms so totally out of order as to admit the Trucks of the Carriages nearly to their axles. And the checks of the Embrasures choke ‘em on every explosion as the Log work is decayed and ill-tired.”—Montresor’s Jour., 359. The cannon is continued.

“Last Week a sloop from Egg-Harbour, brought up town, a small bundle of stamped paper, that had been found in the wreck of the ship Ellis . . . As soon as it was known, they were seized by the sons of liberty, and purified at the Coffee-house last Friday [April 4], before a thousand spectators.”—N. Y. Merc., April 7, 1766.

A sale is advertised to be held on this day at the Merchants’ Coffee House of a “Very pleasant Farm, lying on the North River, about four Miles from this City, Known by the Name of New-Foundland, or the Glass-House, now in the Possession of Matthew Ernest, it contains Thirty Acres and a Half of Land, in good Order—There is on the Place a good Dwelling-House with five Rooms, two Cellars, a large convenient Kitchen; also a large new Barn, Chaise-House, Stables, and several Out-Houses—also two good Springs on the Place.”—N. Y. Gen. (Weyman), March 30, 1766.

The Glass-House, a glass manufactory, had been erected about 1754 (see Oct. 2, 1754), and had been turned into a tavern in 1765.

Gerrard G. Beekman and other inhabitants of Montgomery Ward living at or near Beekman’s Slip state, in a petition to the common council, that the street fronting their houses, Beekman’s Slip, and down to Cannon’s Wharf, is so narrow that two carts cannot conveniently pass each other; and they offer to widen the street at their own expense by wharfing out five feet or more. Consideration of the petition is deferred, and no further action on it is recorded in the Minutes, but, at the same time, a committee is appointed “to Superintend Order and direct the Surveyors of the present high ways in the streets adjoining the Slip, and the or high ways in such manner as they shall Judge Proper.”—M. C. C., VIII, 15.

The Minister and Elders of the French Church, desirous to encourage a French-School, have granted me leave to teach in their Consistory-Room, situated in the Yard of that Church, where I purpose to open a public School, on Monday the 20th inst. . . . My terms are as follows, viz. For the French, Latin, and Greek Languages, besides English Grammar, &c. . . . 36s. entrance, and 36s. per quarter; for other French Language, English Grammar, &c. 20s. entrance, and 20s. per quarter. As I do not presume to teach English Pronunciation, I will not take Children who cannot read English fluently. After public school hours, I will teach at the same place for 24s. per Month, and 24s. entrance, those of riper years; those who instruct for the French School, will be considered as being sufficiently acquainted to be qualified so as to suit the learner's views, age, &c. taking care to give but few rules properly exemplified."—N. The news reaches New York that the repeal of the Stamp Act obtained the king's assent on March 18 (q.v.). Although such tidings had been expected (see April 26), "a sudden joy was immediately diffused thro' all ranks of People in the whole City. Neighbors ran to congratulate each other, and all the Bells in Town were set to ringing, which continued till late at Night, and began again early next morning. The French Bells, under the direction of their bell-ringers, rang for the space of two days, which was published in a broadside which reads:

"Joy to America!

"At 3 this Day arrived here [New York] an Express from Boston with the following most glorious News, on which H. Gaine congratulates the Fr. of America—Boston, Friday 11 o'clock, 16th May, 1766. "When his Majesty went to the House he was accompanied by greater Numbers of People than ever was known on the like Occasion; many Copies of the Repeal were sent to Falmouth, to be forwarded to America; and all the Vessels in the River Thames bound to America, took their Captains and Orders to sail.

"s o'clock, P. M. Since composing the Above an Express arrived from Philadelphia with a Confirmation of the Repeal, and that a printed Copy of it by the King's Printer lay in the Coffee-House for the Pursal of the Public."—From an original preserved in the N. Y. Hist. Soc.

The first "Flag Staff," later known as the "Liberty Pole," the scene of heated contention between citizens and soldiers, is noted on this date as being on the Common while the celebration of the repeal of the stamp act was being observed. It was probably erected on this or the preceding day. Montresor says there was "a large Board fixed on the pole with the inscription "George 3rd, Pitt— and Liberty."—Montresor's Jour., 368. He refers to the same again under date of June 4— Ibid., 321. The N. Y. Journal of March 26, 1766, refers to "the mast erected on the Common, inscribed his Majest's. Name Pitt— and Liberty, the occasion of the Repeal" (see Mar. 18), neglecting to state, however, that the original pole had since been cut down twice (see Aug. 10 and Sept. 23, 1766) and replaced. Contemporary references to this flag staff as a "pine post" or "mast" (see Aug. 11 and Sept. 23) suggest that some old vessel may have been dismantled for this festive purpose.

The error of Jeremy B. Dawson [Mon. Econ. Soc., 1855, p. 444] and other secondary authorities (also repeated recently in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Quarterly Bulletins, Jan., 1920, p. 109) in ascribing this first flag staff to June 4 may possibly be traced to a misstatement in the Post-Boy of Aug. 14, where its erection is connected with the "joy being on his Majesty's Birthday Day" (June 4), instead of with the earlier rejoicing on May 21.

The ardour of the "Sons of Liberty" on this day was further evidenced in handbills reading:

"This Day

"On the glorious Occasion, of a total Repeal of the Stamp Act, there will be a general Meeting, and Rejoicing at the House of Mr. R. Howard. The Lovers of their Country, loyal Subjects to his Majesty George the Third King of Great-Britain, and real Sons of Liberty, of all Denominations, are hereby cordially invited to partake of the essential & long boc'd for Celebration. The City will be illuminated, and every decent Measure will be observed, in demonstrating a sensible Acknowledgement of Gratitude to our illustrious Sovereign to be forgiven his Majest's errors, and to defend and guard, particularly the Guardian of America.—Pit.

"Prior to the dinner the rector of the Reformed Dutch Church (Mr. Laidle) gave a congratulatory Discourse on the joyful Occasion" and

"A Royal Salute of Twenty-one Cannon was fired.

"After dinner "Toasts were cheerfully drank." (See June 3), and the evening concluded with "Bonfires and grand Illuminations, and notwithstanding the transports of our Joy, and the vast Concours of People which were assembled, the whole transactions of the Day was conducted and finished, with the greatest Loyalty,弘mony, and good Order."—N. Y. Gaz., May 25, 1766. Per contra, Montresor says: "Night ended in Drunkenness, throwing of Squibbs, Crackers, firing of muskets and pistols, breaking some windows and forcing off the Knockers off the Doors."—Montresor's Jour., 368-69.

"A news item reads: It is imagined by many of the Friends of America, that the Resolution of the Peninsylvanians, in laying aside their present Hometown Apparel, and dressing themselves anew with English Manufactures, proceeds from their present partial Politicks, and is concluded upon to be done with a View to recommend themselves to the present Administration, as they have long since been, and are, attempting a Change of Government."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), May 26, 1766.

"John Holt begins publication of The New-York Journal, or General Advertiser. Issued sporadically at first, it became a weekly, and during its varied career, until finally discontinued on March 8, 1806, it bore various titles under successive owners. Its career was broken by the Revolution, when it was printed intermittently at Kingston and Poughkeepsie. For these many changes, see Early Newspapers, II: 424; Am. Antiquarian Soc. Proceedings (1917), XXVII (N.S.): 445; N. Y. Pub. Library Bull., Sept., 1920.

A meeting of St. Andrew's Society is announced, to be held "at the House of Peter Taylor, Vintner, near the Merchant's Coffee-House."—N. Y. Merc., May 1766.

The common council orders that a warrant for £31409 issue to Joseph Theophilus Hardenbrook for the expense of a bonfire May 21, on the receipt of news of the repeal of the Stamp Act.—M. G. C., VII: 18. See May 20.

"The king's birthday and "Rejoicings for the Authenticated arrival of the Repeal of the Stamp Act" are "blended in one Festival. The men-of-war in the harbour and "some guns placed on Skids in the Fields" fire salutes. Two oxen are roasted whole there and an "Artillery park" is formed. "Beer and Grog for the Populace, and an Entertainment or Dinner provided at the City Arms for the General, Governor, officers military, naval and civil, at the Exence of the Inhabitants and cannon fired at each Toast, accompanied with Huzzaz. The Town entirely illuminated."—Montresor's Jour., 371. Cf. N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), June 2, 1766. The Walton house "was deemed the nonpareil of the city in 1766 [error for 1767] when seen, greatly illuminated in celebration of the Stamp Act repealed."—Watson's Annals, 350.

The Gazette reports that the repeal of the Stamp Act "has produced a universal Jubilee throughout the continent of America; every Province, Town & Parish emulating each other in testifying their joy on this grand event; not from any ostentatious or triumphal principle that they have given an ascendency over the British Parliament, but in gratitude to that august legislature, for condescending to reconsider the operation of that most destructive Act, from a consciousness that it had a tendency to alienate the affections of many loyal subjects, & actually destroy the foundations of these colonies to the British empire."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), June 9, 1766.
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

The mayor informs the common council "that William Davis of this City Martiner hath lately Delivered to him to be Presented to the Honorable William Pitt, Esq; Sat in an Elegant and Genteel frame, and this Board in order to Demonstrate the Great value and esteem they have for the person of so great a Patriot & friend to America as the said William Pitt, whereby in return for the Compliment of the said William Davis, order that the Freedom of this Corporation be prepared and submitted to him, & that the Clerk prepare one accordingly & deliver the same to Mr. Mayor who is desired to present it to the said William Davis with the thanks of this Board."—M. C. C., VII: 20.

It is ordered that the mayor issue his warrant to the treasurer "to pay out or order the sum of £10 for the Painting of his present Majesty [George III] which he presented to this Corporation."—Ibid., VII: 20.

Goldsbrow Banyar, by the governour's command, orders the corporation to have the "barracks on the common" cleaned and prepared "for the reception of the troops."—Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 762.

Gov. Moore, in an address to the council and the assembly, says: "The General satisfaction which has been diffused throughout the Colonies, on the . . . Repeal of the Stamp Act and the Impressions made on the minds of the People, on receiving such distinguishing marks of his Majesty's favor and Protection, have induced me to give you the earliest Opportunity of making those acknowledgments of Duty and Submission, which on such an Occasion must arise in the Breasts of every Individual . . . Let it be your concern to undeceive the Deluded, and by the powerful Examinations of your Conduct, to bring back to a Sense of Duty, those who have been misled." In addition he recommends to the attention of the general assembly "the Case of those unfortunate Persons, who from the Licenciousness of the People, have suffer'd for their deference to the Acts of the British Legislature . . . it will be no ungrateful Task for this Province to take the lead . . . and by making a full and ample compensation to the sufferers for their Goods and Effects destroyed, shew to the neighbouring Provinces . . . the sense which is here entertained of the benefits lately received."—Jour. Leg. Coun., III: 1587-88.

"We have the Pleasure to assure the Public, that Mr. Nicholas Ray, of London, has given One Hundred Pounds to the Society for Encouragement of Arts, Agriculture, &c. of this City and Province [see Dec. 3, 1764]. Such Benefactions promise Stability to our Infant Undertaking."—N. T. Post-Boy, June 12, 1766.

The legislative council prepares an address in answer to Gov. Moore's communication of the repeal of the Stamp Act (see June 12). After thanking him for the receipt of the news, the council adds: "To undeceive the deluded, and to bring back to a sense of their Duty, the Misljudged and Prejudiced, have been the fixed objects of your Council; it now appears that nothing shall be wanting on our Part, to inculcate in the minds of the People, a thorough sense of the Obligation they owe, the Dependence they stand in, and the Benefits they receive from their most gracious Sovereign, and their Guardians, the British Parliament." The address was delivered to Gov. Moore on June 16, at which time he answered "I return you my thanks for this Address, as the Sentiments you express therein must so manifestly tend to the Establishment of the Happiness and Prosperity of your Country."—Jour. Leg. Coun., III: 1599.

"The 46th Regiment of Foot" arrives from Albany, and "are now quartered in our Barracks."—N. T. Merc., June 23, 1766.

" Merchants refusing to take out "let pass" [clearance papers] for vessels outward bound the governor proposes to apply to the men-of-war in the harbor to stop all vessels going to sea without the paper; council needs time to give advice."—Col. Coun. Min., 471. The opinion of the council concerning the taking out of these clearance papers was indicated in a letter which Gov. Moore wrote to the lords of trade on Jan. 14, 1767. He said: "I did apprehend that upon the Repeal of the Stamp Act, all-kind of business would have returned into its former channel, but in this I have been disappointed; for, as the Green Paper, to issue any papers from my office which were not stam'p'd agreeable to the Act of Parliament, I was obliged amongst other things to refuse the granting of Let passes to the Ships clearing out from this Port; they ventured to sail without them and from the indiscipline they proceeded in that case not being seized, the Custom was founded on a Proclamation of a very old date of the then Gov' and issued by advice of the Council before the third branch of the Legislature was established here, which then carried with it the authority of a Law. I apprehended that at this time, it ought to have had no more weight, as it never has been constra- dicted by any Law since made, but the opinions of the Gentlemen of the Law are so far from being unanimous on this occasion, that I have not been sufficiently encouraged to try the determination of a Court of Judicature by prosecuting the Offenders. I afterwards resolved to bring the case before the Council to get a Law passed for that purpose, but upon private enquiry in what manner a Message from me on this head was likely to be received, I found that it would not be attended with the success I desired."—N. T. Col. Docs., VII: 891.

"The assembly sends a message to the council, asking the latter to join in an address of thanks to the king [see June 12] for the repeal of the Stamp Act.—Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 762.

The assembly had ordered a bill to be brought in "for providing Barracks, Fire Wood, Candles, bedding and utensils for the Kitchen as demanded, but the Articles of Salt, Vinegar, and Cider or Beer are not to be included in the Bill," because "they are not provided in Europe for His Majesty's Troops which are in Barracks."—N. T. Col. Docs, VII: 891. See July 3.

The provincial council orders that a proclamation be issued offering a reward for the arrest of rioters. On July 3, it ordered that this be sent to neighbouring governments.—Col. Coun. Min., 471.

Following a notice in the Post-Boy of June 19, many citizens meet at the Coffee-House to consider the idea of erecting a statue to William Pitt "in Testimony of the grateful Sense they entertain of his Services to the American Colonies." They instruct their representatives to urge the assembly "to make Provision for an elegant Statue of Brass."—N. T. Post-Boy, June 19 and 26, 1766. See also Montresor's Jour., 374.

The lighthouse at Sandy Hook is struck by lightning. Twenty "Panes of the Glass Lanthorn" are broken and the " Chimney and Peach [oven] belonging to the Kitchen" knocked down. The people in the house receive slight injuries.—N. T. Merc., June 30, 1766.

Certain Frenchmen, on this Sunday, take possession of the French church by force, before the time for service, opposing the officers of the church, and refusing the ministers, Rev. J. P. Tetard, accordance to their wishes. They finally break the locks, and affix locks of their own to every door. A petition by Tetard to Gov. Moore on Oct. 17, 1767 (p. 87), states that they have "kept possession of the same to the inexpressible Detriment of this Pious Institution, and to the great Scandal of Civil Society as well as Religion."—Doc. Hist., N. Y. (40 ed.), III: 315.

The general assembly has agreed to these resolutions: "That an Equestrian Statue of his present Majesty, be erected in the City of New York, to perpetuate to the latest Posterity, the deep Sense this Colony has of the eminent and singular Blessings received from him during his most auspicious Reign. That for the many eminent and essential Services done the Northern Colonies by the Right Honourable William Pitt, Esq., but in particular in promoting the Repeal of the Stamp-Act, and to perpetuate to the latest Posterity the grateful Sense this Colony entertainers on that Account; Provision might be made for erecting an elegant Statue of him in Brass. There has also been proposed, That a Piece of Plate, value £100 Sterling, be presented to John Sargent, Esq; of the City of London, with the Thanks of the House, for his having cheerfully undertaken, at their request, and to their great Satis- faction, faithfully discharged the Trust of special Agent, and liberally declined the Reward offered for his Troubles."—N. T. Merc., June 30, 1766. See Feb. 6, 1767.

The common council pays £100 "towards carrying on a building now propos'd in addition to the poor house" (alms-house).—M. C. C., VII: 21.

Further payments were made as follows: Sept. 10, £50 (ibid., VII: 23) Oct. 31, £60 (p. 43) Nov. 27, £27 (p. 49); and Aug. 13, 1767, £52 "towards Compleating" it (p. 79).
Althought a permit was granted to Nicholas Bayard on Sept. 12, 1750 (g.v.), to build a slaughter-house near the Fresh Water, and a law was published on Feb. 6, 1752 (g.v.), it was not until July 23 (1752) that it was put in execution. Full text of this law, newly stated or revised, was entered in the Minutes of the common council (M. C. C., VII: 25-26), and, on July 28, published in Weyman's Gazette. This law was altered June 13, 1751 (g.v.).

The Common Council being Informed of an Encroachment made by Robert Murray, of New York, on the Slip running from the Ground of the Ship Purchased of Cornelius P. Low," and finding that this encroachment is about seven feet, it is ordered that notice be given to remove it.—M. C. C., VII: 25. On Aug. 7, various inhabitants, learning of the board's action in directing Mr. Murray "to remove such & so great a part of the wharf or peer which he hath lately put upon the ground or soil belonging to this Corporation, to the westward of the range prescribed & limited by this Corporation in a grant to Cornelius P. Low," etc., express the opinion that "the said encroachment would be more convenient to the public than if the same had not been made," and they petition the board to permit Mr. Murray "to go on in building the said peer or wharf, on the same range it was when sunk," etc. It is ordered that the wharf remain "where it now is and that a bevel line be run from the south west corner of the present wharf or peer so far into the said East River as the extent of his present grant or right gives him, so that the same there terminates to a front on the said river of 25 feet, 6 inches and that said Rob! Murray in building and erecting the said peer & docking out in front of his water lot do leave a vacancy of 30 feet as well through his own lot as that of the peer, & that the same vacancy be made between the present wharf & peer, & of that to be built by the said Rob! Murray, the same to be left open for the tide way, for and during so long time as this Board shall judge necessary and convenient; & that the said vacancy fronting the peer shall be covered with a strong bridge to be made by the said Rob! Murray for the use of carriages &c."—Ibid., VII: 27-28. See Pls. 40 and 41, Vol. 1.

The king having referred the petition of the officials of the 29 Presbyterian Church (see March 18) to the lords of trade, the latter send Gov. Moore a copy of it and desire him, after considering it in council, to report "the present State and Condition of this Protestant Establishment, and also all the Proceedings upon the Petition alleged to have been presented in the administrations of Mr. Delaney, and the Reasons why such Petition did not proceed at that Time."—Dec. Hist. N. Y. (410 ed.), III: 293; N. Y. Col. Doc., VII: 89-97. See Feb. 17, 1767.

The lords of trade direct the governors in America to prepare a copy and send them at the earliest possible moment, and exact Account of the several Manufactures which have been set up and carried on within the Colony under their government since the year 1734, and "of the Public Encouragement which have been given thereto." They are to make also an annual report on the same subject.—N. Y. Col. Doc., VII: 87. Gov. Moore, when supplying the Lords with the desired information, described "a small Manufactury of Linen in this City under the Conduct of one Wells, and supported chiefly by the subscriptions of a set of men who call themselves the Society of Arts and Agriculture" (see Dec. 3, and Dec. 10, 1763); also "a general Manufactury of Woolen," one product of which was "Limey Woolen," "a Manufactury of Hats;" and a bankrupt "Glass-house." There is, he adds, also "a little Foundry lately set up near this Town for making small Iron Pots," and "valuable manufactures of Iron and Pot Ash" have been set up by a Mr. Hansendelayer "in different parts of this Country."—Ibid., VIII: 88-89. On May 7, 1767, Gov. Moore wrote of "great quantities of leather being tanned in this Country" (location not stated); and of "the paper-mill begun to be erected within these few days, at a small distance from the town."—Ibid., VIII: 86.

The consistory of the Dutch Church appropriates £300 from its treasury "for the building of the Old Church" (on Garden St.),—Eccles. Rec., VI: 4967. A further appropriation of £500 was made on Oct. 21 (g.v.).

Jacob Dyckman makes the following appeal to the public:—Whereas the Builder of . . . King's Bridge, from near the Time of its Erection Six Years ago, has failed to execute his Contract, for every Passage of any Person over the said Bridge . . . and whereas this was justly considered as a grievous Imposition upon the Inhabitants in and near the Island of New-York, and upon the Public . . . Sheilburne writes to Gov. Moore: "I have His Majesty's Commands to acquaint you of the satisfaction he feels in the happiness of His subjects arising from the tender care and consideration of Parliament but I am ordered to signify to you at the same time that as it is the indispensable duty of his subjects in America to obey the acts of the Legislature of Great Britain, The King both expects & requires a due and cheerful obedience to the same and it can not be doubted that His Majesty's Province of New York after the Presidency of Great Britain so recently extended to America will not fail duly to carry into execution the Act of Parliament past last Session for quartering His Majesty's Troops in the full extent and meaning of the Act without referring to the usage of other parts of America, where the Legislature has thought fit to prescribe different Regulations, and which can not be made any more than in N. Y. America except upon a respectful and well grounded Representation of the Hardship or inconvenience..."—N. Y. Col. Doc., 58. See Nov. 17.

The flagstaff on the Common (see May 21) is cut down "by some of the Soldiers, belonging to the 38th Regiment, quartered to the Barracks." As it appeared to have been done "by Way of Insult to the Town, it gave great Uneasiness, and next Day occasioned two Frays between the Town People and the Soldiers."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 14, 1766. See Aug. 11.

13 Aug.

The first blend of the Revolution is shed, due to the friction between the Sons of Liberty and the English regiment of soldiers encamped in the barracks. Describing the incident, Montresor says: "A considerable mob assembled on the Common consisting of 2 or 300 chiefly Sons of Liberty, headed by Sears in order to come to an Explanation with the Officers and Soldiers for Cutting down a pine post where they daily exercised, called by them the 'Tree of Liberty.' These Sons of Liberty used the most scurrilous and abusive language against the officers and soldiers present who never seemed to resent it, till a volley of Brick Bats ensued and wounded a few of the officers which they denied the Bayonets until an answer could arrive from the General... The Governor Sir H. Moore never Interfered..."—Montresor's Jour., 382. In this last statement, Montresor shows his usual contempt for what he deems the apathy of the governor. The Post-Boy views the fight from the opposite standpoint, and states that "two or three were wounded, and several hurt, by the Soldiers," and that the soldiers were "entirely the Agressors."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 14, 1766. On Aug. 12, in a deposition made before the common council, Theophilus Hardenbrook put the blame upon the soldiers and described the conduct of a drummer who was particularly offensive.—Ibid., Aug. 21, 1766.

14 Aug.

Montresor states "The Sons of Liberty erected another high post in lieu of the other (see May 21) with 'George, Pitt and Liberty' and hoisted a large ensign thereon."—Montresor's Jour., 382-83. This was the second 'Liberty Pole' erected on the Common.

15 Aug.

Montresor writes that the commander-in-chief reviewed on this day the 28th regiment (see July 17). "A party of the Artillery formed the Square for the Service with fixed Bayonets, notwithstanding the mob were for pushing through the Line, saying that the Ground 'the Town made was theirs.'"—Montresor's Jour., 383.

16 Aug.

Montresor writes in his Journals "Proposals handed about for the Imholders & Inhabitants not to have any Intercourse with the military or even to admit them to their houses."—Montresor's Jour., 385. See Aug. 16.

17 Aug.

Montresor says the "Sons of Liberty propose that the Market people should not sell any provisions to any officer or Soldier... The Mayor insulted in his own Court by the Sons of Liberty for partiality," the next day he adds that they intend to petition the commander-in-chief that "the soldiers shall not be admitted to carry their side arms when off duty."—Montresor's Jour., 383-84.

Montresor records: "This morning at 5 o'clock the Royal Artillery were reviewed together with their Exercise of Great Guns on a plain about a mile beyond Turtle Bay."—Montresor's Jour., 384.

Certain inhabitants of Harlem, in a petition to the common council, state "That the Ground along Harlem River between the North Corner of the College and his Corporation belonging to the Estate of Lewis Morris Esq. deceased, to a certain small creek running into a Peice of Meadow Ground belonging to John Bogert Junr. Esq. has always been Left by the said Town as common Ground for a Landing Place for all Persons crossing the said River between the two Stations aforesaid, and that there is no other proper Place in the said Town for a Landing." They ask to be heard in opposition to a grant of a water lot into the Harlem River adjoining this ground, as it will deprive the public of the benefit of the common landing.—From the original petition (MS.), in file No. 4, in city clerk's record-book. See Sept. 12.

The consistory of the Dutch Church resolves "That the wall of the Old Church [on Garden St.] along the street, which is too weak to stand and must be taken down, should be extended eight feet farther toward the street; and the opportunity thus given should be used to put the stables that stand upon the outside of the Tower, and not within."—Eccles. Rec., VI: 4668.

A contributor to the Post-Boy writes that, on this day, "Two old Maids, to wit Anneke and Hester Van Deursen... privately entered the New Dutch Church... both with long Clinks on, under which they concealed a Hatchet." They were hacking, cutting and slashing one pillar of the pew set apart for the accommodation of the corporation when they were discovered by Isaac van Hook. Upon being asked by him what they were about "those Vizens replied, if the Rascals or Scoundrels (meaning the Ministers, Elders and Deacons) had done this, they would have saved us the Trouble." Hester then began to attack the other pillar and "perhaps would have cut it down, had she not been prevented by the said Van Hook."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 21, 1766.

In the next issue of the paper, the editor states that by a paper "subscribed with the names of the two persons mentioned in our last, it appears we have inadvertently mentioned a matter that leads to a long train of dispute, very unfit to be detailed in a newspaper... But in order to do what we apprehend impartial justice requires... we shall just mention the general purport of the paper signed as aforesaid—which sets forth, that part of the account publish'd thereon that offends us was taken unjustly treated, and that after duly considering the circumstances of the case, as they relate it—they are entirely justifiable for all they have done...As we have... acted impartially on both sides, we beg to be excuse from publishing anything more upon the subject."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 28, 1766.

The Post-Boy reports that, "respecting the late Disturbances, between some of the Citizens and a Party of Soldiers" (see Aug. 11), the corporal and drum major of the regiment, who appeared to be the "chief Authors of the Disturbances, were bound over to the Quarter Session."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 21, 1766. The court records do not indicate that they were ever brought before the court.

In a letter to the Duke of Richmond, Gov. Moore says that "since the arrival of the 28th and 46th Regiments in this Town (where their presence was much wanted), no means has been left untried by the Papalice to make them, by any stratagem or artifice, excite them to commit some Action, for which public censure might be drawn of [on] them... The great objection here is that of having any Troops at all for while they continue in this Town, three licentious Assemblies of the People (who call themselves the Sons of Liberty) and who are at all times (for Great Irregularities) must be suppress'd and the hands of the Magistrates so far strengthened that the Laws of the Country must again take Place; nor is it to be wondered that a Mob, which once had so much sway in a Town so as to strike terror into the greatest part of the Inhabitants should with regret see a period put to the power they had usurped and abused, and order and regular-
To the Sons of Liberty in this City.

Gentlemen,

It is well known, that it has been the custom of all Nations to erect Monuments to perpetuate the Remembrance of grand Events. Experience has proved, that they have had a good Effect on the Prowess of those who raised them, especially such as were made sacred to Liberty. Influenced by these Considerations, a Number of the Friends to Liberty, in this City, erected a Pole in the Fields, on Ground belonging to the Corporation, as a temporary Memorial of the unanimous Opposition to the detestable Stamp-Act; which having been destroyed by some dissatisfied Persons, a Number of the Inhabitants determined to erect another, made several Applications to the Mayor, as the principal Member of the Corporation, for Leave to erect the new Pole in the Place where the old One stood. The Committee that waited on him the last Time, disposed to remove every Objection, apprehensive that some of the Corporation might be opposed to the Erection of the Pole, from a Supposition that those Citizens who were for its being raised, were actuated solely by a Party Spirit, offered when the Pole was finished to make it a Present to the Corporation, provided they would order it to be erected either where the other stood or near Mr. Van de Berg's, where the two Roads meet. But even this, after it was seen by Englishmen, was rejected by the Majority of the Corporation, and the other Requisitions denied. We question whether this Conduct can be paralleled by an Act of any Corporation in the British Dominions, chosen by the Suffrages of a free People.

And now, Gentlemen, seeing we are debarred the Privilege of public Ground to erect the Pole on, we have purchased a Place for it near where the other stood, which is full as public as any of the Corporation Ground. Your Attendance and Countenance are desired at Nine o'Clock on Tuesday Morning the 6th Instant, at Mr. Gemeins' Wharf, in order to carry it up to be raised.

New York, February 8, 1770.

He finished the survey on Sept. 10.—Monterosser's Jour., 358-87. See Pl. 49, Vol. 1, and description, 1, 500-40. A whale 199 feet long, near Sandy Island on Sept. 1, is bought by Samuel Waldoor for $20, and hauled to the ferry at Long Island, opposite New York.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 4, 1766. Other whales were captured near this city in 1773.—See New Hamp. Gaz., Nov. 5, 1773.

The common council considers the petition of certain inhabitants of Harlem of Aug. 20, 1766, and orders a hearing on Sept. 12 (q.v.). At the same meeting, a committee appointed on July 2 (not of record) to view the Bogert farm "in the Township of Harlem in the Out ward of this City binding upon Harlem in the East River opposite Mr. Lewis Morris's land & St George Talbot's Island." This shows that Bogert had the water from high to low water mark beginning 30 links to the North east of his dwelling house, there and so extending south or south west to the end of his land according to a plan thereof made by Mr. Francis Marschalk [see Jan. 9, 1760] one of our city surveyors. The city surveys this right to the corporation to build a wharf of the breadth of 20 feet for a publick street at the extent of low water mark if it shall ever be wanted by this Corporation; and that he may have the sail from high to low water mark as far to the north of his house as his Land extends there biding upon the East River.—N. Y. Cal., Oct. 19, 1767.

The objections of Busing and other inhabitants of Harlem to the application of John Bogert, Jr., for a water lot in Harlem River (see Sept. 10) are heard by the common council. Bogert is given until Oct. 10 to present his answer.—M. C. G., VII. 31. Nothing further on this subject appears in the Minutes; but in, 1771, it is recorded that a public road runs through Bogert's land east to the Harlem River. A petition of Bogert to change the course of this road was denied by the board.—M. C. G., VII, 253, 261, 262, 263, 265-66.

30 Thirty inhabitants of the city, in a petition to the common council, state that the proprietors of the Houses & Lots of Ground fronting Rotten Row (Hunter's Key—see Vol. III, p. 990) have presented a petition for a grant of the water lots fronting their houses; but the present petitioners ask that, if the water lots are so granted, a part may be reserved by the city "for a Publick Edifice, as to this Worshipfull Board shall seem meet. They express their wish that this petition be referred to the Corporation of the Town: they are of the opinion that a publick Edifice Erected there will contribute greatly to the Ornament of the City as well as to the Convenience of its Inhabitants." If such reservation is not made, "there will be no place left on the East River near the Center of the City, whereon to erect an Exchange, market or other public building.—From original petition (M.S.), to city clerk's record-room, endorsed "filed Sept. 25, 1766.""—The Mass or Flag Staff on the Common, which was lately cut down and occasion'd a good deal of Disturbance" (see Aug. 10 and 14), says the Post-Boy, is cut down again. "The authors of this Insult are not yet certainly known, but some particular Persons are suspected."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 25, 1766.

A third "Liberty Pole" is erected on the Common in place of the one that was cut down yesterday.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 25, 1766. See May 21 and Aug. 12, for the first two poles.

Covenants, although in this City, petition the common council to build "a good, Strong and Substantial Doce wharf or pier of two hundred feet to be joined to the South end of the present City's pier, ranging with the South west Side thereof." Alderman Brackenroff proposes that in case the city advances $1,000."—For extending the said City pier two hundred feet farther into the said East River, the City will advance $1,000 as five years' interest on the $1,000, and that as soon as the pier is finished he will pay, for dockage or wharfage at the additional pier, the sum of $2,000 annually for five years. The board agrees to the proposal, and a committee is appointed to employ workmen, and buy materials for building the pier at an expense not to exceed $2,000.—M. C. G., VII, 32-33.

Whitehead Hicks is appointed mayor by Gov. Moore, who is in Albany. He was installed on Oct. 14, with the usual ceremony.—Cal. Cogn. Minv., 1776; M. G. C., VII, 31. He continued in office, some years without reappointment, until Feb. 14, 1776 (q.v.), when he resigned.—Paid, VII, 85, 131, 184, 231, 318, 381-82, 424; VIII, 57, 110.

"Payment of £1,125 is ordered by the common council for paving in front of the city hall.—M. C. G., VII, 39.

"Alexander Smith, From the Coffee-House: Has the opened the Tavern lately kept by Mr. Howard, in the Passage and Entertainment of those Gentlemen, &c. who may please to favour his house, with the Company, on the certainty of being served with near Wines, Punch, Beer, and all other the best of Liquors.—Coffee at any Hour of the Day, and, large and small Entertainments, provided in the most genteel Manner, on the shortest Notice ... " He also advertises: "Meat and Cakes as usual"—N. Y. Jour., Oct. 30, 1766 (incorrectly dated Oct. 25). A similar advertisement is contained in N. Y. Gaz. (Wayman) for Oct. 15, 1766. The tavern referred to is the old Mason's Arms, at Warren St. and Broadway. See March 19, 1779.

On this night between 10 and 12, says the Journal, "a number of Soldiers with Bayonets, went to several Houses in the Fields, where they were very abusive, took six of the dead soldiers out of the water from high to low water mark beginning 30 links to the North east of his dwelling house, there and so extending south or south west to the end of his land according to a plan thereof made by Mr. Francis Marschalk [see Jan. 9, 1760] one of our city surveyors. The city surveys this right to the corporation to build a wharf of the breadth of 20 feet for a publick street at the extent of low water mark if it shall ever be wanted by this Corporation; and that he may have the sail from high to low water mark as far to the north of his house as his Land extends there biding upon the East River.—N. Y. Cal., Oct. 19, 1767.

The consistory of the Dutch Church resolves "to take up another $1,000 [see Aug. 5] to complete the Old Church" (on Garden St.)—Eccles. Rec., 9: 2074.

Ordered that the Pews [see July 21] in St. Paul's Chappel be let at Publick Sale on Monday next and that the Sale begin at Ten o'clock in the Forenoon to Continue till the whole are let."—Trin. Min. (M.S.). The church was opened on Oct. 30 (q.v.). See also Oct. 20.

According to the petition of one George Johnston, of Amboy N. J., in 1776, asking the common council for financial relief, it appears that, on Oct. 29, 1766, he agreed to build an addition to the corporation pier at "Coenties Markett," but was unable to complete it within the year allowed in the contract. A certificate or bond accompanying this petition states that the pier was to be built 200 feet beyond the end of the old pier into East River, 30 feet wide, at a cost of $1,200, which was to cover all charges including the cost of timber.—From the original MSS, in box No. 6, city clerk's record-room.

"His Excellency Sir Henry Moore having expressed a desire of Introducing a Band of Musick in St. Paul Chappel at the Dedication thereof [see Oct. 29, 1766] to the board of the Church and his Excellency in his request It is Ordered that the said Band of Musick be admitted accordingly to join in part of the Service as is usual and Customary in like Cases but that no other Pieces of Musick be allowed but such only as are adapted to the Service of the Church on such Solemn Occasion."—Trin. Min. (M.S.).

"St. Paul's Chapel, esteemed one of the most elegant Edifices on the Continent," is opened and dedicated with impressive ceremonies. At 10 o'clock the civil and ecclesiastical officials walk in procession from Fort George to the chapel. The services include a sermon by Dr. Auchmutz and vocal and instrumental music (see Oct. 29).—N. Y. Gaz. (Wayman), Nov. 3, 1766; N. Y. Jour., Nov. 6, 1766. The church was situated on Broadway between Fulton and Vesey Sts. It was designed by McBean, a pupil of Gibbs, the London architect who built St. Martin's-in-the-Fields. The location of the church was exceptionally fine. "The grounds sloped down to the Hudson, and the western porch commanded a sweeping view of the harbor and Palisades .... The site, however, was consis-idered too far out of town, and the vestry were criticised for its selection. Hanover Square was then the fashionable centre, and Robert Morris tells of walking "into the country" from Queen (48th) Street to see St. Paul's Chapel."—The Oldest Public Building & the only Colonial Church Edifice in New York City (1901), 6, 11; Landmark Map Ref. Key, III, 954: Hist. Mag., 2nd set., V, 70. See Sept. 28, 1767.

THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

"We hope it will be considered, that we are chosen to make such a Provision for the Support of His Majesty's Government in this Colony... as is most suitable to the Circumstances of the People we represent; and that we should be guilty of a Breach of that most sacred Trust, if we should load them with Burthens they are incapable of supporting."

In the Provision we made last Session, for quartering Two Battalions and one Company of Artillery, we loaded ourselves with a Burthen much greater than any of the Neighbouring Governments lie under for that Service...

We beg Leave, further to represent to Your Excellency, that by the Act of Congress, it appears to be the Intention of the Legislature, to provide for the quartering Soldiers, only on a March, but according to the Construction put on it here, it is required that all the Forces which shall at any Time enter this Colony, shall be quartered during the whole Year, in a very unusual and expensive Manner; That by the Marching several Regiments into this Colony, this Expense would become ruinous and insupportable: And therefore, we cannot, consistent with our Duty to our Constituents, put it in the Power of any Person... to lay such a Burthen on them... we humbly entreat your Excellency, to set our Conduct in the most favourable, that is, in its True Light, by representing that our Noncompliance on this Occasion, proceeds entirely from a just Sense of what our Duty requires."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 25, 1766. See Dec. 19.

An announcement of this date appears in the Mercury stating that on June 20, 1765, a law was passed in New York requiring commissions to run out straight public roads through that province between New York and Philadelphia, and empowering them to raise thereupon a sum of money by a public lottery not exceeding £500. Soon after a lottery was set on foot, but from the troubled state of affairs, at that time occasioned by the Stamp Act, the proceedings were delayed. But as it is apprehended that the salutary purpose might now be effected, the managers therein appointed have thought fit for that end to revive the... scheme of a lottery, to consist of 2212 tickets, at 4 dollars each; 662 of which are to be fortunate."—N. Y. Merc., Jan. 6, 1768.

Gov. Moore writes to the Earl of Shelburne: "The letter which I had the Honor of receiving from your Lordship dated the 9th of August... was laid before the House of Assembly the 17th of last month... I accompanied it by a Message and it is with no small mortification that I am now to give your Lordship an account so unsatisfactory of the Proceedings of the House on this occasion. Yesterday the inclosed address [see Dec. 15] was presented to me in answer to my message by which your Lordship will see that I had but too much foundation for the opinion I ventured in my letter of the 20th of June, and could wish that the behaviour of those Gentlemen who had been called before the Assembly and asked "why he had in his... Paper, Number 97, reprinted the Address... in a Manner very injurious to the Honour and Dignity of this House," answered that he was "innocent of the Alteration made in the said Address, till a Number... from that letter, that he had discovered the Mistake he immediately corrected the Press and endeavoured to get back all the erroneous Copies." After considering the facts of the case, the assembly finally discharged Weyman. The latter, in the next issue of his paper, apologized for the "egregious Blunders" (traceable to a journeyman, he suspected), and printed the minutes of the assembly proceedings in regard to the affair..."—Ibid., Nov. 9, 1766.

The Consistory of the Dutch Church agrees with Mr. Breestede, that he shall "finish the inside work of the Old Church [on Garden St.] to the satisfaction of the Consistory for the sum of $600."

Letter, Dec., VI. 496. The subject is not again found in the records of the church until April 29, 1771 (p. 5); there is no record to show what work was done in and after 1766, with the large appropriations made on Aug. 9 (p. 47) and Oct. 21 (p. 47).

The Assembly sends this address to Gov. Moore: "We... have in another Letter, of the 17th of November last... into our most serious Consideration; and beg Leave to assure your Excellency, that nothing would give us greater Pleasure than to find it in our Power to comply with every Requisition, treating in any Manner, to promote His Majesty's Service..."—Letter, Oct. 9, 1766. The subject is not again found in the records of our Proceedings in relation to this Affair, but their sentiments were unanimous, and determined, so that all attempts made to influence their conduct on so interesting an occasion proved abortive."—D. N. 10, 1766, VII, slip (on May 19, 1766).

Because the Emigration of Protestants from Europe had conduced greatly to the Settlement of this Colony, and doubts have arisen tending to the discouragement of further Importations of poor Persons," the legislature passes "An Act for the Regulation of Servants." This declares "that every Contract in writing to bind an Infant or other Person to Service for a Term of Years... be firm and valid according to the Original and true meaning thereof" and that every servant who shall run away or be absent for more than 24 hours "shall be obliged to serve double the time of such absence after the Original Term specified in the Contract... expired."—Col. Laws, II, 7, IV, 924-25.

The legislature orders the treasurer to pay:

£115:1:10 to Andrew Gautier "for work done and Materials found by himself and others for the Repairs to the House Garden fence &c. in Fort George.

£160:10 to Robert Andrews and Robert Boyd "for unskipping the Guns on the Battery.

£31:16 to Joseph Cox "for finding Paper Hangings and other Necessaries for the House in Fort George.

£60 to Matthew Ernest "for his House for the use of the General Assembly; and Firewood and sundry other Necessaries found them.

Also, an Act is passed to recompense several people in the city for "Losses..." on May 19. The Act provides that Major James receive £1,725:15:2; that Andrew Gautier have £400:65; "in full Compensation for the damages done to the House of Samuel Francis," and that £16 be paid to Jonathan Mallet.—Col. Laws, II, 7, IV, 913-15.

Some time previous to this date, the whole length of Nassau St. came to be so named.—Pl. 41, Vol. I. Up to 1755, that part of the street north of Maiden Lane was designated Kip St., after Jacobus Kip. See Pls. 29, 29, 29, 29, 29, 29, 29, and 34, Vol. I. See also May 25, 1696; October 17, 1696; and Landmark Map Ref. Key, III, 1006, and PL 174.

At some date prior to this year, "Mount Pitt," the residence of the Hon. Thomas Jones, a son-in-law of Chief-Judge James de Lancey, was erected on a site now the north side of Grand St., on the line of Ridge St.—See the Rattle Map, Pl. 41, Vol. I. Judge Jones, a strong Tory, lost his property in 1785, when it was sold by the commissioners of forfeiture to Morgan Lewis.—Liber Deeds, XLIII: 36 (New York). In 1792, John R. Livingston bought it from Lewis (ibid., XLVII: 76). Cf. Pl. 69 and Vol. I. See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III, 951, and PL 175. As Pl. 70, Vol. I, shows Ridge St. cut through to Division St., one might conclude that the house was demolished about the year 1799, but this map of the city is notoriously erroneous, or rather anticipatory. The common council's order for the extension of Ridge St., from Broome to Division St., appears under June 6, 1825.—See M. C. C. (1784-1854), XIV: 523-53; 648-49. For further reference to the house and grounds, see 1807.

The high ground on which "Mount Pitt" was situated was known as Jones' Hill. It was the most prominent landmark on the eastern part of Manhattan Island.—Man. Com. Com., (1856), 437.

Among the notes of Pierre Eugene du Simitière, preserved in the Ridgeway Branch of the Library Co. of Philadelphia, is a "Catalogue des Edifices Publics civils & Religieux de la ville de la nouvelle York en Epaulee 1767." He names the following churches: Trinity, "George Chapel," and "Paul Chapel," two Presbyterian, two Dutch, two Lutheran, German Calvinst (together with "a meeting house of Seeders in Little Queen Street"), French Calvinist, Anabaptist, Moravian, "a Tabernacle for one Webb" (Methodist—see 1766), and a Jews Synagogue. He gives the location of most of these with dates of erection. He lists five "Publick Markets," Corners, Old Slip, Fly, New, and Oswego. The fort, he says, is "called fort George in which there is... the governour house... barracks for Soldiers &c... a battery round the fort underneath on the water Side... a barrack in the battery near the entrance from the Side of Whitehall..." the Secretary office under the fort Wall going down from the broad Way toward Washington St.

Other buildings included in his list are the city hall, jail, and the barracks behind the same, work house, college, "A Play house," the free school, and the exchange. There are four public squares, he says, Bowing Green, Hanover Squ., "St. George's Square the upper end of Queen Street," and "the commons or fields before the New Goale, Workhouse."—From vol. lettered "Papers relating to N. England, N. York etc formerly belonging to Du Simitière," now in Ridgeway Branch of the Library Co. of Philadelphia.

Du Simitière was an artist, antiquary, and naturalist, from Geneva, and an extensive traveller. He arrived in New York in 1761 or 1765, and became a naturalized citizen on May 30, 1766 in Penn. Mag. (1850), VIII: 341 see also plate description, III: 861-64. It is apparent that his notes on New York City were made between 1767 and 1772. Some information he gives about the city streets at that time is worth quoting in extenso.

"William Street is commonly called Capt. 2 Horse Street from an old beer house in that Street with Such Sign..." "Princess Street commonly called Carmer Street..." "Duke Street commonly called Bayard Street..." "Crown Street.—New Dutch church Street..." "Dyer Street.—Batteaux Street..." "Bridge Street.—Wyckesup Street..." "Courtland Street.—Lery Street..." "Ann Street commonly Scott Street..." "Bennetson Street.—Chappel Street..." "Hunter's Key.—Chappell Street..." "Rolman Slip in the charter is... Lyons Slip in the plan now Butting Slip..." "Kingsstreet—Vesey Street from a minister of that name living..." "that part of Smith Street from Kingsstreet to Maiden lane is commonly known by the name of Pot Baker hill...

"Vesey Street next to St. Paul was formerly called Mond's Kayl Street from a hollow at the bottom of the Street near the North Water where a murder once was committed..." "flatten Barrack a Street so call'd from Vairleth's Bergh varleths was a man So called that lived upon that hill See Smith's hist. of New York p. 7..." "the white hall a Street So call'd now in N. York took its Name from a large house so call'd built Soon after the English Government took place. Some Suppose by Gov' Dongan [Footnote by Du Simitière:—"it was built by one [blank] he went of [oil] & never was heard of Some Say he turn'd Pirate on the coast of Guinea, upon which having left no heir Gov' Dongan appropriated it that estate to himself as Derelict some Persons in New York since have made great inquiries to find an heir but in vain"] that the ground belong to some of the Same family & name to this day, it Stand as appear by part of the Side walls that are Standing to this day on the West Side of the House near the water Side & fronting the east its front was about 45 foot the depth not easily ascertained as most of the walls are pulld down but what remain is built of rough Stones about two feet thick to the height of ten feet above the ground the interval between the walls in front of the Street is filled with a couple of mean wooden buildings & behind was a large Garden that Reached from behind that house to the Southside of Pearl Street and all the way to the water Side where the battery now is it was called the Vineyard from the grapes growing in it. Some of the family of Gov' Dongan own that house & the people that live upon that ground pay a quit rent to them they owned a great part of Staten Island, the first that came over was called Mylord Dongan for his large possession Some Says he was a Son to the Governor others a younger brother his grand Son is now living..."

Included among these papers, is a "Sketch [by Du Simitière] of the State House at New York, which is reproduced and described in A. Pl. 4-3, and plate description, III: 861-64. It is the only known representation of the city hall after the third story was added, in 1767.—Du Simitière Papers, op. cit. For another description of city, in 1767, see N. Y. City during the Am. Rn, 1740..." During this year, an anonymous pamphlet entitled The Contact of Cadwalldor Colden, Esq. Lieutenent Governor of New-York, appears. The foreword states: 'While an angry Faction in the Province of New-York confined their Calamities to Lieutenant Governor Colden, to a common News-Paper, he did not think that they deserved his Notice. The Malice in those Papers, is no apparent, they can have no Influence on any Man disinterested in the Dispute. He satisfied himself with laying the Reasons of his Conduct before his Major's Officers, who are the proper Judges of the Fact. But the Faction having influenced the General Assembly to pass a publick Censure on Mr. Colden's Conduct, after he had been succeeded in the administration, by Sir Henry Moore, he thinks himself loudly Called upon, by every Motive which can influence an honest, innocent Man, to vindicate the pamphlet in an attempt: to justify Colden's conduct in regard to judges' commissions, appeals to the king, and the stamp duty. From a copy of the original preserved in the N. Y. Pub. Library. The assembly made several vain attempts to ascertain the authorship of the pamphlet (see Dec. 29th 1767). The New York Methodists (see 1766) rent a rigging loft, later known as the historic "Old Rigging Loft," in a building on Horse and Cart St. (now William), between John and Fair (now Fulton) Sts. The Baptists had already held services there in 1753-5 (q.v.). The building, later numbered 120 William St., stood until 1866.

Cf. the statement in description of Pl. 43, I: 745, that No. 120 was not demolished until 1905, although the building was remodelled some time between 1846 and 1861. The loft was 60 ft. long and 18 ft. wide. Services were held three times a week, Embassy and Webb preaching alternately.—Buckley, Hist. of Meth. in U. S., I: 62. See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 930. The Methodists soon saw the necessity of permanent accommodations. The church they built was dedicated on Oct. 11, 1766. Du Simitiere MSS., in Ridgeway Branch of Library Co., Phila.

In this year, Gran-Brush built, on the site of No. 343 Broadway (now Hart St.), the first. in the City, of entertainment, later called the White Conduit House after a similar resort in London. See April 16, 1772; March 24, 1777; Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 981.

Among the services required of the grave-diggers of the Dutch Church in Garden St. was "to carry into the Church the foot-stores, for the Ministers, Elders and Deacons."—Eccles. Rec., VI: 407.

At a meeting of the Society for Promoting Arts, etc., a committee is appointed to meet on the 19th to consider all claims for premiums offered by the society. Another committee is chosen to meet on Jan. 26, and "receive the Claims on Agriculture ... the Peninsums on Flax and Hemp, are not to be claimed until the first Monday of May." The society is greatly pleased "with the evident Improvement of the Linen Branch, as appeared from the goodness of the Pieces and Samples produced." One piece is ordered to be bought and sent, with a letter of thanks from the committee of correspondence, to Mr. Nicholas Ray, of London, "in grateful Testimony of his liberal and generous Designs, and the useful Hints and Notices communicated to them in his Letters." Mr. Ray is asked to "procure and send here the Models of the Machineries, recommended by him for breaking and dressing Hemp and Flax."—N. Y. Jour., Jan. 15, 1767.

(Weyman), Jan. 12-19, 1767. Mrs. Steele had opened this tavern on May 1, 1765 (q.v.).

Francis Moore, Frederick van Cortlandt, and others "proprietors of houses and lots of Ground fronting the docks Commonly Called the Great Dock and Mrs. Moore's Dock," petition the common council for grants of water lots, and a committee is appointed to "Confer with and receive such proposals," etc.—M. C. C., VIII: 53. Water lots were granted to Frederick van Cortlandt, and others on July 10, 1772 (M. C. C., VIII: 366).

The minutes of Trinity vestry show that "Doctor Amschury...acquainted the board that his Excellency St. Henry Moore had made him an offer that if this Corporation would Petition him for a Tract of Land to Erect a Township he would do all in his Power that it should be granted Whereupon it is resolved that a Petition be Prepared Praying a Grant for a Tract of Land for that Purpose and that the Rector with Mr David Clarkson and Mr Kissam be a Committee ...—Trin. Min. (MS.). The grant was eventually obtained (see March 30, 1779), but the land was soon after lost by transfer of the whole region in which it was situated to Vermont.—Dix. Hist. of Trinity Church, I: 319. For proposed extensive grants to King's College, also, in the "remote wilderness" of the province, see July 17, 1763; Feb. 26, 1767, where the result of such expected acquisitions is explained.

Four criminals are executed "on a Gallows erected for that Purposes near the Fresh-Water."—To the great amusement of them all, the houses stolen "1 Horses, Saddles and Reibles, with which they were taken over about 30 Miles from New York." They were indicted for burglary and horse stealing, and found guilty on both charges. The other, one negro girl, had been condemned for "stealing sundry Articles out of the House of Mr. Forbes, of this City." Their execution had been suspended a week at the intercession of a minister, who, "finding them all remarkably ignorant, even of the first Principles of Religion, had, ever since their Condemnation ... been very assiduous ... in giving them such spiritual Assistance as their unhappy Case required."—N. Y. Jour., Feb. 12, 1767.

The common council orders payment of $5 to "an Iron Cast Store furnished for the use of the Alms house."—M. C. C., VIII: 55.

As they have been informed that their petition (see March 18, 1766) to the king has been referred to Gov. Moore and the council (see July 24, 1766), the ministers, elders, deacons and trustees of the Presbyterian Church of all Sorts, shall send to the Commandants of all the Honorable Board, and to bring proof of their statements.—Dec. Hist. N. Y., (40 ed.), III: 305-41; Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 675. See March 24.

The Bishop of Llandaff, in a sermon before the Society for Propagating Christian Knowledge, and against the American Protestants. He referred to the Americans in very uncompromising terms; yet the Episcopal clergy in America took occasion thereupon to urge their claims. Petitions were sent to the King, to the Archbishop of Canterbury, and to the University of Cambridge, upon the subject, and printed as tracts. A few were circulated among the Dissenters against any establishment of one form of religion. They feared the system in all its developments, titles, spiritual courts, canon law, as in England. Yet they did not object
Feb. to Bishops unattended by any temporal powers or dignities.
20, William Livingstone addressed a letter to the Bishop of Llandaf, taking exception to his charges against the morals and culture of the colonists. Rev., IV: 424, citing Sedgwick's Life of W. Livingstone, 128.

The common council orders the clerk to "prepare an advertisement to be put in all the publick or weekly Gazettors," to be "by publick "Out Cry to the highest bidder the ferry between this City and Pavias Hook," for the term of four years from May 1—M. C. C., VII: 57—58. For some reason, not revealed by the records, the seven year agreement with Van Voorst, of Feb. 25, 1766 (p. c. v.), had terminated. Prior to the day appointed for the "Out Cry," a petition was presented to the common council, March 6 (p. c.), by several citizens residing near the Hudson, and was ordered that a public hearing be held on March 10 (p.v.). The ferry was leased to Jacob van Vorhis on March 23 (p. c.), for four years at $150 per year.

The common council pays Walter Brock £219 "for wine & punch he had of him at the Sale of the Docks, Stalls & ferry."—M. C. C., VII: 57. Brock's Tavern was directly opposite the first Presbyterian Church on Wall St. It was in earlier years generally referred to as the "Sign of Admiral Warren."—See 1758.

Gov. Moore informs Shurtleff that Wm. Smith, Sr., "as he is far advanced in years," is willing to resign his seat in council in favour of his son, Wm. Jr. Moore recommends young Smith in these words: "He is now at the head of the Profession of the Law, and will be of great Service in the Council as his opinions may always be depended on, not only from his knowledge of the Law but his integrity. He is connected with the best families in this Province, of unblemished Character & high in the estimation of every one here."—N. Y. Col. Docs., VII: 909—10.

A committee of the governors of King's College reports that they have petitioned Gov. Moore for 24,000 acres of land, and that the council has advised that the petition be granted. Letters patent making this grant were issued March 17, 1769, which provided that the land was "within the limits formerly claimed by the govern- ment of New Hampshire." It was then ordered that the tract "should be erected into a township by the name of Kingstown." On March 29, 1770, the committee of the college governors reported that the lands were in the new county of Gloucester (which had been set off from the county of Albany). After the Revolution, in the settlement of the boundary dispute between New York and New Hampshire, New York State, for 250,000 (of which the college received nothing), surrendered this tract, and also one of 10,000 acres granted to the college by Gov. Tryon in the spring of 1741, which included in which is concluded in which is the new state of Vermont.—Hist. of Columbia Univ. (1904), 35—36.

Murray and Smith, having "entered into partnership, for carry- ing on the business of Vintners, and Victuallers, at the Masons' Arms-Tavern, in the Fields," lately kept by said Smith alone, which is now discontinued; the said Murray is to "purchase his Share in the utmost easons to give general satisfaction, and keep the said house with the same good reputation, as in the time of their prede- cessor Mr. John Jones."—N. Y. Jour., Feb. 26, 1767. See March 19, 1779.

A meeting is announced for March 5 of the "Hand in Hand Fire Company." The clerk will give notice of the place of meeting, and "inspect the Buckets, Bags, Belts, Hand-Barrows, Baskets, &c. belonging to each Member, if in good Order and in Readiness for Service."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), March 4, 1766. Costello, in Our Enemies, 49, says that a "Hand-in-Hand Fire Company was organized in New York on Nov. 1, 1766, without mentioning this earlier organization.

Capt. Thomas Randle (Randell or Wranell) requests that the common council "Indulge him with Six feet four Inches of the Street Cottageous to the Eastern Side of his dwelling house in the Sor- row" without cost, "in order to carry his Ship of 42 Tons, which he has agreed to have in the Creek, in which he has fixed his slip in order to work on the slip, as he thinks proper to satisfy himself, the number and proportion of the ship, and for the benefit of his trade."—M. C. C., VII: 57. Capt. Randle's house stood at the north-west corner of Pearl and Whitehall Sts., being No. 28 Whitehall St.—See Will of Thomas Randle, dated March 6, 1767, in Liber Wills, XLI: 278; cf. N. Y. Direc- tories, 1765, 1770, 1771; also cf. Literature, XXIV: 335.

Jacob Dyckman (see Aug. 6, 1766), Benjamin Palmer, and John Vermilye have presented a petition to the assembly stating that they have expended more than £1,000 in erecting and re- pairing the free bridge and have received only about £30 in pay- ment therefor, and asking that the members of the house "grant them such Relief in the Premises, as they in their great Wisdom shall think fit." Attached to this was a recommendation signed by about 100 of the inhabitants of New York, about the same time as the above petition, and about 50 from New Jersey. Those attached to the "Truth of the Facts" mentioned in the petition, "the great public Benefit of the said Bridge," and the "Reasonableness of the Peti- tion," and recommended that Dyckman, Palmer, and Vermilye "be allowed such Compensation, Relief and Assistance, as the General Assembly should think proper to grant; and that the same, with its accompanying signatures, is now printed in the Journal, because someone has started a rumour that names of people who have not signed the recommendation have been added without their knowledge. The list of subscribers includes the names of the most influential people in the city.—N. Y. Jour., March 5, 1767. See April 18, 1769.

Inhabitants of the city living near the North River petition the common council (see Feb. 20) that the Purchaser of the Ferry from this City to Pavias Hook may be at Liberty to land at & set off from any Place he shall choose between the Southernmost Part of Roosevelt's Dock, and the Northernmost Part of Dey's Dock." They explain that the landing-place on the New York side has been at Mesier's Dock (at foot of Cortlandt—see Vol. I, p. 999— and designated in Pls. 41 and 42, Vol. I, as Paulus Hook Ferry) ever since 1766, by which time it was known who owned the lands at Paulus Hook; that the newspapers now announce that the ferry is to be sold at public venue on March 23 and that they are informed application has been made to fix the ferry at Roosevelt's Dock (at "lower end of Thames St.").—See M. C. C., VII: 8. They prefer Mesier's Dock, because it is "more convenient than Roosevelt's Dock, both to the Person who may hire the said Ferry, and to those who may have Occasion to cross the same, particularly for Travellers, since the Street leading to Mesier's Dock runs directly through the City to the Ferry at the East River, and is, from the Broad-Way to that Dock, very wide and inconvenient; whereas, a Passage, leading from Broad-Way to Roosevelt's Dock, is a mere Lane or Alley, and so very narrow that in many Parts of it two Carriages cannot pass each other without Danger, which must make it very inconvenient."

Peter Mesier offers to convey to the city a water lot fronting his dock, 75 ft. wide and 100 ft. long, to give 500 towards filling up and docking this lot. The petitioners desire to purchase the ferry, but cannot afford to give anything for it if it is fixed at Roose- velt's Dock.—From the original petition (MS.) in file No. 4, in city clerk's record-room. The common council designated March 10 (c. v.), for hearing.—M. C. C., VII: 60.

The common council holds a hearing on the question of the New York terminal of the ferry to Paulus Hook (see Feb. 25, 1766). The petitioners of March 6 (p. c.), as well as Nicholas Roosevelt, are represented by counsel. By a vote of nine to four, the board decides for the petitioners.—M. C. C., VII: 60. This meant that Mesier's Dock (name was changed to Cortlandt's Slip in 1788—see M. C. C., MS.), IX: 47—48) continued to be the Manhattan terminal (see Pl. 64, Vol. I). The ferry was leased on March 23 (p. c.).

That trade organizations were in existence at this period is attested by the "Articles and Regulations of the Friendly Society of Tradesmen, House Carpenters, in the City of New-York," bearing this date. The members who subscribe to these regulations "Do, out of Christian Love and true Friendship, promise to assist each other as far as in us lies." Every one who desires to join the society "must profess himself a House-Carpenter, free from all burden of Distempers, and between the Age of Forty and Twenty-one Years." The twenty articles provide for the annual election of a president, a secretary, a clerk, and two stewards; the recording of the minutes of the society in a "Book of Transactions;" the holding of monthly meetings; the imposition of fines for non-attendance; the admission of new members; the suspension of member; and the payment of members' funeral expenses. Besides these, we find the following provisions: "If any Member calls for Liquor without the Approbation of the Stewards, he shall pay for the same himself," and if "any Member presume to curse or swear, or commit any like Disorder on any Person or Property," all of which shall be recorded in a Broadside in the City of New York, and on which the Bearer of the same shall pay to the common Stock, for every such Default, Six- pence."—From a broadside in the N. Y. Pub. Library (and Evans, 24366). For an earlier record of concerted action by tradesmen, see April 2, 1747.

The consistency of the Dutch Church passes a resolution to build, Mar.
en the grounds of Mr. Harpending, a third church. The minutes of this meeting are not printed in the chronicle sequence followed above. Acc. VII: 492. 1773.

In the minutes of June 12 (q.v.),—ibid., VII: 493. The "grounds of Mr. Harpending" consisted of his interest in the "Shoemakers' Field," left to the Dutch Church by his will, which was proved Feb. 7, 1724 (q.v.).

"A great Number of Gentlemen, who chose publickly to celebrate the Anniversary of the Repeal of the Stamp Act met at the House of Edward Bardin, where an elegant Entertainment was prepared." After dinner, "loyal and patriotic Toasts were drank.
"—N. Y. Merc., March 25, 1767.

The Pole erected as a "carved to Liberty on the City Parade" was found out this morning. (This was the third one so treated; for the other two, see Aug. 10 and Sept. 23, 1766.)

A fourth is "immediately erected in its Stead and cased below with Iron to prevent such another Action."—N. Y. Gam. (Wayman), March 30, 1767. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III:
96. "The same Night attempts were made both to cut it down, and to undermine and dig it down—but without Effect. On Saturday Night, the 21st, there was an attempt to destroy it by Gunpowder, by boring a hole, and charging it with Powder, but this also failed. Next Night Sunday—a strong Watch was set by the Citizens, at an adjacent House; a small Company of Soldiers in the Night appeared with their Coats turn'd, arm'd with Bayonets & Sticks, but no Guns.—Some of the Watch went out, ask'd who they were and their business? But received no satisfactory Answer:
The Police on guard before the Door where the Watch was kept, but after a few Words thought proper to retire. On Monday about 6 in the Evening, a party of Soldiers march'd by the Post, and as they passed by Mr. Bardin's Tavern fired their Muskets, two of which were pointed at the House; next Morning it was found that a ball had been fired through the House, and shattered one of the Timbers. On Tuesday about 1 o'Clock in the Afternoon, the same party as it is supposed, took a Ladder from a New building, which they carried to the Barracks, and were from thence proceding —to the post—but being seen by an Officer he stop'd and turn'd them back—and notice of this Behaviour of the soldiers, getting to the Governor and General and the Magistrates of the City,—we hear strict Orders were immediately given and effectual Measures taken to prevent Disturbance, or any like future Occasion of its; since which all has been quiet, and we hope this Matter, in itself trivial, and only consider'd as of Importance by the Citizens, as it shou'd an intention to offend & insult them,— will occasion no farther Disturbance."—N. Y. Jour., Mar. 26, 1767. See Jan. 15, 1770.

The Paulus Hook ferry (see March 10) is "Struck off to Jacob Van Verla's of this City Merchant" for four years at a yearly rental of $20. The "draft of a Letter" on the "ferry in the Town", and notice was ordered; at the same time a warrant was issued to pay Sarah Brock three pounds "in full of her Account against this Corporation for Liquors provided at the Sale of the ferry."—M. C. C., VII: 61, 64, 65. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III:
945. For complaint of the "extraordinary high Rent," see March 23, 1769.

The committee of the legislative council reports on the petition of the Presbyterian Church (see July 29, 1766). They state that since 1759 petitions for charters have been made by various churches, two of which were submitted in 1764, to the lords of trade, who answered: "it does not appear to us from anything set forth in their Petition, that such an Incorporation is at present Necessary or Expedient." The committee adds that "Except the Charters granted to the Church of England, all the Instances of such Incorporations within this Province, (four only in Number) are confined to the Dutch, whose Claims to this Distinction, are ... grounded on one of the Articles of Capitulation on the Surrender of the Colony in the year 1664, by which it is declared 'that the Dutch here, shall enjoy the Liberty of their Consciences in the worship and Church Discipline'”. Also, they can discover "no essential or material Difference, in the Circumstances of the Petitioners [the Presbyterian] and the other Protestant Congregations, nor of the Communion of the Church of England, wherein to ground any Preference.”—Dec. Hist. N. Y. (40 ed.), 374, 375, 376, 377. See also N. Y., Aug. 26.

Bardin's tavern (later Montague's), at the present corner of Broadway, is fired upon by several members of a company of soldiers as they pass by.—See Supplement Extraordinary to the N. Y. Jour., Mar. 16, 1767. This happened during the clashes between soldiers and Citizens over the liberty pole. Bardin had been proprietor of this tavern since March 12, 1764 (q.v.), when he hung out the sign of the King's Arms, replacing the sign of the King of Prussia.
See April 5, 1774.

The Mercury prints an "Account of Goods exported from the 30 Port of New-York" between July 5, 1765, and July 6, 1766.
The list mentions:

"1787 Hundred Weight of Naval Stores.
102 Tons of Fog and Bar Iron.
102 Tons of Pot and Pearl-salts.
172 Casks, Bundles, etc. of Furs and Skins.
80 Tons of Copper Ore.
221 Pound Weight of Indigo.
27787 Hundred Weight of Logwood, Fustick and Nicoraga Wood.
5519 Barrels of Flour.
2651 Barrels of Beef and Pork.
1198 Firkins of Butter.
3756 Casks of Fish.
10566 Bushels of Grain.
80 Casks of Cheese.
2388 Boxes of Soap and Candles.
617 Casks of Lard.
116 Casks of Rice.
11657 Hogsheads of Flaxseed.

N. B. Besides what is contained in this list, vessels are frequently filled with different sorts of lumber, and a great variety of other articles, such as Tallow, Bees-wax, Sarazarpilla, Gam-mons, Ginseng, Beer, Starch, &c.—N. Y. Merc., March 30, 1767.

A meeting of the creditors of Philip Smith, an absconding debtor, is announced to be held on this day at the "House of David Grin, known by the Sign of the Three Tons, in Chapel-Street."— N. Y. Jour., Jan. 29, 1767. Edward Bardin announced, on May 31, 1770, that he had removed from the King's Arms Tavern in the Fields (Montague's) and would open "a compleat Vingualing-House, the Sign of the Golden Ton, in Chapel-Street."—N. Y.
Merc., June 4, 1770. Evidently this was the same house in which David Grin had conducted the "Three Tons." Some time prior to 1774, David Grin had removed to a site at 138 William St., and was keeping a tavern known as the Hessian's Coffee House. See March 18, 1774.

From printed Advices by the last Vessels, we are informed that there was the greatest Reason to hope the Restrictions upon the Governors of the several English American Colonies, against passing Money Bills of Paper Currency would be wholly taken off, without any Conditions inconsistent with English Liberty, soon after the setting of the Parliament, which was to meet the 16th of January."—N. Y. Jour., Apr. 8, 1767.

The college governors meet at Burns' tavern.—N. Y. Merc.,
March 30, 1767.

The king reveals the act passed by the New York legislature on July 3, 1766 (q.v.), "to furnish the barracks, in the cities of New-York and Albany with firewood and candles, and the other necessaries therein mentioned, for his Majesty's forces." The news of this repeal was transmitted to the New York assembly on Dec.
3.—Assem. Jour. (1767-68), 58, 40.

The Noted Henry Hynes, Lately from Sadler's-Wells, will perform every other evening, excepting Sunday, at the house of Mr.
Miller, near the Oswego Market. Hynes was evidently an acrobat and juggler.—N. Y. Merc., Apr. 13, 1767.

A benefit concert for "the Royal American Band of Musick," is advertised to be held April 20 at Burns' assembly-room.—N. Y.
Jour., April 16, 1767. See also Nov. 16, 1769.

An advertisement reads: "Whereas it has been the Custom for several Years past, for the Inhabitants of North America to import Fire Engines from foreign Parts; this is to inform the Public, that they are made in the City of New York, as cheap and as good as any imported from England, by David Hunts."—N. Y.
Merc., Apr. 20, 1767, in N. Y. Post-Boy, July 31, 1766. His adver-sitement of July 31, 1767 shows that he "makes, mends and repairs all kinds of fire-engines," and that "this is a branch of the business that has never been carried on here before." At that time, he bad
"a very good fire engine for sale."—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 31, 1769.

The city bought Flatenbacker Hill in 1772 (July 16, q.v.).
Flatenbacker Hill is a name now applied to Verleitertberg.
A notice in the Mercury states that John C. Knapp has moved "from Rotten Row to the corner of Flatbush and Halley's Bald Street."—N. Y. Merc., Apr. 27, 1767. For the location of this hill, see Pls. 27, 37A and 34, Vol. I. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 999, 1000.

A list of subscriptions, amounting to over £3,600, for the building of a third Dutch Church (see Jan. 1767) is presented to the congregation at the appointed time and place, and an estimate of costs. It consists of Pieter Marschalk, Theodorus van Wyck, Isaac Roosevelt, Andrew Marschalk, and Garret Abecel.—Eccles. Rev., VI: 408–88.

"We are sorry to notice, that the Assembly of New York have fixed the ground for the barracks, &c for the troops quartered in that City, agreeable to an act [see May 10, 1765] passed for that purpose last year by the parliament of Great Britain."—*Ann. Reg. (1765), 57. See July 2.

May 1767

The new Lutheran church is "opened and solemnly inaugurated."—N. Y. Jour., Apr. 39, 1767. The congregation having outgrown the old building on Cliff St. (see Mar. 21, 1769), this new stone church, 34 by 60 ft., was built on the north-east corner of Frankfort and William Sts. It was called Christ Church, but, because of its location, was popularly known as "The Swamp Church."—The Oldest Lutheran Church in Am. (1914), 17. The building was low, without a steeple; it had an entrance on King George (later William) St., and a peculiar arrangement of windows of various sizes.—See view in ibid., opp. 28. Rev. Frederick Augustus Conrad Muhlenberg, afterwards speaker of the Pennsylvania assembly and of the national house of representatives, was pastor from 1767 to 1776.—ibid., 28. For its later history, see Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 929.

"Trinity Church leases to Abraham Mortier, for the term of 99 years, "part of the Land commonly called and known by the Name of Old John's Land . . . containing 26 acres, Three Roads, 146 perches of Land under the yearly Rent of Ten pounds current money of New York aforesaid for each acre thereof." For the second period of 33 years he is to pay £3 per acre annually, and for the third period £5. —From a paper marked "Bounds of Farm—Richmond Hill/Trinity Church—Commenced May 7," among the Banchler surveys (Box R-W, Folder B) in N. Y. Pub. Library. It was on this property that Major Mortier built his house (see July 1), one of the finest residences of the period, later known as Richmond Hill. The site overlooked the North River near the present Clarion and Varick Sts. In 1776, the house was occupied by Washington, later by Vice President Adams, and still later by Aaron Burr. It is reproduced and described in Vol. I, Pl. 55-a. For an interesting description of the estate, written by Mrs. Adams, see Sept. 27, 1789. See also Stone, Hist. of N. Y. City, Appendix II. Pellecrum, in Abstracts of Willis, VIII: 284, erroneously gives the date of this lease as 1766.

"It is Ordered by this board that Messrs. Francis Marschalk and Gerrardus Bancker Do Lay down in the plan (Now Exhibited to this board) of the Several Water Lots Lying between the Counts peer and Mr. Moses Dood, the breadth of the petitioners Lots infringing the said Water Lots, as they shall appear by their Several Conveyances for the same and that the breadth of Each Respective Lot be laid down at the Extent of the Grants prayed for, pointing out the Lots which shall Sustain on Each Lott to the westward of the Exchange."—M. G. C., VII: 68–69.

An advertisement in the Mercury reads: "A Public School was opened the First Day of this Instant May, at the East-End of Horse and Cart-Street [now William St.], the Second Door from the Corner, near the New High Dutch Lutheran Church: Where the Public may depend upon having their Children taught after a most concise Method, applicable to Business in Reading, Writing, Arithmetic, &c, with the utmost Care and Diligence."—By Peter Sparrling.—N. Y. Merc., May 14, 1767. At this time a "public" school meant merely one which any child might attend; fees were charged for the tuition. See Feb. 27, 1767, for the first grant of money by the state for a free school, and May 1, 1767, for its establishment.

In a letter to Maj. Gates, John Manness (see May 4, 1775) says: "Never was a Country so embarrassed as this, our poor Curr. almost exhausted: all the Gold and Silver seat born, & trade quite dead, the difficulty to live here is inconceivable, the modes highest taxed, & even to have & trade at all in the Same Way . . . I have retired to a place at Harlem where one Laurence lived, on the top of the Hill as you go from Harlem to Kingsbridge: but I could live on poor prospects, Surely I should fare well in my present abode as I have A View of the East River measuring for many miles, & a good prospect of the North River all from the Spot I reside on."—Gates MSS., in box 2, N. Y. Hist. Soc. Investigation shows "one Laurence" to have been Lawrence Low, who signed the petition of 1765. It is recorded that the property was above the later Fort Washington, and a portion of it, inherited by Marinus Low, was sold in 1760 to John Manness Esq., afterward Lieut.-General in the British Army."—Riber, Hist. of Harlem (1st ed.), 66.

Two plans for building the third Dutch Church are presented to the consistory. That of Mr. Breestille is chosen, "with some slight alterations," and the building was to be 74 ins. across the front, and the pillars should run all the way up so as to support the roof." The consistory directs the committee on plans to "obtain a close estimate of the cost of such a church built of cypress," so that they may know "what ground there is to go upon in completing it."—*Eccles. Rev., VII: 408–99. Further revisions were passed on June 18 (p. v) regarding the plans of the new church.

An advertisement in the Post-Boy informs the public that the "Stage-Waggon, kept by John Barnhill, in Elm Street, in Philadelphia, and John Moreauce, at the New-Blazing Star, near New York, continues their Stages in two Days, from Powders-Hook Ferry, opposite New York, to Philadelphia; returns from Philadelphia to Powders-Hook in two Days also . . . The Price for each Passenger is Ten Shillings to Prince-Town and from thence to Philadelphia, Ten Shillings more, Ferriage free . . . Persons may now go from New York to Philadelphia on Tuesdays, and Barque again in Five Days, and remain in Philadelphia Two Nights and One Day to do their Business in."—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 28, 1767. For the earlier, probably the first, stage to Philadelphia, see Oct. 1, 1764.

The common council orders that "Either Abraham De Peyster or the Proprietor of an unsold Lot Lying to the Eastward of and Contiguous to the dwelling house of Samuel Verplank in Wall Street, or Thomas Grigg the Tenant in possession, Do forthwith Enclose the same Lott (It being Deemed by this board a publick nuisance whilst open) or that this board will proceed to remove the said Nuisance."—M. C. C., VI: 45. The house of Samuel Verplank was on the north side of Wall St., 101 feet east of Nassau St. With its grounds, it had a frontage of 75 ft. on Wall St. Samuel Verplank inherited it from his father, Gulyne Verplank.—See the latter's will, dated July 5, 1750, in Liber Willis, XVIII: 68. Samuel's executors sold it, March 27, 1784, to the Bank of the United States.—*Liber Deed., CLIX: 315. It stood upon the site of what was later the United States Answer Office.—See also Vol. I, p. 450. Abraham de Peyster's land was west of the above property, extending to Nassau St.—See *Liber Deed., XXXI: 255; ibid., XL: 417. This was the site of the present United States Treasury. See description of the De Peyer Garden, I: 238–39.

A celebration is held in honour of the king's birthday. It began at 11 o'clock, when "the Detachment of the Train, with the 17th and 46th Regiments were paraded on the Battery, and marched in Order by, and saluted his Excellency General Gage." At about the same time, Gov. Moore and the members of the common council assembled in Fort George, "where his Majesty's, and many other loyal Highnesses were drank, under the Discharge of a Royal Salute from the Fort, which was immediately followed by a Salute of 21 Guns from the Liberty Pole, on which was a Union." The vessels in the harbour, with their colours displayed, made a "very grand, and beautiful Appearance." In the evening "the most magnificent Fire-Works ever seen in America, were played off before a very great Number of Spectators." There was a general illumination throughout the city, the gate of the fort and the central's headquarters illuminated, and bars again, with clusters of lamps placed so as to form a "Regal Crown . . . and . . . the Royal Arms."—*N. Y. Jour., June 11, 1767. Cf. N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), June 8, 1767. See also announcement of the celebration in N. Y. Merc., June 1, 1767.

"An Act granting unto His Majesty the Sum of Three thousand Pounds for furnishing necessary for the Troops quartered in this Colony" is passed by the colonial legislature.—*Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 947–48; N. Y. Merc., June 8, 1767. See June 18.

Ferry will be made Monday and Saturday mornings, returning at three o'clock in the afternoon of these days. "The said Ralpajle keeps a civil House of Entertainment for civil Gentlemen and Ladies." — N. Y. Merc, June 8, 1767.

The tavern keeper also signs the "Sign of General Wolfe," at the present Spray St. and Park Row, is again offered for sale (see Dec. 24, 1765). The advertisement well describes a tavern of this period.

"To be sold at public Vendue, at the Merchant's Coffee-House, on Tuesday the 14th Day of July next; Ten Years Lease, from the first of May Instant, of two Houses and Lots of Ground, situated on the North Corner of the Vineyard, facing, and directly opposite the new Presbyterian Church, the Corner House noted for a well acquainted Taverne, keeping the Sign of General Wolf; has four Rooms on the lower Floor, and is convenient for Lodgers Up-stairs.

The other is a new House adjoining the aforesaid, excepting a large Ginn-Way between the two, designed for the Use of both; it is two Stories high, has a commodious Room on the lower Floor of 21 Feet long, designed for Dancing, three Rooms above Stairs, and a large Garrett; there is a very suitable Stable in the Yard, that will hold four Horses comfortably, and three Loads of Hay in the Loft; also Large Gang or Carriage, is subject to the East Side of the Corner-House..." — N. Y. Merc, June 8, 1767.

Michael Hansen is proprietor of the tavern, which is owned by John Aloof. See Dec. 4, 1764.

The "yearly interest of the seven lots still remaining" (see Jan.

1756) of the Dutch Church "hail formerly bought in the ground of Mr. Harpenden, is to be given for a perpetual income for the ground on which the church is to be built, so that thus the object of Mr. Harpenden's will [see Feb. 7, 1724] may be obtained."

The church refers to the third Dutch Church afterwards known as the North Dutch Church, on the west side of William St., midway between Fulton and Ann Sts.

See June 18.

The Earl of Shelburne receives a letter from Gov. Moore stating that the assembly has decided their intention of making that Provision for the Church which is prescribed by the Mutiny act (see May 10, 1765).—N. Y. Col. Decs., VII: 945. But see Aug. 21.

The "consistory of the Dutch Church" having further considered the length and breadth of the Third Church," resolves

That it should be according to Mr. Breestee's plan: 100 feet long and 70 broad, within" that the committee should agree with the masons and stone-cutters for the mason work, provide materials, at least so far that the foundation may be laid this year, buy thick and thin planks, and lay them up to dry." The committee is to pay for these materials out of the subscription list money, which Isaac Roosevelt is to receive. The consistory also resolved to order the stoneenders of the church to be made 30 feet back from Horse and Carrt street, and the breadth of the church or foundation stand in the middle of the designated grounds between the two side streets (i.e., Fulton and Ann Sts.).— Eccles.

Nicholas Bayard leases to Abraham Mortier a small parcel of land adjoining the latter's large leasehold from Trinity Church

(see May 1), and in this lease mentions "the House now erecting by the said Abraham Mortier," on his land. See Landmark Map Ref.

Key, III: 931.

The situation of Mortier's house was at "Zant Berg" or Sand Hill (see p. 387, Vol. I), which is described by Valentine as "an elevated range of hills traversing a part of the city through the Eighth and Fifteenth Wards." He says further, "There were several prominent points on the Zant Berg. The residence of Abraham Mortier, Commissary in the British Army, was erected, about the year 1766 [error for 1767], on the extremity of this range. This building was subsequently called the Richmond Hill House. The position of this house was near the present corner of Varick and Charlotte streets. Andrew Elliot, Esq., erected a country seat near the other extremity of the range. His garden was laid out upon a route of four miles, having a carriage-way winding to its summit. The last named place was near the present junction of Eighty and Greene streets. To the north of the Zant Berg hills lay a valley, through which ran the brook called, by the Indians, Minetta, and by the whites Bestervier's Killiefee, or Grandfather's Brook, which traced its course, through meadow lands, from the springy marais occupying the present locality of Washington square; thence wending in a course nearly west, and emptying in the North river, near the present Hamersley street. On the south lay the Zant Berg hills, enclosed by a growth of forest trees, which an hundred years ago were a part of the farm of Admi-

July

(1816), 753. See Feb. 11, 1768.

The king gives his assent to the bill for restraining the assembly of New York act, and it is ordered forthwith to be passed with the act of parliament for furnishing the king's troops with certain necessities.—Ann. Reg. (1767), 1061; N. Y. Merc., Sept. 3, 1767 (extraordinary supplement). See Apr. 30. The Earl of Shelburne, in a letter of July 18, informed Gov. Moore of the passage of this act, adding: "This Law... was enacted for the purpose of furnishing the obedience of the Assembly of New York to the Terms of the Mutiny Act, but at the same time framed with that regular Temper and lenity as to offer that Assembly an opportunity of reciting their conduct, and this without involving them in any Disabilities only as the consequence of further disobedience; nor can any such act prejudice the rights of the city, or any other country, in anything but altering the position of the City; and, as more affect the Liberty of the Colonies than such a step, but a compliance with the act itself. If our legislative authority can be suspended whenever we refuse obedience to laws we never consented to, we may as well send home our representatives, and acknowledge our selves slaves." A boycott of English goods was suggested as one means of denouncing the bill.—Boston Gaz., Aug. 31, 1767. Also

The "first foundation stone" of the North Dutch Church is laid at the north-west corner of William and Fulton Sts. The building plands are given by the City of New York, which is a square called, by the Dutch, "Breedt; Seventy foot from outside to outside.

One of the commissioners for building this church, Deacon Garret Abec, placed under one of the large pillars, in course of erection in the "tile room" or auditorium, a pewer plate, "well-secured against moisture," on which he made, in raised letters, a brief record of the building construction. His statement to this effect was one of the historical records of the Dutch Church. In 1791-2, in Domine Selwyn's manuscript diary (see 1786). This plate, nine inches square, was recovered in June, 1875 (p.s.), at the taking down of the North Church, and a photograph of it is reproduced in Collections of the Holland Society of N. Y. (1916), V: 22; and 2 Foot Eight and Four Feet Eight and Half Feet, The Holland Society, 1916, p. 24). The inscription reads as follows:

A remonstrance is addressed to Gov. Moore and the council against English preaching in the Dutch Reformed Church. — Doc. Hist. N. Y. (410 ed.), III: 398-9. On Sept. 23, other members of this church answered this in a representation to the governor, explaining that at length "respecting the Call of a Minister to preach in English," which has occasioned an "unfavorable Dispute" in that congregation. This was read in council on Nov. 11, 1767, and an order made dismissing the remonstrance. — Ibid., III: 310-11; Col. Hist. MSS., Eng. 769. English preaching was first proposed May 3, 1762 (q.v.), and first regularly introduced April 15, 1764 (see below 29, 1764).

The armed schooners "Earl of Chatham" and "Hawke" leave New York for Jamaica. "They mount 6 Guns each, were built here together by Mosers: Totten and Crossfield, launched together in one Day, off one Set of Wows, now sail together, and belong to one Owner; and are so much alike as hardly to be known apart, and are by good Judges esteemed compleat Vessels." — N. Y. Merc., July 13, 1767.

Jacob van Voorhis (see March 21) and others, in a petition to the common council, state that "the Road across the meadow Between Poultanes Hook in New Jersey, and the upland is at some times Rendered impassable for foot passengers on account of Spring tides overflowing the same to the Great Inconvenience of Travelers," etc. They complain that, as tenants (or lessees) of the ferry, their revenue is lessened, and "they Conceive half a years Rent of said ferry properly applied towards Repairing the Road there would be of Publick Utility." A committee is appointed to investigate. — M. G. C., VII: 74. See also original petition in File No. 5, city clerk's record-room. No report of this committee appears in the Minutes; but see March 23, 1769.

We are informed, that sundry Persons in this City have of late bought Regimental Cloths belonging to his Majesty of several Soldiers in this Place, contrary to the Act of Parliament in that Case made, for which they were carried before Whitley Hicks, Esq: our Mayor, and fined & Sterling for each Offence.

"We hear that several People in this Place, were lately fined for selling Liquors by retail, not having Licence nor Excise; and we are told, that the Magistrates are determined to put the Laws against such Offenders rigorously into Execution." — N. Y. Merc., July 20, 1767.

Andrew Elliot and other residents of the Out Ward, in a petition to the common council, state that Elliot "hath lately pur chased, under pretense belonging to the Province adjoining to the Swamp in the possession of Collonell De Lancey & others," and that they are "desirous that there be a Good Sufficient & Compleat Road in the same through the . . ." This is referred to the committee on public rods. — M. G. C., VII: 73. See Feb. 11 and 23, 1768.

The consistory of the Dutch Church passes a resolution that "no one shall be taken up as a poor pensioner supported by the Church, unless on condition that whatever may be bequeathed to them shall fall to the Church." — Eccles. Rec., VI: 4096.

A gentleman in Louton writes to a member of the Society of Artists etc. in New York: "The People of New York, seem to me, to be too intimated with a foreign Trade, ever to make any great Progress in Manufactures; and unless you sell your Linnen, at least as cheap as in Silly, Austria, Bohemia, and Russia, thro' England, Holland or Hamburg, I am afraid you will not establish an extensive Manufactury: — You live in as plentiful a Country as any, and your People might work as cheap: I don't mean in the City of New-York; Cities are not calculated for Manufactures, since its always dearer living in them than in the Country." — N. Y. Merc., Oct. 19, 1767.

"The 17th and 46th Regiments are now embarked on board the Lords transports destined for England; and the 23th embarks at Amboy: They have been more than 10 Years in America; and the 17th carries home no more than 60 Men, out of 750, than [that] came to America in it." — N. Y. Merc., July 25, 1767. The transports set sail on Aug. 1. — Ibid., Aug. 3, 1767.

The provincial council of New York orders that a proclamation be issued announcing the appointment of John Wentworth as governor of New Hampshire and surveyor-general of the woods in America. — Col. Conn. Min., 474. See also July 3, Advanta.

In this month a medical school was instituted in King's College, by the college governors.—Hist. of Columbia Univ., 43. An account of the opening is given by Dr. Cooper in the N. Y. Merc., Nov. 9, 1767, which is referred to in a editorial on "How we Americas Swim," in the "New Orleans Gazette", May 25, 1841.

During the July term of the supreme court, which ended Aug. 19, William Johnson was convicted of felony for stealing books out of St. Paul's Church, and ordered to be executed on Aug. 17. Under the name of William Merrick, this man had been found guilty, in the October term, of three misdemeanors for grand larceny, but had been allowed his "clergy" and buried in the island. — N. Y. Jour., Aug. 6, 1767. On August 14 he was pardoned by the governor on condition that he leave the province. — Col. Conn. Min., 475; cf. N. Y. Jour., Aug. 20, 1767, and N. Y. Merc., Aug. 17, 1767.

The tender embassies at Falmouth, on board the "Lord Hyde Packet boat bound to New York." — Montresor's Jour., 347.

The common council orders that the mayor issue his warrant to the treasurer to pay Dirck Brunkheilder or order £200, "to be by him laid out to Extending the Albany pier." — M. G. C., VII: 77. The Albany Pier was situated on the west side of Cohoes Slips, at about Fort St. It was constructed in 1750 (see Apr. 26, 1750), and is shown on the Maeselschule Plan (pl. 54, Vol. 1). This extension is shown on the Ratter Map, pl. 41, Vol. 1, and has now (1917) become Pier 6, East River (Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 988; pl. 174, Vol. III). Additional payments for this extension brought the total cost to 572,455. — M. G. C., VII: 83, 112, 113, 124, 125, 126. For a further addition, see Feb. 12, 1771.

An advertisement in the "Journal" reads: "The New York Air Furnace Company have lately erected an Air Furnace near the City, which after a considerable Experience, they have now got in proper Order, for casting in the neatest Manner, the under-mentioned Goods, which are equal to any from England, Scotland, Ireland, or even Holland, either for Shape, Lightness, boiling white, or standing Fire: They therefore hope the Public will encourage the Works, by giving the Preference to what is American-make, especially when the Price is full as low as any can be afforded for, that are imported from Europe." The list of articles includes pots, kettles, skillets, forge hammers and anvils, stoves, weights, and chafing dishes. The advertisement is signed by Peter T. Curtenius, Gilbert Forbes, Richard Sharpe, and Thomas Randall. — N. Y. Jour., Aug. 20, 1767. This furnace caught fire on Nov. 20, 1772 (q. n.).

Gov. Moore writes to the Earl of Shelburne: "At the time I had the honor of forwarding to your Lordship the address of the Assembly [see June 18] in answer to my speech at the opening of the Session I could not entertain the least doubt but that the Propositions demanded for by the Magistrates residing in the outlying Parts of this Kingdom in the provinces of New England, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, the Floridas, Georgia, and the southern states, for altering the State existing in the hands of their respective legislatures, and the rights now enjoyed by them, into a plan of universal union, must be complied with by the will of Parliament would have been granted in such a manner as to shew a full compliance with the Act, and on that supposition took upon me to acquaint your Lordship with my sentiments by the Pacquet which sailed before any Bill was brought in for that purpose. This Bill on which I had founded my expectations only made an appropriation of property which was then necessary in order to furnish all the articles, but no particular mention was made of them, nor of the money being raised in consequence of the Act of Parliament . . ." — N. Y. Col. Docs., VII: 948.

Bedfand's and Peck's Slips in Montgomery Ward are the only two slips where firewood and Sunday other supplies for this part of the town Can Conveniently be landed."—Beekman's Slip Aug. 1677.

4. Considerable Distance to Where they formerly used to do so.—

M. G. C., VII: 78. Both slips were ordered filled up in 1772 (see Jan. 7 and July 10, 1772; also Landmark Map Rep. Key, III: 988, 990.)

6. The advice of the lords of trade, the king dismisses the petition of the Presbyterian Church for a charter (see March 18, 1766), because, first, there is doubt whether the king, consistent with his coronation oath (which is founded on "the Act of the 5th of Queen Anne Cap 5. Instituted "An Act for securing the Church of England as by Law Established") can create such an establishment in favour of the Presbyterian Church as is now requested, and second, "it is not expedient upon Principles of General Policy to comply with the Prayer of this Petition, or to give the Presbyterian Church of New York, any other Privileges and Immunities than it is entitled to by the Laws of Toleration."—Doc. Hist. N. Y. (4to ed.), III: 506-7. The manuscript of this refusal is now in the N. Y. Hist. Soc. among "N. Y. Miss. (1761-1800)." For the later history of the Presbyterian Church, see Jan. 1, 1768.

The regiment "now quartered in this City commanded by Col. Galboott" is reviewed by Gen. Gage "in a Field near Greenwich." The soldiers go through their exercises "in the Satisfaction of the present, and 'its generally thought nothing of the like Nature was ever better performed in America.'"—N. T. Merc., Aug. 31, 1767.

1. "It is very sickly here; the bloody-flux raging, attended with little or no fever, and carries off, in six days time, both old and young."—Upcott Coll., III: 186.

11. The common council agrees "to Grant to the proprietors of Hunter's Quay (Key), the water lots fronting their respective wharfs... Saving and Reserving so Much of the Ground & Soil prayed for, fronting the Houses of Doctor Brown and, as this board, and City Council necessary & Convenient, for a publick Slip there." The rental is to be five shilling per foot.—M. G. C., VII: 80-81. See Pl. 42, and p. 143, Vol. I.

17. Abraham de Peyster, Jr., who in 1721 succeeded his father as treasurer of the province, dies. On Sept. 15, he was buried in the family vault in Trinity churchyard.—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), Sept. 21, 1767; N. T. Merc., Sept. 21, 1767. For his obituary, and the list of persons invited to his funeral, see Man. Com. Coun., (1861), 567-69. For description of his residence, see April 2, 1700.

28. Trinity vestry plans "to borrow... the further sum of $550 in order to finish the Portico and Fences of St Paul's Church..."—Trin. Min. (MS). St. Paul's had been opened on Oct. 30, 1766 (q.v.).

Oct.

3. The provincial Council of New York receives an act of parliament granting certain duties in the British colonies, etc; and another prohibiting the governor from passing acts until necessary; the latter was provided by the assembly.—Cal. Coun. Min., 475. See Oct. 5.

5. Gov. Moore writes to the Earl of Shelburne acknowledging the receipt of an act of parliament prohibiting the governor, council, and assembly from passing any acts until provision shall be made for the king's troops (see July 2). He adds: "I have already in a former letter had the honor of informing your Lordship, that the Bill which was brought in for making the provision required had not fully satisfied the expectations I had conceived of it [see Aug. 21], & gave my reasons for passing it... and can only add at present that the troops are supplied with all the articles mentioned in the act of Parliament in as full and ample a manner as if they had been particularly specified in the Bill. Whatever inclination the People of this Colony may have to submit to government and return to their duty they will always be encouraged in a different way of thinking by the Provinces to the Eastward of us."—N. Y. Col. Docs., VII: 980. For a further provision by the legislature, see Dec. 21.

9. An itemized statement of certain branches of the city's revenue is October. The total is $333,171.40, comprised of the following items: docket rent, $620; water lot rent, $25,479.42; ferry rent, $840; land rent, $958; stall rent, $420; house rent, $600-100.—Jour. of City Chamberlain, IV: 4.

14. Henry Bontemer, who has lately leased the city lots, Nos. 101, 102, and 103, "lying on the East Side of the Road or high way that Leads from the Carrying Gardens to the North Ready Street opposite the House of William Crelfeed," applies to the common council for permission to mortgage this land to borrow about $500, Oct. 16. "To Enable him to Carry on and Complete a new Dwelling House Lately Erected on said Lots, or Some of them." Consent is given.—M. G. C., VII: 88. The permit was renewed March 24, 1769.—Ibid., VII: 155. The lot numbers in this record refer to numbered lots of the common lands of the city, on a "Map of the Corporations and Continuos to the New Goal, compiled from different surveys made by Gerard Banker, C. S., March 22, 1773" (p. 92) in the comptroller's office. The three lots mentioned were on the present Park Row, south of Thomas St., and are now covered by Nos. 97 to 107 Park Row.

16. A room in the new goal are appropriated by the common council for a bridewell.—M. G. C., VII: 87. For account of the establishment of this institution, see Nov. 21, 1765; for the construction of the building called the bridewell, see 1774; and, for its demolition, see 1788.

An item of New York news states: "Notwithstanding the great complaints of the distressing times, we have here no less than four coaches which were brought hither from London in the last ships."—London Chron., Dec. 10-12, 1767; and Upcott Coll., III: 189.

Rev. John Peter Tertari, pastor of the French Church, petitions Gov. Moore for redress against the five Frenchmen who, in a riotous manner, took possession of the edifice on June 29, 1766 (q.v.), and "have most unjustly and illegally kept possession of the same" ever since. Action is deferred.—Doc. Hist. N. Y. (4to ed.), III: 315; Col. Hist. N. Y., Eng., 770.

26. They write from New-York, that a resolution has been taken to establish public companies of artisans, who were to be endowed with certain privileges, for the benefit of trade and increase of manufactures; and it was said the [that] Boston and Philadelphia would follow the example."—From London news published in the Boston Chron., Jan. 13, 1768.

The provincial council receives a royal mandamus to swear William Smith, Jr., as a council member, in place of William Smith, Sr., resigned; he is sworn in and takes his seat.—Cal. Coun. Min., 475. See 1767.

28. The City of Mercury announces the passage of a law to raise money for building a new bridewell (see Nov. 21, 1765). The writer states that, until the erection thereof, all "Rogues, Stragglers and idle and suspicious Persons will be apprehended," and sent to the rooms temporarily fitted up in the new goal (see Oct. 14). He reminds the people of the laws requiring that the names of all strangers, enturmed in to the Bridewell, should be reported to the mayor or justice of the peace.—N. T. Merc., Nov. 9, 1767.
The consistory of the Dutch Church passes a resolution "That the roof of the New Church shall be so made that it will bear to be laid with tiles, if the law should require us so to lay it."—Ecles. Recs. VII. 4. Hereunto the "New Church" has meant the Middle Dutch Church, and possibly does so in this instance; but as the last record of alterations in that church was in 1764, it is much more likely that the North Dutch Church, plans for which were completed in June, 1767, is the one here referred to. See also Feb. 22, 1768.

The provincial council, in obedience to a royal mandamus received on this day, swears in Henry Cruger, Sr., as one of its members, and he takes his seat.—Cal. Coun. Min. 475.

In an address to the assembly, Gov. Moore says: "In laying before the public, or such other term as the common council thinks proper, beginning on the termination of the first term, March 25, 1771, and under the same regulations.—From the original petition (MS.), endorsed: "Read & filed yd 10th of December 1767," in city clerk's record-room. The lease was renewed March 24, 1768 (q. e.).

Several Cherokee chiefs and warriors arrive from South Carolina. At an audience with Gen. Gage the next day, they "implored his Intercession of good offices in directing Sir William Johnson . . . to mediate a Peace between their Nation . . . and the Six Nations of Iroquois: They being deputed hitter on an Embassy for that Purpose." The general promised "his Protection in the prosecution of their affairs, and in carrying the necessary Orders for their proceeding in a Sloop for Albany." While in this city, the chiefs, desiring to see a play, attended the theatre (see Dec. 7), where "King Richard III" was staged. They were also "surprised and diverted at the tricks of Harlequin."—N. Y. Jour., Dec. 17, 1767; Penn. Gaz., Dec. 23, 1767. See Apr. 8, 1768.

A letter to the printer of the Journal states: "Though I am a Tradesman, and depend upon my daily Labour for the Support of myself and Family, yet, I commonly read your Paper; and my Neighbours and I have been more amused than useful in Pieces in it, than with the Articles about the Poles or Corsicans: But I cannot help observing that you have lately had fewer Pieces than formerly on our distressed Situation.—Are our Circumstances altered? Is Money grown more plenty? Have our Tradesmen full Employment? Are we more Frugal? Is Grain cheaper? Are our Importations less?—not to mention the Play-House and Equipages, which it is hoped none but People of Fortune frequent, or use.—I am afraid every one of these Queries are against us; and yet of these we seem to take no thought, tho' our Neighbours at Boston make such a stir about them! . . . About three [sic] a Society Design'd to keep up a Theatre, which promised much, and indeed was encouraged by all the most eminent and best Friends to their Country: and you can scarce believe how it chear'd us in our Distress; but alas! its youthful Vigour is over, and many have relaxed or broke thro' some of the Circumstances or the Instability of Things, on which it was perhaps the Signal Service among us, by introducing not only Spinning, weaving, and raising Flax, but encouraged many other useful Manufactories, and Grows among us. Norwithstanding their Endeavours, what a dismal Prospect is before us! a Long Winter, and no Work; many unprovided with Fire-wood or Money to buy it; House-Rent, and Taxes high; our Neighbours daily breaking, their Furniture at Vendue in every Corner. Surely it is high Time for the meddling People to abstain from every Superfluity, in Dress, Furniture, and Living: . . . If by good Management we can save a little, How loudly will the Desire of our Neighbours Call for it!"—N. Y. Jour., Dec. 17, 1767. See Feb. 2, 1768.

The advertisement of the John St. Theatre, announcing the play of "King Richard III" for this evening, advises: "To prevent Accidents by Carriages meeting it is requested that those coming to the House may enter John-Street from the Broad-Way, and not through John Street into Nassau Street, or forwards to that known by the Name of Cart and Horse Street."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), Dec. 14, 1767.

A committee of seven is ordered "to regulate Crown [Liberty] 15th, in the west ward of this City . . . and make Report referred to this board, with the convenient Synod of the City II. 97. The committee, on Jan. 14, 1760, submitted its report, but the corporation decided to take the latter into consideration "at some future Common Council, as a Petition of Sundry of the freetholders of said Street was this Day preferred against regulating the same."

They advise that the assembly appoint a committee "to examine Dec. and report the unjust Charges, with an ample and satisfactory 30 Refutation, to discover the Author and Publisher and declare what they Conceive to be the most prudent and effectual measures for applying a suitable Punishment, and deterring others from so infamous and dangerous an offense."—Jour. Leg. Coun., 1626-41; Assemb. Jour. (1767-8), 84. The pamphlet is preserved in the N. Y. Pub. Library. During the examination of these people they were summoned before the assembly and examined, but no definite information was received. On Feb. 6, 1768, the author not having been discovered, the governor was requested, in case the author should be found, to order a prosecution issued against him, "that such punishment may be inflicted on an offender, as the law directs."—Assemb. Jour. (1767-8), 69, 71, 73, 74, 91.

"It then that money commenced to flow in all sorts of channels, and riches, long hoarded, came into prominent view. Houses were built with the rapidity of magic, so to speak, industries bristled with new life, merchants patched extensions upon their warehouses or built new ones, every thing old was mended, and fresh paint took a mad race through the length and breadth of the town . . . She includes in her picture: the principal streets and roads; the important men of the period and their residences; the customs and dress of the people in general; Columbia College and its commencement; the governing officials, their election and authority; and the chief churches of the city.—"The Golden Age of Colonial New York," in Aug., 1759, fifty pages, folio."
